"Veilings."—The term "veilings" as used in this Act is a designation which signifies a material chiefly or exclusively used for the making of veils. A veil is a piece of cloth or other material, usually thin and light, designed to be worn over the head and face as an ornament or to protect or wholly or partly conceal the face from view. The textile material which is used to mask or screen the features resting beneath the face panels of caskets would be commonly and popularly regarded as veiling. Thus, black, thin-woven silk chiffon, about 36 inches wide and 60 to 70 yards long, with two closely woven stripes down the middle to serve as selvages when the fabric is split, used after splitting to cover the face panels of burial caskets, is dutiable as veilings under this paragraph and not as woven fabrics in the piece composed in chief value of silk under paragraph 318. Tiedeman & Sons v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 134.

Scalloped muslin curtains.—The provision of this paragraph "all articles or fabrics

. . . scalloped by hand or machinery . . . by whatever name known" is equivalent to an enumeration of every scalloped article by its name, and amounts to an eo nomine designation of scalloped madras muslin curtains. U. S. v. Snow's United States Sample Express Co., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 351.

Vol. II, p. 831, par. 360. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 96.]

Sewing baskets, etc., in chief value of leather.—Baskets, boxes, and cases, in chief value of leather, of such a size and so fitted as to indicate that they are primarily sewing sets and not needlecases, are not dutiable under paragraph 135 of this Act as needlecases by reason of the fact that they contain needles in combination with other articles, such as scissors, thimbles, stilettoes, thread, knives, pins, buttons, tape, and hooks and eyes, but should be classified as baskets, boxes, and cases in chief value of leather under this paragraph. Cross Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 196.

Fitted leather cases.—The provision of this paragraph for leather cases fitted and furnished with traveling and similar sets treats the leather case as the distinguishing characteristic and claims it with its fittings for duty to the exclusion of other paragraphs under which the constituent fittings might have been dutiable. U. S. v. Glück, (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 12.

Leather pocket toilets.—Small leather cases, fastening with metal clasps, fitted with various toilet implements and preparations, invoiced as "pocket toilets, leather," are dutiable under this paragraph, as leather cases fitted and furnished with traveling and similar sets. U. S. v. Glück, (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 12.

"Natural state."—Dyed straw is not straw in its "natural state" within the meaning of that expression in this paragraph. U. S. v. Gage Bros. & Co., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 306; U. S. v. International Forwarding Co., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 378.

"India rubber—"Hard rubber."—The language of successive tariff Acts shows that Congress has regarded india rubber and hard rubber as different things for tariff purposes. These two expressions, occurring in this paragraph and paragraph 369, respectively, are construed to be different things. Knauth, Nachod & Kühne v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 102.

Hard rubber druggists' sundries.—Syringes, tubes, combs, and breast pumps in chief value of hard rubber are dutiable under this paragraph as "manufactures of . . . vulcanized india rubber, known as 'hard rubber,' and not under paragraph 368 as "manufactures of india rubber . . . , commonly known as druggists' sundries." Knauth, Nachod & Kühne v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 102.

Screenings.—Screenings are a distinct non-enumerated unmanufactured article, subject to tariff duty under this paragraph. Consolidated Elevator Co. v. U. S., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 267.

Wheat "scalpings" or screenings, the residue after screening from wheat as it comes from the thresher all the merchantable wheat—a commodity composed of buckwheat, rapeseed, mustard seed, flaxseed, dust, dirt, and shriveled, broken, and spoiled wheat kernels—not sold or used as wheat, but bought and sold as wheat screenings and used as sheep feed, or as an ingredient in the manufacture of chicken feed, are dutiable as a nonenumerated unmanufactured article under this paragraph. They are not "wheat" within the meaning of paragraph 644, it being shown that the wheat content cannot, as a commercial practicability, be separated, and that, even if that were done, it could not be marketed as wheat. Williamson v. U. S., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 277.

Malt extract.—Malt extract cannot be classified under this paragraph, because this paragraph includes only what is "not provided for in this section," and malt extract is provided for in paragraph 246. U. S. v. Hirsh & Schofield, (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 163.

Phosphoric acid anhydride.—The expression "Acids . . . phosphoric," used in this paragraph, includes phosphoric acid anhydride, for it is more specific than the term "acid anhydrides" in paragraph 1, since it includes anhydride of phosphoric acid only while that term includes anhydrides of all acids. Smaller packages of phosphoric acid anhydride are therefore not dutiable under paragraph 17 as chemical compounds or combinations put up in individual packages of two and one-half pounds or less gross weight, nor are larger packages dutiable as acid anhydrides under paragraph 1. U. S. v. Merck & Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 141.

Vol. II, p. 848, sec. 391. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 99.]

Farm tractors.—The known general use of farm tractors demonstrates them commercially and practically necessary to agriculture; and such, when chiefly used for agricultural purposes, are entitled to classification as "agricultural implements," under this paragraph. Richardson Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 179.

Carbureters for farm tractors.—Carbureters, shown to be so designed and constructed that they can only be affixed to and made parts of certain tractors, which tractors are shown to be designed, constructed, and chiefly used for plowing and threshing—uses necessary and peculiar to the production of food and raiment for man—are entitled to free entry as parts of agricultural implements under this paragraph and are not dutiable as manufactures of metal under paragraph 167. Richardson Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 179.

Disks of tin plate, about two inches in diameter, the by-product of the manufacture in Canada of cans from tin plate imported from the United States, are entitled to entry free of duty under this paragraph, as re-importations not advanced in value or improved in condition. U. S. v. Saunders, (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 82.

Beef weasands.—Beef weasands are not admissible free of duty under this paragraph, as "integuments, tendons, and intestines of animals." U. S. v. White, (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 115.

"Common blue clay."—Clay shown to be as blue as any used in the manufacture of glass melting pots answers the call of the word "blue," in the expression "common blue clay . . . suitable for the manufacture of glass melting pots," is admissible free under this paragraph, notwithstanding that it has a grayish tinge. The same clay packed in bags is not admissible free under this paragraph but is dutiable under paragraph 76. Koons, Wilson & Co. v. U. S., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 333.

Clay in casks.—In construing the provision "clay in casks," of the Tariff Act of 1897, the board of United States general appraisers held that it covered clay in bulk in any form, and that the style of the packing did not determine whether or not the clay was to be classified under the paragraph. Since this decision Congress, by paragraph 534 of the Act of 1909 and this paragraph, extended the expression to "clay . . . in cases or casks." This makes manifest the fact that the attention of Congress was directed to the container when the Act of 1909 was adopted, and that it then restricted the clay to be classified under this paragraph to that imported in cases or casks." Koons, Wilson & Co. v. U. S., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 333.

Importation of coffee into Porto Rico.—So much of the provisions of sections 2 and 3 of the Act of April 12, 1900, ch. 191 (see vol. VII, p. 1260) as refers to the importation of coffee into Porto Rico was repealed by the Tariff Act of August 5, 1909 (see vol. II, p. 724), and is no longer in force, but this paragraph which includes coffee in the free list is applicable to its importation into Porto Rico. (1914) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 275.

Corundum.—The expression "corundum" in this paragraph includes both natural and artificial corundum. Larzelere & Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 64.

Boro-carbone.—Merchandise invoiced as "boro-carbone," an artificial corundum made by melting and crushing bauxite, is classifiable under this paragraph as corundum, and not as a crude artificial abrasive, neither may it be classified under paragraph 411 of this Act as crude bauxite, nor under paragraph 343, by similitude, as emery, ground. Larzelere & Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 64.

Sufficiency of protest.—A protest claiming classification as a crude artificial abrasive under this paragraph is not sufficient to support a decision making classification as corundum under the same paragraph. Larzelere & Co. v. U. S.; (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 64.

"Crude."—The term "crude," as used in tariff legislation and in this paragraph, is a relative term, its meaning depending upon its use in the context. Thus, where a collector classifies "marrons, baked" as "nuts" under paragraph 226 rather than as "marrons, crude" under this paragraph, and the evidence before him is such that he may have reached either conclusion, his decision will be affirmed. U. S. v. Richard & Co., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 304.

Theatrical properties.—"This statute cannot be construed to mean that the importer of theatrical effects must have the actual possession thereof or accompany the same at the time of their arrival, or that he shall be a person emigrating to the United States. It is sufficient if they are brought by him from abroad for temporary use, and not for sale, and that they have been used by him while abroad." Illinois Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 823, 163 C. C. A. 657.

Redelivery bond affecting theatrical properties.—A redelivery bond given under this paragraph for the exportation of theatrical property within six months is not void as restricting exportation from only one port where such port is only mentioned as the place for redelivery of the goods to the collector for the purpose of furnishing proof of the identity thereof. Illinois Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 823, 163 C. C. A. 657, wherein the court said: "But it is said that the bond is void, because it is not conditioned as required by law; that it is conditioned for redelivery of the goods, and not for the payment of the duties. The statute, it is true, requires that the bond shall be given for the payment of such duties as may be imposed by law in case the goods are not deported within six months, and that in the bond under consideration there is no such provision, but the condition is for redelivery to the collector for exportation within six months. It is clear, however, that, if the bond had been drawn strictly under the terms of the statute, the condition thereof would, in effect, have been complied with by redelivery to the collector, and it is also clear that liability under the bond which was given would have been avoided if the duties had been paid. The bond is therefore not substantially different from the bond required by the statute. It is a bond to hold the United States harmless against the loss of duties on goods imported into the United States, and its obligation is complied with either by redelivery or by payment of the duties. Statutes requiring the execution of such bonds are remedial in their character, and should be construed liberally, to carry out the purpose of their enactment. . . . We think, also, that the bond is valid as a common-law obligation." It was further held in this case that a surety on the bond was in no position to say that the goods ought not to have been admitted temporarily free of duty, because unaccompanied by the importer, where the surety knew that they were admitted free, and with knowledge of that fact became surety on the bond.

"Salts of cinchona bark."—A salt of cinchona bark is a chemical impossibility and the provision for "salts of cinchona bark" in this paragraph, if literally interpreted, is meaningless. The expression will be construed to mean salts of quinia. The free list of the Tariff Act of 1913, as it passed the House, provided for "quinine and its combinations with acids and compounds, not subject to duty in this section." In lieu of this, the Senate restored the provision of former Acts for "salts of cinchona bark," and the House accepted the Senate's amendment. This must be taken to mean that no salts of cinchona bark should be dutiable, but that all of them should be admitted free under this paragraph, even though some of them may be covered by general language in other paragraphs. U. S. v. Merck & Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 137.

Quinine glycerphosphate.—With reference to quinine glycerphosphate, the expression "all . . . salts of cinchona bark," in this paragraph, is more specific than "glycerophosphoric acid and salts and compounds thereof" in paragraph 18, and classifies it. U. S. v. Merck & Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 137.

"Tagua nuts."—It is not every change in the terms of a statute from the one for which it is a substitute that results in a change of its general purpose. Thus, the change from the language "vegetable ivory in its natural state," used in the Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, ch. 6, to the language "tagua nuts" used in this paragraph does not show any change in meaning. Andrews & Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 68.

Tagua nuts cut into slabs as a preparation for the making of buttons or like products, with no indication that the cutting into slabs has either devoted the nut to a new use or withdrawn it from any general uses to which it was adapted, are admissible free of duty as "tagua nuts" under this paragraph and not dutiable as nonenumerated partly manufactured articles under paragraph 385. Andrews & Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 68.

"Containers of tea."—This paragraph, levying duty upon "cans, boxes, or other containers of tea packed in packages of less than 5 pounds," does not levy duty upon the container of the tea itself, but upon the container of the packages of tea. The provision is relative in its terms and does not apply to immediate containers of tea. Hence, where tea was imported packed in packages of less than 5 pounds each, these packages being assembled and placed in a large box or case for transportation, the container of the less than 5 pound quantity of the tea itself should have been admitted free of duty, and duty should have been levied upon the box or case, which was the immediate container of the packages of tea. U. S. v. McCord Brady Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 208.

Dressed animal skins with the wool or hair on are not, when it is not profitable to separate the wool or hair from the skin and use it for wool or hair purposes, within the terms "wools" or "hair" as used in this paragraph and paragraphs 286 and 304 of this Act; they are, if devoted to fur uses, within the term "furs," as used in paragraph 348, such term not being limited to products of strictly fur-bearing animals, but including sheepskins with wool on, when devoted to fur uses, and not bearing so great an amount of wool as to make it commercially practicable to remove the wool and use it for wool purposes. Ayres, Bridges & Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 87.

"Mechanical process."—In the expression of this paragraph, "such as are made wholly or in part by stenciling or any other mechanical process," the words "mechanical process" should be construed, under the rule of ejusdem generis, as relating to a mechanical process of like kind as stenciling; that is to say, a process for producing the representation or artistic effect, and not a process for fixing more permanently the production of the artist. The "firing" of a painting on earthenware is not a "mechanical process" within the paragraph. Wells, Fargo & Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 125, distinguishing Bour v. U. S., (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 91 Fed. 533.

Earthenware vases and plaques painted in mineral colors and "fired," the original work of an artist and having no utilitarian purpose, are entitled to free entry under this paragraph, as paintings in mineral colors. They are not dutiable under paragraph 79 as plaques and vases "painted, colored, tinted, stained, enameled, gilded, printed or ornamented or decorated in any manner." Wells, Fargo & Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 125.

Vol. II, p. 884, par. J, subsec. 4. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 129.]

"For use as models"—"Not for sale."—The expressions in this subsection "for use as models" and "not for sale" are employed in contradistinction to each other. If imported for sale, the statute implies that they would and be used as models, and if imported for use as models, they would not be for sale, that is, for present sale and not imported primarily for that purpose. The words "not for sale" imply a condition of mind, and that condition relates to the date of importation. Louise & Co. v. U. S., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 430.

Imported models of women's wearing apparel.—Models of women's wearing apparel imported and used as models in importers' manufacturing establishments and sold abroad and exported within six months are entitled to free entry under this subsection as having been imported "for use as models . . . and not for sale." Louise & Co. v. U. S., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 430.

[First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 130.]

"Materials necessary for outfit and equipment."—In this subsection the words "materials necessary for the outfit and equipment" mean the outfit and equipment of "naval vessels or other vessels of the United States, vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership, or for the purpose of being employed in the foreign or domestic trade." They refer to all such vessels, and not just those that are being outfitted and equipped for the first time. U. S. v. Germania Importing Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 129.

Linoleum for United States vessels.—Where linoleum was entered after this Act went into effect but before the promulgation of the Treasury Department's regulations pursuant to this subsection and subsection 6, and application for its free entry under section 5 of the Panama Canal Act of August 24, 1912, was made in the manner prescribed by the department's regulations pursuant to that Act, but it was assessed under paragraph 276 of this Act, it was held to be entitled to free entry under this subsection upon a showing by the importers that it was used as outfit and equipment for vessels of the United States. U. S. v. Germania Importing Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 129.

Auxiliary engines for sailing vessels.—Engines imported for installation in American-built sailing vessels, to make them point closer to the wind and to propel them when the wind fails, are not classifiable under this subsection, as either materials necessary for the construction of such vessels or as articles necessary for their outfit and equipment, but should be classified as articles of metal under paragraph 167. Toledo Shipbuilding Co. v. U. S., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 342.

Spare pump parts.—Spare or repair parts for pumps to be installed in American built vessels are admissible free of duty under this subsection. U. S. v. Harlan, etc., Corp., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 236.

Effect of Treasury regulations.—While it was within the power of the Treasury Department to keep in force its regulations pursuant to section 5 of the Act of August 24, 1912 (Panama Canal Act), after the time that this Act went into effect and until the promulgation of its regulations pursuant to this subsection and subsection 6, it was not within its power to keep them in force in such manner as to extend the right of free entry to goods not within the terms of this Act. U. S. v. Germania Importing Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 129.

Compensation of inspectors.—The Act of March 4, 1909, c. 314, 35 Stat. L. 1065, provided in section 2 as follows: "That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to increase and fix the compensation of inspectors of customs," etc. It was held that under this provision the Secretary of the Treasury could not decrease salaries. Cochnowar v. U. S., (1919) 248 U. S. 405, 39 S. Ct. 137, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 461.

Vol. II, p. 902, sec. 1. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 57.]

The continuance in office of collectors of ports in enlarged districts until the expiration of their existing commissions, is duly authorized by this Act under which the President's order of March 3, 1913, reorganizing the customs service, was issued. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 204.

Vol. II, p. 956, sec. 2621. [First ed., vol. II, p. 581.]

Weighers.—A person appointed by a collector "clerk, class 3, new office, to act as acting U. S. weigher" was held to come within R. S. sec. 2634, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to fix the number and compensation of clerks to be employed by any collector rather than under this section. MacMath v. U. S., (1918) 248 U. S. 151, 39 S. Ct. 31, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 356.

Vol. II, p. 1010, par. C. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 114.]

Entry—Appraisalment.—All goods lawfully imported must be entered; there can be no appraisalment without an entry and no certain determination or assessment of ad valorem duties without an appraisalment. Sheldon & Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 215.

Vol. II, p. 1018, par. H. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 116.]

Raising of value by consignee.—If the consignee at the time of the entry corrects the valuation of the goods under section 31, it will prevent a forfeiture for undervaluation by the consignor. U. S. v. Nineteen Bales, etc., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 380.

Undervaluation by consignor.—A fraudulent undervaluation by a consignor in a foreign country is sufficient to warrant a forfeiture though the consignee is innocent of the fraud. U. S. v. Four Packages of Cut Diamonds, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 354.

False statement.—A package imported from Cuba by registered mail distinctly marked "Loose diamonds, dutiable," is not forfeitable under this section as there is no such false statement either written or spoken in connection with the deposit in the mails as is contemplated by such section. Four Packages of Cut Diamonds v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 305, on rehearing, modifying and affirming (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 314, 166 C. C. A. 484, which affirmed (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 354.

Vol. II, p. 1019, par. I. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 117.]

"Manifest clerical error."—Where the entry was made in gold instead of Mexican dollars, Mexican dollars being worth about half as much as gold, and there was no disclosure by the record that this error was made, there was no "manifest clerical error" within the meaning of that language in this paragraph, which forbids the assessment of duty "upon an amount less than the entered value." Meyer v. U. S., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 312.

Assessment upon amount less than entered value of merchandise.—The provisions of this paragraph were designed by Congress to vest in the Secretary of the Treasury the sole and exclusive authority to direct assessment of duty upon an amount less than the entered value of the merchandise. Where goods were entered at a value higher than that stated in the invoice, with a certificate that this was done to meet advances made by the appraiser in similar pending cases, and the final appraisement was between the entered and invoice values, the refusal of the Secretary of the Treasury to direct the collector to assess duty upon less than the entered value is not reviewable upon appeal by the board of United States general appraisers or the United States Court of Customs Appeals. Mills & Gibb v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 31; Park & Telford v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 61.

Additional duty—clerical error.—Goods were entered upon an invoice which stated a "gross sum" and separate items of inland freight, various items of packing charges, and certain items of insurance charges, war risk, and consular fees. Entrants declared the market value as the "gross sum" less the inland freight, which was correct, the statement "gross sum" in the invoice being correct as to this item and incorrect as to the insurance charges, war risk, and consular fees. The entry was returned by the customs officers to the importers indorsed "account for all charges on entry," whereupon the importers altered the entry so as to deduct also the insurance charges, war risk, and consular fees. Subsequently the importers made similarly incorrect entries of similar merchandise upon similarly incorrect invoices. The action of the customs officers in returning the entry indorsed "account for all charges on entry" was only the allowance by them to the importers of an opportunity to correct what seemed to them to be an error, and did not constitute "duress" or estoppel as to any of these entries. The error of the importers was neither "clerical" nor "manifest." The action of the appraiser in disallowing these erroneous deductions was only an appraisal by him of the real market value, and not an appraisal of "costs, charges, and expenses." Additional duty was justly imposed under this paragraph. Kridel, etc. v. U. S., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 250.

The word "cargo" as used in this section does not include passengers' baggage. (1913) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 123.

Effect on previous overvaluation.—If the consignee at the time of entry corrects the valuation it will avoid a forfeiture for a previous undervaluation by the consignor. U. S. v. Nineteen Bales, etc., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 380.

Vol. II, p. 1071, par. N. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 120.]

Illegal mail importation.—Where diamonds, brought into this country by mail, are seized and denied entry by the collector of customs, and upon the recommendation of the United States district attorney, the Secretary of the Treasury authorizes the collector to release them upon the payment of a sum of money equal to the duty, plus 20 per cent, this sum of money is not duty. Whether or not it is a fee, charge, or exaction within the meaning of those terms as used in this paragraph is not decided. If it is, protest presented more than 15 days after its payment is too late. If it is a compromise or settlement of forfeiture proceedings, threatened or commenced, the board of general appraisers and this court are without jurisdiction of the subject matter. Sheldon & Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 215.

Allegations in protest—burden of proof.—The provision of this paragraph that "No agreement for a contingent fee in respect to recovery or refund under protest shall be lawful. Compliance with this provision shall be a condition precedent to the validity of the protest and to any refund thereunder, and a violation of this provision shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding $500, or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both." does not make it necessary for the protest to deny the existence of an agreement for a contingent fee, nor does it put upon the protestant the burden of proving that no such agreement has been made. U. S. v. Emery-Bird-Thayer Dry Goods Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 150; U. S. v. InterOcean Forwarding Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 155.

Sufficiency of protest.—Four different kinds of merchandise were separately invoiced, imported, entered, and liquidated, each on a date different from any other. All of it was assessed at the same rate under the same paragraph. The protest did not state what the collector's classification was, simply describing it as "your decision assessing duty at 60 per cent under paragraph 356." It described the merchandise vaguely as rosaries, medals, crosses, chains, and similar merchandise covered by entries below named." It claimed alternatively at a great number of different rates under a great number of different paragraphs, without any statement as to what classifications were claimed at the different rates under the different paragraphs other than "that said merchandise is properly dutiable at the rate applicable to the component material of chief value, or otherwise," with no statement as to what the component material of chief value was. It was held that it was too obscure to comply with the requirement of this paragraph, that the protest shall set forth "distinctly and specifically" the reasons for objecting. Melham & Co. v. U. S., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 324.

Vol. II, p. 1086, par. R. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 122.]

Determination of value.—Where glue is bought at a gross price, packed in bags, the value per pound, for tariff purposes, is the gross price divided by the net weight in pounds. U. S. v. Hirsch, Stein & Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 121.

Vol. II, p. 1115, sec. M. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 130.]

Validity of Treasury regulations.—The Secretary of the Treasury has no authority to promulgate a regulation requiring all manufacturers of cigars doing business under the Act to pay to the United States ten dollars per thousand for stamps to be used to indicate the character of the boxes, etc., containing cigars, the origin of the tobacco and the place of manufacture. U. S. v. Rosenberg, (S. D. Fla. 1918) 253 Fed. 285.

Vol. II, p. 1117, par. N, subsec. 1. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 132.]

"Assayed according to commercial methods."—It was not the intention of Congress that duty on ores should be assessed on a greater metal content than that commercially producible from the ores; and a method of assaying which shows the actual quantity of metal in the ore, which is greater than that producible from it by the ordinary smelting processes, exceeds the requirement of subsection 1, paragraph N, section 4, Tariff Act of 1913, that the ores shall be "assayed according to commercial methods." U. S. v. Consolidated Kansas City Smelting & Refining Co., (1918) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 406.

Burden of proof as to fraud.—The limitation of the right of a collector to reliquidate duties after one year from the time of entry to cases of fraud, which is made by this section, prevents the casting upon the importer, on the hearing of an appeal to the board of general appraisers, of the burden of establishing that there had been no fraud, on any theory that the presumption of the correctness of official action was sufficient, without proof of fraud, to sustain the reliquidation. Vitelli v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 355, 39 S. Ct. 544, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1916) 7 Cust. App. 243.

Error in construing the limitation of the right of a collector to reliquidate duties after one year from the time of entry to cases of fraud, made by this section, as having the effect of casting upon the importer, on the hearing of an appeal to the board of general appraisers, of the burden of establishing that there had been no fraud, requires the reversal of a judgment of the court of customs appeals, sustaining the reliquidation, even if there was adequate proof in the record to show the existence of fraud. Vitelli v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 355, 39 S. Ct. 544, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1916) 7 Cust. App. 243.

Importation by registered mail.—A package imported from Cuba by registered mail plainly marked "Loose diamonds, dutiable" is not an importation knowingly made "contrary to law" in violation of this section, notwithstanding that a postal convention executed by the Postmaster General and approved by the President in 1906, to which Cuba was a party, prohibited the insertion in ordinary or registered correspondence of "articles liable to customs duties," the defendant being without knowledge of such prohibition. Four Packages Cut Diamonds v. U. S. (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 305, modifying and affirming on rehearing (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 314, 166 C. C. A. 484, which affirmed (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 354, wherein the court said: "Such conventions are not treaties, because not made by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and they are not laws, because not enacted by Congress. If we assume that as administrative regulations made by authority of Congress they have the force of law, the package was imported contrary to law. But the section is evidently intended to prevent smuggling. The word 'fraudulently' covers the acts of every one who directly smuggles, and the word 'knowingly' the acts of every one who consciously assists a smuggler. The question of intent is distinctly involved. The claimant, Goldstein, has been acquitted of any imputation of fraud, and E. Boyer, who registered the package at Havana, could not be held liable for fraudulently importing or assisting to import the package contrary to law, because he plainly marked it as containing 'Loose diamonds, dutiable.' He did not knowingly assist a smuggler, unless he had actual knowledge of the regulation and that the purpose of sending the package through the mails was to defraud the customs. If imputed or constructive knowledge of the regulation were thought by Congress enough to justify forfeiture, the word 'knowingly' would not have been used. There being no evidence that Boyer knew of the existence of the regulation, or was conscious of assisting a smuggler contrary to law, we think this package is not subject to forfeiture."

Finding as adjudication.—A finding favorable to the importer in the summary proceeding authorized by section 17 does not bar a subsequent proceeding by libel to enforce a forfeiture, the proceeding being an administrative one to secure the clemency of the Treasury Department. U. S. v. Nineteen Bales, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 380.

Actions in name of United States.—This section is clearly intended to bind the government. Most, if not all, of the actions therein specified would be brought in the name of the United States, or for its benefit. U. S. v. Joles, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 251 Fed. 417.

Vol. II, p. 1183, sec. 22. [First ed., vol. II, p. 761.]

"Action to recover penalties."—An action to recover the penal sums on bonds given for failure to file the names of the actual owners of the goods imported and for failure to produce corrected invoices, all duties and excess duties having been paid, is an action to recover penalties and is barred by the three-year provision of this section. U. S. v. Joles, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 251 Fed. 417.

"Probable cause."—In a prosecution by the United States under R. S. sec. 3082 (2 Fed. Stat. Ann. 1168) for the forfeiture of certain plumage of wild birds alleged to have been imported in violation of sec. 1, Schedule N of the Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, ch. 16 (2 Fed. Stat. Ann. 711), the government has the burden, under this section, of proving "probable cause," which is synonymous with "reasonable cause," for the prosecution, and the finding of the court on such question is conclusive. U. S. v. One Bag of Paradise, etc., Feathers, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 301.

Vol. II, p. 1194, sec. 3109. [First ed., vol. I, p. 767.]

Canadian boundary waters.—This section, in imposing certain restrictions upon masters of foreign vessels which are not imposed upon masters of domestic vessels, is in conflict with the provisions of article 1 of the treaty concerning the boundary waters between the United States and Canada, concluded January 11, 1909, between the United States and Great Britain, and its provisions must be regarded as superseded by such treaty in so far as they are inconsistent therewith, and hence it is the duty of the administrative officers of the Government to fulfil the requirements of the treaty. ## DISCRIMINATING LAWS AND DUTIES

Vol. III, p. 81, par. E. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 127.]

"Bounty or grant" as used in this paragraph was held to include an allowance under British legislation of three pence per gallon upon plain British spirits exported, and five pence per gallon upon British compounded spirits exported. Nicholas v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 34, 39 S. Ct. 218, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 7 Cust. App. 97, and following U. S. v. Passavant, (1898) 169 U. S. 16, 18 S. Ct. 219, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 644.

EDUCATION

Vol. III, p. 100, sec. 4. [First ed., vol. II, p. 851.]

Duties of state officers.—"Under the acts of Congress, the state treasurer, to whom the fund is transmitted by the Secretary of the Treasury, has, with reference to this fund, a mere clerical or ministerial duty to perform; that is, to pay over the fund immediately to the treasurer of the board of trustees, in this case the board of regents, upon their order. The acts of the defendants, state treasurer, and state auditor in this instance of placing this fund in the general fund by making appropriate entries upon their books to that end were mere nullities. County of Blaine v. Fuld et al., 171 Pac. 1138. Under the acts of Congress in question the state auditor has no duty whatever to perform with respect to this fund and no authority over it. It is therefore apparent that the defendant state treasurer has but one duty to perform in the premises, and that is to pay over the sum in controversy immediately to the plaintiff, as treasurer of the board of regents." Melgard v. Eagleson, (1918) 31 Idaho 411, 172 Pac. 655.

ELECTIONS

Vol. III, p. 120, sec. 1. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 69.]

Constitutionality.—In Blair v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 273, 39 S. Ct. 468, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 800, the constitutionality of this Act was challenged by witnesses summoned to testify before a grand jury in an investigation instituted thereunder, but the question was not passed on, the court holding that witnesses had no power to raise it, and saying: "The same constitutional question was stirred in U. S. v. Gradwell, (1917) 243 U. S. 476, 487 [37 S. Ct. 407, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 857, 865], but its determination was unnecessary for the decision of the case, and for this reason it was left undetermined, as the opinion states. Considerations of propriety, as well as long-established practice, demand that we refrain from passing upon the constitutionality of an act of Congress unless obliged to do so in the proper performance of our judicial function, when the question is raised by a party whose interests entitle him to raise it. We do not think the present parties are so entitled, since a brief consideration of the relation of a witness to the proceeding in which he is called will suffice to show that he is not interested to challenge the jurisdiction of court or grand jury over the subject-matter that is under inquiry."

EMINENT DOMAIN

1918 Supp., p. 166. [Lands for military purposes, etc.]

State laws as governing proceedings.—By express provision of the statute proceedings thereunder are prosecuted in accordance with the laws relating to suits for the condemnation of property. U. S. v. First Nat. Bank, (M. D. Ala. 1918) 250 Fed. 299, Ann. Cas. 1918E 36.

Assessment of damages.—In condemning land for temporary use by the government, the land being needed for the location and construction of a military training camp the rules to be followed in assessing damages were laid down by Trieber, D. J., in In re Condemnation of Lands for Military Camp, (E. D. Ark. 1918) 250 Fed. 314, as follows:

"The owner is entitled to the rental value of his property, if it is tillable or occupied. If it appears from evidence at the trial that the improvements on a tract of land will necessarily have to be destroyed, either wholly or in part, the owner is entitled to compensation for their value, and in such cases the rental value will be for the land, without these improvements. By improvements I refer to houses, fences, barns, and other buildings.

"If the land is wild, and not subject to cultivation, the rental should be the prevailing rate of interest on its fair value.

"In addition to these payments, the government must obligate itself, and the judgment will so provide, that, when it surrenders the land to the owner, it will be returned to him in as good a condition as when it took possession, the natural wear and tear excepted. If the owners have been compensated in the action for the improvements, then, of course, it will not be required to replace them, or pay again for them. If the improvements, for which there has not been compensation, are not replaced, or the lands are not returned in as good condition as when the government took possession of them, natural wear and tear excepted, it is to pay such sums as damages as will enable the owner to put the land back in the condition it was, when the government took possession. This is necessary, as the government may cut trenches, build macadam roads, and otherwise make use of the land, which will, if not entirely, at least to some extent, destroy its value as farming land, for which these lands are only suitable.

"If the parties cannot agree upon the damages to be paid, if the government fails to put the land back in the condition it was, when it entered upon it, the court will, upon the application of either party, have a jury assess the damages, and for that purpose the court will retain jurisdiction of this cause.

This, in the opinion of the court, is equitable and just to all parties, will protect the landowner, and will enable the government to make use of the land for military training, so necessary in this great emergency."

ESTIMATES, APPROPRIATIONS AND REPORTS

Vol. III, p. 138, sec. 3679. [First ed., vol. II, p. 898.]

The words "voluntary service" in this section were not intended to be synonymous with "gratuitous service" and were not intended to cover services rendered in an official capacity under regular appointment to an office otherwise permitted by law to be non-salaried. Hence, a retired army officer, receiving upward of $2,500 per annum, may be employed as superintendent of an Indian school or agency, if no additional compensation is allowed, without contravening the provisions of this section. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 51.

Vol. III, p. 138, sec. 3679. [First ed., vol. X, p. 84.]

Gift of Grover Cleveland birthplace.—The proposed gift of the Grover Cleveland birthplace at Caldwell, N. J., upon the condition that the property be maintained as a suitable memorial, should not, as a matter of administrative policy, be accepted on behalf of the United States, without the consent of Congress and the President, as such a grant is a contract which is not authorized by law or under any appropriation. (1916) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 527.

EVIDENCE

Vol. III, p. 197, sec. 882. [First ed., vol. III, p. 26.]

Original records.—Books, printed by authority of law from written public records of the Treasury Department, and produced from the custody of that department, where they are used as original records in the transaction of the daily business of the department, are admissible in evidence without the certification which this section requires in case of copies of public records. Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 123, 39 S. Ct. 122, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) (affirming) (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 903, 153 C. C. A. 589, wherein the court said: "The objection is that these are not books of original entry and that they are not certified as copies of public records are required to be by Rev. Stats., § 882.

"It is enough to say of this last contention that although the books admitted were printed from written public records, they were so printed by authority of law and were produced from the custody of the department of the Treasury, where they were used as original records in the transaction of the daily business of the department and therefore they did not require certification.

"They were public records, kept pursuant to constitutional and statutory requirement. Constitution of the United States, Article I,

§ 9, cl. 7; Act of Congress, approved September 2, 1789, c. 12, § 2, 1 Stat. 65; Rev. Stats., § 257; Act of Congress, approved September 30, 1890, c. 1126, 26 Stat. 504, 511; Act approved July 31, 1894, c. 174, § 15, 28 Stat. 162, 210. Thus, their character as public records required by law to be kept, the official character of their contents entered under the sanction of public duty, the obvious necessity for regular contemporaneous entries in them and the reduction to a minimum of motive on the part of public officials and employees to either make false entries or to omit proper ones, all unite to make these books admissible as unusually trustworthy sources of evidence."

The certificate of the judge is essential and attestation by the clerk is not sufficient without it. Nease v. Broadwater Mercantile Co., (Tex. 1918) 206 S. W. 692.

Full faith and credit.—Appeal from judgment pending.—Whether the pendency of an appeal affects the finality of a judgment sued on in a state other than that where it was rendered will be determined by the law of the state where rendered. Van Natta v. Van Natta, (Tex. 1918) 200 S. W. 907.

Faith and credit.—In Myres v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 779, 168 C. C. A. 125, the court said: "The plaintiff in error complains of the admission of certified copies of the deeds of the owners of the lands constituting the government reservation at Ft. Bliss, and the deed of the Governor of Texas, ceding jurisdiction over it to the United States, upon the ground that, under the Texas Civil Code, such certified copies are admissible, in civil or criminal proceedings, only when filed three days before the trial, and when notice of the filing is given the adverse party. The United States courts, in criminal procedure, do not follow the practice of the state courts of the states in which they sit. Section 96, Rev. Stat. U. S. authorizes the use in the federal courts of authenticated documents from state courts and offices. It provides that such certified records 'shall have such faith and credit given to them in every court and office within the United States as they have by law or usage in the courts or offices of the state, territory, or country, as aforesaid, from which they are taken.' The effect of this provision is not an adoption of the rules of practice as to the preliminaries necessary to the introduction of certified records fixed by state statutes, but to give to such certified copies, when introduced, the like faith and credit that they are accorded in the courts of the state."

EXTRADITION

Subjecting extradited person to civil liability.—The process of extradition should not be perverted to serve the purposes of a private litigant in subjecting the extradited person to a civil liability. *Smith v. ### XII. WARRANT OF ARREST (p. 301)

Form and sufficiency—Fugitive from justice.—A warrant for the arrest of an alleged fugitive from justice, which is issued on information on oath that "the offense of fugitive from justice has been committed" by him, even though treated as including the oath which recites that he entered the state from another state "where he is charged with the crime of murder," is insufficient as failing to show the production of an authenticated "copy of an indictment found or affidavit made before a magistrate" of the state from which he is alleged to have fled, as required by this section. Reichman v. Harris, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 371, 164 C. C. A. 205.

FOOD AND DRUGS

Costs.—The Food and Drugs Act is a highly penal statute and the court cannot read into it the imposition of anything which partakes of the nature of punishment and is not to be found in the law. Thus, in the absence of an express provision in the act regarding liability for costs, intervening claimants of goods libeled thereunder, who have not agreed to pay costs of the proceeding, cannot be held liable. U. S. v. 1,590 Cases of Tomato Pulp, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 255 Fed. 228.

State statutes.—The Food and Drugs Act does not prevent state regulation of domestic retail sales. Indirect effects upon interstate commerce do not invalidate the act. Hebe Co. v. Shaw, (1919) 248 U. S. 297, 39 S. Ct. 125, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

A state statute making it unlawful to sell any article of food that contains benzoic acid or benzoates is valid and applies to domestic retail sales of single bottles or the contents of single bottles notwithstanding that they were shipped into the state from another state and complied with all requirements of the federal Food and Drugs Act. Weigle v. Curtice Bros. Co., (1919) 248 U. S. 286, 39 S. Ct. 124, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "The argument in support of the decree contends in various forms that the sale of the individual bottles, when removed from the original package after entering the state, still is a part of commerce among the states, since the Act of Congress as to misbranding applies to them. But the Food and Drugs Act does not change or purport to change the moment at which an object ceases to move in interstate commerce. It imposes an obligation to label the bottles severally, although contained in one original package, as of course it may. Seven Cases of Eckman's Alternative v. United States, 239 U. S. 510, 515, 516. It provides for seizure and condemnation of misbranded or adulterated articles that have been transported from one state to another, although the transit is at an end, while the articles remain unsold or in original unbroken packages, as again it may. There is no reason why a lien ex delicto should be lost by the end of the journey in which the wrong was done. The two things have no relation to each other. Hipolite Egg Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 45, 57, 58. Finally, the duty to retain the label upon the single bottles does not disappear at once. For reasons stated in McDermott v. Wisconsin, (1913) 228 U. S. 115, 33 S. Ct. 431, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 754, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 984, Ann. Cas. 1915A 39, if the state should require the label to be removed while the bottles remained in the importer's hands unsold, it could interfere with the means reasonably adopted by Congress to make its regulations obeyed. But all this has nothing to do with the question when interstate commerce is over and the articles carried in it have come under the general power of the state. The law upon that point has undergone no change. The Food and Drugs Act indicates its intent to respect the recognized line of distinction between domestic and interstate commerce too clearly to need argument of an examination of its language. It naturally would, as the distinction is constitutional. The fact that a food or drug might be condemned by Congress if it passed from state to state, does not carry an immunity of foods or drugs, making the same passage, that it does not condemn. Neither the silence of Congress nor the decisions of officers of the United States have any authority beyond the domain established by the Constitution. Rast v. Van Deman & Lewis Co., 240 U. S. 342, 362. When objects of commerce get within the sphere of state legislation the state may exercise its independent judgment and prohibit what Congress did not see fit to forbid. When they get within that sphere is determined, as we have said, by the old long-established criteria. The Food and Drugs Act does not interfere with state regulation of selling at retail. Armour & Co. v. North Dakota, 240 U. S. 510, 517; McDermott v. Wisconsin, 228 U. S. 115, 131. Such regulation is not an attempt to supplement the action of Congress in interstate commerce but the exercise of an authority outside of that commerce that always has remained in the states."

A state statute prescribing a standard of purity for a product to entitle it labeled or branded in a certain manner and sold at retail under such label or brand, does not contravene this Act. Cleveland Macaroni Co. v. State Board of Health, (N. D. Cal. 1919) 256 Fed. 376.

The Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 164, which prohibits the bringing of milk into the District of Columbia without first obtaining a permit from the health officer of the District, was intended primarily to regulate the source of supply of such milk and to secure sanitary conditions and surroundings, and is not repealed by this Act, which is operative when such milk reaches the District and subjects it to the tests of misbranding and adulteration. District of Columbia v. Simpson, (1917) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 6.

Articles not to be immediately used as food.—In a prosecution for transporting in interstate commerce milk adulterated with water, it is no defense that it was shipped from the defendant's receiving station in one state to itself in another state, there to be treated and impurities removed before being used as an article of food. Union Dairy Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 231, 162 C. C. A. 367.

Number of offenses in single shipment.—There is authority that the unit of an offense under this section is the article as distinguished from the shipment. Moreover, adulteration and misbranding are different offenses. Consequently, if there are seven different articles in a shipment and each article is both adulterated and misbranded, there are fourteen separate and distinct violations of the Act, for which separate penalties may be imposed. U. S. v. Direct Sales Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1918) 252 Fed. 882.

It has been held, however, contrary to the above authority, that a shipment of two hundred and fifty pails of adulterated candy to one consignee in a single shipment constitutes but one offense under this section. U. S. v. Watson-Durand-Kasper Grocery Co., (D. C. Kan. 1917) 251 Fed. 310, wherein the court said: "Conceding, therefore, the candy complained of in this case was adulterated in violation of the act, yet, as there was but a single sale, purchase, and shipment of the adulterated product, as the entire matter charged grew out of a single transaction and a single shipment, it must follow the plaintiff can carve out of this single transaction but a single offense. Although there were 250 pails of the candy shipped, yet here, as under the provisions of the Twenty-Eight Hour Law (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3594, 34 Stat. 607), shipment made or offered by defendant must be taken as the unit, although it may consist of many parcels. No greater reason appears for dividing the shipment in question under the Food and Drugs Act, all being comprehended under the general term 'confectionery,' into different lots or parcels than would appear for making the many different head or cars of stock a separate violation of the Twenty-Eight Hour Law."

Information—Signing and filing.—An information signed by the district attorney acting on a report filed in court by the Secretary of Agriculture is sufficient, and leave of court is not necessary to its filing. U. S. v. Simon, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 248 Fed. 980. The court said: "The practice, adopted, as we are informed, in the western district of this circuit, of requiring actual leave before permitting informations to be filed, presents certain advantages, as does the practice followed in other jurisdictions of permitting leave to be assumed until challenged, but each comes in the end to be the same."

Decaying fruit.—Oranges frozen before shipment and beginning to decay are adulterated within the meaning of this Act. U. S. v. 462 Boxes of Oranges, (D. C. Colo. 1917) 249 Fed. 505.

Confectionery.—Confectionery is adulterated when it contains "a vegetable substance" deleterious or detrimental to health. U. S. v. Watson-Durand-Kasper Grocery Co., (D. C. Kan. 1917) 251 Fed. 310, wherein the court said: "Coming, now, to the remaining question, defendant contends, although the adulterated product charged to have been shipped in interstate commerce is pleaded to have been a food product, as the evidence discloses it to have been 'confectionery,' commonly called candy, and as the act by its terms defines in what the adulteration of 'confectionery' consists, namely, 'if it contains terra alba, barytes, talc, chrome yellow, or other mineral substance or poisonous color, or flavor,' and as the adulteration here charged is not by the use of a mineral but of a vegetable substance, therefore, applying the rule of ejusdem generis, the act does not, by the addition of the phrase 'or other ingredient deleterious or detrimental to health,' cover a case in which the substance, deleterious or detrimental to health ingredient, is of a vegetable and not a mineral substance."

"From a careful reading of the act I cannot give my assent to this construction for this reason: Conceding candy to fall under the general classification of 'confectionery,' further conceding Congress has by the terms of the act specified what constitutes an adulteration of 'confectionery,' all as by defendant contended, yet I am of the opinion the phrase, 'or other ingredient deleterious or detrimental to health,' is not limited by or restricted to the preceding phrase, 'or other mineral substance or poisonous color or flavor.' On the contrary, I am of the opinion it was the intent of the lawmaking power to provide that 'confectionery may be adulterated in violation of the terms of the act in three distinct and separate manners or ways:

(1) By causing it to contain 'terra alba, barytes, talc, chrome yellow, or other mineral substance or poisonous color or flavor;' (2) by permitting it to contain or include any 'other ingredient deleterious or detrimental to health;' or (3) by the use of 'any vinous, malt, or spirituous liquor or compound or narcotic drug.'"

Adulterated milk.—In a prosecution for transporting in interstate commerce milk adulterated with water, it is unnecessary, in view of the provisions of this section, for the court to receive evidence to establish the fact that the addition of water to milk injuriously affects the quality or strength of milk. Union Dairy Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 231, 162 C. C. A. 367.

Meat and meat-food products prepared for interstate or foreign commerce under the meat-inspection amendment to the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1906, ch. 3913 (see vol. I, p. 398), are subject to the provisions of this Act relating to adulteration. (1913) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 164.

Vol. III, p. 379, sec. 8. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 139.]

Scope of last proviso.—The last proviso that "nothing in this act shall be construed as requiring or compelling proprietors or manufacturers of proprietary foods which contain no unwholesome added ingredient to disclose their trade formulas except in so far as the provisions of this act may require to secure freedom from adulteration or misbranding,"—merely relates to the interpretation of the requirements of the federal Act, and does not enlarge its purview, or establish a rule as to matters which lie outside its prohibitions. Corn Products Refining Co. v. Eddy, (1919) 249 U. S. 427, 39 S. Ct. 325, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 99 Kan. 63, 163 Pac. 615.

Validity of state statutes on subject of misbranding.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see E. Fougere v. New York, (1918) 224 N. Y. 269, 120 N. E. 642.

Congress did not, by the enactment of the Food and Drugs Act for the prevention of adulteration and misbranding of food and drugs when the subject of interstate commerce, preclude a state board of health from prohibiting, under the sanction of the state Food and Drugs Law, sales by importing dealers of a proprietary table syrup in the original packages unless the principal label shall disclose the ingredients and their proportions, where the state law, though following quite closely the lines of the federal statute, inserts the words not found in the federal statute, "or the rules and regulations of the state board of health," in the proviso to the misbranding section that nothing in the Act shall be construed as requiring or compelling proprietors or manufacturers of proprietary goods which contain no unwholesome ingredients to disclose their trade formulas except in so far as the provisions of the Act may require to secure freedom from adulteration or misbranding. Corn Products Refining Co. v. Eddy, (1919) 249 U. S. 427, 39 S. Ct. 325, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming (1916) 99 Kan. 63, 163 Pac. 615), wherein the court said: "The question of repugnancy to the commerce clause may be treated (a) aside from federal legislation; and (b) in view of the 'Food and Drugs Act' of Congress, June 30, 1906, c. 3915, 34 Stat. 768. Upon this question, in both aspects, the judgment under review is clearly sustained by the decision of this court in Savage v. Jones, (1912) 225 U. S. 501, 32 S. Ct. 715, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 1182, which is precisely in point. . . . Savage v. Jones was decided after elaborate argument and upon full consideration. We see no reason to reconsider the conclusion there reached or to deny to the case its proper authority. Its doctrine was followed and applied in Sligh v. Kirkwood, (1915) 237 U. S. 52, 61–62 [35 S. Ct. 501, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 835, 839]; Hebe Co. v. Shaw, (1919) 248 U. S. 297, 304 [39 S. Ct. 125, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —]. It is argued that the present case is controlled rather by McDermott v. Wisconsin, (1913) 228 U. S. 115, 130, 33 S. Ct. 431, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 754, 765, Ann. Cas. 1915A 39, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 984, and in effect that this case must be taken as overruling Savage v. Jones. The contention is unfounded. The authority of the earlier decision was expressly recognized in the opinion of the court in the later; the distinction being placed (pp. 131–132) upon the question whether the regulations of the state concerning the same subject-matter were in conflict with the acts of Congress. The Wisconsin statute was held to be in conflict because it required that packages of foodstuffs received through the channels of interstate commerce, bearing labels intended to be in compliance with the act of Congress, while the goods were still unsold and were in the possession of the importer for the purpose of sale and being exposed and offered for sale by him, as a condition of their legitimate sale within the state, should bear the label required by the state law and none other — in effect requiring the label that showed compliance with the act of Congress to be removed from the package before the first sale by the importer, and while the goods remained still subject to federal inspection."

Misleading statements as to curative effects — "Remedy." — The word "remedy" is not synonymous with "cure" but means that which relieves or cures a disease, and hence a manufacturer who advertises a medicine as a remedy for certain diseases, after being informed that it relieved them, is not guilty of "misbranding" it within the meaning of this section, on the principle that he advertised it as a cure for such diseases. U. S. v. Natura Co., (N. D. Cal. 1917) 250 Fed. 925.

Statements false and fraudulent. — In a prosecution under this section for misbranding medicine by making false and fraudulent statements on the labels regarding its curative effects, the government in order to obtain a conviction must show that the statements were both false and fraudulent. U. S. v. Tubercledec Co., (S. D. Cal. 1916) 252 Fed. 938.

An information charging a violation of this section in misbranding drugs shipped in interstate commerce is sufficient against a motion in arrest of judgment where it alleges that the statements in the labels were applied by the defendant to the drug knowingly and in reckless and wanton disregard to their truth or falsity. Dr. J. H. McLean Medicine Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 694, 165 C. C. A. 288.

Evidence by physicians that there is a general agreement of medical opinion that a drug, composed according to the formula used by the defendant in preparing the drug sold by him, would not be effective for the treatment of the diseases for which the defendant's labels and statements claim it is effective, is admissible in a prosecution under this section for misbranding drugs. Likewise, in such a prosecution testimonials regarding the defendant's drug, if relating to the alleged false statements made by him and if relied on by the manager of his business in making the statements, are admissible on the question of intent, without proof of their execution, or the truth of their subject matter. Dr. J. H. McLean Medicine Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 694, 165 C. C. A. 288.

In a prosecution under this section for misbranding drugs shipped in interstate commerce, there must be proof of an actual intent to deceive, an intent which may be inferred from facts and circumstances, but which must be proved. Accordingly, an instruction that one who makes a false statement, not knowing whether it is true or false, is as guilty of wrong as the man who makes a false statement knowing it is false, is erroneous. Dr. J. H. McLean Medicine Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 694, 165 C. C. A. 288.

Label as evidence of contents. — The label upon a bottle required by the Pure Food Laws of the United States, stating the component parts of the contents of said bottle, is presumptive evidence of what the bottle contains, and such bottle, contents, and label thereon may be legally introduced in evidence in a prosecution for a violation of the prohibitory liquor laws of this state, and, if not rebutted, such evidence is prima facie sufficient to establish the character of the contents of such bottle in so far as the statements contained in said labels are required by law. Gilliland v. State, (Okla. 1919) 179 Pac. 786.

Administrative rules defining variations, etc.—Under this section as amended by the Act of March 3, 1913, ch. 117, administrative rules are to be promulgated specifically defining (1) reasonable variations, (2) tolerances as to large packages, (3) exemptions as to small, the line between large and small packages to be determined by the three secretaries. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 222.

FOOD AND FUEL

1918 Supp., p. 188, sec. 15.

Section as part of customs laws.—"This section is not a part of the customs laws, providing for the importation of 'dutiable' goods." In re Food Conservation Act, (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 893.

Forfeiture of vehicles.—"I am of the opinion, while the authorities are conflicting, that when a defendant has been indicted, convicted, and punished by a court of competent jurisdiction, pursuant to the provisions of section 15, . . . for bringing distilled spirits into the United States, he cannot be proceeded against by proceedings in rem for the forfeiture of his vehicles used in bringing in such spirits, inasmuch as the statute is new, denounces the penalty and punishment for the offense to be imposed, and makes no reference to any forfeiture of such property, or to any other or prior statute. As to the distilled spirits brought in contrary to law, I am of the opinion they are unlawfully in the United States, and may be seized and disposed of by forfeiture or otherwise, and that such seizure and forfeiture is not the imposition of a double or added punishment." In re Food Conservation Act, (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 893.

1918 Supp., p. 191, sec. 25.

Constitutionality.—This section which seeks to regulate the prices of coal and coke is clearly a measure necessary for the efficient prosecution of war and is constitutional. U. S. v. Pennsylvania Cent. Coal Co., (W. D. Pa. 1918) 256 Fed. 703.

Indictment for conspiracy.—In U. S. v. Pennsylvania Cent. Coal Co., (W. D. Pa. 1918) 256 Fed. 703, which was an indictment for conspiracy against the Pennsylvania Cent. Coal Co., and others, to violate this section, demurrers to the indictment were overruled. The court said: "To constitute an indictment under this section, it is, of course, necessary to charge that the conspiracy was to do an act made a crime by the laws of the United States, the offense under section 37 of the Criminal Code (see vol. VII, p. 534) consisting of the unlawful combination and the doing of some act in furtherance of it. The offense which the defendants are charged with conspiring to commit, to wit, 'to violate the provisions of section 25 of the act of Congress approved

August 10, 1917, entitled 'An act to provide further for the national security and defense by encouraging the production, conserving the supply, and controlling the distribution of food products and fuel,' and the regulations issued thereunder by Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, and Harry A. Garfield, United States Fuel Administrator.' The manner of its violation is set forth to be that the defendants, engaged in the business of jobbers of coal, with full knowledge that the President had fixed a maximum price for the sale of coal, unlawfully combined to demand and receive from certain parties named a higher price per ton than the maximum price fixed by the President. Under the act, it is the President of the United States who is authorized to fix the price, and to establish rules for the regulation of and to regulate the production, sale, shipment, and so forth. 'Said authority and power may be exercised by him in each case through the agency of the Federal Trade Commission during the war or for such part of said time as in his judgment may be necessary.' That portion of the indictment which avers a violation of the regulations issued by the President and the Fuel Administrator may be rejected as surplusage, in view of the specific definition of the offense which follows these words. If the charge was the commission of a substantive offense, namely, the sale of coal above the price fixed, it would be necessary in the indictment to aver both the fixed price and the price of sale. Not so, however, when the offense is a conspiracy to ask, demand, and receive a higher price than that fixed by the President. I think the indictment is sufficiently specific to define and identify the offense charged, so as to enable the defendants to prepare their defense thereto. It is not necessary that the offense which is intended to be committed as a result of the conspiracy should be described with the particularity required in an indictment in which such matter is charged as a substantive crime. Certainty to a common intent is all that is required. Neither is it necessary in alleging overt acts in the indictment, committed by one of the conspirators, to set forth in what manner the several overt acts tended to effect the purpose of the conspiracy. It is sufficient to allege that such acts were done to effect its object. Houston v. United States, 217 Fed. 854, 133 C. C. A. 562. It was said in

United States v. McCord, (D. C.) 72 Fed. 163: 'Any overt act, however slight, intended to effectuate the object of the conspiracy, and whatever its character may be, whether it is itself criminal or . . . innocent in its nature, is sufficient to fix the offense and to make it indictable.' The indictment sets forth the names of the alleged conspirators, charged with a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, the nature of the offense, the time and place, with the overt acts committed in and for the purpose of executing them. These, in my opinion, are sufficient to sustain the indictment. Hyde v. United States, 225 U. S. 347, 32 Sup. Ct. 793, 56 L. Ed. 1114, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 614."

GAME ANIMALS AND BIRDS

Conflict with state laws.—Congress will not be deemed to have assumed such exclusive jurisdiction of migratory game and insectivorous birds by the provisions of the Act of March 4, 1913, that such birds "shall hereafter be deemed to be within the custody and protection of the government of the United States, and shall not be destroyed or taken contrary to regulations hereinafter provided therefor," which are to fix closed seasons in the several zones, as to invalidate the provisions of S. D. Laws 1909, ch. 240, § 29, forbidding the shipment by common or private carriers of wild duck of any variety to any person within or without the state,—especially since to construe the federal act as having such effect would raise a doubt as to its constitutionality. Carey v. South Dakota, (1919) 250 U. S. 118, 39 S. Ct. 403, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming (1917) 39 S. D. 524, 165 N. W. 539), wherein the court said: "On behalf of the state, it was contended that this provision of its statute is not inconsistent with the federal law; and that its statute is in any event valid, because the federal law is unconstitutional. United States v. McCullagh, (D. C. Kan. 1915) 221 Fed. Rep. 288. The Supreme Court of South Dakota did not pass upon the constitutional question; but upheld the state statute on the ground that it was not inconsistent with the federal law, since it did not appear that the ducks in question had been killed in violation of any regulation adopted under it. The prohibition of the federal act is limited to the provision that the birds 'shall not be destroyed or taken contrary to regulations.' The regulations merely prescribe the closed seasons. That is, neither the federal law nor the regulations deal with shipping. The prohibition of the state law here in question is limited to forbidding persons to 'ship . . . by common or private carrier.' It applies alike whether the shipment is made in open or closed season; and, it applies although the birds were lawfully killed or taken. This provision of the state law is obviously not inconsistent with the federal law. The fact that other provisions of this state statute may be so (which we do not consider) is immaterial, as the provision here in question may clearly stand alone."

HABEAS CORPUS

Vol. III, p. 427, sec. 751. [First ed., vol. III, p. 162.]

II. Courts authorized to issue writ.

1. Generally.
2. Supreme Court.
4. District Court.

IV. As substitute for writ of error.

1. Rule stated.

VI. Federal interference with custody of state court.

1. Rule stated.

VIII. Review of proceedings of special tribunals.

3. Immigration.

II. COURTS AUTHORIZED TO ISSUE WRIT

1. Generally (p. 428)

It is settled that the jurisdiction of courts of the United States to issue writs of habeas corpus is limited to cases of persons alleged to be restrained of their liberty in violation of the Constitution or of some law or treaty of the United States, and cases arising under the law of nations. Matters v. Ryan, (1919) 249 U. S. 375, 39 S. Ct. 315, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

2. Supreme Court (p. 428)

Power as appellate in nature.—A habeas corpus proceeding presenting the question whether a federal District Court may punish a witness for contempt solely because of the opinion of that court that he is committing perjury, without reference to any circumstance or condition giving it an obstructive effect, is so exceptional in character as to require the Supreme Court to determine the question in the exercise of its original jurisdiction. Ex p. Hudgings, (1919) 249 U. S. 378, 39 S. Ct. 337, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Relief afforded by other competent courts.—For the purpose of redressing assumed violations of the Constitution and laws of the United States by means of habeas corpus the jurisdiction of other competent courts to afford relief may not be passed by and the original jurisdiction of the federal Supreme Court be invoked, in the absence of exceptional conditions justifying such course. In re Tracy, (1919) 249 U. S. 551, 39 S. Ct. 374, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Effect of granting permission to file petition for writ.—The grant by the Supreme Court of permission to file a petition for a writ of habeas corpus prima facie implies that the case is of such a character as to be an exception to the rule of procedure that other available sources of judicial power may not be passed by for the purpose of obtaining relief by resorting to the original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Ex p. Hudgings, (1919) 249 U. S. 378, 39 S. Ct. 337, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

4. District Court (p. 430)

Maternity and custody of child.—A habeas corpus proceeding to determine the maternity and consequent right to custody of a minor child was not brought within the jurisdiction of a District Court as involving a substantial federal question by reason of an averment in the petition that the case was governed by the immigration laws of the United States, where the only basis for that assertion rested upon the allegation that the defendant, pretending to be the mother of the infant child, had brought her from Canada into the United States without complying with the administrative requirements of the immigration laws. Matters v. Ryan, (1919) 249 U. S. 375, 39 S. Ct. 315, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "It is obvious that on the face of the petition the sole question at issue was the maternity and custody of the child, and as that question was in its nature local and non-federal there was nothing to sustain the jurisdiction unless the averment that the case was governed by the immigration laws of the United States had that effect. But when it is observed that the only basis for that assertion rested upon the allegation that the defendant, pretending to be the mother of the infant child, had brought her from Canada into the United States without complying with the administrative requirements of the immigration laws, we are of opinion that the case made involved no federal question adequate to sustain the jurisdiction, because of the unsubstantial and frivolous character of the contention made in that respect."

"We are constrained to this conclusion since we are unable to perceive the possible basis upon which it can be assumed that the local question of maternity, and consequent right to custody, which dominated and controlled the whole issue could be transformed and made federal in character by the assertion concerning immigration laws. And this becomes all the more cogent when the absence of power on the part of the petitioner to champion the enforcement of the immigration laws is borne in mind."

"Whether a case might arise where a court of the United States could take jurisdiction of a petition for habeas corpus upon averment of diversity of citizenship and pecuniary interest, without the assertion of a federal right, does not here arise (a) because the suit was brought exclusively under the assumption that it was governed by the law of the United States which requires a federal question to give jurisdiction, and (b) because, in any event, there is here no averment of jurisdictional amount."

IV. AS SUBSTITUTE FOR WRIT OF ERROR

1. Rule Stated (p. 431)

Rule against use as substitute.—The writ of habeas corpus may not be employed as an anticipatory writ of error. Rumely v. McCarthy, (1919) 250 U. S. 283, 39 S. Ct. 483, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 565.

Review of finding of United States commissioner.—A finding of a United States commissioner in proceedings for the removal to another federal district for trial of a person there charged with an offense against the United States, that the office of the Alien Property Custodian is in the District of Columbia, if supported by competent evidence, is not reviewable by habeas corpus. Rumely v. McCarthy, (1919) 250 U. S. 283, 39 S. Ct. 483, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 565.

VI. FEDERAL INTERFERENCE WITH CUSTODY OF STATE COURT

1. Rule Stated (p. 438)

Where a person is in custody, under process from a state court.—To same effect as original annotation, see Castle v. Lewis, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 917, 166 C. C. A. 279.

A petition to a federal court for a writ of habeas corpus which does not disclose with sufficient particularity anything which would warrant the court in interfering with the proceedings in the state court, will be denied. Shapley v. Cahoon, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 689.

3. Immigration (p. 443)

In Mayo v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 839, 168 C. C. A. 185, which was an appeal from an order, made on a habeas corpus hearing, directing that the appellee, an alien, be released from custody by the appellant, the Commissioner of Immigration at the port of New Orleans, the opinion read as follows: "The writ was issued pursuant to the prayer of a petition, which alleged that the petitioner, the appellee, was deprived of a fair hearing by the board which ordered her deportation after she was detained upon her arrival at New Orleans on a vessel from a Mexican port. The return to the writ set up that the petitioner was held under an order of deportation made by a board of special inquiry and affirmed by the Secretary of Labor; that order being based upon a finding that the appellee was 'a person coming to this country for an immoral purpose.' The record discloses that evidence was adduced on the hearing which resulted in the order appealed from. It does not disclose what that evidence was. Some evidence is set out, without being authenticated in any way by the presiding judge. The record does not purport to contain all the evidence adduced on the hearing.

"The following is all that is shown by the bill of exceptions: The appellant objected to the admission of testimony by the appellee 'on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction to receive evidence and inquire into the merits of said cause without ascertaining whether the alien, Laure Sebastine Jobin, was given a fair trial by the immigration authorities; and his honor the judge then and there overruled said objection and admitted said testimony. Whereupon counsel for respondent reserved the bill of exceptions to the said ruling of the court.' It is not made to appear that the stated ground of objection existed in fact. It follows that it cannot properly be said that the ruling excepted to was erroneous. The opinion rendered by the district judge shows that he found that the appellee was denied a fair hearing by the immigration authorities, and that she 'is not of immoral character and is entitled to admission to the United States.' Proper findings to that effect entitled the appellee to be released from custody under the order of deportation. Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U. S. 8, 28 Sup. Ct. 201, 52 L. Ed. 369; Zadonaite v. Wolf, 226 U. S. 272, 33 Sup. Ct. 31, 57 L. Ed. 218. It is to be presumed that the findings were proper ones, the record not showing the contrary."

Petition—Allegations of arbitrary action.—"Where the unlawfulness claimed is the order of an inferior tribunal, legally constituted and clothed with jurisdiction over the subject-matter and the person detained, the petition must charge facts constituting arbitrary or capricious action by such inferior tribunal." Ex p. Tinkoff, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 254 Fed. 222, affirmed (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 225, 165 C. C. A. 513.

Proceedings before draft boards.—The refusal of a district board to grant a rehearing to a registrant is not arbitrary action that will justify the issuance of a writ of habeas corpus, nor may the writ be issued to relieve a registrant from an alleged erroneous decision of the board. Ex p. Tinkoff, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 254 Fed. 222, affirmed (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 225, 165 C. C. A. 513.

Stay of proceedings.—Where the district judge who remanded the relator and allowed the appeal, refused a stay pending appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals in a habeas corpus proceeding, it was held that a single judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals had no power to grant a stay. U. S. v. Johnson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 889, 164 C. C. A. 105.

Resentence.—A resentence by a state court pending a writ of habeas corpus in a federal court, the first sentence being treated as void, does not constitute "acting in any matter pending and in process of being heard" in the federal court. Ex p. McCready, (Cal. 1918) 177 Pac. 459.

Decisions of a federal court are controlling on state courts as to the interpretation of the Act. Ex p. McCready, (Cal. 1918) 177 Pac. 459.

HOSPITALS AND ASYLUMS

Direction of transfer after end of term of imprisonment.—A convict sentenced to imprisonment in a federal prison is entitled to be discharged at the end of his term of imprisonment, and hence an order made thereafter by the Secretary of the Interior under authority of this section, directing his transfer from the prison to the Government Hospital for the Insane at Washington, D. C., is not sufficient authority for his detention in the latter institution. (1916) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 569.

IMMIGRATION

Validity of regulations.—Since such rules and regulations as the Commissioner-General of Immigration is authorized to establish under this section must be consistent with the Act itself, they can only have the force and effect of law when not in contravention of law. Holland-America Line v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 522.

V. Persons likely to become a public charge.

VIII. Persons solicited to migrate.

IX. Children.

V. PERSONS LIKELY TO BECOME A PUBLIC CHARGE (p. 641)

Person liable to arrest.—An alien who is charged with the commission of a minor offense before immigration is not subject to deportation. Howe v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 292, 159 C. C. A. 386, wherein the court said: "Section 2 of the act expressly covers exclusion because of the commission of a felony or other crime involving moral turpitude, and conditions the exclusion upon either a conviction of the alien or on an admission by him, neither of which exists in this case. If an immigrant may be excluded on the theory that because of charges of dishonesty neither proved nor admitted, this special provision of the act would appear to be useless. Certainly it can be circumvented in any case. It seems to us evidently intended, by defining the proof required, to prevent just such conjectures as were indulged in by the immigration inspector in this case. Indeed, with such latitudinarian construction of the provision 'likely to become a public charge,' most of the other specific grounds of exclusion could have been dispensed with. Idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons, insane persons, persons affected with tuberculosis, and prostitutes might all be regarded as likely to become a public charge. The excluded classes with which this provision is associated are significant. It appears between 'paupers' and 'professional beggars.' We are convinced that Congress meant the act to exclude persons who were likely to become occupants of almshouses for want of means with which to support themselves in the future. If the words covered jails, hospitals, and insane asylums, several of the other categories of exclusion would seem to be unnecessary. We are referred to a decision of the District Court for the Southern District of New York in United States ex rel. Freeman v. Williams, (D. C.) 175 Fed. 274, in which the deportation of an alien whose career before entering the United States had been one of habitual delinquency was sustained on the ground that he was likely to become a public charge. We are not persuaded by this decision, and think Savitsky did not fall within the class under which the order of deportation was made. Geglow v. Uhl, 239 U. S. 9, 36 Sup. Ct. 2, 60 L. Ed. 114."

VIII. PERSONS SOLICITED TO MIGRATE (p. 646)

"Offers or promises of employment" in order to come within the scope of this section, must be made by, or with the authority of, the person proposing to furnish the employment. A mere assurance or promise, in general terms, of employment after reaching this country, made to an alien contract laborer by a foreign steamship or transportation agent, is not ground for exclusion. Ex p. Prout, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 253 Fed. 97.

IX. CHILDREN (p. 648)

Children of citizens born abroad.—The Department of Labor has no authority to promulgate a rule excluding from admission to this country children of Chinese citizens born abroad, unless they are dependent members of their father's family. Quan Hing Sun v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 402, 165 C. C. A. 622.

Construction.—This section should be strictly construed. U. S. v. River Spinning Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 586, 162 C. C. A. 602.

Separate penalties for each alien.—Where two contract laborers are caused to come to this country by virtue of a single letter promising employment to both only one penalty can be recovered. U. S. v. International Silver Co., (D. C. Conn. 1919) 255 Fed. 694, wherein the court said: "The demurrer to the relief prayed for in the second count must be sustained upon the authority of United States v. N. Y. Central R. R. Co., (D. C.) 232 Fed. 179. There the defendant arranged for the importation of five alien laborers with whom it had made contracts of employment, and had arranged to assist their importation by furnishing them a joint free railroad pass, which the court held to be equivalent to the prepayment of their fares in cash, and decided that this was but a single act applicable to all five, and hence one penalty could be imposed. On page 184

Judge Ray said: 'As there was but one solicitation, all one act, the defendant incurred one penalty.' This ruling was affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit on appeal. 239 Fed. 130, 152 C. C. A. 172. So here there was but one transaction, all one act, and, even if the allegations of the second count be sufficient to state a cause of action, there could be only one recovery."

Necessity of actual entry.—Where contract laborers are rejected at the port of entry, the penalty provided by this section may not be recovered, for an actual entry into the United States must be shown. U. S. v. River Spinning Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 586, 162 C. C. A. 602.

Vol. III, p. 661, sec. 9. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 165.]

British sailor removed from British ship because of illness.—This section is not violated where a British seaman signing as a member of a crew of a British steamship in an English port for a round trip is suffering from tuberculosis and is removed from the ship at an American port by immigration authorities for appearance before a board of inquiry where the facts show that at the time of the signing he appeared to be healthy, and neither the master nor any of the officers of the ship had any reason to suspect he was diseased, although a medical examination would have disclosed the fact that he was suffering from tuberculosis. W. & C. T. Jones Steamship Corp. v. Hamilton, (E. D. Va. 1918) 255 Fed. 799.

Liability of steamship company for maintenance of aliens.—Section 16 does not obligate steamship lines transporting alien immigrants to defray the expense of the treatment, care, and maintenance of aliens in hospitals where they are treated prior to their examination by immigration officials and subsequent landing and admission to the United States, but contemplates that the United States shall pay the charges incurred for maintenance and treatment preceding examination and admission to the country. Holland-America Line v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 522.

I. ENTERING IN VIOLATION OF LAW (p. 673)

Entry on temporary pass.—An alien in sound physical health who enters from Canada under a pass granted him by the board of special inquiry at Montreal established under section 32 of the Act of Feb. 20, 1907 (see vol. III, p. 694), for the purpose of visiting a brother in New York will not be deported on the ground of illegal entry though he remains in New York and enters into business there. Howe v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 292, 159 C. C. A. 386.

III. FINALITY OF DECISIONS OF IMMIGRATION OFFICERS (p. 687)

Determination of identity of applicant.—Where a Chinese person applies for admission on the ground that he is a native-born citizen of the United States and, on examination under the Chinese Exclusion Acts, produces a certified copy of a court discharge in a habeas corpus proceeding, a decision of the commissioner of immigration denying him admission solely on the ground that he is not the person mentioned in such discharge, is not conclusive and may be reviewed by the District Court. White v. Tam Sen, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 131, 164 C. C. A. 243.

Bond valid.—A bond conditioned that an alien contemporaneously admitted into the United States shall not become a public charge and that the sureties will within six months and again within a year make written reports to the immigration officer of the residence and occupation of the alien is valid. U. S. v. Feldman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 482, 159 C. C. A. 536.

Action on bond—presumption.—In an action on a bond conditioned that the sureties will report on the residence and occupation of an alien, testimony of the immigration officer that no notice was received raises a presumption that it was not sent, for the officers and employees of the postal service are presumed to have done their duty and made delivery of all properly addressed mail matter intrusted to their care; equally, also, are the officials of the immigration service presumed to have kept what they received. U. S. v. Feldman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 482, 159 C. C. A. 536.

Effect of pass permitting entry.—A pass properly issued by a board established under section 32 protects the immigrant from deportation on the ground of illegal entry. Howe v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 292, 159 C. C. A. 386.

1918 Supp., p. 214, sec. 3.

"Persons likely to become a public charge."—A "person likely to become a public charge" is one who for some cause or reason appears to be about to become a charge on the public, one who is to be supported at public expense, by reason of poverty, insanity and poverty, disease and poverty, idiocy and poverty, or, it might be, by reason of having committed a crime which on conviction would be followed by imprisonment. It would seem there should be something indicating the person is liable to become or shows probability of her becoming a public charge. Ex p. Mitchell, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 229.

Employee of foreign steamship company temporarily in country as contract laborer.—A clerk employed by a Dutch steamship company in its office at Amsterdam, who is transferred to its branch office in New York temporarily and is later to be sent by the company to its branch office in Dutch Guiana, is not a contract laborer within the meaning of this section. U. S. r. Royal Dutch West India Mail, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 250 Fed. 913.

Findings by immigration authorities as conclusive.—A finding by the Secretary of Labor that an alien is "likely to become a public charge" is not conclusive, but may be reviewed on habeas corpus. Ex p. Mitchell, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 229, wherein the court said:

"But it is said the Secretary of Labor at Washington has passed on the question of fact, and has decided as matter of fact that this alien is a person likely to become a public charge, and that this finding is conclusive on the court. But there are no facts and not a single fact, and the record is before the court, indicating that she is such a person. The facts being before the court, it becomes a question of law whether or not this alien is within the description of persons subject to deportation. Geglow v. Uhl, 239 U. S. 31, 36 Sup. Ct. 2, 60 L. Ed. 114; Gonzales v. Williams, 192 U. S. 1, 15, 24 Sup. Ct. 177, 48 L. Ed. 317; Howe v. United States, 247 Fed. 292, 159 C. C. A. 386, refusing to follow U. S. ex rel. Freeman v. Williams (D. C.) 175 Fed. 274."

1918 Supp., p. 230, sec. 19.

"Advocating and teaching the unlawful destruction of property."—A writ of habeas corpus will be denied to aliens who have been ordered to be deported under this section for "advocating and teaching the unlawful destruction of property," where the evidence of the defendants shows that they believed in the teachings of the I. W. W. and distributed its literature which urged readers to commit sabotage by disabling or destroying machinery and other property of their employers. Ex p. Bernat, (W. D. Wash. 1918) 255 Fed. 429, wherein the court said: "The matter is not before the court for review, but merely to determine whether there is any evidence upon which to base the finding. Under the law, the conclusion of the department of labor, if there is any evidence, is final."

The third proviso of this section is applicable to all aliens, including Chinese, without reference to the time of their entry, who do, after the date of the act, something denounced by the act. Mayo v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 275, 163 C. C. A. 431.

Burden of proof.—Under this section the burden of proof rests upon the alien to show his right to remain in the United States. Jung Kwok Hin v. Burnett, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 685.

1918 Supp., p. 240, sec. 38.

The last proviso of this section preserves the status existing at the time of the passage of the act as to aliens who commit no new offense thereafter, and therefore the status of an alien Chinese person as an alien in this country in violation of the Chinese Exclusion Law will be dealt with by the law as it was before the passage of this Act. Mayo v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 275, 163 C. C. A. 431.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS

Vol. III, p. 723, sec. 1. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 62.]

Constitutionality.—This Act is not unconstitutional because it provides that possession of imported opium shall be deemed sufficient evidence to warrant conviction, unless the defendant explains the possession to the satisfaction of the jury, and that after July 1, 1913, all smoking opium within the United States shall be presumed to have been imported after April 1, 1909, and the burden shall be on the accused to rebut the presumption, for it is within the power of Congress to create rebuttable and explainable presumptions of this nature. Gee Woe v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 428, 162 C. C. A. 498.

Vol. III, p. 726, sec. 5. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 64.]

Canal Zone.—The provisions of this section and of section 6 of this Act are applicable to the Canal Zone. (1914) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 271.

Vol. III, p. 727, sec. 7. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 64.]

Imposition of penalties by courts of Canal Zone.—The courts of the Canal Zone have jurisdiction under the Panama Canal Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 390 (see vol. IX, p. 110), to impose the penalties prescribed in this section. (1914) 308 Op. Atty.-Gen. 271.

Air rifles as "arms or munitions of war."—The question whether air rifles are "arms or munitions of war" within the meaning of this section, is one of fact which the Attorney-General will not decide. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 9.

Clothes and provisions are not munitions of war within the meaning of this section. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 213.

Horses, riding saddles, etc.—Ordinary, as distinguished from military, riding saddles, stirrups, girths, hay and other food stuffs, and horses are not "munitions of war" within the meaning of this section. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 227.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In Sotello v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 721, 168 C. C. A. 67, the evidence therein which showed that the defendant was arrested on American soil a few hundred feet from the Mexican border, traveling on a mule which carried considerable ammunition, was held sufficient to justify the court's overruling a motion for a directed verdict of not guilty.

1918 Supp., p. 243, sec. 1. [Seizure, when authorized.]

The words "or other articles" as used in this section, while literally all-inclusive, should be construed with reference to "arms and munitions of war," used in connection with them, and should be limited to articles the exportation of which is at all times unlawful, or to be made so by proclamation of the President. U. S. v. Fernandez, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 302, 166 C. C. A. 42.

1918 Supp., p. 244, sec. 2.

Time for obtaining warrant.—The provisions of this section are mandatory; hence, where a warrant for the detention of property seized is not obtained within the required ten days, the property must be returned to its owner. U. S. v. 267 Twenty-Dollar Gold Pieces, (W. D. Wash. 1919) 255 Fed. 217.

1918 Supp., p. 245, sec. 1.

Effect of prohibition of exports on charter party.—Where a voyage is frustrated by an order of the exports administrative board, the ship owner is bound either to refund the freight money or to forward the cargo in some manner permitted by the order. The Allanwilde, (D. C. N. J. 1917) 247 Fed. 236.

Release of property on claimant's bond.—Where gold coin, delivered for export in violation of this section, is libeled by the government for forfeiture it may not be released to a claimant upon his giving a bond that it will not be exported, as this title makes no provision for the giving of a bond and the release of property. U. S. v. Fernandez, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 302, 166 C. C. A. 42.

INDIANS

Sheep.—To same effect as original annotation, see U. S. v. Ash Sheep Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 592, 162 C. C. A. 608; 254 Fed. 59, 165 C. C. A. 469.

Conclusiveness of decree denying penalty.—A decree, in a suit to enjoin trespass on lands ceded by Indians to the United States, which denies the recovery of the penalty prescribed by this section on the ground of want of power to adjudicate the question is not conclusive on the right of the United States to recover such penalty in a later suit. U. S. v. Ash Sheep Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 592, 162 C. C. A. 608.

Tribal marriage valid.—Marriages between citizens of the Choctaw Nation residing therein, contracted according to the usages and customs of the tribe of which they were members, and while the tribal relations existed and were recognized by the federal government, will be sustained and held valid in the courts of this state, "and the issue of such marriages shall be deemed legitimate and entitled to all inheritances of property, or other rights, the same as in the case of the issue of other forms of lawful marriage." Johnson v. Dunlap, (Okla. 1918) 173 Pac. 359.

Right conferred by trust patent.—The trust patent provided for in this section gives only a possessory right. Dougherty v. McFarland, (S. D. 1918) 166 N. W. 143.

Beginning of trust period.—The date of the issuance of the trust patent in favor of an Indian allottee, and not the date of the approval of the allotment, marks the beginning of the trust period prescribed by the provisions of this section, that, upon the approval of the allotments provided for in that act by the Secretary of the Interior, he shall cause patents to issue therefor in the name of the allottees, which patents shall be of the legal effect and declare that the United States does and will hold the land thus allotted for the period of twenty-five years in trust for the sole use and benefit of the Indian to whom such allotment shall have been made, or, in case of his decease, of his heirs, and that, at the expiration of such period, the United States will convey the same by patent to said Indian or his heirs in fee, discharged of said trust and free of all charge or encumbrance. U. S. v. Reynolds, (1919) 250 U. S. 104, 39 S. Ct. 409, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 65, wherein the court said: "While the matter is not free from doubt, we have reached the conclusion that by the better construction the trust period begins and dates from the issuance of the trust patent and not from the approval of the allotment. The department distinctly so ruled in Klamath Allotments, 38 L. D. 559, 561, where it was said, after quoting the pertinent language of § 5 of the Act of 1887: 'Clearly no trust is declared until actual issuance of patent, and the use of a word of the present tense, 'does,' shows that the trust period begins to run only upon such issuance.' This ruling was made in the year 1910, and may be inconsistent with some previous rulings of the department, as counsel for respondent insists that it is. Nevertheless it is entitled to weight as an administrative interpretation of the act; it comports with our impression of the natural meaning of the language employed by Congress; and it very probably was relied upon by the President when promulgating the order of November 24, 1916, extending the trust period. This order might as well have been made a few months earlier, had it been supposed that the 25-year period was to expire in September. This construction of the Act of 1887 puts it in agreement with other acts for the allotment of Indian lands, which, while subsequently passed and perhaps not strictly to be regarded as a legislative interpretation, nevertheless seem to us to indicate the effect that Congress attributed to the Act of 1887."

Award of land as alimony.—Where an Indian of the Wyandotte tribe of Indians had been allotted 40 acres of land, and a trust patent for the same had been issued under Act of Congress approved February 8, 1887, § 5, which contained a restriction against alienation of the land for a period of 25 years, it was held in a suit brought against him by his wife for a divorce, for the care and custody of their four minor children, for permanent alimony, and for the settlement of their property rights, where upon the trial the undisputed evidence showed that the period of restriction had expired but the allottee had not received his final patent for the land from the government, that he held the equitable title thereto in fee, and that the decree of the trial court awarding the land to the wife as permanent alimony and in settlement of the property rights of the parties, and for her use in supporting herself and minor children, was valid, and authorized under section 4969, Rev. Laws 1910. Johnson v. Johnson, (Okla. 1919) 179 Pac. 595.

Sale of growing corn.—The sale by an Indian allottee of that part of the total crop to be grown by his tenant upon the allotted land which the lease fixes as due for rent cannot be said to have been forbidden by the prohibition of this section against conveyances of allotted land or contracts touching the same, where such allottee, by virtue of the Act of June 25, 1910 (see vol. 3, p. 853), and resulting regulations, had the power to make the lease and to stipulate for the rental for which it provided. Miller v. McClain, (1919) 249 U. S. 308, 39 S. Ct. 297, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1915) 95 Kan. 794, 149 Pac. 399.

Mandamus to compel issuance of patent to Indian lands will not issue on the ground that the names of the petitioners were irregularly stricken from the roll of Creek freedmen, where it appears that the enrollment was in fact procured by fraud. U. S. v. Lane, (1917) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 134.

Suits by United States as trustee.—Since this section grants citizenship rights to allottees on the issuance of a fee simple title, the United States is not entitled to sue as trustee for an injury to personal property of such an allottee which has been purchased and maintained with funds obtained by him from the sale of a portion of his allotted lands. U. S. v. Seufert Bros. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 51, 164 C. C. A. 163.

Jurisdiction of state courts.—The state courts have jurisdiction to try an Indian who has not severed his tribal relation and is an allottee under the Act on a charge of larceny committed in the state but outside the limits of an Indian allotment or other Indian country. State v. Superior Ct., (Wash. 1919) 181 Pac. 688.

Vol. III, p. 841. [Jurisdiction of action, etc.] [First ed., vol. III, p. 492.]

Jurisdiction of Secretary of Interior.—This paragraph did no more than vest authority in the then federal Circuit Court concurrent with the Secretary of the Interior. It did not deprive the Secretary of the Interior of authority to settle disputes concerning allotments. Daugherty v. McFarland, (S. D. 1918) 166 N. W. 143.

"Proper court."—"The proper court referred to . . . was presumably the appropriate federal Circuit Court authorized under Act Aug. 15, 1894, as amended by Act Feb. 6, 1901" (see vol. 3, p. 841). It does not include a state county court. Daugherty v. McFarland, (S. D. 1918) 166 N. W. 143.

Vol. III, p. 853, sec. 1. [Act of June 25, 1910.] [First ed., 1912 Supp., vol. 1, p. 96.]

Effect of subsequent legislation.—The Act of May 27, 1908 (see vol. 3, p. 881) repeals the provisions of this Act which are in conflict with it. Chupco v. Chapman, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 257.

Osage Act.—"Act Cong. June 28, 1906, c. 3572, 34 Stat. 539, placed no restrictions upon the alienation by heirs of inherited lands allotted and deeded in the right of a member of the Osage Tribe of Indians after his death, save only the mineral interests therein reserved to the tribe, individual disposition of which is expressly inhibited." Mongrain v. Aeron, (Okla. 1918) 174 Pac. 755.

Approval of alienation.—Under section 22, Act Cong. April 26, 1906, c. 1876, 34 Stat. L. 137, the authority was vested exclusively in the Secretary of the Interior to approve a conveyance of any interest of a full-blood heir to a deceased allottee. The approval by the county court on April 3, 1914, of a deed executed after Act April 26, 1906, c. 1876, 34 Stat. 137, and prior to Act May 27, 1908, c. 199, 35 Stat. 312, by a full-blood heir of an interest in inherited land, is unauthorized and void. Groom v. Dyer, (Okla. 1919) 179 Pac. 12.

Approval by Secretary of Interior no longer necessary.—To the same effect as the original annotation see Chupco v. Chapman, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 259.

Alienation by heirs of a Creek freedman is governed by this section rather than by section 19. Harris v. Bell, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 209, 162 C. C. A. 345.

Allotment to representative of deceased Indian—restrictions.—The restrictions made by the provisions of this section apply as well in a case where selection has been made by a duly appointed executor or administrator for the benefit of the heirs of an Indian, who has died before receiving his allotment, as to a case where the land was selected by the ancestor in his lifetime. David v. Youngken, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 208, 162 C. C. A. 344; Harris v. Bell, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 209, 163 C. C. A. 345; both following Brader v. James, (1917) 246 U. Vol. III, p. 881, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 232.]

Nature of Act and effect on previous legislation.—This Act is a revising Act, and was intended as a substitute for all former acts relating to the subject of such restrictions, and operated to repeal the provisions of the Act of April 26, 1906 (see vol. 3, p. 861), and previous congressional enactments in conflict therewith on the same subject. Chupco v. Chapman, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 259; King v. Mitchell, (Okla. 1918) 171 Pac. 725.

Relation to earlier acts.—Act Cong. May 27, 1908, c. 199, 35 Stat. 312, entitled "An act for the removal of restrictions from part of the lands of allottees of the Five Civilized Tribes, and for other purposes," is a revising Act, and was intended as a substitute for all former acts relating to the subject of such restrictions, and operated to repeal the provisions of Act Cong. April 26, 1906, c. 1876, 34 Stat. 137, and previous congressional enactments in conflict therewith on the same subject. Coleman v. Davis, (Okla. 1919) 180 Pac. 381. See to same effect, King v. Shults, (Okla. 1919) 180 Pac. 550.

Conditional removal of restrictions.—In U. S. v. Law, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 218, 162 C. C. A. 354, it appeared that Amanda Perry was a full-blood Cherokee Indian and duly enrolled; that in the course of administration of the affairs of the tribe she was duly allotted certain lands in the Cherokee Nation; that thereafter, in compliance with law, she duly made application for the removal of restrictions upon the alienation of the lands so allotted, and that the Secretary of the Interior conditionally removed the restrictions therefrom, reserving the right to dispose of the proceeds arising from the sale of the lands upon which restrictions were removed; that the Secretary of the Interior disposed of the proceeds arising from the sale by investing them for and on behalf of Amanda Perry in real estate in the city of Tulsa, Okla., which is the land now in controversy; that the warrant deed conveying the new lands to Amanda Perry, taken with approval of United States by the United States Indian superintendent contained a condition against alienation prior to 1931. Amanda Perry and her husband mortgaged the land so received and the mortgage was foreclosed. It was held that the condition imposed as the removal of the restriction was valid and that the mortgage foreclosure was subject to cancellation.

Termination of supervising authority of Secretary of Interior.—The supervising authority of the Secretary of the Interior over the collection, care, and disbursement of royalties under an oil and gas lease of a Creek allotment, made conformably to this section, did not terminate with the death of the allottee and the inheritance of the land by a full-blood Indian heir, where the event which the regulations of the Secretary of the Interior and the lease declare shall terminate such supervision, viz., the removal of the restrictions on alienation, has not occurred, although, under section 9 of that Act, it is possible for the heir, if the court approves, to sell and convey his interest in the land. Parker v. Richards, (1919) 250 U. S. 235, 39 S. Ct. 442, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 330, 167 C. C. A. 522.

Removal of restrictions as to minors.—All restrictions upon the alienation of the allotments of minor allottees of the Five Civilized Tribes having less than one-half Indian blood, and the restrictions upon the alienation of all lands except homesteads of said allottees enrolled as mixed blood Indians of one-half or more than one-half and less than three-fourths Indian blood, are removed by this Act. Langley v. Ford, (Okla. 1918) 171 Pac. 471.

Conveyance during minority.—Where after passage of Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, ch. 19, 35 Stat. 312, a member of the Choctaw Nation, of one-fourth Indian blood, during his minority executes and delivers a contract for the sale of a portion of his allotment, and at the same time delivers a warranty deed to the same person, such deed and contract is absolutely void. The said allottee, however, on attaining his majority may make a valid conveyance to the same party for a lawful and independent consideration, notwithstanding the first attempted conveyances. Jones v. Smyth, (Okla. 1918) 172 Pac. 785.

A deed executed subsequent to the time the Act of Congress approved May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. 312) became effective, by an enrolled citizen of the Five Civilized Tribes, purporting to convey any part of the lands allotted to such citizen, who if a male was at the time under the age of 21 years, and, if a female, under the age of 18 years, according to the enrollment records of the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, is for that reason void, and no title passes thereby. Perryman v. Sharp, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 526.

Where a Cherokee freedman during his minority attempts to convey by deed his allotted cession thereof for more than one year, and subsequently after attaining his majority he, by warranty deed, conveys to another, the validity of the second conveyance is not affected by section 2260, Rev. Laws 1910, as the alienation of such land is controlled by Congressional enactment. Sanders v. Melson, (Okla. 1918) 174 Pac. 755.

The provision of section 6 of an Act of the Congress of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. 312), "that the persons and property of minor allottees of the Five Civilized Tribes shall, except as otherwise specifically provided by law, be subject to the jurisdiction of the probate courts of the state of Oklahoma" embraces allotted lands inherited by such minor. Crow v. Hardridge, (Okla. 1918) 175 Pac. 115.

Curative conveyance.—While a minor, D., freedman citizen of the Cherokee Nation, prior to Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, ch. 199, 35 Stat. 312, made certain deeds to his allotted lands. After attaining his majority and subsequent to the time at which the mentioned Act became effective, D. executed new deeds to the grantee named in the original void deeds. It was held in an action by the allottee to recover the lands, that, there being no restriction on his power to alienate, in force at the time of the second set of conveyances, the deeds being regularly executed, and no equitable ground being urged for setting them aside, the grantee acquired the title thereto. Campbell v. Daniels, (Okla. 1918) 173 Pac. 517.

G., a citizen by blood of the Choctaw Nation, possessed of one-eighth Indian blood, while a minor executed a deed for part of his allotment, the consideration being $1,500. After reaching the age of 21 years he employed counsel to bring action to recover the lands so conveyed. After propositions had been made pro and con looking toward a settlement, G. agreed that upon the payment of $500 cash, he would execute a new deed. The $500 was paid, a new deed was executed, reciting a consideration of $2,000, arrived at by adding the $500 then paid to the $1,500 consideration for the former deed. It was held that the last deed was neither illegal, void, nor violative of the provisions of section 5, Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, and the same conveyed title to the grantee. Grubbs v. Thompson, (Okla. 1919) 178 Pac. 684.

Right of alienation prior to Act.—The surplus allotment of a duly enrolled member of the Choctaw Nation of one-fourth full blood was, prior to the congressional Act of May 27, 1908, inalienable by said allottee or his heirs except and upon the condition that the purchaser thereof paid said allottee the appraised value of said surplus allotment as the purchase price therefor. Going v. Shelton, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 962.

A deed conveying, or a contract for the sale of, a portion of a surplus allotment, made by a Choctaw Indian by blood before the removal of restrictions upon his power to alienate same, in violation of Act of Congress of June 28, 1898 (ch. 517, § 29, 30 Stat. L. 507), and of Act of Congress of July 1, 1902 (ch. 1362, §§ 15, 16, 32 Stat. 642, 643), is void. Folsom v. Jones, (Okla. 1918) 173 Pac. 649.

A will by a minor allottee is an alienation within the Act. Letts v. Letts, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 234.

State laws are not applicable to the right of an Indian allottee to alienate. Letts v. Letts, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 234.

Effect of state champerty law.—Section 2260, Oklahoma Rev. Laws 1910, relating to conveyance of land adversely held, has no application to restricted Indian lands. Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, ch. 199, 35 Stat. 312, controls; and where a purchaser comes into possession of land by virtue of a conveyance made by a restricted Indian, such possession in no manner affects the right of the Indian to convey to another after restrictions are removed. Groom v. Dyer, (Okla. 1919) 179 Pac. 12.

Lease for time in excess of that allowed.—Section 2 of the Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, ch. 199, 35 Stat. 312, provides: "That all lands other than homesteads allotted to members of the Five Civilized Tribes from which restrictions have not been removed may be leased by the allottee if an adult, or by guardian or curator under order of the proper probate court if a minor or incompetent, for a period not to exceed five years, without the privilege of renewal: Provided, that leases of restricted lands for oil, gas or other mining purposes, leases of restricted homesteads for more than one year, and leases of restricted lands for periods of more than five years, may be made, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, under rules and regulations provided by the Secretary of the Interior, and not otherwise." It was held that under this section, where a full-blood Choctaw Indian had valid existing leases on his surplus and homestead allotments, which did not expire until the 31st day of December, 1911, additional leases made and dated on the 5th day of September, 1911, leasing his surplus lands for a period of five years, commencing on the 1st day of January, 1912, and his homestead allotment for a period of one year, commencing on the same day, without the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, are in contravention of this Act, and therefore void. Mullen v. Carter, (Okla. 1918) 173 Pac. 512.

Restrictions removed by section 1.—Section 2, Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, ch. 199, 35 Stat. 312, regulating the leasing of allotted lands of members of the Five Civilized Tribes from which restrictions have not been removed, has no application to the leasing of allotted lands of an enrolled minor member of the Chickasaw Tribe of Indians of less than one-half Indian blood, from which the restrictions have been removed by section 1 of said Act. Coleman v. Davis, (Okla. 1919) 180 Pac. 381.

Enrollment records as evidence.—Section 3 of the Act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. 313, ch. 199), making the enrollment records "of any enrolled citizen or freedman of said tribes," "and of no other persons," "conclusive evidence" "as to the quantum of Indian blood" and "as to the age" to determine questions arising under this Act, is applicable only in controversies between the allottee and another, in regard to the allotment and to transactions taking place subsequent to the taking effect of that Act, namely, July 27, 1908. Hughes v. Watkins, (Okla. 1918) 173 Pac. 369.

Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, ch. 199, § 3, 35 Stat. 313, providing that the enrollment records of the Commissioner of the Five Civilized Tribes should be conclusive evidence as to quantum of Indian blood, and age of enrolled citizen or freedman, the enrollment record giving the age of an enrolled female citizen of the Creek Tribe of Indians as eight years on the 27th day of November, 1899, is conclusive evidence that she had arrived at that age at some period of time within a year preceding that date, but is not conclusive as to date of birth. Tyrell v. Shaffer, (Okla. 1918) 174 Pac. 1074.

Under Act April 26, 1906, ch. 1876 (see vol. 3, p. 861), providing that for all purposes the quantum of Indian blood possessed by any member of the Five Civilized Tribes shall be determined by the rolls of citizens thereof approved by the Secretary of the Interior, Act June 21, 1906, ch. 3504, 34 Stat. 325, requiring the Secretary of the Interior, on completion of the approved rolls, to prepare and print the same in a permanent record book, and this section declaring that the rolls of citizenship of the Five Civilized Tribes approved by the Secretary of the Interior shall be conclusive evidence as to the quantum of Indian blood of any enrolled citizen, the Creek Roll of Indians by Blood, as prepared by law, is conclusive, and not subject to collateral attack. Cowokochee v. Chapman, (Okla. 1918) 171 Pac. 50.

A Creek enrollment card giving the age of a minor as nine years and stating the day of enrollment is made conclusive only as to the reaching or passing of his ninth birth anniversary and as to being then less than ten years old, by the provision of this section that the enrollment records of the Commissioner to the Five Civilized Tribes shall be conclusive evidence as to the age of citizens or freedmen, and such record does not preclude an oil and gas lessee from such Indian from supplementing the record by showing the exact date of the Indian's birth, when the issue is whether he had attained his majority when the lease was executed. Gilcrease v. McCullough, (1919) 249 U. S. 178, 39 S. Ct. 198, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) (Okla.) 162 Pac. 178.

"The enrollment record of the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes," which section 3, Act of Congress of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. 312), declares "shall hereafter be conclusive evidence as to age" of any enrolled citizen of said tribes, embraces and includes all of the testimony and exhibits tending to establish age that were in evidence before the commission, and the conclusion of the commission based thereon, from the date of application for enrollment of any particular individual up to the time of the ascertainment by the commission as to whether the name of such person was entitled to be placed upon the rolls of the nation in which he claimed citizenship. Perryman v. Sharp, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 526, holding that a birth affidavit, executed and filed in May, 1901, subsequent to an application for enrollment as a Creek freedman and issuance of citizenship certificate, but prior to the transmission by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes of the schedule or partial roll containing the name of such citizen to the Secretary of the Interior for his approval, is part of the enrollment record.

Entire record to be considered.—The entire enrollment record, and not any particular part thereof, is, by the Act of Congress of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. 312, ch. 199), made conclusive as to age in determining questions arising under the Act. Davis v. Thompson, (Okla. 1919) 177 Pac. 67.

Validity and scope—taxation.—To the same effect as original annotation, see Fink v. Muskogee County, (1919) 248 U. S. 399, 39 S. Ct. 128, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 60 Okla. 67, 159 Pac. 470.

"Contracts hitherto expressly permitted by law."—The words "contracts heretofore expressly permitted by law," as used in the proviso to section 4 of said Act, mean contracts relating to said allotted lands theretofore expressly permitted by Acts of Congress. Therefore, the homestead allotment of a Creek freedman, the restrictions from which were removed by the Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, cannot be subjected or held liable to levy and sale under execution for a deficiency judgment against the allottee of said lands rendered in an action against him on a note executed by him on March 21, 1908, and foreclosing a mortgage on his surplus allotment given as security for the indebtedness represented by said note. Mike v. Bank of Commerce, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 398.

Effect on lands allotted under prior Act.—Lands allotted to an enrolled Choctaw freedman under the Atoka Agreement embodied in Act of Congress of June 28, 1898, in pursuance of provisions of the Treaty of July 10, 1866, and Act of Choctaw Council of May 21, 1883, and which lands were to be nontaxable for a period of 21 years, or while the title remained in the original allottee, are exempt from state taxation. The allottee acquired vested rights of exemptions from taxation, which were not abrogated by Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, removing restrictions upon alienation and providing that the lands from which restrictions were removed should be subject to taxation. Farris v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., (Okla. 1919) 170 Pac. 919.

"Restricted lands."—Lands inherited by full-blood Creek Indian minors from a full-blood Creek allottee are not "restricted lands" within the purview of the proviso in this section prohibiting the sale or incumbrance of restricted lands of living minors, except by leases authorized by law, by order of the court, or otherwise. Chupco v. Chapman, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 259; King v. Mitchell, (Okla. 1918) 171 Pac. 725.

"Lands inherited by full-blood Creek Indian minors from a full-blood Creek allottee are not 'restricted lands' within the purview of the proviso in section 6 of the Act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. L. 312), prohibiting the sale or incumbrance of restricted lands of living minors, except by leases authorized by law, by order of the court, or otherwise." King v. Shults, (Okla. 1919) 180 Pac. 550.

As used in the proviso to section 6, Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, ch. 199, 35 Stat. 312, the phrase "restricted lands of living minors" has reference to the allotted lands of such minors that are restricted by section 1 of said Act. Coleman v. Davis, (Okla. 1919) 180 Pac. 381.

Who is "minor."—A "minor" within the meaning of section 6 of Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, ch. 199, 35 Stat. 312, includes males under the age of twenty-one years, and females under the age of eighteen years, and an order of the district court granting such minor the rights of majority does not confer upon him or her the authority to do any act affecting at the time, or thereafter, his or her allotted lands independent of the jurisdiction and supervision of the county courts of the state. Mortgage, etc., Co. v. Burrows, (Okla. 1919) 182 Pac. 238.

"Except as otherwise provided by law," means federal law and not state law. Mortgage, etc., Co. v. Burrows, (Okla. 1919) 182 Pac. 238.

Jurisdiction of probate court over leases.—By the provisions of section 6, Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, ch. 199, 35 Stat. 312, the persons and property of minor allottees of the Five Civilized Tribes, except as otherwise specifically provided by law, are made subject to the jurisdiction of the probate courts of the state of Oklahoma. Coleman v. Davis, (Okla. 1919) 180 Pac. 381.

Liability to execution sale after allottee reaches majority.—Lands allotted to a Choctaw Indian of one-fourth blood are not subject to sale on execution after she becomes of age, to satisfy a judgment rendered against her after reaching her majority upon an indebtedness incurred before reaching the age of eighteen years. Mortgage, etc., Co. v. Burrows, (Okla. 1919), 182 Pac. 238.

Judgment rendered during minority.—Lands allotted to a Choctaw Indian of one-eighth blood are not subject to sale on execution after he becomes of age, to satisfy a judgment rendered against him during his minority. Hewitt First State Bank v. Lowery, (Okla. 1919) 178 Pac. 983.

Construction of statute.—This section removed restrictions against alienation of inherited lands, and authorized adult full-blood Indian heirs to convey such land, but provided, as an essential to the validity of such conveyance, that the same should be approved by the court having jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of said deceased allottee. Chupco v. Chapman, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 259.

Prospective only.—This section is prospective and applies only to conveyances made after its passage, conveyances executed by a full-blood Indian heir before the passage of this section being governed by the Act of April 26, 1906, ch. 1876, § 22 (see vol. 3, p. 874). Harris v. Bell, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 209, 162 C. C. A. 345.

Effect of first proviso.—Under the provisions of this section the death of an allottee of the Five Civilized Tribes operated to remove all restrictions upon the alienation of said allottee's land. The first proviso in said section, "That no conveyance of any interest of any full-blood Indian heir in such land shall be valid unless approved by the court having jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of said deceased allottee," imposed a merely personal restriction on the full-blood Indian heirs. The restriction thus imposed was simply an incapacity to convey without the approval of the proper county court, similar to the disability of a minor to sell his lands. Chupco v. Chapman, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 259.

"Under the provisions of section 9 of the Act of Congress of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. L. 312), the death of an allottee of the Five Civilized Tribes operated to remove all restrictions upon the alienation of said allottee's land. The first proviso in said section, 'That no conveyance of any interest of any full-blood Indian heir in such land shall be valid unless approved by the court having jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of said deceased allottee,' imposed a merely personal restriction on the full-blood Indian heirs. The restriction thus imposed was simply an incapacity to convey without the approval of the proper county court, similar to the disability of a minor to sell his lands." King v. Shults, (Okla. 1919) 180 Pac. 550.

Effect of second proviso.—A child born to an enrolled full-blood Creek allottee after March 4, 1906, must be deemed to be entitled, upon the latter's decease, to the exclusive use, as against the other heirs, of the entire homestead while she lives (but not beyond April 26, 1931), including the interest or income which may be obtained during that period by properly investing all the royalties collected and accruing under an oil and gas lease, leaving the principal, like the homestead, to go to the heirs in general on determination of her special right, in view of the second proviso that if any such allottee shall die leaving issue born since March 4, 1906, the homestead of the allottee shall be inalienable for the use and support of such issue during life until April 26, 1931, unless restrictions against alienation are removed by the Secretary of the Interior. Parker v. Riley, (1919) 250 U. S. 66, 39 S. Ct. 405, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 42, 155 C. C. A. 572.

Approval by the court.—Amos Chupco and Katie Chupco, full-blood Creek Indian allottees, died in Hughes county, Okla., leaving surviving both adult and minor full-blood Indian heirs. By virtue of the probate jurisdiction conferred by section 6, the probate court of Hughes county, Okla., was authorized to sell the inherited interest of the full-blood Indian minors in the allotments of the deceased allottees in conformity to the procedure for the sale of the lands of minors under the probate laws of the state, said court being the same court that had jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of the deceased allottees, and the approval by the court of the guardianship sale, with direction to the guardian to execute a deed to the purchaser, was a substantial compliance with that part of section 9 providing: "That no conveyance of any interest of any full-blood Indian heir in such land shall be valid unless approved by the court having jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of said deceased allottee." Chupco v. Chapman, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 259.

Under section 9 of Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, ch. 199, 35 Stat. L. 312, the only court having authority to approve a conveyance of any interest of a full-blood heir of a deceased allottee is the court having jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of said allottee. The approval by a county court of a conveyance by a full-blood heir not having jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of a deceased allottee is unauthorized and void, and may be collaterally attacked. Groom v. Dyer, (Okla. 1919) 179 Pac. 12.

An oil and gas mining lease executed February 11, 1915, by a full-blood heir of a deceased Creek Indian allottee, is a "conveyance of an interest" in said lands, and is void unless approved as required by section 9 of Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, ch. 199, 35 Stat. 315. Hoyt v. Fixico, (Okla. 1918) 175 Pac. 517.

An allottee resided and died in that part of Indian Territory which upon the creation of the state of Oklahoma became Wagoner county. The land in litigation was situated and the minor heirs to whom it descended resided in that part of Indian Territory which became Okmulgee county, and the county court of that county had jurisdiction of their guardianship. It was held that a guardian's sale of the minors' interests under order of the county court of Okmulgee county without the concurrence of the court of Wagoner county, was valid. Harris v. Bell, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 209, 162 C. C. A. 345.

Necessity for approval by Secretary of Interior.—In the year 1907 adult full-blood Creek Indian heirs executed conveyances to inherited lands that were not approved by the Secretary of the Interior, as provided by section 22 of the Act of Congress of April 26, 1906 (see vol. 3, p. 874). In the year 1910 the same heirs executed other deeds to the land to the same grantee for a recited consideration. The petition for the cancellation of said last-named deeds alleged that the same were taken in confirmation and ratification of the prior void deeds. It was held that the conveyances, having been approved by the proper court, as provided by the Act of Congress of May 27, 1908, were valid, and conveyed title to the land. Chupco v. Chapman, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 259.

Death of allottee as removing restrictions.—“Under the provisions of this section the death of an allottee of the Five Civilized Tribes operates to remove all restrictions upon the alienation of said allottee's land. The first proviso in said section, ‘That no conveyance of any interest of any full-blood Indian heir in such land shall be valid unless approved by the court having jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of said deceased allottee,’ imposes a merely personal restriction on the full-blood Indian heirs. The restriction thus imposed is simply an incapacity to convey without the approval of the proper county court, similar to the disability of a minor to sell his lands.” King v. Mitchell, (Okla. 1918) 171 Pac. 725.

Full-blooded Indian heir.—Lands inherited from a Creek allottee by a full-blood Indian heir were not freed from the restrictions on alienation, by the provision that the death of any allottee shall operate to remove all restrictions upon the alienation of the allottee's land, “provided that no conveyance of any interest of any full-blood Indian heir in such land shall be valid unless approved by the court having jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of said deceased allottee,” since, as to this class of heirs, restrictions are not removed, but are merely relaxed or qualified to the extent of sanctioning such conveyances as receive the court's approval. Parker v. Richard, (1919) 250 U. S. 235, 39 S. Ct. 442, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 330, 157 C. C. A. 522.

Payment of consideration.—Proof of the present payment of a consideration for a conveyance of inherited lands by a full-blooded Indian heir is not essential to the validity of such conveyance. Chupco v. Chapman, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 259.

Partition of inherited lands.—The district courts of Oklahoma are without jurisdiction to entertain an action for the partition of real estate inherited by full-blood Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes from a deceased allottee, who was also a full-blood Indian of one of said tribes. Hoodenpyl v. Champion, (Okla. 1918) 177 Pac. 369.

Taxation under state laws.—Lands of full-blood Indian heirs of the Seminole Nation are not subject to taxation under state laws. U. S. v. Bean, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 1, 165 C. C. A. 21.

Taxation of lands inherited from allottees.—Lands of a half-blood allottee become taxable on his death and the descent of the title to his heirs of less than half Indian blood prior to their sale through the probate courts of the state. McNee v. Whitehead, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 546, 165 C. C. A. 216.

Vol. III, p. 897, sec. 13. [First ed., vol. III, p. 479.]

The effect of the admission of Oklahoma to statehood was to remove from the congressional domain all matters relating to Indian lands which remained subject to restrictions against alienation. As to other lands the state regulations as to the taking of property for railway purposes control. Oklahoma, etc., R. Co. v. Bowling, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 592, 161 C. C. A. 518.

Forfeiture of automobile.—This section by enumerating the vehicles subject to forfeiture hereunder, thereby excludes automobiles. Shawnee Nat. Bank v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 583, 161 C. C. A. 509.

Forfeiture of interest of innocent mortgagee.—This section does not authorize the forfeiture of the interest of an innocent chattel mortgagee in an automobile used by the mortgagor for the introduction of intoxicating liquor into Indian country, as it was intended to authorize the forfeiture of those articles only that are owned by the guilty party. Shawnee Nat. Bank v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 583, 161 C. C. A. 509.

Who may urge objection to forfeiture.—A person claiming as a mortgagee an automobile sought to be forfeited may urge not only the immunity of his interest but also the contention that the automobile is not such a vehicle as the statute contemplates. Shawnee Nat. Bank v. U. S., 249 U. S. 583.

Destruction of liquor outside Indian Territory without an order of court is unauthorized though there is reason to believe that it is intended to transport the liquor into the Indian country. Danciger v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (Mo. 1919) 212 S. W. 5.

Nature of forfeiture proceedings—jury trial.—A proceeding under this section is an action at law, in which the parties are entitled to such rights and remedies as are incident to such an action in the federal courts, including the right to trial by jury. Shawnee Nat. Bank v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 583, 161 C. C. A. 509.

Constitutionality.—This section, "as limited to interstate commerce by the Oklahoma Enabling Act," is not unconstitutional on the ground that it discriminates between the states in respect of trade and commerce in intoxicating liquors. De Moss v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 87, 162 C. C. A. 259, following Joplin Mercantile Co. v. U. S., (1915) 236 U. S. 531, 35 S. Ct. 291, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 705. To same effect, see Warren v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 89, 162 C. C. A. 261.

Indictment.—In Dosset v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 902, 161 C. C. A. 20, the following indictment was held sufficient under Rev. Stat. sec. 1025, though it did not, except by recital, allege that the place into which the liquor was introduced had formerly been a part of the Indian Territory: "That one Bill Dosset, on the 13th day of August, A. D. 1916, in the county of Jefferson, state of Oklahoma, in the said district and within the jurisdiction of said court, did at the time and place aforesaid, unlawfully, knowingly, willfully, and feloniously introduce and carry into the county and district aforesaid, from without the said state of Oklahoma, one quart of vinous, malt, fermented, and intoxicating liquor, to wit, whisky and beer; the portion of said county and district into which the said liquor was so introduced having been within the limits of the Indian Territory, and a part thereof, prior to the admission of the said state of Oklahoma into the Union as one of the United States of America."

Admission of evidence as harmless.—The admission of parol evidence of the amount of a check given in payment for the liquor illegally brought into Indian country is harmless where the facts as to the giving of the check and the connection of the defendant therewith are proved without objection or contradiction. De Moss v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 87, 162 C. C. A. 259.

Advice of federal district attorney.—In Hardy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 284, the court, in holding evidence of advice of the prosecuting attorney to be inadmissible in defense of an indictment for conspiracy to make illegal shipments, stated the facts and its conclusions as follows: "On the objection of the prosecution the court refused to permit the introduction of testimony of Edgar Scurry, a witness for the defendants, to the following effect: That the witness as a lawyer represented the defendant Hardy when the latter, in the spring of 1916, was charged with some offense of importing liquor into the Indian Territory; that he was present when the evidence on which that charge was based was stated to the then United States district attorney; that that evidence, as so stated, was to the effect that Hardy directed one or more of his employes to deliver to an automobile liquor bought from Hardy by two men in reference to whom Hardy stated to the district attorney, 'I knew that these men lived in Oklahoma, and I had probably heard that they had had trouble in Oklahoma, for introducing liquor into Oklahoma;' that Hardy stated to the district attorney that he did not participate in the hauling of the liquor to Oklahoma, and was not going to do so, and had no financial interest in the transaction other than the sale of the liquor to the two men; and that the district attorney said in the presence of Hardy that the transaction, as reflected in the above-indicated statement of the facts to him, was not a violation of the law, and for that reason he had the charge dismissed.

"It may be assumed, without being conceded, that it is permissible for one charged with having conspired with others to commit a stated criminal offense to prove that, before taking part in the transaction upon which that charge is based, he had been informed by the prosecuting officer that such a transaction is not a violation of law. The excluded evidence in question was not to that effect. The transaction which the proposed testimony showed was passed on by the district attorney was not shown to have had the features which give criminality to the transactions now in question. In material respects it differed from the transactions shown by the evidence introduced by the prosecution in this case. That transaction occurred before the enactment of the Reed Amendment, which made it a crime to cause intoxicating liquor to be transported in interstate commerce into a state or territory the laws of which state or territory prohibit the manufacture or sale therein of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes."

1918 Supp., p. 251, sec. 1. [Intoxicating liquors, etc.]

Question for jury.—Whether the presumption is rebutted by the testimony of a witness who is not contradicted but is impeached is for the jury. Harris v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 41, 161 C. C. A. 101.

1918 Supp., p. 260, sec. 1.

"Introduction prohibited by treaty or Federal statute."—The phrase "prohibited by treaty or Federal statute," applies only to treaties or statutes relative to Indian affairs and cannot be extended in its application to the Reed amendment. (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann., p. 394.) U. S. v. One Buick Automobile, (D. C. Colo. 1919) 255 Fed. 793.

1918 Supp., p. 267, sec. 1.

Prior to the Act the District Courts of Oklahoma were without jurisdiction to entertain an action for the partition of real estate inherited by full-blood Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes from a deceased allottee, who was also a full-blood Indian of one of said tribes. Hoodenpyl v. Champion, (Okla. 1918) 177 Pac. 369.

On April 27, 1915, the District Courts of this state were without jurisdiction of a suit by the full-blood Indian heirs of a deceased Pawnee Indian involving lands allotted to the decedent under General Allotment Act of February 8, 1887, ch. 119, 24 Stat. L. 388, as amended by Act of February 28, 1891, ch. 383, 26 Stat. L. 794, where such suit necessarily included the determination of the title, and, incidentally, the right to the possession of the Indian allotment while the same was held in trust by the United States. Cesar v. Krow, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 927.

Jurisdiction of courts.—The power and authority conferred on the county courts by Act of Congress of June 14, 1918, ch. 101, 40 Stat. L. 606, though it involves the exercise by said courts of judicial or quasi judicial power, is not strictly judicial, but is administrative and ministerial, and in determining, pursuant to said Act, as a question of fact who are the heirs of any deceased citizen allottee of the Five Civilized Tribes, the court merely finds the facts, and fixes the status, which finding, when material to the question at issue, is conclusive and binding upon the state courts and upon the administrative officers of the national government in determining questions arising under Acts of Congress to which it is applicable. The Act, however, does not deprive the superior courts of this state of jurisdiction of suits involving lands allotted to an Indian of the Five Civilized Tribes who may die or may have heretofore died leaving restricted Indian heirs, where such suit necessarily includes the determination of the title, and, incidentally, the question of fact as to who are the heirs of said deceased allottee. State v. Wilcox, (Okla. 1919) 182 Pac. 673.

INTERNAL REVENUE

Vol. III, p. 982, sec. 3149. [First ed., vol. III, p. 563.]

Term of deputies.—The term of office of deputy collectors of internal revenue expires automatically upon the appointment of a successor to their own collector, and this limitation of tenure is not affected by section 6 of the Act of August 24, 1912 (see vol. 8, p. 956). In order to continue in office after the appointment of a successor to their own collector, deputy collectors must be affirmatively reappointed and recommissioned. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 1.

Recovery of additional tax paid—Burden of proof.—To recover the amount of an additional tax levied because of excessive "outage" in liquor withdrawn from bond plaintiffs must sustain the allegation that the assessment was without warrant of law. To do this, they must prove that all legal taxes have been paid, even though it involve proof of the negative allegation that no spirits had been removed untaxpaid. This burden rests upon them throughout the trial, whatever shifting there may be in the duty of going forward with proof to meet a prima facie case. The burden is not met by proof that payment was made in accordance with the governmental regauge; for, whatever presumption of regularity might otherwise attach to such regauges as official acts, none can be given them in the light of the later assessment concededly based upon the alleged inaccuracy of the regauge returns, an assessment which is expressly declared by statute to be prima facie evidence of the amount due. Revised Statutes, §§ 3182, 3309, 3437; Western Express Co. v. United States, 141 Fed. 28, 72 C. C. A. 516. Nor does the added fact of long delay in making the assessment overcome its prima facie evidentiary effect. In other words, an assessment made contrary to the regauge returns must stand as valid, until some other evidence of its incorrectness or of the correctness of the regauge returns is introduced. Mayes v. Casey, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 754, 164 C. C. A. 594.

Parol evidence of assessment.—Where the surety on a distiller's bond pays the assessment and sues him for reimbursement, he cannot prove the assessment by parol evidence, unless it appears that neither the record nor an exemplified copy can be obtained. National Surety Co. v. Brock, (N. C. 1913) 97 S. E. 417.

The word "restraining" is used in this section in the broad popular sense of hindering or impeding as well as of prohibiting or staying, rather than in its narrowest technical sense as applicable only to suits praying for restraining orders and injunctions. Gouge v. Hart, (W. D. Va. 1917) 250 Fed. 802.

Annulment of tax sale.—The section forbids an action to annul a sale by the collector for the nonpayment of a revenue tax. Gouge v. Hart, (W. D. Va. 1917) 250 Fed. 802. The court said: "Counsel for plaintiffs contend that granting the relief sought by the bill would not hamper or retard the collection of the tax. I am unable to concede this. Some of the property was bid in by the collector for the government. Copenhagen, the purchaser of the remainder of the property, has declined to complete his purchase. If this court nullifies these sales, the government is at least put back in the situation it occupied before the sales were made. If such action by the court would not hinder and impede the collection of a tax, I do not understand the meaning of the words. The fact that the government may, if it sees fit, collect taxes by suit, and that in such event the defendant may contest the validity of the demand, seems to me to be too remotely connected, if connected at all, with the subject under discussion to throw any light on it."

Waiver of prohibition.—Neither the collector of internal revenue, the commissioner of internal revenue nor the district attorney has power to waive the prohibition of this section. Gouge v. Hart, (W. D. Va. 1917) 250 Fed. 802.

Provision valid.—The provision as applied to the corporation tax law is not invalid as warranting a confiscation of property. It is well settled that this corporation tax act imposed an excise tax, and the only limitation on the power of Congress in the imposition of excise taxes is that they shall be uniform throughout the United States. United States v. Singer, 15 Wall. 111, 121, 21 L. ed. 49; Pacific Insurance Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. 433, 446, 19 L. ed. 95. By this a geographical uniformity is meant. Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U. S. 107, 31 Sup. Ct. 342, 55 L. ed. 389, Ann. Cas. 1912B 1312. The provisions laying an additional tax proportionate to the property omitted from the list, on all who make any understatement or undervaluation, operates uniformly on all of that class of persons wherever found, and hence was within the power of Congress. The refusal of a right of action to recover such taxes, unless proof is made that there was no understatement or undervaluation, is likewise within the scope of the legislative power. Camp Bird v. Howbert, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 27, 161 C. C. A. 87.

Application to corporation tax.—The section applies to the corporation tax act (see vol. 4, p. 255) being a section applying to revenue laws generally. Camp Bird v. Howbert (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 27, 161 C. C. A. 87.

Innocent omission.—An omission in good faith from the return is not within the provision that a false or fraudulent return bars an action to recover back taxes paid. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Fink, (E. D. Wis. 1917) 248 Fed. 568.

Vol. III, p. 1034, sec. 3226. [First ed., vol. III, p. 601.]

Recovery back of inheritance taxes.—This section does not apply to the recovery back of inheritance taxes by reason of the Act of June 27, 1902, sec. 3 (see vol. 4, p. 232) and the Act of July 27, 1912, sec. 2 (see vol. 4, p. 236) though under the Act of June 3, 1898, sec. 31 it did apply. Rand v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 503, 39 S. Ct. 359, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 72, 285.

Recovery back of inheritance taxes.—See note supra under section 3226.

Vol. III, p. 1038, sec. 3229. [First ed., vol. III, p. 604.]

Authority to compromise.—The commissioner of internal revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, has authority under this section to compromise a case involving a tax liability before proceeding to distraint and sale. (1915) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 329.

Vol. III, p. 1042, sec. 3236. [First ed., vol. III, p. 606.]

Registration under Harrison Act.—This section is expressly made applicable to the special tax imposed under section 1 of the Harrison Act (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. 177) and requires the separate registration under such Act of a physician who both dispenses narcotic drugs and sells the same as a dealer. Blunt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 332, 166 C. C. A. 502.

Vol. III, p. 1053, sec. 16. [First ed., vol. III, p. 609.]

Purpose and application of law.—The primary purpose of this section is to raise revenue. It does not grant a right to engage in the liquor business but fixes a penalty for engaging in such business without having paid the required tax, and this applies uniformly to all the states and territories, regardless of whether the state law prohibits the sale of liquor. U. S. v. Lazzaro, (W. D. Wash. 1918) 255 Fed. 237.

Conspiracy to carry on business, evidence sufficient.—In Villers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 75, 166 C. C. A. 403. the court, in sustaining a conviction of conspiracy to carry on the business of a retail liquor dealer without having paid the special tax required by law, stated the facts and its conclusion as follows: "At the time of his arrest, in March, 1918, Villers was the assistant postmaster of Clarksburg, W. Va., and Klacko the clerk or manager of a store in that city. They had become acquainted not long before, and Klacko had learned in some way that whisky could be procured from Villers. Called as a witness for the government, Klacko testified to buying whisky from Villers for himself, and also for one Lazovich, a fellow countryman, whose acquaintance he made about that time. Lazovich was an agent of the Department of Justice, and happened to be in Clarksburg on other business. Learning from Klacko, with whom he became friendly, that whisky could be bought from Villers, he set about getting evidence that would convict him of the offense. Accordingly, he arranged with Klacko, who appears to have been unaware of his purpose, to buy whisky for him from Villers, and four such purchases were made during the next eight or ten days. Lazovich furnished the money, Klacko took the order to Villers, and the latter delivered the liquor at Klacko's store. On the last occasion, and while in the act of handing over a couple of quarts of whisky, Villers was arrested.

"These facts, wholly undenied by Villers, were quite sufficient to show that he was engaged in the illegal sale of liquor, and to warrant the inference of that understanding and relationship with Klacko which the law regards as a conspiracy. Villers had a quantity of whisky for sale, where or how procured does not appear, and Klacko was not unwilling to help him dispose of it. Each aided the other, and their mutual co-operation effected the criminal result; and what they repeatedly united in doing, both knowing it to be unlawful, the jury might well believe they had in effect conspired to do, and nothing more needs be said in defense of the refusal to direct a verdict. The question was clearly one of fact, and the finding of the jury is conclusive."

"Sale."—In Scoggins v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 825, 3 A. L. R. 1093, it was said with respect to a "sale" within the meaning of this section and R. S. sec. 3244 (vol. 3, p. 1045): "But one party cannot make a contract of sale. No such contract can be made without assent of the minds of two parties at the same time to the sale and to the terms of the sale, to the subject-matter and the consideration of the sale."

Presumption as to sale.—As a contract for the sale of liquor without paying the tax prescribed by this section and R. S. section 3244, is illegal, and its making criminal, the legal presumption is that the defendant did not make it and this presumption prevails until he is proved to have done so beyond a reasonable doubt. Scoggins v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 825, 3 A. L. R. 1093.

Vol. III, p. 1068, sec. 3, par. 8.
[First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 87.]

Lecture lyceums.—A mere independent show unit employed for the occasion is not exempt under the proviso of this paragraph merely because it is hired and produced by a so-called lyceum bureau. Redpath Lyceum Bureau v. Pickering, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 49, 163 C. C. A. 299.

Vol. IV, p. 173, sec. 1. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 71.]

Indictment.—If the accused is not a citizen, the indictment need not allege that the defendant has not given the required bond. Lee Mow Lin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 694, 162 C. C. A. 656. The court said: "It is further claimed that, because section 1 provides that 'no person shall engage in such manufacture who is not a citizen of the United States and who has not given the bond required by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue,' the use of the conjunction 'and' requires the pleader to allege, and therefore prove, that plaintiffs in error were not only noncitizens, but also had not given a bond. While the word 'and' is used, we do not think the bond provision should be applied to persons who are not entitled to give a bond under any circumstances, but should be held to apply to citizens who are required to give a bond, if they shall engage in the manufacture of opium for smoking purposes."

Constitutionality.—This act is constitutional. U. S. v. Hoyt, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 255 Fed. 927.

In U. S. v. Denker, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 339, the court, in declaring this Act constitutional, said: "The defendants all claim that the entire Harrison Law is unconstitutional, under the authority of United States v. Doremus (W. D. Tex. 1918) 246 Fed. 958, a decision of the District Court for the Western District of Texas. Subsequently the law has been declared constitutional by the District Court for the Southern District of New York. United States v. Jacob Rosenberg (decided July 17, 1918) 251 Fed. 963. A decision has also been rendered by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in Blunt v. United States, 255 Fed. 332, 166 C. C. A. 502, by which the last paragraph of section 2 has been held unconstitutional, but the first part of that section has been held constitutional. To the same effect are U. S. v. Hoyt, 255 Fed. 927, United States District Court, Southern District of New York, December 9, 1917, and United States v. Jin Fuey Moy, 253 Fed. 213, United States District Court, Western District of Pennsylvania, November term, 1917. A statute constitutional in part only will be upheld as to what is constitutional, if it can be separated from the unconstitutional provisions. Preaser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252, 6 Sup. Ct. 580, 20 L. Ed. 615. I am of the opinion that the weight of authority is substantially in favor of upholding the constitutionality of the law, except so far as section 8 is concerned."

In U. S. v. Jin Fuey Moy, (W. D. Pa. 1918) 253 Fed. 213, the court in passing upon the constitutionality of the Act said: "First, as to the constitutionality of the Harrison Act. It seems to me that this act should be read in the light of the previous legislation of Congress in restraint of the traffic in opium. . . . It is plain that Congress had the power to prohibit altogether the importation from foreign shores of this deadly narcotic, or they had the right to admit it under such restrictions as to its use, in protection of the public, as they might see fit to impose. And having done so, they may prescribe such regulations, penal or otherwise, as will effect the purpose intended; that is, to restrict its use to that for which alone it was admitted. Every provision of the Harrison Act which deals with the use of the drugs in question shows that its use is restricted and intended to be confined to medicinal purposes only. This is in harmony with the law prohibiting its importation or use for any other purpose. It is a matter of common knowledge that no opium is produced in the United States; but this can perhaps not be assumed, when the act undertakes to deal with those who produce it. In the case of the United States v. Jin Fuey Moy, 241 U. S. 394, 36 Sup. Ct. 658, 60 L. Ed. 1061, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 854, the Supreme Court said: 'A statute must be construed, if fairly possible, so as to avoid, not only the conclusion that it is unconstitutional, but also grave doubts upon that score.'

"In the same opinion the court said: 'It may be assumed that the statute [the Harrison Act] has a moral end as well as revenue in view, but we are of opinion that the District Court, in treating those ends as to be reached only through a revenue measure and within the limits of a revenue measure, was right.' I am not convinced that the Congress in enacting the Harrison law exceeded its constitutional powers, and the motion in arrest of judgment on this ground cannot be sustained."

In holding the act to be a revenue measure within the federal legislative power the court said in Hughes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 543, 165 C. C. A. 213: "It is urged that the purpose of the statute was the suppression of the drug habit, and that it is therefore not a revenue measure, but one of police, within the exclusive province of the states. But we think it cannot be said that the provisions referred to have no real or substantial relation to the raising of revenue. If they have such relation, we have nothing to do with any other purpose of Congress. The traffic in such drugs is of a peculiar character. Considerable of it is carried on covertly by peddlers, and the small bulk of the articles facilitates clandestine distribution. The difficulties of subjecting the traffic to excise and preventing frauds on the revenue are obvious, and it was competent for Congress to bring the traffic into the open. That there may be consumers of the drugs, who cannot or will not obtain them in the ways provided, is not enough to condemn the statute. Substantially the same result might have followed a heavy tax on such transactions, as to which there would be no color for claim of unconstitutionality."

See also notes under section 2, infra, as to constitutionality of that section.

Incorporation of earlier act.—Rev. Stat. § 3226 (3 Fed. St. Ann. 1042) is applicable to the special tax imposed by this Act and accordingly a physician who both dispenses drugs and sells the same as a dealer must register separately as physician and as dealer. Blunt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 332, 166 C. C. A. 502.

Constitutionality.—This section is constitutional. U. S. v. Rosenberg, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 963.

The section is not unconstitutional on the ground that its provisions are not those of a revenue measure, but are purely police regulations. Fyke v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 225, 165 C. C. A. 513, approving and following Baldwin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 793, 151 C. C. A. 643.

The first sentence of this section prohibits retail sales of morphine by druggists to persons who have no physician's prescription, who have no order blank therefor, and who cannot obtain an order blank because not of the class to which blanks are allowed to be issued. As so construed it is constitutional. Webb v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 96, 39 S. Ct. 217, 63 U. S. (L. ed.)—.

The section was declared constitutional in U. S. v. Doremus, (1919) 249 U. S. 86, 39 S. Ct. 214, 63 U. S. (L. ed.)—, (reversing (W. D. Tex. 1918) 246 Fed. 958) wherein the court said: "The legislation under consideration was before us in a case concerning § 8 of the act, and in the course of the decision we said: 'It may be assumed that the statute has a moral end as well as revenue in view, but we are of opinion that the District Court, in treating those ends as to be reached only through a revenue measure and within the limits of a revenue measure, was right.' U. S. v. Jin Fuey Moy, 241 U. S. 394, 402. Considering the full power of Congress over excise taxation the decisive question here is: Have the provisions in question any relation to the raising of revenue? That Congress might levy an excise tax upon such dealers, and others who are named in § 1 of the act, cannot be successfully disputed. The provisions of § 2, to which we have referred, aim to confine sales to registered dealers and to those dispensing the drugs as physicians, and to those who come to dealers with legitimate prescriptions of physicians. Congress, with full power over the subject, short of arbitrary and unreasonable action which is not to be assumed, inserted these provisions in an act specifically providing for the raising of revenue. Considered of themselves, we think they tend to keep the traffic aboveboard and subject to inspection by those authorized to collect the revenue. They tend to diminish the opportunity of unauthorized persons to obtain the drugs and sell them clandestinely without paying the tax imposed by the federal law. This case well illustrates the possibility which may have induced Congress to insert the provisions limiting sales to registered dealers and requiring patients to obtain these drugs as a medicine from physicians or upon regular prescriptions. Ameris, being as the indictment charges an addict, may not have used this great number of doses for himself. He might sell some to others without paying the tax, at least Congress may have deemed it wise to prevent such possible dealings because of their effect upon the collection of the revenue. We cannot agree with the contention that the provisions of § 2, controlling the disposition of these drugs in the ways described, can have nothing to do with facilitating the collection of the revenue, as we should be obliged to do if we were to declare this act beyond the power of Congress acting under its constitutional authority to impose excise taxes. It follows that the judgment of the District Court must be reversed."

In Foreman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 621, 166 C. C. A. 655, in holding this section constitutional as a revenue measure, the court said: "The indictment is attacked on the additional ground that it charges no offense which the Congress had the power to create. The act was sustained as a revenue measure in United States v. Moy, 241 U. S. 394, 38 Sup. Ct. 658, 60 L. Ed. 1061, Ann. Cas. 1917D 854. It is argued that, when the dealer complies with the first section of the act by registry and payment of the tax, all that affects the revenue is done, and that the further restraints on his business provided by the second section of the act do not affect the revenue, and are therefore invalid as an attempted invasion of the police power of the states. The Supreme Court has answered such objections by holding that in a revenue statute the Congress may make any rule or regulation which is not in itself unreasonable, although its effect on the revenue be only remote or incidental, and its effect on the public health or morals direct and obvious. In re Kollock, 165 U. S. 526-536, 17 Sup. Ct. 444, 41 L. Ed. 813; Felsenheld v. United States, 186 U. S. 126, 22 Sup. Ct. 740, 46 L. Ed. 1085. All the regulations of section 2 tend to promote public health and morals and doubtless that consideration influenced its enactment. But these regulations also bear directly on the revenue in that the procurement of the drugs only on orders and prescriptions to be filed and kept enable the officers of the government to ascertain whether unregistered persons are using the orders and prescriptions authorized by the statute. These requirements are also valuable in connection with section 1 providing for the collection of the current revenue in that the information as to the extent of the business to be derived from the orders and prescriptions filed may be of value in fixing the tax upon dealers."

The provision of paragraph (d) of this section that "it shall be unlawful for any person to obtain by means of said order forms any of the aforesaid drugs for any purpose other than the use, sale, or distribution thereof by him in the conduct of a lawful business in said drugs or in the legitimate practice of his profession," is unconstitutional. Blunt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 332, 166 C. C. A. 502.

As to constitutionality of Harrison Act generally, see note supra, under section 1.

Scope of section—Title to drugs.—In U. S. v. Jin Fuey Moy, (W. D. Pa. 1918) 253 Fed. 213, it was contended that the words "sell, barter, exchange, or give away" should be construed so as to include only those cases where title to the prescribed drug was in him who undertook to dispense or distribute it. Answering this contention the court said: "The lawmakers were not concerned with the ownership of the drug, but with its unlawful distribution. It could matter nothing to the poor victim in the fatal clutches of the drug habit, where title was to the narcotic which was thus dispensed to him, every grain of which brought him nearer to the grave. Whether the victim procured the drug from the hand of the physician, or through the druggist on an order or prescription of the physician, can matter nothing, unless we look blindly at the letter of the act, wholly forgetting its spirit and purpose."

Sale by unregistered dealer.—The provisions of this section include not only dealers who have registered, but all persons, whether registered or not, who sell the prohibited drugs. Fyke v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 225, 165 C. C. A. 513.

Amount of sale.—"It appears Congress undertook to regulate the amount of such sales by putting the limitations on the physician who prescribes the drug, and not on the druggist who fills it. The former is supposed to know the needs of his patient and to prescribe accordingly. And if he distributes the drugs to others than his patients, or in amounts not warranted in the legitimate practice of his profession, for the purpose of alleviating suffering or effecting a cure, he is not protected by the exception, and becomes criminally liable for the violations of the general provisions of section 2. Wisely or unwisely, Congress appears to have placed no other limitation whatever on the amount of the sale. It made the prescription of the registered physician the sole and sufficient warrant for the sale by the druggist of the drugs therein prescribed. Evidently it was intended that, if the druggist keeps within the limitations of the prescription, he is protected thereby. . . . A careful scrutiny of the act makes it reasonably apparent that the meaning of the words 'in the legitimate practice of his profession' and 'in the conduct of a lawful business in said drugs' are defined and fixed by the limitations on the action of physicians and druggists prescribed in exceptions (a) and (b). In other words, if the physician prescribes the drugs to patients in the course of his professional practice only, this constitutes the use, sale, or distribution of such drugs in the legitimate practice of his profession; and if the dealer sells or dispenses the drugs only in pursuance of a written prescription, issued by a registered physician and dated as of the day it is signed, then such drugs are distributed by him in the conduct of a lawful business in such drugs. These provisions, embraced in the same section, one relating to the acquisition of the drugs and the other to their sale and distribution, when thus read, are in complete harmony. . . . If I am right in my construction of the law, Congress has defined what is a lawful business in the sale of narcotics by a dealer; and it is not a question of good faith on his part, but of strict compliance with the conditions, which Congress has imposed upon him." U. S. v. Joseph Fleming, etc., Co., (W. D. Pa. 1918) 251 Fed. 932.

Sales by physician outside of profession are within the section. U. S. v. Hoyt, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 255 Fed. 927. The court said: "It is insisted for the defendant that the indictment also charges that he was a 'physician registered with the collector of internal revenue as the law requires, and therefore paragraph 1 of section 2 of the act, on which the indictment is based, does not apply to him, since subsection (a) of section 2 provides that nothing contained in section 2 shall apply to physicians registered under the act, who dispense and distribute narcotics in the course of their professional practice only, provided the physician does certain other things not material here. This is true, and is important, in that it might be fatal to the indictment, if the pleader has not worded it so as to render the exception inapplicable. As we understand paragraph 1, § 2, it does not apply to registered physicians who dispense or distribute narcotics in the course of their professional practice only. But that is the precise thing the defendant is charged with not having done. The legal presumption in favor of the defendant, as a registered physician, that he complied with the law, in that he dispensed and distributed narcotics in the course of his professional practice only, is expressly negated by the charge that he did not limit his operations to the course of his professional practice only."

Physician's prescription.—If a practicing and registered physician issues an order for morphine to a habitual user thereof, the order not being issued by him in the course of professional treatment in the attempted cure of the habit, but for the purpose of providing the user with morphine sufficient to keep him comfortable by maintaining his customary use, it is not a physician's prescription under exception (b) of § 2. Webb v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 96, 39 S. Ct. 217, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Issuance of prescription as sale.—The mere issuance of a prescription to be filled by a druggist, without participation by the physician in the sale made under it, is not a "sale" or such distribution or dispensing as amounts to a sale within the meaning of this section. "What the statute forbids is sale, barter, exchange or gift, including such distribution or dispensing by a physician not in the course of his practice as would amount to a participation in a sale, barter, exchange or gift." Foreman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 621, 166 C. C. A. 655.

Completion of sale.—In Hammer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 336, 161 C. C. A. 344, the facts were as follows: One Peak became an informer, and arranged with Fowle, a revenue agent, the following transaction: He (Peak) communicated with Hammer (the accused), asserting that he had a customer in New York for a quantity of drugs, and would act as agent for a commission. Hammer agreed, stating in substance that he could supply what was wanted up to almost any limit. Thereupon Rogers and Hammer, in Tampa, put drugs, of which the sale price was to be $1,750, in a package and sent it by express to Peak in New York C. O. D., and Hammer himself at once started for that city to oversee the matter. Peak met him at the station, together they went to a hotel, and there Fowle was introduced as the buyer, and with him Hammer discussed drug sales and stated definitely the amount then in the express company's care. Fowle said he wanted that and more, and the three men arranged to meet the next morning, go to the express office, get the drugs, and pay the money. They met accordingly, Hammer and Peak identified themselves as shipper and consignee respectively, Hammer gave Peak a check for the latter's commission, the express clerk was in substance directed to deliver the drug package to Fowle on receiving the money, and Fowle began to count out money, when the other agents in waiting stepped up, arrested Hammer, and seized the drugs. It was held that a completed sale of the drugs was shown.

Indictment—Sufficiency.—An indictment under this section which charges that the defendant, a registered physician, unlawfully and willfully sold, bartered, exchanged and gave away a certain narcotic drug not in pursuance of a written order from such person on a form issued in blank for that purpose by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is sufficient though it unnecessarily negatives the exception as to physicians and in so doing also charges that the drug was prescribed and dispensed. U. S. v. Jin Fuey Moy, (W. D. Pa. 1918) 253 Fed. 213.

In Fyke v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 225, 165 C. C. A. 513, regarding the allegations necessary in an indictment under the Act, the court said: "Taking the law in its entirety, no person, whether registered, or unregistered, can lawfully sell the prohibited drugs, 'except in pursuance of a written order of the person to whom such article is sold,' and an indictment which charged even an unregistered person with selling, not in pursuance of such a written order, would charge him with all the elements of a sale prohibited by the Act. It would, we think, be unnecessary, in this view, for the indictment to allege that the defendant was actually registered and had paid the tax, and, as the law itself imposes a duty of registry and payment of the tax on all persons who sell, it would be unnecessary for the indictment to allege that the defendant, being charged with making a sale, was in the class required to register and pay the tax. The plaintiff in error contends that section 1 and section 2 create distinct offenses, the former directed alone against unregistered persons who have failed to pay the tax, and the latter directed alone against registered persons who have paid the tax but have failed to conduct the business in other respects in accordance with the Act. The Act in different sections defines what sales are unlawful. It does not, however, affix separate penalties to each class of prohibited sales. Section 9 (section 6287o) provides a penalty to be imposed upon any person who violates or fails to comply with any of the requirements of the Act. Sales of the prohibited drugs may be unlawful (a) when made by an unregistered person who has not paid the tax, or (b) when made by any person, except in pursuance of an order blank. The offense punished is the making of a sale in violation of the Act. If the sale is prohibited by the Act, it is not important that the indictment should be framed under any particular section of the Act, provided its averments sufficiently show a sale made unlawful by the Act in its entirety. An indictment which charges a sale to have been made in a way that no person, registered or unregistered, could lawfully make it by the terms of the Act, sufficiently shows that the defendant, in making it, violated the Act in a way that subjects him to the penalties prescribed for its violation by section 9."

Averment as to character of drug.—"The first count is criticised because it contains no direct averment that cocaine is a derivative of coca leaves, and that morphine and heroin are salts or derivatives of opium. It is averred in the first count of each indictment, that the respective defendants, at the time of the commission of the offense, knew that cocaine was a derivative of coca leaves, and that morphine and heroin were salts and derivatives of opium. It is difficult to see how they could know this to be a fact, unless it was a fact, and the averment that it was known by them to be a fact implies the averment that it was a fact. It certainly informs the defendants sufficiently of the charge against them, and, if an imperfect averment, is a harmless imperfection, carrying no consequence, in view of R. S. § 1025." Melanson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 783, 168 C. C. A. 129.

Duplicity.—An indictment which avers that the defendant was, at the time of the commission of the alleged offense, a "registered physician," and also alleging that he sold narcotics without an order not made on a blank issued for that purpose by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, is not double or uncertain. U. S. v. Hoyt, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 255 Fed. 927. The court said:

"In the fourth ground of demurrer it is said that the indictment is uncertain, ambiguous, and duplicitous. True, it is averred that the defendant was, at the time of the commission of the alleged offense, a 'registered physician,' and it is insisted, from the language used, that it is not certain whether he is being prosecuted for violating the law as it relates to him as a physician dispensing and distributing narcotics, as contradistinguished from him as an individual engaged in selling, bartering, exchanging, and giving away the drug.

"We think if the language used by the pleader is confusing in the slightest degree it may and should be treated as surplusage. To us it is clear that, although a physician may be properly registered, that fact would not necessarily prevent him from violating paragraph 1, § 2, of the Act, for he might and could use the fact that he was registered as a cloak to do the very things charged against him in this case; that is, notwithstanding he was a registered physician, he sold, bartered, dispensed, and distributed the drug while not acting in the course of his professional practice only."

Negating exceptions in indictment see notes under section 8, infra.

Expert testimony.—In such a prosecution the testimony of qualified medical experts that the prescription of morphine under stated quantities and circumstances would not be in the course of a physician's regular practice, is admissible. Melanson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 783, 168 C. C. A. 129.

Evidence of total quantity used by physician.—Where the issue was whether a physician acted in the regular course of practice in prescribing morphine, order forms showing the amount of morphine procured by him from other druggists are admissible. Melanson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 783, 168 C. C. A. 129.

Evidence of nature of drugs.—In a prosecution for a violation of this section it is unnecessary to introduce evidence to show that morphine, heroin, and cocaine are derivatives of opium and coca leaves. Hughes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 543, 165 C. C. A. 213. To same effect, see Hughes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 545, 165 C. C. A. 215.

So in Melanson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 783, it was said: "It is objected that there should have been evidence introduced by the government that cocaine was a derivative of coca leaves, and that heroin and morphine were salts of opium. In the Ellsworth case, the plaintiff's witness, Will S. Wood, testified as follows: 'Morphine is an alkaloid of opium, and heroin is a derivative of opium, and cocaine is an alkaloid of coca leaves. Alkaloid means the principal agent of opium. Cocaine is a principal agent of coca leaves; it comes from coca leaves. Morphine and heroin both come from opium.' No transaction in heroin was relied upon by the plaintiff as a ground for conviction. The first count of the indictment alleged that 'morphine was a salt and derivative of opium, and that heroin was a salt and derivative of opium, and that cocaine was a salt and derivative of coca leaves.' The second count contained this averment: 'Said morphine (referring to that charged to have been unlawfully sold) being a salt and derivative of opium.' We think the proof in the Ellsworth case was sufficient to show that the drugs were salts, and certainly derivatives, respectively, of coca leaves or opium. The proof as to this fact is not as specific in the Melanson case, but was sufficient to authorize submission of the issue to the jury, if, indeed, proof of such a scientific fact was required. The courts take judicial knowledge of the facts of chemistry contained in the United States Pharmacopoeia."

Evidence of other offenses.—On a prosecution for illegally dispensing morphine sulphate one of the errors assigned was that evidence was introduced on defendant's cross-examination to show that several years after the alleged offense the defendant attempted to bribe an officer not to arrest him for another offense. Paquin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 579, 163 C. C. A. 573.

Sufficiency of evidence—Conspiracy by two physicians with a druggist to dispense drugs in the guise of prescriptions to patients was held in Melanson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 783, 168 C. C. A. 129, to be shown, the facts bearing against the defendants being stated as follows: "In the Ellsworth case the evidence showed that the defendant Ellsworth had issued in the period three months before the prosecution was instituted 700 prescriptions for the drugs, all of which had been filled by his codefendant Dolan, or his employees, and in quantities varying from 15 grains to 60 grains. The evidence also showed that prescriptions of the kind and quantity shown to have been issued by Ellsworth, and in the aggregate amount for the period, could not have been issued in the course of his professional practice legitimately. In the Melanson case, the evidence showed that the defendant Melanson had an office in the rear of his codefendant's drug store; that during a like period he had issued 900 prescriptions for the prohibited drugs, which had been filled by Dolan or his employees; and that no prescription for any other kind of drugs had been issued by Melanson to be filled by Dolan or his employees during that time. The evidence also showed that the prescriptions were of a character, and for an amount, that would not be issued by a physician in the course of his professional practice. This was sufficient evidence in each case for submission to the jury, upon the issue as to whether or not each of the defendants had conspired with Dolan to dispense the drug, in the guise of prescriptions to patients, but in fact to them as addicts, for the gratification of their appetite, and not for their cure."

Instructions.—On the trial of a physician for violating this section, the trial judge in his general charge to the jury may properly submit the issue of the good faith of the defendant in issuing prescriptions to supposed patients. Melanson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 783, 168 C. C. A. 129.

Inconsistent verdict.—A verdict of conviction on one count of an indictment which charges the defendants with obtaining narcotic drugs by means of order forms for purposes other than the use, sale, and distribution in the conduct of a lawful business in such drugs, has no foundation on which to rest where there is an acquittal on other counts of the indictment charging an unlawful sale. U. S. v. Joseph Fleming, etc., Co., (W. D. Pa. 1918) 251 Fed. 932.

But an acquittal on a count charging a sale is not inconsistent with a conviction in a count charging failure to pay the tax required of a dealer. Gee Woe v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 428.

The possession of opium by an unregistered dealer is a violation of this section. Gee Woe v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 428, 162 C. C. A. 498.

Burden of proof.—If in a prosecution under this section the defendant is a dealer in opium, the burden is upon him to show registry and payment of the special tax. Gee Woe v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 428, 162 C. C. A. 498.

Indictment.—Averments negatively exceptions.—An indictment for a violation of this Act need not aver facts showing that the defendants do not come within any of the exceptions of the Act. Melanson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 783, 168 C. C. A. 129.

An indictment of a physician for violation of this section is not bad as stating a conclusion of the pleader where it alleges that the sale was "not in the course of his professional practice only." U. S. v. Rosenberg, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 963.

Repeal of earlier Acts.—This Act, as is apparent from the disclaimer in this section, does not repeal or in any manner affect the Act of Feb. 9, 1909, ch. 100, nor the Act of Jan. 17, 1914, ch. 9 (see vol. 3, p. 723), which amends it. *Gee Woe v. Decision of commissioner as conclusive.—Whatever review may be had by direct suit or action, or by any other method, in those cases where the constitutionality of such a statute is attacked, or where it is claimed that no hearing was accorded, or where the conduct of the administrative officer was such that it can be characterized as arbitrary as matter of law, it is at least certain that where there has been a hearing on contested facts, and arbitrary conduct in the legal sense is not complained of, the decision of the commissioner is final that a substance taxed under the Act of May 9, 1902 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. 1066) is adulterated butter. Cohen v. Edwards, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 964.

U. S.*, (1919) 250 U. S. 33, 39 S. Ct. 415, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) reversing (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 628.

Refund of succession tax.—A claim for the refund of a succession tax imposed on contingent beneficial interests under the War Revenue Act of June 13, 1898, § 29 (see vol. 4, p. 230 note) and wrongfully collected after the passage of the Act of June 27, 1902 § 3, (see vol. 4, p. 232) which forbade such a tax and directed its refund, is governed by the provision of this act. Coleman v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 30, 39 S. Ct. 390 mem., 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 628.

Payment under protest is not essential to the maintenance of a suit to recover back inheritance taxes. Rand v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 503, 39 S. Ct. 359, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 72, 285.

Demand for repayment; by whom made.—The conditions of this section and of § 3 of the Act of June 27, 1902, are not satisfied, so as to permit the life beneficiary in a testamentary trust to sue for the recovery of the inheritance tax assessed and collected against her life estate, by a demand made by the attorney for the testamentary trustee for a refund of such tax, or by a similar demand made by the personal representative of the defendant successor to the executrix, who had actually made the payment at the cost of the beneficiary, and her failure to make a demand in her own name is not excused on the assumption that a third demand would be a useless ceremony. Rand v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 503, 39 S. Ct. 359, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 72, 285.

Suit in court of claims for unrepaid residue of succession tax.—Any bar to a suit against the United States in the court of claims for the unrepaid residue of a succession tax collected contrary to the terms of the Act of June 27, 1902, § 3 (see vol. 4, p. 232) under the War Revenue Act of June 13, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 448, chap. 448), § 29, which might result from the prior recovery of a judgment against a collector of internal revenue for the partial refund of such tax, was removed by the subsequent enactment of this act, which, after providing in § 1 for the presentation of claims for taxes erroneously collected under said § 29, directs repayment in § 2 to such claimants as have presented, or shall hereafter so present, their claims and establish them,—since the claimants, having presented their claims prior to beginning the suit against the collector, had complied with the letter of the act, and the effect of such claim was not extinguished by the judgment. Sage v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 33, 39 S. Ct. 415, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 628.

incomes from March 1st of that year. Woods v. Tewell, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 106, 164 C. C. A. 218.

When legacy deemed received.—The duty levied by the federal act of September 8, 1916, resembles very closely the old English probate duty established in 1694 and the probate duty of 1862 and 1864 levied by the acts of Congress of the United States. The old probate duty was treated in England as an expense of administration to be deducted out of the residue of the estate. Knowlton v. Moore, (1900) 178 U. S. 41, 20 S. Ct. 747, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 969. The federal act of September 8, 1916, levies a duty against the value of the entire mass of the decedent's property, real or personal, tangible or intangible, wherever situated, after deducting for funeral expenses, administration expenses, claims against the estate, and the other deductions mentioned in said act, and makes the same a lien against the property in whosoever hands the same may pass by transfer or otherwise. As the duty is made payable by the executor or administrator to the collector or deputy collector by the express provisions of the statute, the duty is an expense or a charge against the estate of the decedent, and not an express charge against the shares of the legatees or distributees of the decedent. The legatees and distributees cannot in any sense be held to have "received" any part of the duty that is paid to the government by the executor or trustee or administrator as such estate tax, and there is no language in the act that will permit a construction that the duty is levied upon each share of the legatees or distributees of the decedent, as was given the federal act of 1898. People v. Pasfield, (1918) 284 Ill. 450, 120 N. E. 286.

Tax in respect of rent.—In Kimball v. Cotting, (1918) 229 Mass. 541, 118 N. E. 866, L. R. A. 1918 C 1189, it was held that a clause in a lease made the lessee and not the lessor liable for the income tax arising out of the rents.

Property owned in United States.—The income from stocks and bonds of corporations organized under laws of the United States, and from bonds and mortgages secured upon property in the United States,—all owned by a nonresident alien,—which income is collected and remitted to her by an agent domiciled in the United States, who has physical possession of such securities under a power of attorney which gives him authority to sell, assign, or transfer any of them, and to invest and reinvest the proceeds of such sales as he may deem best in the management of the business and the affairs of the principal, is income derived from property owned in the United States. De Ganay v. Lederer, (1919) 250 U. S. 376, 39 S. Ct. 524, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "The question submitted comes to this: Is the income from the stock, bonds and mortgages, held by the Pennsylvania Company, derived from property owned in the United States? A learned argument is made to the effect that the stock certificates, bonds and mortgages are not property, that they are but evidences of the ownership of interests which are property; that the property, in a legal sense, represented by the securities, would exist if the physical evidences thereof were destroyed. But we are of opinion that these refinements are not decisive of the congressional intent in using the term 'property' in this statute. Unless the contrary appears, statutory words are presumed to be used in their ordinary and usual sense, and with the meaning commonly attributable to them. To the general understanding and with the common meaning usually attached to such descriptive terms, bonds, mortgages, and certificates of stock are regarded as property. By state and federal statutes they are often treated as property, not as mere evidences of the interest which they represent. In Blackstone v. Miller, (1903) 188 U. S. 189, 206, [23 S. Ct. 277, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 439, 445], this court held that a deposit by a citizen of Illinois in a trust company in the city of New York was subject to the transfer tax of the state of New York and said: "There is no conflict between our views and the point decided in the case reported under the name of State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, (1872) 15 Wall. 300, [21 U. S. (L. ed.) 179]. The taxation in that case was on the interest on bonds held out of the state. Bonds and negotiable instruments are more than merely evidences of debt. The debt is inseparable from the paper which declares and constitutes it, by a tradition which comes down from more archaic conditions. Bacon v. Hooker, (1901) 177 Mass. 335, 337, [58 N. E. 1078, 83 A. S. R. 279]. . . . We have no doubt that the securities, herein involved, are property. Are they property within the United States? It is insisted that the maxim mobilia sequuntur personam applies in this instance, and that the situs of the property was at the domicile of the owner in France. But this court has frequently declared that the maxim, a fiction at most, must yield to the facts and circumstances of cases which require it; and that notes, bonds and mortgages may acquire a situs at a place other than the domicile of the owner, and be there reached by the taxing authority."

Income of nonresident aliens.—Nonresident aliens, corporate or individual, not carrying on any business, trade or profession in the United States are not subject to tax under this section on income derived from stocks or bonds of domestic corporations doing a domestic business, or (b) from obligations secured by mortgages on tangible property within the United States, whether such obligations be held by the owners or by their collecting agents here. (1915) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 435.

This subdivision does not lay a tax upon the interest accruing on bonds executed by a resident or citizen of the United States when held and owned by a nonresident alien, and this is true irrespective of whether they are unsecured or secured by a mortgage upon real estate in this country, and also irrespective of where the written bonds are in fact kept or interest payments thereon are made. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 230.

Shares of stock of domestic corporations owned by nonresident aliens are not "property . . . in the United States" within the meaning of this subdivision and dividends accruing therefrom to such nonresident aliens are not subject to any tax under this Act. (1914) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 273.

Insurance agent's commissions.—Under this paragraph commissions of a life insurance agent derived from renewal premiums paid on policies that were obtained by him and accepted by the company in some earlier year, are taxable. Woods v. Lewellyn, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 106, 164 C. C. A. 218.

Special assessment districts, when lawfully created under the authority of the states for the purpose of improvement of streets and public highways, the provision of sewerage, gas and light, and the reclamation, drainage, or irrigation of considerable bodies of land within the states, are "political subdivisions" thereof within the meaning of the proviso to this paragraph. (1914) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 252.

Vol. IV, p. 241, par. D. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 187.]

Income from partnership.—A member of a partnership need not include, as a part of his net income subject to the normal tax, such part of his income derived from or through a partnership which has been received by that partnership as dividends on stocks owned by it in corporations taxable upon their net income under section G. U. S. v. Coulby, (N. D. Ohio, 1918) 251 Fed. 982.

Vol. IV, p. 242, par. E. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 189.]

Reassessment after false return.—A tax for 1913 may properly be assessed in May, 1915, under this paragraph if the taxpayer's return was "false," such term not meaning "fraudulent" but rather incorrect or untrue. Woods v. Lewellyn, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 106, 164 C. C. A. 218.

Vol. IV, p. 245, par. G. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 191.]

Dividend on stock of another corporation.—A corporation which receives an annual dividend on the stock of another corporation, is subject to be taxed thereon in the year when it was received. Skinner v. Union Pac. Coal Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 152, 161 C. C. A. 204, where it was said: "The case must be determined by deciding whether the dividend constituted income of the Union Pacific Coal Company 'arising or accruing' within the calendar year ending December 31, 1913. The argument of plaintiff really comes to this: That the dividend did not accrue to it in 1913, because the profits of the Superior Coal Company, out of which it was paid, did not all accrue to that company from its business during the calendar year 1913, but half of it accrued in 1912. This statement of the question indicates its decision. The Income Tax Law does not deal with the period during which a corporation which pays a dividend accumulates the profits out of which the dividend is paid. It is concerned with the income of the corporation receiving the dividend. Viewed in that light, the dividend accrued to the Union Pacific Coal Company in the year 1913, and all of it was taxable."

Joint stock association.—The collector of internal revenue, who unlawfully, but with probable cause, assessed for income-tax purposes the trustees in a common-law trust as an association, may retain out of the sum received by him the amount of the tax that they should have paid as trustees, since any recovery for the excess will, under R. S. sec. 989 (see vol. 3, p. 232) be from the United States, and if the United States retains from the amount received by it the amount that it should have received, it cannot recover that sum in a subsequent suit. Crocker v. Malley, (1919) 249 U. S. 223, 39 S. Ct. 270, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 817, 163 C. C. A. 131, which was an action to recover taxes paid under protest to the collector by the trustees. The court, commenting on the question decided, said: "The District Court while it found for the plaintiffs, ruled that the defendant was entitled to retain out of the sum received by him the amount of the tax that they should have paid as trustees. To this the plaintiffs took a cross writ of error to the Circuit Court of Appeals. There can be no question that although the plaintiffs escape the larger liability, there was probable cause for the defendant's act. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue rejected the plaintiffs' claim, and the statute does not leave the matter clear. The recovery therefore will be from the United States. Rev. Stats., § 989. The plaintiffs, as they themselves alleged in their claim, were the persons taxed, whether they were called an association or trustees. They were taxed too much. If the United States retains from the amount received by it the amount that it should have received, it cannot recover that sum in a subsequent suit."

The income from a common-law trust under which the trustees are to collect rents and income of such property as may be in their hands, and pay over to the holders of trustees' receipt certificates what they shall determine to be fairly distributable net income, with the right to apply any funds in their hands for the repair or development of the property held by them, or the acquisition of other property pending conversion and distribution, the receipt holders having no joint action or interest and no control over the fund—is not taxable to the trustees as an association without any deductions in respect to dividends received from a corporation that itself pays an income tax by reason of the provisions of § II. G. (a), imposing a tax upon the income of every corporation, joint stock company, or association, “no matter how created or organized;” and it is immaterial whether the individual receipt holders are entitled (as seems to be the practical construction) to the income of the fund subject to an unexercised power in the trustees, in their reasonable discretion, to divert it to the improvement of the capital, or whether they are not entitled to the income as such until they receive it. Crocker v. Malley, (1919) 249 U. S. 223, 39 S. Ct. 270, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 817, 163 C. C. A. 131, wherein the court said: “The requirement of G. (a) is that the normal tax therebefore imposed upon individuals shall be paid upon the entire net income accruing from all sources during the preceding year ‘to every corporation, joint-stock company or association, and every insurance company, organized in the United States, no matter how created or organized, not including partnerships.’ The trust that has been described would not fall under any familiar conception of a joint-stock association, whether formed under a statute or not. Smith v. Anderson, (1880) 15 Ch. Div. (Eng.) 247, 273, 274, 277, 282; Eliot v. Freeman, (1911) 220 U. S. 178, 186, [31 S. Ct. 360, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 424, 428. If we assume that the words ‘no matter how created or organized’ apply to ‘association’ and not only to ‘insurance company,’ still it would be a wide departure from normal usage to call the beneficiaries here a joint-stock association when they are admitted not to be partners in any sense, and when they have no joint action or interest and no control over the fund. On the other hand, the trustees by themselves cannot be a joint-stock association within the meaning of the act unless all trustees with discretionary powers are such, and the special provision for trustees in D. is to be made meaningless. We perceive no ground for grouping the two—beneficiaries and trustees—together, in order to turn them into an association, by uniting their contrasted functions and powers, although they are in no proper sense associated. It seems to be an unnatural perversion of a well-known institution of the law. . . . We presume that the taxation of corporations and joint-stock companies upon dividends of corporations that themselves pay the income tax was for the purpose of discouraging combinations of the kind now in disfavor, by which a corporation holds controlling interests in other corporations which in their turn may control others, and so on, and in this way concentrates a power that is disapproved. There is nothing of that sort here. Upon the whole case we are of opinion that the statute fails to show a clear intent to subject the dividends on the Massachusetts corporation's stock to the extra tax imposed by G. (a).”

A partnership composed of several corporations, and organized under the laws of Hawaii, has been held not to be a joint-stock company, and a tax illegally collected was recovered by the various partners. Haiku Sugar Co. v. Johnstone, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 103, 161 C. C. A. 155.

Income prior to March 1, 1913.—Where a holding company took over accumulated earnings of the subsidiary companies, which earnings had been used as capital before the taxing year, it was held that the transactions should not be regarded as “dividends declared and paid in the ordinary course by a corporation,” and therefore “income.” Gulf Oil Corp. v. Lewellyn, (1918) 248 U. S. 7, 39 S. Ct. 35, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 1. 156 C. C. A. 1, which affirmed (W. D. Pa. 1916) 242 Fed. 709, wherein the court said: “This is a suit to recover a tax levied upon certain dividends as income, under the Act of October 3, 1913, ch. 16, § 11, 38 Stat. 114, 166. The District Court gave judgment for the plaintiff, 242 Fed. Rep. 709, but this judgment was reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals. 245 Fed. Rep. 1. 156 C. C. A. 1. The facts may be abridged from the findings below as follows: The petitioner was a holding company owning all the stock in the other corporations concerned except the qualify shares held by directors. These companies with others constituted a single enterprise, carried on by the petitioner, of producing, buying, transporting, refining and selling oil. The subsidiary companies had retained their earnings, although making some loans inter se, and all their funds were invested in properties or actually required to carry on the business, so that the debtor companies had no money available to pay their debts. In January, 1913, the petitioner decided to take over the previously accumulated earnings and surplus and did so in that year by votes of the companies that it controlled. But, disregarding the forms gone through, the result was merely that the petitioner became the holder of the debts previously due from one of its companies to another. It was no richer than before, but its property now was represented by stock in and debts due from its subsidiaries, whereas formerly it was represented by the stock alone, the change being effected by entries upon the respective companies' books. The earnings thus transferred had been accumulated and had been used as capital before the taxing year. Lynch v. Turrish, 247 U. S.

221, 228. We are of opinion that the decision of the District Court was right. It is true that the petitioner and its subsidiaries were distinct beings in contemplation of law, but the facts that they were related as parts of one enterprise, all owned by the petitioner, that the debts were all enterprise debts due to members, and that the dividends represented earnings that had been made in former years and that practically had been converted into capital, unite to convince us that the transaction should be regarded as bookkeeping rather than as 'dividends declared and paid in the ordinary course by a corporation.' Lynch v. Hornby, 247 U. S. 339, 346. The petitioner did not itself do the business of its subsidiaries and have possession of their property as in Southern Pacific Co. v. Lowe, 247 U. S. 330, but the principle of that case must be taken to cover this. By § 11, G. (c), 38 Stat. 174, and S. id. 202, the tax from January 1 to February 28, 1913, is levied as a special excise tax, but in view of our decision that the dividends here concerned were not income it is unnecessary to discuss the further question that has been raised under the latter clause as to the effect of the fact that excise taxes upon the subsidiary corporations had been paid."

Rental of entire corporate property as "income."—May 1, 1871, the plaintiff leased its railroad, equipment, and franchises for the term of its charter of 500 years and of any extension thereof to the Delaware & Hudson Canal Company, in consideration whereof the lessee agreed to pay an annual rent as follows: The interest on $1,625,000 of mortgage bonds made, guaranteed or assumed by the lessor; the interest and $5,000 annually on account of the principal of the lessor's bond to the city of Troy on account of the Troy Union Railroad Company; the interest on $375,000 of 7 per cent. bonds to be issued by the lessor, payment of interest guaranteed by the lessee; a dividend of 4 per cent., payable semi-annually, on the lessor's capital stock; and the rents accruing and to become due on certain leases to which the lessor was a party. The lessee further agreed to stamp upon the lessor's bonds and stock on presentation a guaranty of payment of the interest and dividends aforesaid to the owners and holders. Every share of the plaintiff's stock is so stamped. It was, however, expressly provided that the lessee was not to pay the then income tax or any income tax that might thereafter be imposed on the said dividends and interest, and that, if required by law to pay the same, it might deduct the amount of tax so paid from the said interest and dividends. The lessor covenanted to continue its corporate organization at the expense of the lessee, not exceeding $1,000 annually, and to co-operate with the lessee as far as legal and practicable to make the lease perpetual. The lessee from 1871 down to the present time has continued to be in possession of the lessor's properties and franchises, has operated and maintained the road, and has kept transfer books of the lessor's bonds and stocks. The plaintiff contended that it had no other income than the $1,000 paid it annually by the lessee as expense of keeping up its corporate organization and an income from other sources amounting to $3,600 annually, and that the moneys paid as rent to the holders of its bonds and stock were their income. Answering this contention the court said: "It is true that the rent of its road does not go into the plaintiff's treasury and that it has no means of withholding the tax from it. It is also true that the rent reserved by the lease is paid by the lessee in fixed sums to third parties. All the same, the rent is the property of the plaintiff, and remains such, though by the terms of the lease paid out to others, whose rights are derived through it. While the rent is a debt of the lessee to the lessor, it is, as between the lessor and its stockholders, the lessor's income, out of which the dividends, if any, are to be paid. The application of the rent under the lease is a mere labor-saving device, the effect being exactly the same as if it be paid to the lessor and by it paid out as far as necessary to bondholders for interest, and the surplus in dividends to its stockholders." Rensselaer & S. R. Co. v. Irwin, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 161 C. C. A. 636, 249 Fed. 726.

Provision in lease as requiring lessee to pay tax on account of rents received by lessor.—In Codman v. American Piano Co., (1918) 229 Mass. 285, 118 N. E. 344, it appeared that the defendant in 1912 entered into a written indenture of lease with Paul M. Hamlen and Miriam P. Loring as lessors whereby they demised certain premises to the defendant for a long term at a rental therein recited. The plaintiffs were trustees of a voluntary association which succeeded to the rights of the original lessors under the lease. The lease contained the following covenant:

"And the lessee further covenants and agrees with the lessors to pay punctually within fourteen (14) days from the times when they become due and payable all taxes and assessments whatsoever which may be payable for or in respect of the leased premises during the term thereof, except assessments for betterments hereinafter arranged for."

Under the terms of this paragraph the association was subject in each of the years 1914, 1915, and 1916 to a tax of one per cent. upon its entire income arising or accruing from all sources during the preceding calendar year. In each of the years above referred to a tax at the rate of one per cent. was duly assessed upon the association's entire net income, which assessments were paid by the association in accordance with the terms of the Act. The plaintiffs sought in the action to recover the amount of the taxes so paid upon the amount of the rent reserved in the lease and paid by the defendant to the association. It was held that the action would not lie. The court said: "It is agreed that the plaintiffs are an 'association' as that word is used in section 2, paragraph G (a), and that the defendant paid to the association the full rent in the amounts and at the times specified by the lease, and did not withhold the federal income tax of one per cent. The question then is whether the defendant is liable to indemnify and pay to the plaintiffs the amount of the taxes upon the rents so paid by the plaintiffs to the federal government. . . . What is meant by taxes for or in respect of the leased premises? The legal signification clearly is that the taxes are those which relate directly to the premises themselves and not to the rent reserved which, when due, is a separate and independent estate. The fundamental fact on which the rights of the parties depend is that the defendant never agreed to pay the taxes on the rent. In Catawissa R. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1916) 255 Pa. St. 269, 99 Atl. 807, it was said: 'The income tax was not imposed by the government upon "the demised premises or any part thereof." . . . It was imposed upon rental received by the lessor from the lessee.' The words chosen by the parties cannot fairly be extended by us beyond their natural or ordinary meaning, and therefore the defendant cannot be held liable for taxes which the covenant neither by express words nor reasonable implication obliged him to pay."

Deduction of rebate on fixed premium.—The provision that amounts repaid to policyholders by way of rebate on premiums may be deducted for the year in which the repayment was made is not limited to payments made during the year in which they were repaid and includes payments made before the passage of the Act. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 247 Fed. 559.

I. SUBDIVISION FIRST (p. 260)

4. Corporations subject to tax (p. 261).

A terminal railway company organized and incorporated to perform services for four railroad companies, its stockholders, known as the "tenant companies," is taxable on its income. "It may be that the tenant companies organized the terminal company to provide a convenient joint agency for the performance of certain of their duties as carriers, and with no view to profit to be derived from its organization. It was, however, legally organized as a corporation, capable of earning and paying dividends to its stockholders, and the fact that it has not done so does not make it the less a corporation engaged in business and organized for profit, within the meaning of the corporation tax law. Profit from its organization and operation could result to its stockholders in other ways than in dividends. If the tenant companies chose to avail themselves of an agency, owned by them, which did business in a corporate capacity, then under the Act of August 5, 1909, they became liable through it for the payment of an excise tax for this privilege." Houston Belt, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 1, 162 C. C. A. 173.

6. Income (p. 267)

"Gain or profit."—"Where property is sold by a corporation at a price exceeding its cost, the gain is to be treated as income. Scott v. Schwab, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 57, 166 C. C. A. 385.

Release of debt by sole stockholder.—Where a corporation which owned the entire capital stock of another corporation released a debt of that corporation the amount of the release constitutes an addition to the capital and not income of the corporation whose debt was released. U. S. v. Oregon-Washington R., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir 1918) 251 Fed. 211, 163 C. C. A. 367.

Payments made for corporation by constituent corporations as income.—A terminal railway corporation was organized for the purpose of performing terminal services for four railroad companies, which were its stockholders, and which are referred to as "tenant lines." In order to finance its organization, it was necessary to borrow a large sum of money, and the credit of the terminal company was not sufficient to accomplish the needed loan. An arrangement was reached by which the tenant lines agreed with the Central Trust Company of New York, and with the terminal company, that they would pay in equal parts the annual interest and sinking fund requirements of a loan from the Central Trust Company to the terminal company, to be evidenced by bonds in the amount of $5,000,000, secured by a mortgage on the property of the terminal company. The capital stock of the terminal company was subscribed for and paid for by the four tenant lines in equal parts, and was in the amount of $25,000. The current operating expenses of the terminal company were to be paid by the tenant lines ratably according to the extent of the user by them respectively, to be determined according to a wheelage basis. The stock of the tenant lines was agreed to be and in fact was pledged to the Central Trust Company, to secure the loan, with the privilege of sale, in case of default on the part of any tenant company in its payments of interest and for the sinking fund. In case of such default, provision was made for the elimination of the defaulting tenant line from the privilege of being served by the terminal company and from the use of its property. It was also provided that any of the tenant companies could withdraw, under certain conditions, from the agreement, and it was thereby and thereafter relieved from further obligation for interest and sinking fund payments. The tenant lines became liable to pay the principal of the loan, only through their agreement to pay the sinking fund installments, while they continued tenant lines. The terminal company executed the bonds and mortgage which secured them and was directly liable to the Central Trust Company for the loan. However, the installments of interest and sinking fund were not paid by the tenant lines to the terminal company and by it, in turn, paid to the Central Trust Company, but were paid in quarterly parts by the respective tenant lines to the Central Trust Company. The title to the terminal properties and the ownership of them was in the terminal company, subject to the mortgage. It was held that the sums paid in the loan by the railroad companies were taxable as income of the terminal company. Houston Belt, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 1, 162 C. C. A. 173.

Excess premiums.—Excess premiums collected by a mutual company and subject to refund are not income. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Fink, (E. D. Wis. 1917) 248 Fed. 568.

Premiums not received during year.—“I regard the plaintiff's claim that only premiums actually received in cash during the year can properly be regarded as income for the purposes of said second clause as well founded. As to premiums accrued or becoming due, but not paid, within the year, and as to money previously received in payment of a premium, but applied within the year to pay a different premium, I rule that their inclusion as ‘income received within the year’ is not required by said second clause.” Lumber Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Malley, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 256 Fed. 380, wherein the court said further: “A ‘cash’ and not a ‘revenue’ basis, for estimation of the income whereby the tax imposed is to be admeasured, seems to me the basis contemplated by the statute.”

Premiums accrued but not collected are not included. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Fink, (E. D. Wis. 1917) 248 Fed. 568.

Interest on policy loans need not be returned as part of the income. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Fink, (E. D. Wis. 1917) 248 Fed. 568.

Increases or decreases in book value of bonds.—In computing the amount of income received within a year by a corporation, increases in the book value of bonds held by it as investments of its funds cannot be considered as income nor the decreases as expenses paid or losses sustained. Lumber Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Malley, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 256 Fed. 383.

Interest.—A stock brokerage corporation must list as part of its gross income interest paid by its customers on unpaid balances of margin. Alzheimer, etc., Invest. Co. v. Allen, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 688, 160 C. C. A. 598. In that case it appeared that plaintiff's business consisted in part of the purchase for customers of bonds and other securities, which it carried for them on margin or part payment. It charged and received from them interest on the unpaid balances. In buying the securities for its customers, plaintiff itself paid but part of the price “on said purchases,” and paid interest on the balances it owed. In these transactions the interest received by plaintiff from its customers exceeded the interest it paid. In making its tax returns, plaintiff deducted from the interest it received the entire amount of the interest it paid and listed the balance as gross income. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in reforming the returns, listed all interest received as gross income, and limited the amount of deduction for interest paid according to the statutory restriction in respect of the amount of plaintiff's capital stock. It was held that the ruling of the commissioner was correct.

II. SUBDIVISION SECOND (p. 270)

Deductions—“Tax imposed under authority of state.”—A state tax on corporate stock, imposed on the corporation and not on its stockholders, may be deducted from its gross income by the corporation. U. S. v. Guaranty Trust, etc., Bank, (S. D. Fla. 1918) 253 Fed. 291.

Past losses.—A corporation which has for several years made return and paid the tax without reference to a transaction prior to the passage of the act whereby certain bonds and notes were sold at a discount and the loss charged off, is not entitled to assert the right to a deduction and obtain a refund of the proportional amount of the tax paid. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 53 Ct. Cl. 41.

Cost of necessary repairs.—In computing the tax under this section, a corporation operating a steamship line may deduct the cost of necessary repairs to its steamers, docks, etc. San Francisco, etc., Steamship Co. v. Scott, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 854. The court said: “The question thus raised does not seem to have been directly decided in any reported case to which my attention has been called, or which I have been able to find, although the cost of repairs and upkeep was assumed in Grand Rapids & I. Ry. v. Doyle (D. C.) 245 Fed. 792, to be an item properly included in operating and maintenance expense. Under the law the tax is to be laid on net income and such net income is to be ascertained by deducting from the gross income (1) all the ordinary and necessary expenses actually paid within the year out of income in the ‘maintenance and operation’ of the business and property; (2) losses actually suffered, not covered by insurance, including a reasonable allowance for depreciation, if any. (3), (4), and (5) are items not material here. It will thus be seen that the deductions allowed are to include, not only ordinary and necessary amounts actually paid out in the operation of the property, but also the amounts paid out in the maintenance thereof, and in addition a reasonable sum for depreciation, if any. Now, the operation of a business or property includes payment for labor and materials which go into the actual operation thereof, while maintenance means the upkeep or preserving the condition of the property to be operated, and therefore, in my judgment, includes the cost of ordinary repairs necessary and proper from time to time for that purpose. 'Depreciation' as used in the statute is not to be confused with ordinary repairs. It is intended to cover the estimated lessening in value of the original property, if any, due to wear and tear, decay, or gradual decline from natural causes, inadequacy, obsolescence, etc., which at some time in the future will require the abandonment or replacement of the property, in spite of ordinary current repairs."

Reserve funds.—"Congress did not attempt to define the term 'reserve funds,' as used in the Excise Tax Law of 1909. The rule is familiar that when a word which has a known legal meaning is used in a statute, it must be assumed that it is used in its legal sense, in the absence of an indication of a contrary intent. 26 Am. & Eng. Encyc. Law, 607; Apple v. Apple, 1 Head (Tenn.) 348; State v. Smith, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 394; Grogan v. Garrison, 27 Ohio St. 50, 63. It is clear, from Mr. Justice Pitney's opinion in the McCoach Case, 244 U. S., p. 586, 37 Sup. Ct. 709, 61 L. Ed. 1333, that the term 'reserve funds,' within the meaning of the act of Congress, bears the signification known to the general law of insurance." National Life, etc., Ins. Co. v. Craig, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 524, 163 C. C. A. 518.

Money appropriated to the reserve fund may be deducted from income. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Fink, (E. D. Wis. 1917) 248 Fed. 568.

Dividends voluntarily paid, as a matter of business policy, by an insurance company may be deducted, as should sums which the company is required by state law to put into a reserve fund. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Herold, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 247 Fed. 681.

V. SUBDIVISION FIFTH

The word "false" as used in this subdivision means "untrue" or "incorrect," and does not necessarily mean intentionally or fraudulently false. U. S. v. Nashville, etc., Ry., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 678, 161 C. C. A. 588.

VII. SUBDIVISION EIGHTH (New)

Action to collect omitted items.—In view of the provision of this section making all laws relating to the collection, remission and refund of internal revenue taxes applicable to the tax imposed by this section, an action may be maintained by the government under R. S. section 3213 (see vol. 3, p. 1025) to collect the tax imposed by this section on items of income omitted from a corporation's return, despite the fact that the action is brought after the expiration of the period, during which the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is entitled to amend the return. U. S. v. Nashville, etc., Ry., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 678, 161 C. C. A. 588. The court said:

"We think it clear that one who, through erroneous return, has made it impossible for the commissioner to exercise his judgment upon the items affected thereby cannot be heard to object that the only remedy open to the government is invoked. Indeed, the declaration avers that the commissioner has 'disallowed' the deduction of the items in question, and the natural inference therefrom is that, so far as he can, he has held the defendant liable for the excise tax thereon. It results from these views that the learned district judge was in error in holding that this suit was barred by the commissioner's failure to reassess. The conclusion we have arrived at has been reached in two cases in district courts: United States v. Threshing Co., (D. C.) 229 Fed. 1019; United States v. Grand Rapids & Indiana Ry. Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 153."

Vol. IV, p. 277, sec. 1. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 73.]

Nature of Act.—While the Act had for its purpose objects other than or in addition to raising revenue, it must be construed as a revenue Act. Hutton v. Terrill, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 860.

Vol. IV, p. 278, sec. 3. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 74.]

Pleading compliance with statute.—In an action on a cotton futures contract payment of the tax need not be alleged in the complaint, failure to pay being matter of defense. Hutton v. Terrill, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 860.

Vol. IV, p. 278, sec. 4. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 74.]

Pleading that contract was in writing is not necessary in an action thereon, want of the required written memorandum being matter of defense. Hutton v. Terrill, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 860.

Contract signed by broker.—Where a sale of cotton futures is made on the Cotton Exchange the broker is the "person to be charged" and his signature without disclosing his principal is sufficient. Hutton v. Terrill, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 860. The court said:

"Being a revenue measure, the purpose of sections 3 and 4 must be assumed to be the safeguarding of the government in the observance and collection of the tax. When plaintiffs made purchases on the Cotton Exchange, they were obviously the persons to be charged under the statute, so far either as the government or the seller was concerned. It must be assumed that the statute was enacted, in this regard, to prevent tax evasions, and not to affect contractual relations. Any other construction, if permissible, could only be justified (if at all) by a clear requirement that brokers on the Exchange could not, in effect, do business on their own credit and responsibility. Of course, the only way in which business on exchanges can be done is to deal with a member of the Exchange. Such member is subject to rules and supervision. No one would think ordinarily, in the quick and important transactions on exchanges, of taking the time to investigate the responsibility of the broker's customer or principal; and yet, if the Exchange member is not the 'party to be charged,' for the purposes of section 4, that result is what the statute would ultimately require."

Stock certificates of federal reserve banks.—Certificates of stock to be issued to member banks by federal reserve banks should not be revenue stamped under this schedule. (1916) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 511.

Vol. IV, p. 301. [Insurance policies, etc.] [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 98.]

Mutual fire insurance company.—A mutual company insuring only its members is none the less within the exemption because it requires payment of premiums in advance and maintains a reserve fund. Niles v. Central Mfg. Mut. Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 564, 165 C. C. A. 14, wherein it was said:

"The distinction drawn in the Act is between those mixed mutuals, which, though commonly called mutuals, are in fact also doing a nonmutual business for profit, and the strictly mutual companies; not between the mutuals which carry a reserve and surplus, and those which levy assessments only after each loss. A mere incidental profit earned by way of interest on its invested safety funds, or on its bank balances, does not change the purely mutual character of the company, or indicate that its business, though thus earning a profit, is 'carried on for profit.' And if the text or context of these words could be deemed to create an ambiguity, as in our judgment they cannot, the doubt would be resolved in favor of the taxpayer; the question is not, as in Perry v. Norfolk, 220 U. S. 480, 31 Sup. Ct. 465, 55 L. ed. 548, that of an alleged contractual exemption from general taxation laws, but, as in Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 583, 22 Sup. Ct. 515, 46 L. ed. 697, that of the class of corporations intended by the Act to be included in or exempted from its special tax provisions."

Vol. IV, p. 311, sec. 3450. [First ed., vol. III, p. 795.]

Innocence of automobile owner.—The fact that the owner of an automobile who has put an employee in charge of the machine for a lawful purpose is innocent of its use by the employee in removing distilled liquor, on which the tax had not been paid, for the purpose of defrauding the government, does not prevent its forfeiture under this section. U. S. v. Mincey, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 287, 165 C. C. A. 575.

Vol. IV, p. 321, sec. 3460. [First ed., vol. III, p. 803.]

Failure to file a claim under the third subdivision will not estop the true owner from asserting his title by an action of trover brought against the purchaser of the property at a sale held by the collector of internal revenue, provided he has done nothing to mislead the purchaser as to his relation to the property and the title. Campbell v. Hutcheson, (1918) 23 Ga. App. 111, 97 S. E. 555.

1918 Supp., p. 279, sec. 14.

Amendment not retroactive.—The amendment made by this section is not retroactive and does not affect a proceeding on second assessment completed before its enactment. Camp Bird v. Howbert, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 27, 161 C. C. A. 87.

1918 Supp., p. 305, sec. 201.

Tax as payable out of estate before distribution.—"The federal act of 1916 imposes a tax payable out of the estate before distribution, thus differing from the federal inheritance tax of 1908, payable by the individual beneficiaries. It is not a tax upon specific legacies, nor upon residuary legatees. It is taken from the net estate 'before the distributive shares are determined rather than off the distributive shares.' Its payment diminishes pro tanto the share of each beneficiary. The executor or administrator must pay the tax out of the estate before the shares of the legatees are ascertained. It is an obligation against the estate and payable like any expense which falls under the head of administration expenses. The tax paid is no part of the estate at the time of distribution; it has passed from the estate, and the share of the beneficiaries is diminished by just so much. Corbin v. Townshend, (1918) 92 Conn. 501, 103 Atl. 647.

The estate tax resembles the probate duty imposed by the Act of July 1, 1862, ch. 119, 12 Stat. L. 483, which was payable by the executor out of the estate, while the legacy duty therein provided for (page 485) was payable by the beneficiaries. The tax occupies the same field of death duty as does the "estate tax" in England. In re Roebling, (1918) 89 N. J. Eq. 163, 104 Atl. 295.

This tax is in terms a tax imposed upon the transfer of the net estate of a decedent passing to others under the provisions of his will or the intestate laws of the several states. It is denominated an estate tax, not a tax upon the succession or inheritance, and it is charged upon and payable out of the net estate of the decedent. It is imposed without regard to the provisions of the will or the law of the several states; the paramount taxing power of the federal government takes effect at the moment of the owner's death upon his entire estate, subject only to the specific deductions mentioned in section 203, and an exemption of $50,000, and it requires payment therefrom of a tax according to a graduated scale, regulated by the net amount of the taxable estate. In re Knight, (Pa. 1918) 104 Atl. 765.

If not otherwise directed by will, the tax is to be paid out of the estate and charged pro rata to each beneficiary. Fuller v. Gale, (1918) 78 N. H. 544, 103 Atl. 308, wherein the court said: "The estate tax imposed by act of Congress is to be paid pro rata by all who share in the estate. It is not a property tax, but one 'imposed upon the transfer of the net estate.'"

1918 Supp., p. 351, sec. 311.

Purpose and computation of tax.—"The tax is laid, not as a tax upon the shell, or any part of the shell, but is laid as an excise tax upon the business or occupation of manufacturing shells, or any parts of shells, the amount of the tax to be measured by the entire net profits received from the sale of such articles manufactured in the conduct of that business or occupation." Worth Bros. Co. v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 256 Fed. 116.

Manufacture of shell forgings.—In Worth Bros. Co. v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 256 Fed. 116, in holding that a manufacturer of rough shell forgings, which were subjected by another to a number of processes to make them into completed shell casings, was subject to tax the court said: "As the tax is laid upon the business or occupation of manufacturing, the inquiry therefore is whether 'any person manufacturing' includes only such persons manufacturing as bring the article manufactured to the finished condition, where it is adapted for use as a part of a shell, or whether the term includes any person manufacturing the article in any one or more of the successive steps substantially necessary to bring it to that condition.

"If the former construction is to prevail, at which of the steps does the manufacture begin? If it is held that it does not begin until the manufacturer who brings it to its finished state commences his work, it would follow that, if the process of manufacture were distributed among a number of manufacturers, each doing a part of the manufacturing, the payment of the tax would be confined to that manufacturer who contributed such final steps as would bring the article to its completed state of adaptability to the purpose intended. I do not think the language of the section justifies an interpretation which would lead to nullifying its purpose, or would lead to a different measure of liability for the tax assessed against different manufacturers, or against the same manufacturer of different lots of shells, dependent upon what part of the prior stages of manufacture might be done under contract or otherwise by others.

"I think the language of the act is broad enough to clearly show that Congress intended to impose an excise tax upon the occupation or business of manufacturing in all or any of its stages, from the first step to the last of the manufacture which produces the shell, or any part of it, from the raw material composing it to its completed state, but that manufacturing must be held to have begun only when the material as such had been so changed by manufacture as to exhibit its intended use in, and application exclusively to, the manufacture of the final product."

Shells manufactured through subcontractors.—A corporation taking a contract to furnish shells and having the work done principally by subcontractors to whom it furnishes mere round bars in mill lengths is taxable on the profits of the sale of the completed shells. Carbon Steel Co. v. Lewellyn, (W. D. Pa. 1919) 255 Fed. 304. The court said:

"If the excise tax provided for in the foregoing sections be a tax imposed upon manufacturers of munitions, can it be said that the plaintiff escaped liability under the facts found in this case? The plaintiff, by its engagement with the British government, undertook to manufacture, or have others manufacture, the shells. It began the manufacture of the shells to the extent of making the round bars in mill lengths. The steel in said round bars was the plaintiff's property, and remained the plaintiff's property during all succeeding processes, and until the plaintiff delivered the finished product to the British government. If this court would hold that the plaintiff ceased to be a manufacturer when it had finished the manufacture of the round bars in mill lengths out of which the shells were made, although it retained title thereto during the processes performed by others, the construction of the law would be too illiberal, and would tend to defeat what plainly appears to be the purposes of Congress. The tax, however, is not upon the manufacturer; it is upon the entire net profits actually received or accrued from the sale or disposition of such articles."

V. CONSTRUCTION OF ACT

2. Federal Rules of Construction as Controlling (p. 339)

A decision of the federal Supreme Court construing the Act is binding in a state court. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wood, (1918) 136 Ark. 585, 207 S. W. 32.

VI. VALIDITY OF STATE STATUTES

5. Furnishing Cars (p. 341)

A state statute requiring an interstate carrier to furnish cars at points within the state within a reasonable time is in entire harmony with the Hephurn Amendment of the Interstate Commerce Act, and the state and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction of actions for a failure to perform the duty; but if an interstate carrier has established a rule for the distribution of cars, and administers it fairly and equally between applicants, the authority to determine whether the rule is reasonable rests with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and no court has jurisdiction until the commission has determined that question. State Public Utilities Com. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. (1917) 281 Ill. 405, 118 N. E. 81.

Order of state commission.—By reason of the provisions of the congressional Act regulating interstate commerce, the corporation commission is without jurisdiction to require a railway company to designate a point on its right of way for the location of a portable grain elevator and to spot cars thereto for interstate shipments, when the effect of such order is to obstruct interstate commerce by materially interfering with the movement of cars to and from elevators permanently located near the right of way, and with the loading of cars on the right of way by track shippers. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. State, (Okla. 1919) 180 Pac. 246.

6. Rates (p. 342)

Intrastate rates may be regulated by the state notwithstanding the Interstate Commerce Act. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. State, (Okla. 1918) 171 Pac. 43.

Gas.—The rates to be charged for gas brought from one state to another may be regulated by state statutes. Pennsylvania Gas Co. v. Public Service Commission, etc., (1919) 225 N. Y. 397, 122 N. E. 260, wherein the court said: "Congress has never occupied the field of regulation, as it has done with railroads, the telegraph and telephone lines, and even in the oil companies. . . . Gas and water companies are expressly excepted. In such circumstances, there is no implied exclusion of the police power of the states. The exercise of that power is, indeed, subject to conditions. It must not impose upon interstate commerce burdens new and direct rather than remote and incidental. . . . It must not discriminate against foreign products. . . . It must not introduce diversity and conflict where there is need of uniformity and harmony. . . . But, subject to those conditions, the police power of the states survives, though the transactions brought within its grip are those of interstate commerce."

VIII. PERSONS, ETC., SUBJECT TO ACT

2. Telegraph Companies (p. 343)

Relayed message.—In Berg v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1918) 110 S. C. 169, 96 S. E. 248, it was held that a telegram addressed to a point in the state, but sent to a point outside the state and from there relayed to its destination, was an interstate message. The court said: "The words in the proviso to section 1 of the Interstate Commerce Act, 'that the provisions of this Act shall not apply to the transportation of passengers or property . . . wholly within one state,' etc., and the words, 'nor shall they apply to the transmission of messages by telegraph, telephone or cable, wholly within one state,' etc., were intended to declare that the transportation or transmission which was only partly within a state should be subject to the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, for the reason that only such portion of the instrumentalities, used in the transportation or transmission, located in a particular state, can be subjected to the legislation of that state, but not of any other state. No other reasonable construction can be placed on that section." See to the same effect Western Union R. Co. v. Bowles, (Va. 1919) 98 S. W. 645, wherein the rule was laid down despite a state statute providing as follows: "Any message accepted by any telegraph company doing business in this state to be sent to another point in this state, shall be deemed to be an intrastate message. Any telegraph company that would give such message as aforesaid the character, or fix upon such message an interstate character by virtue of the fact that in the course of transit of said message it is relayed or carried out of the state in sending it, shall introduce evidence . . . that the route used in sending said message was the only practicable or feasible and the most expeditious manner of sending said message, and shall introduce as a part of said evidence charts and maps showing lines of wires and relay stations to prove such route as the most desirable and proper route to have been used, upon request of any complaint."

Railway telegraph.—An interstate railway company doing a telegraph business comes as clearly within the purview of the Interstate Commerce Act and the Rulings and Regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission, as if it were a telegraph or telephone company. La Cost v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 134 Ark. 92, 203 S. W. 586.

Mental anguish is not an element of damage for failure to deliver an interstate message. Berg v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1918) 110 S. C. 169, 96 S. W. 248.

State penal statutes are superseded in respect to interstate messages. Davis v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1918) 198 Mo. App. 692, 202 S. W. 292.

Limitation of liability.—The statute does not abrogate a state doctrine that a limitation of liability not brought to the notice of the sender is not binding. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Morrow, (Tex. 1919), 208 S. W. 689; Des Arc Oil Mill v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1918) 132 Ark. 335, 201 S. W. 273. Compare Merriweather v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1919) 183 Ky. 710, 210 S. W. 190; Hartness v. Western Union Tel. Co., (S. C. 1919) 99 S. E. 759.

In William v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., (1918) 122 Va. 675, 95 S. E. 436, the court said: "The telegram was an interstate message and was unrepeatable; and the blank upon which it was written contained the usual stipulation that it was sent 'subject to the terms on the back hereof, which are hereby agreed to.' These 'terms' are familiar to the profession, and need not be here repeated at large. Suffice it to say that they contained, among others, the following clause: 'The company shall not be liable for mistakes or delays in the transmission or delivery, or for nondelivery of any unrepeatable telegrams, beyond the amount received for sending the same.' By Act of June 18, 1910, amending an act to regulate commerce (chapter 309, 36 Stat. at Large, 539), Congress has undertaken to occupy the field of interstate commerce by telegraph, and has declared that as to all such business, telegraph, telephone, and cable companies are common carriers within the meaning and purposes of the act. The act further prescribes that with respect to that class of business telegraph companies shall print and publish rates, rules, classifications, regulations, and practices, and file the same with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and confers upon that tribunal jurisdiction to determine what rates, etc., are just and reasonable. This action on the part of Congress is exclusive, superseding state laws on the subject, and of course is controlling upon state courts. The principles here involved were gone into so fully by this court in the case of Boyce v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1916) 119 Va. 14, 89 S. E. 106, as to obviate the necessity for extended discussion."

3. Carriers by Water (p. 345).

The Interstate Commerce Commission is without jurisdiction over ocean carriage of export and import traffic destined to or coming from nonadjacent foreign countries. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. v. Western Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 218, 163 C. C. A. 374.

5. Pipe Lines (p. 346).

The transportation of oil and gas from state to state through the medium of pipe lines is commerce between the states. Pennsylvania Gas Co. v. Public Service Commission, etc., (1919) 225 N. Y. 397, 122 N. E. 260.

IX. COMMERCE AS INTERSTATE OR INTRA-STATE (p. 348)

Reshipment of interstate shipment.—It is well settled that whether a given transportation is interstate or intrastate must be determined by the essential character of the commerce, and that an interstate character cannot be evaded by the mere device of billing to an intermediate point and then rebilling from that point. On the other hand a new shipment by a consignee of an interstate shipment in the cars in which received to other points of destination does not necessarily establish continuity of movement or prevent reshipment to a point within the same state from having an independent and interstate character. So, in holding a reshipment to be independent and therefore intrastate the test was stated as follows:

While the question is not free from difficulty, upon a careful consideration of the authorities we are disposed to think that the character of the shipment from Oakley to Madisonville is to be ultimately tested by the consideration whether or not there was an actual good-faith delivery of the shipments to the consignees at Oakley, and actually a new and independent shipment therefrom by defendants to Madisonville while the lumber was physically present and in their possession, and that the effect of such good-faith delivery, possession and independent reshipment is not, as a mere matter of law, converted into an interstate shipment by the existence of an original and continuing intention so to reship in intrastate commerce for the saving of expense. Intention of shipper as controlling.—The mere intention of the owner of a carnival show equipment to continue his tour beyond the state did not convert a contemplated movement of the show between two points within the state into an interstate movement so as to preclude the state from requiring that the transportation service between such points be performed by a carrier, and fixing the rate chargeable by the carrier for such service. Southern Pac. Co. v. Arizona, (1919) 249 U. S. 472, 39 S. Ct. 313, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 19 Ariz. 20, 165 Pac. 303.

XI. COMMON CONTROL, ETC. (p. 349)

Telegraph company.—The initial carrier of messages, whose line is wholly within the state, does not come within the purview of the statute by receiving an interstate message and the delivery of same to an interstate carrier of messages, unless it has an arrangement with the interstate company and its connection for through, continuous transmission of the message. La Cost v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 134 Ark. 92, 203 S. W. 586.

V. Transportation as including what.

1. In general.

VI. Furnishing transportation on reasonable request.

III. BRIDGES (p. 353)

The federal Act to regulate commerce expressly includes within the scope of its provisions bridges used or operated in connection with any railroad, and an interurban electric railway, other than a street passenger railway, passing over an interstate bridge and participating in the interstate movement of persons and property, is a "railroad" within the meaning of the Act, and the bridge over which it passes is therefore subject to the provisions of the Act. Schrader v. Steubenville, etc., Traction Co., (W. Va. 1919) 99 S. E. 207.

V. TRANSPORTATION AS INCLUDING WHAT

1. In General (p. 353)

Furnishing cars.—"Congress evidently recognized that the duty to the public included a variety of services that, according to the theory of the common law, were separable from the service of carriers as carriers, so that by the Act of Congress the entire body of the services to be performed falls under the general head of transportation, among which is furnishing cars. So it is made the duty of the carrier to 'furnish suitable' cars as part of the transportation." Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Strickland, (Tex. 1919) 208 S. W. 410.

Removal of cattle from car.—The liability of a terminal carrier of an interstate live-stock shipment for a loss due to its negligence while the animals were awaiting removal from the car at destination through a cattle chute, owned, operated and controlled by the carrier must be regarded as controlled by a provision in the bill of lading requiring presentation of a written claim for loss or damage within five days from the time the stock is removed from the car,—although the shippers contracted to do the work of actual removal—in view of the provision of this section enlarging the definition of the term "transportation" so as to include "cars and other vehicles and all instrumentalities and facilities of shipment or carriage, irrespective of ownership or of any contract, express or implied, for the use thereof, and all services in connection with the receipt, delivery, elevation, and transfer in transit, ventilation, refrigeration, or icing, storage, and hauling of property transported." Erie R. Co. v. Shuart, (1919) 250 U. S. 465, 39 S. Ct. 519, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

VI. FURNISHING TRANSPORTATION ON REASONABLE REQUEST (p. 354)

To whom request is to be made.—In Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Strickland, (Tex. 1919) 208 S. W. 410, it was held on the evidence that the agent at one station had authority to receive a request for cars to be furnished to another station.

Car of particular type.—Where there is a demand for a type of car suitable for the shipment of live poultry, it is the duty of a railroad to furnish such cars on reasonable request. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Strickland, (Tex. 1919) 208 S. W. 410.

Unusual conditions before war.—In Fletcher v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 103 Kan. 834, 177 Pac. 1, in holding that a carrier was negligent in failing to furnish stock cars promptly on request despite the unusual conditions existing in February, 1917, the court said: "There was a 'steady increase' in the volume of traffic, beginning with the first of the year 1916, which culminated in an acute shortage of cars in January, 1917. The cause of this increase was well known to all men. It lay in the great expansion of trade and industry generally, as the result of demands made upon the United States arising out of what was still essentially an European war. By the beginning of 1916, a full year before the plaintiff made his request for transportation, every barometer used in gauging business activity was steadily rising, and the effect on railroad transportation was already patent. As a matter of fact, according to statistics compiled by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle (not embraced in the record), this expansion was registered in railroad revenues as early as September or October, 1915, and there continued to be a net surplus of idle cars until September 1, 1916, when the first shortage for that year, amounting to approximately 20,000 cars, appeared. However this may be, while the expansion was quite rapid after it once gained headway, and while it assumed unprecedented proportions before the end of 1917, it had ceased to be sudden or unexpected by the beginning of 1918. Every day's experience instructed the defendant that it would become less and less capable of fulfilling the demands made upon it, and the abstract is barren of any testimony that any effort was made to meet the needs of the growing number of shippers and the swelling volume of traffic, beyond shifting from division to division an increasingly inadequate supply of cars."

II. "JUST AND REASONABLE CHARGES."

1. In General (p. 358)

Damages for unreasonable rates.—"Where a shipper has paid a rate afterwards declared to be excessive by the Interstate Commerce Commission, he may recover as damages the difference between the excessive rate and the rate declared to be just and reasonable by the Commission, without proof of actual injury." Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Spiller, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 677, 161 C. C. A. 587.

8. Telegraph Messages (p. 358)

"Exchange of services."—In Postal Tel.-Cable Co. v. Tonopah, etc., R. Co., (1919) 248 U. S. 471, 39 S. Ct. 162, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 176 App. Div. 910, 162 N. Y. S. 1140, Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 914, 155 C. C. A. 502 (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918), 249 Fed. 664, 161 C. C. A. 574, which reversed (N. D. Ill. 1917) 245 Fed. 592, the court had under consideration three cases brought to it for review, all involving similar contracts entered into between telegraph companies and railroad companies for exchange of service. The only question upon which the decision of the court was sought was the validity of the agreements, and this question was decided in favor of their validity. The court said: "The contracts elaborately provide for the reciprocal rights of the companies, for a division of expenses between the railroad and telegraph, for the use by the telegraph of the railroad's right of way for its poles, for monthly payment of a certain sum by the telegraph, and then agree, this being the point now material, that up to a certain amount calculated at the regular day rates of the telegraph, it should deliver free of charge messages pertaining to the railroad business to any points on its system on or beyond the railroad lines, and that up to an amount calculated in similar manner the railroad should transport the materials, supplies and employees of the telegraph, needed for the construction, maintenance or renewal of the telegraph lines whether on or off the lines of the road. The latest ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission is that these contracts for an exchange of service while valid for services on the line are invalid as to services off the line, which last, it is held, must be charged for by the railroad upon the basis of its published rates and by the telegraph upon that of its charges reasonably charged to other customers for similar services. The commission construes in this way a proviso added to § 1 of the Act to regulate commerce by an amendment of June 18, 1910, c. 309, § 7. [36 Stat. 539, 544.] This amendment brought telegraph, telephone and cable companies within the act but also inserted a proviso 'that nothing in this Act shall be construed to prevent telephone, telegraph, and cable companies from entering into contracts with common carriers, for the exchange of services.' The question more specifically stated is whether the construction adopted by the commission is right. We do not see how that construction can be got from the words of the act. The words are general and as certainly allow services off the line as services on it to be exchanged. In fact they do so almost in terms by allowing common carriers to exchange with cable companies. This being obvious, it is said that while the abstinence of the act from preventing exchanges covers the whole ground, the exchange of services off the line must be on the terms that we have stated, which makes the act as to them merely a superfluous permission to settle accounts periodically instead of paying for each transaction in cash. But 'exchange' is barter and carries with it no implication of reduction to money as a common denominator. It contemplates simply an estimate, determined by self interest, of the relative value and importance of the services rendered and those received. This is admitted with regard to services on the line, and if so whatever services can be exchanged can be exchanged in the same way. We cannot follow the argument from Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix Ry. Co. v. Grant Brothers Construction Co., 228 U. S. 177, that the exchange properly so called should be confined to cases where the common carrier is not acting as such. That seems to us a perverse conclusion from a proviso permitting 'common carriers' to exchange."

state message written upon a blank containing no restrictions upon its liability, where such message is accepted, but negligently delayed in transmission, provided such damages may reasonably be supposed to have been contemplated by the parties when the message was accepted as the probable result of such negligence. Dettis v. Western Union Tel. Co., (Minn. 1919) 170 N. W. 334, wherein evidence was considered and held to raise a question for the jury as to whether plaintiffs had notice of the regulations and terms printed on the back of defendant's blank forms ordinarily used in sending messages, and as to whether the company accepted the message here involved under an agreement with plaintiffs that its transmission should be delayed on account of wire trouble. The court said: "We recognize the fact that the act of Congress of June 18, 1910, occupies the entire field and has taken complete control of the interstate business of telegraph companies in so far as state statutes or the common law may be in conflict therewith; but we have searched in vain for any federal decision holding that the liability of a telegraph company for damages for negligence in transmitting or delivering a message is restricted where the message is written on a blank sheet of paper."

Discrimination in rates.—No discrimination in the rates charged for an interstate message arises from the fact that such message is written upon a telegraphic blank containing no restrictions upon the liability of the company for damages growing out of its negligent delay in transmitting such message, instead of the blank ordinarily supplied by the company for the use of its patrons in sending messages. Dettis v. Western Union Tel. Co., (Minn. 1919) 170 N. W. 334.

"Repeated message."—"A repeated message is one telegraphed back to the sending office for comparison. Obviously a message cannot be repeated until it has been received at its destination. The object of repeating it is not to guard against delays but mistakes in transmission. This was held in Francis v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1894) 58 Minn. 252, 59 N. W. 1078, 49 A. S. R. 507, 25 L. R. A. 406, as applied to a case where the company wholly failed to transmit a message and we see no difference in principle between a failure to transmit and an unreasonable delay in transmitting a message in so far as its repetition is concerned. Numerous cases sustain this view. See Box v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 138, 91 C. C. A. 172, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 566, and note." *Dettis v. Western Union Tel. I. VALIDITY OF STATE STATUTES (p. 360)

Congress not having legislated on the subject of the rights and liabilities of the parties in cases of the interstate carriage of passengers under free passes issued under the Hepburn Act or otherwise, or respecting the validity of stipulations or conditions annexed to such passes exempting the carrier from liability, these questions may be determined from a consideration of state enactments or constitutional provisions. Clark v. Southern R. Co., (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 539.

II. PERSONS EXCEPTED (p. 361).

"Families."—By the terms of this section a railroad company is impliedly authorized to issue an interstate free pass to a wife of an employee. Such a pass is issued as a gratuity. Clark v. Southern R. Co., (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 539.

Effect of procuring fraudulent passes for caretakers of cattle.—The fact that a shipper of cattle billed them falsely in the names of persons not owners, thus procuring round trip transportation for caretakers not otherwise entitled thereto, in violation of the Interstate Commerce law, does not preclude a recovery for delay in forwarding. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Manby, (Tex. 1918) 207 S. W. 157.

IV. INJURIES RECEIVED WHILE RIDING ON FREE PASS

1. Rule Stated (p. 362)

Where a carrier of passengers voluntarily undertakes to carry a passenger gratuitously or under a free pass, in the absence of a contract or stipulation to the contrary, it owes him a duty to exercise care for his safety, and a failure to discharge such duty is negligence which may form the basis of an action. Clark v. Southern R. Co., (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 539.

2. Limitation of Liability (p. 362)

In absence of statute.—Where a passenger is carried gratuitously, the carrier may by contract or stipulation relieve itself from liability for its negligence, in the absence of a valid prohibiting statute. Clark v. Southern R. Co., (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 539.

State statute not complied with.—A free pass was issued in Indiana for transportation from that state into Kentucky. The pass had printed on it a limitation of liability but the printed matter did not comply with an Indiana statute in that the type was too small. The person using the pass who was the wife of an employee of the interstate railroad issuing it was negligently injured in Kentucky. Action for damages was brought in an Indiana court which refused to enforce the limitations of liability clause because it violated the provisions of the Indiana statute. Clark v. Southern R. Co., (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 539.

V. CONTRACTS FOR ISSUANCE OF FREE PASSES (p. 362)

Severability of contract.—While a contract on consideration to furnish telegraph franks to a stated amount is by the act invalidated as to interstate messages it is valid as to intrastate messages. Irvine v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., (Cal. App. 1918) 173 Pac. 487.

Grant of right of way.—Where a right of way was granted on the sole condition that the owner should be furnished free transportation and five years later the statute made the grant of such transportation illegal, the road will be excused from further performance except as to intrastate travel. Bell v. Kenawha Traction, etc., Co., (W. Va. 1919) 98 S. E. 885, holding that the conveyance of the right of way could not be rescinded.

VI. ACTS CONSTITUTING VIOLATION

Pass on toll bridge.—The giving of a pass by a toll bridge operated in connection with and as an instrumentality of an interstate railway is within the act. Shrader v. Steubenville, etc., Traction Co., (W. Va. 1919) 99 S. E. 207.

Vol. IV, p. 367, sec. 1 (G). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 115.]

Effect on powers of state commission.—This section does not prevent the Public Service Commission of a state from requiring an interstate railroad to provide shipping facilities to a shipper who offers intrastate commerce in a quantity justifying the installation of the facilities, notwithstanding the fact that, when provided, they may also be used for interstate commerce. Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Public Service Commission, (1918) 82 W. Va. 408, 96 S. E. 62.

1. In General (p. 373)

No special contract can be made different from that open to the general public or which gives any additional advantages to the shipper or imposes any more extended duties on the carrier. Adams Express Co. v. Burr Oak Jersey Farm, (1918) 182 Ky. 116, 206 S. W. 173.

Military movement of troops.—This Act does not forbid a contract for the military movement of troops at less than tariff rates. (1915) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 381.

2. What Constitutes (p. 373)

Discrimination in switching charges.

In Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. U. S., (E. D. Va. 1918) 249 Fed. 368, this section was held to be violated, the facts being stated as follows: "At certain points south of Richmond the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company, the Southern Railway Company, and the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company are competitors for traffic to and from that city. Each of these roads has switching facilities at Richmond connecting with the other. Each of them delivers traffic from competitive points to industries on its own tracks in Richmond at its tariff rate to Richmond, without extra charge for switching. Each of them charge, however, for carload freight received from a competitor from a competing point to be delivered to an industry on its own rails. To equalize the advantage which each has over the other as to industries on its own tracks, each of these roads absorbs the switching charge of its competitor on freight to be hauled by it to industries on its competitors' tracks."

"Stating the matter more concretely, and taking Oxford, N. C., as a competitive point, the Seaboard Air Line delivers freight from that city to industries on its own rails without extra charge beyond its tariff to Richmond. For freight consigned over the Seaboard for industries located on the rails of the Southern or Coast line, the Seaboard absorbs the switching charge of the Southern or Coast Line, so that the cost to the shipper is the same as if he had shipped over the Southern or Coast Line to the industry on that line. The same rules are applied to shipments from industries located on the several switches to competitive points."

"The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company and the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Company have switching facilities connecting with the other roads above named, but they are not competitors for the Southern business to and from Richmond. Basing the difference entirely on this absence of competition, the Seaboard, Southern, and Coast Line do not absorb the switching charges on any freight to be delivered to industries on the switches of the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac."

See also infra, subdivision 6 of this annotation, p. 573.

Free switching of cars.—In American Smelting, etc., Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 737, 168 C. C. A. 83, it was contended that a lease by an interstate railroad of land as a site for a smelting company's plant was invalid as violating this section and sec. 1 of the Elkins Act (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 549), where it provided for the switching of cars about the grounds of the plant free of charge, such switching being disconnected from the transportation of cars over its lines. Answering this contention, the court said: "With reference to section 2 of the Interstate Commerce Act and section 1 of the Elkins Act, there is no evidence that the plaintiff, by performing the switching service in question, according to the terms of the lease, charges, demands, collects, or receives from the defendant a greater or less compensation for the transportation of passengers or property subject to the provisions of the Act to regulate commerce, than it charges, demands, collects, or receives from any other person or persons for doing for him or them a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. Nor is there any evidence that, by the performance of the switching service in question, the plaintiff offers, grants, or gives any rebate, concession, or discrimination in respect to the transportation of any property in interstate or foreign commerce, by it, whereby any such property is transported at a less rate than that named in its tariffs published and filed, or whereby any such other advantage is given or discrimination practiced in the transportation of property in interstate commerce. The switching service in question is performed wholly within the state of Nebraska, and so far as this record is concerned is not connected with interstate commerce at all. Therefore the Interstate Commerce Act and its amendments are not applicable to it. We do not say that this lease between the plaintiff and the defendant may not, in a proper case, be shown to be an unlawful concession or rebate; all we say is that it is not shown in this case."

5. By Whom Determined (p. 377)

Power of commission to define.—In Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. U. S., (E. D. Va. 1918) 249 Fed. 368, the court, in discussing discriminatory switching charges, said: "We are of opinion that the act in question confers upon the Interstate Commerce Commission the power of determining as to whether the services rendered are 'like and contemporaneous'; also as to whether the respective traffic was 'of a like kind.' Further, as to whether the transportation was made under 'substantially similar circumstances and conditions' (Texas & P. R. Co. v. I. C. C., 162 U. S. 197, 16 Sup. Ct. 666, 40 L. Ed. 940), while the act does not undertake to define the particular acts which constitute unlawful discrimination, it undoubtedly commits that to the commission and its findings are conclusive."

6. Effect on Contracts (p. 378)

Agreement to divert shipment.—An agreement by a carrier to divert a shipment by wire so as to secure its arrival at a specified time is invalid. Cicardi Bros. Fruit, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., (Mo. App. 1919) 213 S. W. 531.

Guaranty of date of arrival.—A contract with a shipper of cattle that the shipment will arrive at a specified time is discriminatory and void, and will not support an action. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. West, (Tex. 1919) 207 S. W. 918.

"Changed conditions."—The prohibition against the increase of railway rates which the carrier has reduced in competition with water routes, unless, after hearing by the Interstate Commerce Commission, it shall be found that such proposed increase rests upon changed conditions other than the elimination of water competition, which was added to this section by the Act of June 18, 1910, § 8, does not apply where the reduction was with the approval of the commission, granted after hearing on application of the carrier for relief from the operation of the long and short haul clause of that section. Skinner, etc., Corp. v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 557, 39 S. Ct. 375, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The existence of changed conditions other than the "elimination of water competition," which Congress intended by the Act of June 18, 1910, § 8, should not justify the raising of transcontinental railway rates which the carriers had once reduced in competition with water routes, is clearly implied in findings by the Interstate Commerce Commission that the conditions formerly existing have materially changed, that the withdrawal of boats from coast-to-coast service has not been on account of the rates made by the rail carriers with which the boats compete, but on account of slides in the Panama canal, and an extraordinary rise in ocean freight, that the substantial disappearance of water competition was merely temporary, that competing water carriers announced their intention ultimately to return to this service, and that the time of such return depended in part upon the measure of the rates they would be able to secure for this service in competition with the rail lines. Skinner, etc., Corp. v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 557, 39 S. Ct. 375, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Telegraph rates.—A telegraph company engaged in transmitting interstate messages is not required to file copies of its regulations and tariffs with the Interstate Commerce Commission by virtue of the provisions of this Act. And notice of such regulations is not to be imputed to the sender of an interstate message solely by reason of the fact that the company has voluntarily filed them with the commission. Dettis v. Western Union Tel. Co., (Minn. 1919) 170 N. W. 334.

IV. CONTENTS, CONSTRUCTION AND SUFFICIENCY OF SCHEDULES

1. In General (p. 409)

Construction generally.—In Swift v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 291, 166 C. C. A. 461, the court in discussing the construction of published schedules said: "The correct rule of construction in a situation like this is announced in Newton Gum Co. v. C.,

B. & Q. R. R. Co., 16 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 340, as follows:

"The law compels carriers to publish and post their schedules of charges upon the theory that they will be informative. A shipper who consults them has a right to rely upon their obvious meaning. He cannot be charged with knowledge of the intention of the framers or the carrier's canons of construction or of some other tariff not even referred to in the one carrying the rate. The public posting of tariffs will be largely useless if the carrier's interpretation is to be dependent upon tradition and the arbitrary practices of a general freight office. . . . A classification sheet is put before the public for its information. It is supposed to be expressed in plain terms, so that the ordinary business man can understand it, and, in connection with the rate sheets, can determine for himself what he can be lawfully charged for transportation."

Construction of parts together.—Where there is no ambiguity in the language of the tariff filed, but difficulty arises in relating one feature or rate in the tariff with another, they must all be considered, and if a plain meaning can be gathered it will control. Portland Cattle Loan Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 33, 163 C. C. A. 283.

2. Accessorial Services (p. 409)

Limited to scope of Act—Ocean carriers.—A railroad tariff which provides for the absorption by the railroad among other charges of switching charges and state tolls, must be limited to the field of the operation of the service performed by the railroad company, and cannot relate to liability, service or obligation of the ocean carrier for the reason that ocean carriers are not subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. v. Western Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir.) 251 Fed. 218, 163 C. C. A. 374.

4. Demurrage (p. 410)

Cars on private siding.—A railroad may charge demurrage on private cars on a side track owned by the consignee and the carrier jointly. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Freedom Oil Works, (W. D. Pa.) 247 Fed. 573.

Demurrage and storage on cars of explosives.—In Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Freedom Oil Co., (W. D. Pa.) 247 Fed. 573, two rules filed by the carrier with the Interstate Commerce Commission were construed, the court saying: "Under the head of 'Storage,' rule one-a provides:

"Carload shipments of explosives or other dangerous articles are subject to both demurrage and storage rules. (See rule 6.) B. Other carload freight, held in cars for delivery and subsequently unloaded, is subject to demurrage rules while in cars and to these storage rules after it is unloaded."

"Thus a clear distinction is made between explosives, or other dangerous articles, and other carload freight. Turning to rule 6, we find the following provisions:

"Storage will be charged at the following rates per day of twenty-four hours or fraction thereof, on explosives or other dangerous articles held in excess of free time allowed:

"A. On less than carload shipments of the more dangerous explosives [naming them], unloaded in or on railroad premises, twenty-five cents per hundred pounds.

"On carload shipments five dollars per day in addition to the regular demurrage charges.

"B. On less than carload shipments of the less dangerous and relatively safe explosives [naming them], or less than carload shipments of dangerous articles other than explosives, unloaded in or on railroad premises, ten cents per hundred pounds.

"On carload shipments two dollars per day (Sundays and holidays excluded) in addition to the regular demurrage charges."

"From this rule, it is clear that a distinction is made as to storage charges between carload and less than carload shipments on explosives and dangerous articles, in two particulars: (1) On less than carload shipments, storage is charged only when unloaded on railroad premises. In that case, when the demurrage ends, the storage charge begins. While in carload shipments the storage charge is not dependent on the unloading of the car, but is made in addition to the regular demurrage charges."

7. Ticket Regulations (p. 412)

Forms of free passes on stipulations incident to them need not be filed as a part of the schedules of rates, fares, and charges required by this section. Clark v. Southern R. Co., (Ind. App. 1918) 110 N. E. 540, wherein the court said: "The word 'rate' as used in the Interstate Commerce Act means the net cost to the shipper; the net amount the carrier receives and retains for the transportation service. U. S. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ill. 1906) 148 Fed. 646. The word 'fare' means the rate of charge for the carriage of passengers (19 Cyc. 456); money paid for a voyage or passage (Bouvier's Law Dictionary). A charge is the price fixed or demanded for services rendered. Fulmer v. Southern R. Co., (1903) 67 S. C. 262, 45 S. E. 196. It is apparent that each of these words -- rates, fares, charges -- as used in the Commerce Act, has in it the idea of compensation for services performed. A free pass, however, such as is involved in this action is otherwise."

V. PUBLICATION OF SCHEDULES

1. Necessity (p. 413)

Higher rate for special service.—An interstate carrier must make and publish a rate open to all, in order to exact a higher rate for a special service, but it cannot be assumed, merely because the contrary has not been established by proof, that an interstate railway carrier is conducting its affairs in violation of law. Draper v. Georgia, etc., R. Co., (1918) 21 Ga. App. 707, 95 S. E. 16.

VI. EFFECT OF PUBLISHED RATES

1. In General (p. 415)

Undercharges.—Where freight rates less than those shown by the published schedule of rates are charged and paid by the consignee of goods he is liable for the difference. Portland Cattle Loan Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 33, 163 C. C. A. 283; Alabama Western Ry. v. Collins, (Ala. 1918) 78 So. 833; New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. York, etc., Co., (1918) 230 Mass. 206, 119 N. E. 855; Southern R. Co. v. Latham, (N. C. 1918) 97 S. E. 234.

Where an interstate bill of lading contains any provision authorizing the consignee to pay the freight, an implied contract by the consignee to pay the freight charges arises from his acceptance of the delivery of the goods under the bill, into which contract there will be read the provisions of the Elkins Act, requiring payment of the full charges in compliance with the duly established rate; and where the consignee pays the charges demanded, which are less than the established rate, the carrier may maintain an action against him for the unpaid balance of the legal charges. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Wagner, (1918) 102 Kan. 817, 172 Pac. 519, holding also that in such an action where it is admitted that a schedule of rates has been duly filed with and approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the presumption, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, is that the rates were duly published, and not that the carrier has violated the provisions of the Elkins Act, subjecting him to severe fines and penalties for failure to publish the same.

Liability for overcharge.—A carrier is not liable for the amount of an overcharge resulting from the misquoting of a rate or the failure to post rates. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wood, (1918) 136 Ark. 585, 207 S. W. 32.

2. Presumption of Reasonableness of Rate (p. 416)

Review by court.—The question as to the reasonableness of the rates charged is not for the courts where they are the same as in the schedules filed in accordance with this section. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co., (N. D. Pa. 1918) 251 Fed. 682.

3. Contracts of Transportation (p. 416)

Who liable for transportation charges.—The consignee is primarily liable for the lawful transportation charges and liability can only be released by payment. New York Cent. R. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., Iron Co., (1919) 286 Ill. 267, 121 N. E. 581, wherein the court said: "Counsel for appellant also argues with great earnestness that the federal law as to interstate commerce shipments should be so construed as to hold that in every contract of shipment it is implied that, where payment of freight is not made by the consignee before delivery, notice of such fact must be given to the consignor, in order to hold him liable in the event of the consignee's insolvency. No authorities are cited to uphold this argument. The Act to regulate interstate commerce does not so provide. To so construe it would be contrary to the uniform holdings of the courts on this question. The wisdom of inserting such a provision in the act regulating interstate commerce should be addressed to the legislative branch of the federal government, and not to the courts."

Vol. IV, p. 426, sec. 6 (M). [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 379.]

Effect on state statutes.—Where state authority is exerted to require the re-establishment of a pre-existing local transportation facility by rebuilding and repairing a wharf adjacent to, and lying immediately between, a depot of a rail carrier and a river point where a water carrier may land, such authority does not conflict with the asserted federal authority under the Canal Act of August 24, 1912, to require physical connection between the lines of the rail and the water carriers by connecting the track of the rail carrier with the dock of the water carrier. State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (Fla. 1919) 81 So. 498.

Form of action.—The form in which an action for failure to furnish cars may be brought is not material. Pletcher v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 103 Kan. 834, 177 Pac. 1. The court said: "In this case the facts of the transaction relating to the application for cars were stated, and it makes no difference that the plaintiff characterized his grievance as one for breach of contract. The essential nature of defendant's liability, if any, was the same, and the court properly instructed the jury that the plaintiff must recover, if at all, because of the failure of the defendant to furnish cars within a reasonable time."

II. EXCLUSIVENESS OF REMEDIES (p. 433)

Two remedies are provided for the ascertainment of damages, which are exclusive, "one to the commission and one to the federal courts." Petition of Southern Lumber Co., (Tenn. 1919) 210 S. W. 639.

Vol. IV, p. 440, sec. 10 (B). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 117.]

Indictment—Sufficiency.—An indictment against a railroad under this section for assisting a shipper by means of false billing and classification to obtain transportation of goods at less than the regular rates, is not defective because the waybills for the shipments are not set out in the indictment; nor because it fails to state the means for steps taken to adopt the rate, nor because it fails to set forth the means by which the shipper was assisted to obtain such transportation, nor because it fails to allege that the shipper paid the freight. Such imperfections are mere matters of form and, after verdict, are cured by the operation of R. S. sec. 1025 (see vol. 2, p. 681). Elgin, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 907, 186 C. C. A. 7.

Vol. IV, p. 440, sec. 10 (C). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 117.]

Evidence of want of fraudulent intent.—In a prosecution of a corporation for making false claims for injury to goods the knowledge of the falsity of the claim or invoice and the willful intent of the defendant to commit the offense denounced by this Act of Congress are indispensable elements of the fraud which it declares to be a misdemeanor. It is not any company that by false statement as to the nature or extent of injury or damage, or by the use of a false bill or invoice attempts to obtain an excessive allowance or payment of damages, that is declared to be guilty of this fraud. It is any company that knowingly and willfully by false statement or representation, or by the use of a false bill or voucher, knowing the same to be false, attempts to obtain an excessive allowance or payment of damages that is declared to be guilty of the misdemeanor. A corporation can know, intend to defraud, and willfully misrepresent only by and through the officer, agent, or employee in whom it vests the authority to know, to intend, to will, and to act for it. Accordingly the officer or agent acting for the corporation may testify directly to his lack of fraudulent intent. Laser Grain Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 826.

III. PROCEEDINGS IN EQUITY (p. 452)

Remedy given is exclusive.—In Ketchum v. Denver, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 248 Fed. 106, 160 C. C. A. 246, it was held that the remedy given is exclusive of an action by a private person, the court, however, adding: "But if we are in error in regard to this last proposition, we are satisfied that the plaintiff has not made a sufficient showing of wrongs suffered to authorize a court of equity to grant the extraordinary relief prayed for."

Vol. IV, p. 458, sec. 15 (a). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 119.]

II. Regulation of rates.

1. Power of commission.
4. Order of commission.
5. Review.

II. REGULATION OF RATES.

1. Power of Commission (p. 460)

The commission has power to investigate a preferential practice of dividing joint rates and stop it by an appropriate order. Chestnut Ridge R. Co. v. U. S., (D. C. N. J. 1917) 248 Fed. 791, wherein an order fixing the share of a railroad company in a joint rate was held not to be arbitrary or based on a mistake of law, but was held to be erroneous in that there was an error in calculation.

4. Order of Commission (p. 464)

Effect—Intrastate rates.—There is nothing to hinder a state from providing that after a judicial inquiry into the validity of an order of a state railroad commission fixing the rate on logs carried within the state it shall be binding upon the parties until changed. Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Fletcher Paper Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 30, 39 S. Ct. 13, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 198 Mich. 469, 164 N. W. 528.

Limitation in order.—Where the Interstate Commerce Commission issues an administrative order to a railroad requiring it to cease making payments during a certain period to an elevator company pursuant to a contract between the companies, a limitation in such order becomes effective when the order goes into force and ceases to be effective when the order lapses by expiration of time. Omaha Elevator Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 827, 162 C. C. A. 61.

5. Review (p. 465)

A finding without evidence is beyond the power of the commission and will be set aside by the court. Chestnut Ridge R. Co. v. U. S., (D. C. N. J. 1917) 248 Fed. 791, wherein the court added: "This court does not assume that it is vested with power to supervise the actions of the Interstate Commerce Commission, but it proposes, as a practical consideration, postponing the entry of a decree in this case for a period of ninety days from the filing of this opinion, to afford the commission an opportunity, should it desire it, to rectify its mistake by such action as may be appropriate. If the commission shall have taken no action within the period indicated, a decree will be entered upon the expiration of the period, annulling the order and enjoining its enforcement, leaving the opposing parties to their rights as of that date."

Vol. IV, p. 476, sec. 16 (B). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 123.]

II. Enforcement of orders.

1. Jurisdiction.
- V. Venue.
- VII. Petition, complaint or declaration.
- VIII. Hearing.
4. Evidence.
- IX. Relief granted.

II. ENFORCEMENT OF ORDERS

1. Jurisdiction (p. 478)

Both state and federal courts have jurisdiction of actions to enforce an order made by the commission. Petition of Southern Lumber, etc., Co., (Tenn. 1919) 210 S. W. 639.

V. VENUE

Extraterritorial service of process.—This section does not authorize process to be served beyond the district in which the suit is filed. Graustein v. Rutland R. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1919) 256 Fed. 409.

VII. PETITION, COMPLAINT OR DECLARATION (p. 480)

Amendment.—No error was committed by the trial court in allowing, near the close of the trial, an amendment to correct a transposition of awards in declarations in two suits tried together, brought upon reparation orders made by the Interstate Commerce Commission, based upon alleged discrimination against shippers in railway car distribution. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Minds, (1919) 250 U. S. 368, 39 S. Ct. 531, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 3d 1917) 244 Fed. 53, 156 C. C. A. 481.

Findings of Commission—Going behind findings.—At trial, plaintiff introduced the findings and order of the commission, which by this section of the act are "prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated," and rested. Defendants offered the record before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and agreed that Elliott had succeeded to whatever were the rights of Michigan Motors Company. The District Court held, as a conclusion of law, that "no legal competent evidence" had been adduced "upon the trial of this action to rebut the prima facie evidence furnished by the report and order of the Interstate Commerce Commission," and gave judgment for the amount fixed in the reparation order, with interest, costs, and counsel fee. Whereupon this writ was taken. The case for Elliott in final analysis is based on the proposition that the findings and order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, though shown to rest on nothing that the law calls evidence, must, nevertheless, be themselves received as satisfactory evidence of whatever facts, or assertions of fact, are therein contained, unless rebutted by new and more persuasive testimony. Such is not the law. It was the duty of the trial court to inquire whether there was any substantial evidence before the commission to justify its order. The matter has been so recently and exhaustively considered in Atchison, etc., Co. v. Spiller, 246 Fed. 1, 158 C. C. A. 227, 249 Fed. 677, 161 C. C. A. 587, that no further citation is necessary. Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Elliott, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 18.

IX. RELIEF GRANTED (p. 484)

Interest.—Charging the jury in a suit upon reparation orders made by the Interstate Commerce Commission, based upon alleged discrimination against shippers in railway car distribution, that they might add interest, not exceeding six per cent. on the damages found, is not error, although the recoveries are less than the amounts claimed before the Commission, where for years these claims have been contested, and the carrier has never offered any payment of the awards. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Minds, (1919) 250 U. S. 368, 39 S. Ct. 531, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 53, 156 C. C. A. 481.

I. INTRODUCTORY

The cases in this note arose, practically without exception, under the "Cummins Act" of March 4, 1915, which was substituted for the "Carmack amendment." However, the "Cummins Act," while in terms a substitute for the "Carmack amendment," was in effect merely an amendment thereof in respect to limitation of liability, preserving the original language in other respects. The cases therefore continue to discuss and apply the "Carmack amendment" eo nomine, when in fact the "Cummins Act" is intended, and the decisions here collated are to be so understood, though the inaccurate reference to the "Carmack amendment" has frequently been preserved by the annotator because so made by the court. The instances where the effect of the "Cummins Act" on the pre-existing law has been discussed specifically have throughout the annotation been brought out by catch lines for ready reference.

II. PURPOSE AND DOMINATING FEATURES OF AMENDMENT (p. 508)

The spirit of the Act is to treat connecting lines of transportation as one line so far as the shipper is concerned and to compel the different companies forming a through route to deal as a unit with the shipper and then to adjust all differences as to individual liability among themselves. The wisdom and fairness of this course has been demonstrated and is obvious. Lancaster v. Schreiner, (Mo. 1919) 212 S. W. 19.

Relieving from liability as insurer.—By the Carmack amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act, Congress has relieved carriers of interstate shipments from the liability of insurers as it was at common law, and the liability imposed on such a carrier is limited, by this statute, to any loss, injury, or damage caused by it, or by a succeeding carrier to whom the property may be delivered for carriage, and in such a case the loss alleged must be attributable to some breach of duty or default on the part of the carrier. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Sandlin, (Fla. 1918) 78 So. 667.

IV. DEFINITION AND CONSTRUCTION (p. 510)

Definition — Property.—The Carmack amendment deals only with shipments of property, and not with transportation of persons. Keairnes v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (S. D. 1919) 171 N. W. 86.

"The Carmack amendment deals only with the shipment of property. Its language is so clear as to leave no ground for the contention that Congress intended to deal with the transportation of persons." Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Maucher, (1919) 248 U. S. 359, 36 S. Ct. 108, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review, (1916) 100 Neb. 237, 150 N. W. 422.

The Carmack amendment is silent respecting the carriage of persons; it contains no provision relative to duties and liabilities growing out of the relation of carrier and passenger. It deals only with the transportation of property. Clark v. Southern R. Co., (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 539.

V. EFFECT ON STATE LAWS (p. 511)

In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, (Tex. 1919) 211 S. W. 543; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. National Bank of Commerce, (1918) 122 Va. 471, 95 S. E. 454.

The specific effect of the Carmack amendment was to supersede the special regulations and policies of particular states upon the subject of the carrier's liability to shippers for loss or damage to interstate shipments and the contracts of carriers with respect thereto. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Sandlin, (Fla. 1918) 78 So. 667.

Construction of proviso of amendment.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Lysaght v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 351; Clark v. Southern R. Co., (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 539.

VI. SHIPMENTS AFFECTED (p. 513)

Foreign shipments.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Jewett, (Wis. 1919) 171 N. W. 757, wherein the court said: "This being a shipment to a foreign country, the Carmack amendment did not apply, and it was competent for the parties to make a contract limiting the plaintiff's liability to its own line. Best v. Great Northern R. Co., (1915) 159 Wis. 429, 150 N. W. 484."

Shipment forwarded by subsequent order.—Where at the termination of an intrastate shipment, the shipper forwards them to a point outside the state by another carrier, there is not an interstate shipment by connecting carriers within the Carmack amendment. Bracht v. San Antonio, etc., R. Co., (Mo. 1919) 209 S. W. 579.

VII. RECEIPT OR BILL OF LADING (p. 514)

The failure to deliver a receipt by an express company receiving goods for shipment does not exempt it from liability as a common carrier, but on the contrary imposes on it the highest responsibility. Southern Express Co. v. Malone, (Ala. App. 1918) 78 So. 408.

Power of connecting carrier to engraft condition on shipper's contract with initial carrier.—The settled construction of the federal statute law aforesaid is that if an interstate shipment of freight is begun under an express contract of carriage between the initial carrier and the shipper, and subsequently a connecting carrier, en route of the shipment, beyond the terminal of the initial carrier, issues another contract of carriage to the shipper for a remaining portion of the original route and takes up the original bill of lading evidencing the original contract upon its surrender by the shipper, the second contract of carriage does not supersede the first, and in such case the first contract remains in force by virtue of said federal statute law, and the shipper and all assignees of his claiming through him (all of whom could have enforced such original contract) have no right of action for damages against such subsequent carrier, but only against the initial carrier. In such case there can be, in contemplation of law, but one initial carrier, and no action by the shipper or one claiming under him can be maintained against any subsequent carrier en route, although instituted upon a subsequent contract of carriage with the latter, such as that aforesaid. And the same would be true if the initial contract of carriage were not an express contract, but one implied in law because of the duty imposed by the federal statute, where the initial carrier received the shipment for interstate transportation to a destination beyond the terminal of its line. Such holding is based, however, upon the fundamental consideration that in such cases the initial contract of carriage was one which was enforceable by the plaintiff under the federal statute, as covering the entire route of the original shipment; that any subsequent contract of carriage with any intermediate carrier was needless, was not required in such case by the federal statute, and was against its policy. Consequently, where owing to a lawful tariff regulation filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission according to law, the shipment of live stock from points west of Chicago to points east of that place on shipper's order contract, i. e., on an "order notify" bill of lading, was invalid, the shipper or the consignee might make a second contract of carriage from Chicago to the place of destination of the live stock. Such second contract of carriage is not forbidden by the Interstate Commerce Law and its amendments, and the carrier with whom it is made becomes the initial carrier and is the proper defendant in an action for injury and damage whether caused by its own line or some connecting carrier en route from Chicago to the place of destination of the live stock. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. National Bank of Commerce, (1918) 122 Va. 471, 95 S. E. 454.

Presumption as to consignee's knowledge of bill of lading.—Since this section requires that a bill of lading or receipt be issued by the carrier, a consignee must be presumed to know that fact. But he cannot be presumed to know the terms of the bill of lading. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. York, etc., Co., (1918) 230 Mass. 206, 119 N. E. 855.

"Lawful holder."—Where a bill of lading while made out to the order of the consignee is deposited with sight draft attached by the consignor with a bank for collection, and by that bank forwarded to another bank as its agent which presents it to the consignee for collection, and the draft not being honored the bill of lading is returned to the forwarding bank, the consignor was during all that period the "lawful holder" of the bill of lading. Babbitt v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., (1918) 285 Ill. 267, 120 N. E. 803.

Interpretation of bill of lading.—The federal decisions are controlling as to the proper construction of a bill of lading. Crenshaw v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (Cal. App. 1919) 181 Pac. 252; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Patterson, (Okla. 1919) 182 Pac. 701.

IX. LIABILITY OF INITIAL CARRIER

1. In General (p. 517)

To the same effect as the first paragraph of the original annotation, see Haglin-Stahr Co. v. Montpelier, etc., R. Co., (Vt. 1918) 102 Atl. 940; Baker v. Memphis, etc., R. Co. (Tex. 1918) 208 S. W. 182.

Compliance with penal laws.—The fact that a carrier has complied with sections 232–235 of the Penal Laws (7 Fed. Stat. Ann. 857) in transporting munitions, does not affect its civil liability for damages occasioned by their explosion while in transit. Lysaght v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 351.

Loss by fire while the goods are in hands of the connecting carrier may be recovered from the initial carrier. It is not necessary that the loss should be caused by some affirmative act of the connecting carrier, since the connecting carrier is to be treated as though it was a part of the initial carrier's own line. Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Craig, (1918) 118 Miss. 299, 79 So. 102.

Common-law liability.—The Carmack amendment does not take away the right of the shipper to maintain an action on the common-law liability of the carrier for the negligent delay in the shipment of live stock resulting in loss by shrinkage and a decline in the market, although the same be an interstate shipment. However, as to interstate shipments, the common-law liability of the carrier for safe carriage of property may be limited by a special contract with the shipper, where such contract, being supported by a consideration, is reasonable and fairly entered into by the shipper, and does not attempt to cover losses caused by the negligence or misconduct of the carrier. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Ladd, (Okla. 1919) 178 Pac. 125.

Limitation of common-law liability.—The provision of this section making a carrier receiving property for transportation in interstate commerce liable for "any loss, damage, or injury to such property caused by it," does not have the effect of limiting the carrier's common-law liability. Lysaght v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 351.

3. Period of Liability (p. 518)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Vogel v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1919) 168 Wis. 567, 171 N. W. 198.

Beginning of liability.—The acceptance of a bill of lading providing that the liability of the carrier for a shipment of hogs shall not attach until they are loaded in the cars does not waive the shipper's right to recover for hogs which died in the shipping pen because of the failure of the carrier to furnish cars promptly. Pletcher v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 103 Kan. 834, 177 Pac. 1.

Negligence as warehouseman.—The negligence of the terminal carrier as warehouseman after the goods have arrived at destination is not chargeable to the initial carrier.

Texarkana, etc., R. Co. v. Twin City Products Co., (Tex. 1919) 208 S. W. 989.

Where the interstate bill of lading of the form approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission provides, among other conditions, "that property not removed by the party entitled to receive it within forty-eight hours (exclusive of legal holidays) after notice of its arrival has been duly sent or given may be kept in car, depot, or place of delivery of the carrier, or warehouse, subject to a reasonable charge for storage and to carrier's responsibility as warehouseman only," and the property transported remains in the car at its destination nine days after notice given of its arrival and is then destroyed by fire, the liability of the terminal carrier is that of warehouseman, and the initial carrier is liable for the damages negligently arising therefrom. Briggs Hardware Co. v. Aroostook Valley R. Co., (1918) 117 Me. 321, 104 Atl. 8.

4. Nature of Liability (p. 519)

In general.—The initial carrier of live stock, notwithstanding the Interstate Commerce Act and its amendments, is only liable for some default in its common-law duty as a carrier or for some default in the like duty of some of its connecting carriers. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. National Bank of Commerce, (1918) 122 Va. 471, 95 S. E. 454.

Not an insurer.—Under the Carmack amendment a carrier is liable for a default in its common-law duty and not as an insurer. Nabors v. Colorado, etc., R. Co., (Tex. 1919) 210 S. W. 276. See to the same effect, Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Sandlin, (Fla. 1918) 78 So. 667.

Act of God.—The amendment does not attempt to change the common-law rule as to the effect of an act of God in excusing the carrier where loss results proximately therefrom. Barnet v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (1918) 222 N. Y. 195, 118 N. E. 625.

6. Liability for Delay (p. 519)

Delay in transportation.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Erickson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (S. D. 1918) 170 N. W. 144.

7. Wrongful Delivery or Diversion (p. 521)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see French v. Pere Marquette R. Co., (Mich. 1919) 171 N. W. 491; King v. Barbarin, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 249 Fed. 303, 161 C. C. A. 311.

To the same effect as the second paragraph of the original annotation, see Babbitt v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., (1918) 285 Ill. 267, 120 N. E. 803.

(p. 524)

Rule stated.—A connecting or terminal carrier's liability is subject to the same rules as the initial carrier's. Lysaght v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 351.

Limited to personal negligence.—A connecting carrier is not liable for the negligence of any other connecting carrier, but is liable for any damage which can be traced to its own negligence. Gray v. Colorado Southern R. Co., (Tex. 1918) 204 S. W. 347.

An intermediate carrier is not liable for acts of succeeding carriers. Ocean Steamship Co. v. People's Shoe Co., (Ala. 1919) 81 So. 241, wherein the court said that the Act "affects the liability of the receiving or initial carrier, but does not make the intermediate carrier liable for the acts of other connecting carriers. It makes the initial or receiving carrier the principal, and the other connecting carriers its agents, and makes it liable for the acts of succeeding carriers; but it does not make each of the connecting carriers liable as for the wrongs of any other connecting carrier."

The terminal carrier is liable only for injuries occurring on its own line, but when the goods are received in bad condition the terminal carrier has the burden of showing that the injury did not occur while the goods were in its hands. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Reichardt, (Tex. 1919) 212 S. W. 208.

Plaintiffs' employee forwarded to them at New York city from Batavia, Iowa, a car of bagged hickory nuts. Shipment was made by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad as initial carrier. In due course, the shipment reached destination, the car intact as the first carrier had sealed it, over the line of the principal defendant, the New York Central Railroad Company, as terminal carrier. Claiming a loss of 142 bags of nuts, plaintiffs sued the latter, counting on default of its responsibility as a common carrier of goods. It was held that the accountability created by the Congress of the United States, on the part of the initial carrier of goods in interstate commerce, does not preclude the right to enforce responsibility against the particular carrier on whose line loss, damage, or injury was occasioned. Indeed, the statute expressly preserves such right. To maintain the action, when the suit is against other than the initial carrier, the evidence must establish the fact not merely that there was loss, damage or injury to the shipment in the course of its transportation in interstate commerce, but that such loss, damage, or injury was caused by the carrier named as defendant. Lewis Poultry Co. v. New York Cent. R. Co., (1914) 117 Me. 482, 105 Atl. 109.

A common-law action against the last of several connecting carriers, to recover for injury or damage to a shipment of freight in the course of interstate transportation, where the injury or damage complained of was caused by the negligence of the last connecting carrier, is not prohibited by the terms of the Carmack amendment. Under this amendment the lawful holder of the bill of lading issued by the initial carrier for freight to be transported in interstate commerce may maintain his common-law action against any one of several connecting carriers for loss or injury on its own line. Southern R. Co. v. Morris, (1918) 147 Ga. 729, 95 S. E. 284.

Not liquidated by judgment against initial carrier.—A judgment against the initial carrier does not liquidate the liability of the terminal carrier so as to make it subject to garnishment by a creditor of the holder of the bill of lading. Southern R. Co. v. Hodgson Bros. Co., (Ga. 1919) 98 S. E. 541.

Pleading.—In a suit for damages against a carrier other than the initial carrier, it must be alleged that the injury to the shipment of freight was caused by the negligence of the defendant to the action. Southern R. Co. v. Morris, (1918) 147 Ga. 729, 95 S. E. 284.

XI. JOINT LIABILITY OF INITIAL AND CONNECTING CARRIERS (p. 524)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Bassett v. Chicago, etc., (1919) 168 Wis. 617, 171 N. W. 749, 752.

XII. LIMITATION OF LIABILITY

1. In General (p. 524)

Effect of Cummins amendment.—"This statute, approved March 4, 1915, retains so much of the Carmack amendment as requires, in interstate commerce, the issuance of a through bill of lading by the initial carrier and making such carrier liable for any loss, damage or injury to a shipment of that character, caused either by such initial carrier or any connecting carrier and, in addition, makes such carrier liable, whether a bill of lading has been issued or not, for the full actual loss or damage or injury to such property caused by it, etc., 'notwithstanding any limitation of liability or limitation of the amount of recovery or representation or agreement as to value in any such receipt or bill of lading, etc., or in any contract, rule, regulation or in any tariff filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission; and any such limitation, without respect to the manner and form in which it is sought to be made, is hereby declared to be unlawful and void.' The single restriction, as to the effect of this very sweeping provision, is that, if the goods are 'hidden from view by wrapping, boxing, or other means, and the carrier is not notified as to the character of the goods the carrier may require the shipper to . . . state in writing the value of the goods, and the carrier shall not be liable beyond the amount so specifically stated.' While the statute recognizes the right of the carrier, in proper instances, to stipulate for the presentation and filing of claims within a stated period, restricting such rights to a minimum period of ninety days in the one case and four months in the other, the last clause of this amendatory act provides that: 'If the loss, damage, or injury complained of was due to delay or damage while being loaded or unloaded, or damaged in transit by carelessness or negligence, then no notice nor filing of claim shall be required as a condition precedent to recovery.' The verdict having established that the loss and damage complained of in the present instance was caused by the negligence of the connecting carrier, the plaintiff's claim comes clearly within the express terms of the statute, and defendant is thereby deprived of any defense which might arise from failure of plaintiff to give the notice." Mann v. Fairfield, etc., Transp. Co., (1918) 176 N. C. 104, 96 S. E. 731.

Property not hidden from view.—Under the Cummins Act it is only when property is hidden from view by wrapping, etc., and the carrier is not notified of its character, that the carrier may require a statement of value. Thompson v. Great Northern R. Co., (1918) 31 Idaho 492, 174 Pac. 607, holding that a declaration of the shipper that the shipment consisted of household goods was sufficient to preclude the requirement of a binding statement of value.

Limitation to loss occurring on initial line.—A restriction of liability in the bill of lading to loss or injury sustained before the goods reach the terminus of the line of the initial carrier is invalid. Reidsville Paper Box Co. v. Southern Ry., (N. C. 1919) 99 S. E. 23.

Construction of contract.—In Cudahy Packing Co. v. Bixby, (Mo. 1918) 205 S. W. 865, it was said of a bill of lading made under the Act: "It is not the same as the ordinary private contract with which no one, except the immediate parties, is concerned. It is an interstate shipping contract, made under and pursuant to the National Commerce Act, and therefore must be regarded, construed, and enforced in the light of that act and in view of the broad governmental policies it was designed to set up and enforce."

2. Exemption from Negligence (p. 525)

Stipulation void—Cummins Act.—A stipulation against liability for damages caused by the carrier's negligence is invalid under the Cummins amendment. Bevens Bros. v. Atlantic Coast R. Co., (N. C. 1918) 97 S. E. 215.

Loss by fire not due to negligence may be stipulated against where a reduced rate is given. Borneman v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., (1919) 145 La. —, 81 So. 882.

Telegraph companies, although brought under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission by the Act of June 18, 1910, are not within the restrictions imposed on limitation of liability. Merriweather v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1919) 183 Ky. 710, 210 S. W. 190.

See also supra, p. 568, as to right of interstate telegraph company to limit liability.

3. Agreed Valuation (p. 526)

In general.—"Under the Act every initial carrier is required 'to issue a receipt or bill of lading' upon receipt of a shipment, which constitutes the contract between the shipper and all the carriers. Under the Act the parties may agree upon a valuation of the property shipped for the purpose of charging the published rates prescribed under the Act based upon valuation and a carrier is obligated to charge such rates to carry out the purposes of Congress in regulating interstate transportation to secure uniformity of rate and prevent unjust discrimination. Such published rates are presumed to be equally within the knowledge of carrier and shipper, and both are bound by them as a matter of law." Bassett v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1919) 168 Wis. 617, 171 N. W. 749, 752.

"The Carmack amendment to the Hepburn Act of 1906 makes the carrier liable for some value, as we understand the decisions of the United States Supreme Court." Hill Mfg. Co. v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., (1918) 117 Miss. 548, 78 So. 187.

Presumptions.—While an interstate carrier may, by a fair, open, and reasonable agreement, limit the amount recoverable by the shipper to an agreed value made for the purpose of obtaining the lower of two or more rates proportioned to the amount of the risk, and knowledge of the shipper that the rate is based on value is to be presumed from the terms of the bill of lading and of the published schedules filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the effect of so filing the schedules makes the published rates binding upon shipper and carrier alike, requirements of the Interstate Commerce Law as to the filing and publication of such schedules are not applicable, and no such presumption arises when property is being transported free under the provision of section 22 (see vol. 4, p. 539) that nothing therein shall prevent the carriage of property free or at reduced rates to or from fairs and expositions for exhibition thereat. De Bow v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., (1918) 21 Ga. App. 732, 95 S. E. 261.

Alternative rate on file.—"The shipper has the right to have the carrier carry his goods on the common-law liability, and before the carrier can exonerate itself from this liability it must have an alternative rate on file with the commission and at its station where the goods are tendered for shipment." Hill Mfg. Co. v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., (1918) 117 Miss. 548, 78 So. 187.

4. Notice of Claim (p. 529)

In general.—To the same effect as the original annotation see: Southern Pac. Co. v. Stewart, (1919) 248 U. S. 446, 39 St. Ct. 139, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 233 Fed. 956, and following Southern Pac. Co. v. Stewart, 245 U. S. 359, 38 S. Ct. 130, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 345, which reversed (1915) St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Starbird, 118 Ark. 485, 177 S. W. 912; Nashville, etc., R. Co.

v. Camper, (Ala. 1918) 78 So. 925. See Keeney v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 183 Ia. 522, 167 N. W. 475; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Ladd, (Okla. 1919) 178 Pac. 125.

The parties to an interstate shipment of live stock may validly stipulate that no liability shall be incurred to the shipper for loss or damage unless a verified written claim be made and delivered to the general freight agent within five days after unloading, and such stipulation is not satisfied by prompt advisement of the carrier's agent at final destination of all essential facts. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Leach, (1919) 249 U. S. 217, 39 S. Ct. 254, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 173 Ky. 452, 191 S. W. 310, wherein Mr. Justice Clarke dissenting said: "Permit me to add that the many cases coming into this and other courts show that this five-day limitation is unreasonably short, and in my judgment, for this reason, it should be declared void upon its face. Certainly it should not be made a favorite of the law and extended beyond its strict terms, in presence of the Act of Congress approved March 4, 1915, c. 176, 38 Stat. 1196, declaring that where in such suit the 'damage or injury complained of was due to delay . . . or damage in transit by carelessness or negligence, then no notice of claim nor filing of claim shall be required as a condition precedent to recovery.' While the case before us arose prior to the passing of this act, it is an important declaration of public policy by Congress, which should not be overlooked."

Negligence in transporting live stock.—Where a shipping contract for an interstate shipment of horses is similar in its terms to the provision of this section regarding notice of claim for damage in transit caused by negligence and carelessness, notice is unnecessary for loss occasioned by such cause. Hailey v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., (D. C. Idaho 1918) 253 Fed. 569.

Time for filing claim.—In Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Martindale, (Ark. 1919) 213 S. W. 777, it was said with respect to the third proviso: "Our interpretation of this amendment is that it prevents the carriers on interstate shipments from contracting with shippers for notice of claims on account of loss, damage, or injury to the subject-matter of the shipment in a shorter time than 90 days, or for filing claims in a shorter period than four months, or for the institution of suits on claims for a shorter period than two years. The language is plain and unambiguous. The object and purpose of the act was to protect shippers against the short time for giving notices of claims on account of loss, damage, or injury to the subject of shipment imposed by carriers on them in bills of lading or contracts of shipment. Appellant, however, seeks to uphold the contract clause in the instant case because it applies to a notice regarding loss or injury, and not to a notice of claim. In other words, it is asserted that the Cummins amendment only prevents carriers from contracting for a notice of the claim in a shorter period than ninety days, and does not affect their right to contract for a notice regarding loss or injury. The claim must necessarily be founded upon the loss or injury, and the word 'claim' used in the amendment is broad enough to cover loss or injury. Any other construction would deprive the shipper of the protection intended by the act. We can see no good reason for preventing a carrier from contracting for a notice of claim in a shorter period than ninety days and permitting it to contract for notice of loss or injury when the shipment reaches its destination. We do not think the statute intended such a distinction."

Sufficiency of notice.—A notice stating that goods arrived in poor condition, making no claim for damages and containing no intimation that the carrier was at fault or that reimbursement was demanded, is not sufficient. Cudahy Packing Co. v. Bixby, (Mo. 1918) 205 S. W. 865.

Waiver of notice.—A provision of the contract for notice of claim cannot be waived by the carrier. Olson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 372, 162 C. C. A. 442; Cudahy Packing Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Mo. 1918) 201 S. W. 596; Cudahy Packing Co. v. Bixby, (Mo. 1918) 205 S. W. 865; Mexico Northwestern R. Co. v. Williams, (Tex. 1919), 208 S. W. 712.

Where a shipper enters into a valid contract with the carrier for an interstate shipment of live stock, by the terms of which he agrees that no suit or action against the carrier for loss, damage, or delay to the shipment shall be sustained unless such suit or action is commenced within six months after the cause of action shall occur, the carrier cannot waive the terms of the contract, nor ignore those terms applicable to the conduct of the shipper; a different view would antagonize the plain policy of the act and open the door to the very abuses at which the act was aimed. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Patterson, (Okla. 1919), 182 Pac. 701.

5. Time for Bringing Suit (p. 532)

Validity of limitation.—Under the Carmack amendment, which furnishes the exclusive rule on the subject of the liability of the carrier under contracts for interstate shipment, a stipulation in a contract for an interstate shipment of live stock, providing that no suit or action against the carrier shall be sustained in any court of law or equity "unless such suit or action shall be commenced within six months next after the loss or damage shall have occurred," and that the failure to institute suit within said time shall be a complete bar to such suit, is a reasonable provision and binding upon the parties to such contract. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Cooper, (Okla. 1918), 175 Pac. 539; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Bentley, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 250; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Patterson, (Okla. 1919), 182 Pac. 701.

Estoppel to rely on stipulation.—Connecting carriers of an interstate shipment cannot be prevented by estoppel or otherwise from relying upon a provision in the bill of lading issued by the initial carrier, conformably to the Carmack amendment, that suits for damages must be brought within six months after the loss occurs, although such connecting carriers exacted from the shipper, as a condition of carriage over their lines, new bills of lading which did not contain any such limitation as to time for suit,—at least, where the shipper repudiates the new bills of lading issued by the connecting roads. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Leatherwood, (1919) 250 U. S. 478, 39 S. Ct. 517, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —. This case was not affected by the Cummins Act now in force in place of the Carmack amendment and which prohibits a common carrier from providing by contract or otherwise for a shorter period than two years for the institution of suits.

XIV. VENUE (p. 534)

State laws control.—The Carmack amendment which fixes a liability on the initial carrier for loss or injury to goods, does not purport to deal with the venue of actions to enforce such liability; and the question of venue, which is determined by state laws, is not affected thereby. Central of Ga. R. Co. v. Touchstone, (1919) 148 Ga. 861, 98 S. E. 485.

XV. PARTIES (p. 535)

In general.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Babbitt v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., (1918) 285 Ill. 267, 120 N. E. 803.

Substitution of stockholders for corporation.—Where a corporation sues under the Carmack amendment and it appears that the bill of lading was issued not to the corporation but to stockholders owning practically all the stock, the substitution of those stockholders for the corporation will not be permitted. Norfolk Southern R. Co. v. Greenwick Corp., (1918) 122 Va. 631, 95 S. E. 389.

XVI. PLEADING (p. 535)

A redundant allegation such as a denial of notice of claim in a case where notice is unnecessary, will be stricken out. Hailey v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., (D. C. Idaho 1918) 253 Fed. 589.

XVII. TRIAL.

1. Burden of Proof (p. 535)

In *Barnet v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (1918) 222 N. Y. 195, 118 N. E. 625, the court having before it the question of burden of proof said: "In both the state and the United States courts where proof is given that goods are damaged in the hands of the carrier, the burden is upon him to show that the damage arose from some cause for which he was not liable. They differ, however, in this: In the United States courts where the carrier shows that the loss was occasioned by the act of God he has done all that is required. If the shipper then claims that the carrier's negligence also directly contributed to the injury, he must show that fact. In New York, on the other hand, the burden is upon the carrier to show both the act of God and his own freedom from contributing negligence. Michaels v. New York Cent. R. Co., (1864) 30 N. Y. 564, 86 Am. Dec. 415; Read v. Spaulding, (1864) 30 N. Y. 630, 86 Am. Dec. 426. That is the only distinction. Both jurisdictions hold that the act of God to relieve the carrier must be the immediate, direct, and efficient cause of the loss. Neither excuses him if his own negligence also directly and proximately contributes to the result. They may have differed as to when negligence did so directly contribute, as in the case of delays. Not as to the rule, only as to its application. . . . As to the question of proximate cause, when we have to do with interstate shipments we must follow the United States courts. If, however, the rule as to the burden of proof is simply a rule as to procedure and evidence we should be guided by our own precedents. For some purposes it has been so held by us. Sackheim v. Pigueron, (1915) 215 N. Y. 62, 109 N. E. 109. But in determining the boundary between state and federal jurisdiction the Supreme Court has held it to be a rule of substance. Southern R. Co. v. Prescott, (1916) 240 U. S. 632, 36 S. Ct. 469, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 836; Central Vermont R. Co. v. White, (1915) 238 U. S. 507, 35 S. Ct. 865, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1433, Ann. Cas. 1916B 252. We are bound by the federal decisions as the shipment was interstate. The case was tried upon this theory. The jury was charged that the burden was on the plaintiff to establish the defendant's negligence. This was right."

The Carmack amendment does not cast upon the shipper the burden of proving affirmatively that a loss which occurred on a connecting line was "caused by" the connecting carrier. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Collins Produce Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 186, 39 S. Ct. 189, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 857, 149 C. C. A. 169), wherein the court said: "Assuming that the question is presented by the record, which is doubtful, Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Wallace, (1912) 223 U. S. 481, 491, [32 S. Ct. 205, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 516, 523], rules that, under the act as construed in Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, (1911) 219 U. S. 186, 205, 206 [31 S. Ct. 164, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 167, 182, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 7], in such a case as we have here the liability of the initial carrier is as if the shipment had been between stations in different states, but both upon its own line, and this renders the contention untenable. Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, (1913) 226 U. S. 491 [33 S. Ct. 148, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 314, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 257], does not conflict with this conclusion. Cincinnati, etc., Pac. R. Co. v. Rankin, (1916) 241 U. S. 319, 326 [36 S. Ct. 555, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1022, 1026, L. R. A. 1917a, 265].

2. Sufficiency of Evidence (p. 535)

Loss caused by "the authority of the law."

—A carrier's failure to carry and deliver an interstate shipment is not excused as having been caused by "the authority of law," within the meaning of an exception in the bill of lading, if the carrier by false representations, or by representations which though not intentionally false were not known to be true, procured the appropriation of the shipment by military authority, and, but for such confiscation, the shipment, or some part of it, in the exercise of ordinary care, could have been transported to destination. Chicago, etc., R. Co., v. Collins Produce Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 188, 39 S. Ct. 189, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 857, 149 C. C. A. 169.

Value of goods shipped from Germany to the United States may be proven by consular invoices under R. S. sec. 2852, 2855, 2862 (see vol. 2, p. 998 et seq.). Vogel v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1919) 168 Wis. 567, 171 N. W. 198.

XVIII. DAMAGE (p. 535)

Invoice value.—Where the bill of lading given under the Carmack amendment provides that the "loss or damage for which any carrier is liable shall be computed on the basis of the value of the property (being the bona fide invoice price, if any, to the consignee . . . [etc.])" the invoice price and not the market value at destination is the basis from which damage must be estimated. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Reichardt, (Tex. 1919) 212 S. W. 208.

Effect of Cummins Act.—The enactment after loss and before suit therefor of the Cummins Act providing for the recovery of the "full actual loss, damage or injury" does not affect the rights of the parties under a bill of lading given under the Carmack amendment providing that the invoice price shall be the basis from which loss shall be computed. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Reichardt, (Tex. 1919) 212 S. W. 208.

The Cummins amendment renders invalid a stipulation in the bill of lading, that if goods are lost in transit they shall be valued at the place of shipment. McCaull-Dinsmore Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Minn. 1915) 252 Fed. 664.

Vol. IV, p. 536, sec. 20 (L). [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 274.]

Recovery over by initial carrier.—This section imposes upon an interstate carrier voluntarily receiving property for transportation from a point in one state to a point in another state liability to the holder of a bill of lading for loss anywhere en route with a right, when sued with a connecting carrier for loss occurring upon its line, by cross-petition to recover over against the connecting carrier for the amount of such loss or damage evidenced by the judgment against it. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Elk City First Nat.

Bank, (Okla. 1918) 171 Pac. 467, wherein the court said: "'Required to pay' does not mean that the judgment must be paid as a condition precedent to the right to recover, as contended. 'Required,' when used in this connection, means asked to pay or asked of right and by authority of law to pay (U. S. v. Armour, [N. D. Ill. 1906] 142 Fed. 808, 822), as evidenced by the judgment in this case in favor of plaintiff and against the Wichita Falls & Northwestern Railway Company, and not by the actual payment of said judgment."

Recovery over by terminal carrier.—A terminal carrier against whom a recovery based on its negligence is had cannot recover over against prior carriers. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. West, (Tex. 1919) 207 S. W. 918.

Vol. IV, p. 539, sec. 22. [First ed., vol. III, p. 851.]

I. Discrimination in rates.

II. Reservation of existing remedies.

I. DISCRIMINATION IN RATES (p. 541)

Carriage for federal government.—In view of the Interstate Commerce Act, § 22, providing the statute shall not prevent carriage, storage, or handling of property free or at reduced rates for federal, state, or municipal governments, and of the constitution of Louisiana of 1913, art. 287, special services rendered the United States government by a railroad in handling carloads of coal from its yards in a single case of emergency, were held not acts of illegal discrimination against a private shipper over another line, desiring to use the terminal facilities of the road, even though the services for the government were gratuitous. Miller Engineering Co. v. Louisiana R., etc., Co., (1919) 144 La. 786, 81 So. 314.

II. RESERVATION OF EXISTING REMEDIES (p. 541)

Effect of proviso.—Section 22 simply reserves to the shipper his remedies existing at common law or by statute in so far as they do not conflict with provisions of the Act; that is to say, where no administrative question is involved. Where the shipper does not invoke the aid of the commission, he may prosecute his common law or statutory remedies. Where he applies to the commission he must proceed in accordance with the Act. Petition of Southern Lumber Co., (Tenn. 1919) 210 S. W. 639.

Vol. IV, p. 549, sec. 1 (A). [First ed., vol. X, p. 170.]

II. Nature and purpose.

IV. Carriers, etc., liable.

VI. Willfulness and knowledge.

VIII. Rebates.

IX. Concession or discrimination.

XI. Indictment.

II. NATURE AND PURPOSE (p. 550)

Suspension during federal control.—The operation of this Act was not suspended by the presidential proclamation of December 26, 1917, whereby the President as a war measure assumed control of the railroads of the country under the authority of the Act of August 29, 1916 (9 Fed. Stat. Ann. 1095). U. S. v. Metropolitan Lumber Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 254 Fed. 335.

IV. CARRIERS, ETC., LIABLE (p. 552)

Consignee as "shipper."—Where consignees exercise such direct control over shipments as enables them, by their own acts, to procure for themselves discriminations in respect to transportation service, they are "shippers" within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Metropolitan Lumber Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 254 Fed. 335, the court stating that the language of the Act "every person or corporation, whether carrier or shipper" indicates an intent that the Act shall not be confined to such shippers only as occupy the position of consignors.

VI. WILFULNESS AND KNOWLEDGE (p. 553)

"Bearing in mind the purpose which Congress had in mind in enacting the Elkins Act, as before set forth, and considering, as will be hereafter shown, that a construction such as defendants urge would in many cases defeat that purpose, and further bearing in mind that one of the ways in which it was sought to eliminate all favoritism and inequality of treatment was by visiting criminal punishment on those who would be the beneficiaries thereof, it would be unjustifiable, I think, in the absence of language from which it can be clearly found, to attribute to Congress an intention to limit the operation of the Act to only such transactions as are consciously participated in by both the shipper and the carrier." U. S. v. Metropolitan Lbr. Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 254 Fed. 335.

VIII. REBATES (p. 554)

The mere offer of a rebate, concession, or discrimination, knowingly made by a railroad, is a violation of this section. U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 332. The court said: "To constitute the crime it is not necessary that the railroad should 'offer' and the shipper 'accept' the discrimination. The mere offer of the rebate, concession, or discrimination, knowingly made by the railroad, is one of the offenses denounced by the statute. The proof may show that the unlawful agreement was that there should be given, and at the same time received, the discrimination complained of. If the proof so develops, the trial judge can deal with the question as he may be advised, and will consider that he is not to be hampered by this memorandum opinion. Here, however, the question must be dealt with as it appears on the face of the indictment.

The indictment charges, not only that the railroad and its duly authorized agent and the shippers conspired, but makes as parties to the conspiracy the oldtime 'divers other persons to the grand jurors unknown.' In many conspiracy cases these 'divers other persons' unknown to the grand jury never appear and are never mentioned; but the court, in passing on the indictment, must assume that there are such divers other and unknown persons. I think the indictment is good, and the demurrer is overruled."

IX. CONCESSION OR DISCRIMINATION (p. 555)

Permit during embargo.—This section forbids the giving or receipt of a discriminatory permit during an embargo regardless of whether it affects transportation rates or charges. U. S. v. Metropolitan Lumber Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 254 Fed. 335. The court said: "It needs no argument to demonstrate that there is fully as much room for the exercise of favoritism and resulting inequality in the granting or withholding of transportation service or facilities as there is in the matter of compensation to be paid for such service, for as was said by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the matter of The New England Investigation, 27 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 560, 616, 'service is often of even greater importance than the rate itself.' This is especially manifest when there exists an embargo, such as the indictments in these cases allege. Hence, bearing in mind that the purpose of Congress in passing the Elkins Act was to utterly eliminate every form or kind of discrimination, favoritism, and inequality, it is quite impossible to believe that when Congress used the broad and comprehensive language which it did, 'whereby any other advantage is given or discrimination is practiced,' it intended to cover only advantages or discriminations in the matter of rates or compensation for transportation service. If discrimination in rates was the only evil aimed at, why were the words above quoted added? Discrimination in respect to rates had been as completely covered as the English language is capable of, by the use of the words 'whereby any such property shall by any device whatever be transported at a less rate,' etc. The purpose of Congress being ascertained, and it being apparent that to permit discriminations in transportation service would thwart that purpose, and the language used in the Act being amply sufficient to embrace such discriminations, it seems to me that the conclusion is irresistible that such a discrimination as is complained of in these indictments is within the criminal provisions of the Elkins Act."

Mere issue of a discriminatory permit for transportation during an embargo, with no transportation thereunder is not an offense. U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 332. The court said: "This indictment contains ten counts, and may be subdivided into two heads—those counts numbered 1 to 5 inclusive, and those numbered 6 to 10 inclusive. As to counts 1 to 5 inclusive, the indictment sets forth that there was an embargo in respect of the transportation of hay, and that hay would not be transported for shippers by the Lehigh unless a permit or authorization for such transportation was obtained from Signer, acting for the Lehigh; that the Schaefers received such permits, while others similarly situated did not, even though these others requested such permits or authorization. The mere receiving of permits, unaccompanied by transportation, is not a crime under the Act; for the Act provides that it is unlawful to 'offer, grant or give . . . any rebate, concession or discrimination in respect to the transportation of any property in interstate . . . commerce.' If there is no transportation, the mere giving of a permit is an idle act, although the case might be different if the railroad 'offered' to transport."

A permit to ship goods during an embargo may constitute a discrimination though no other person similarly situated applied for a permit. U. S. v. Metropolitan Lbr Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 254 Fed. 335, wherein the court said: "When the embargo was laid, every person desiring to avail himself of transportation facilities within the area of the embargo had a right to presume that it would be enforced. I do not think, therefore, that it would be necessary, in order to show the receipt of discriminations on the part of the defendants, that others had actually applied for transportation service similar to that which the defendants received, and had been denied it; it would be sufficient to show the promulgation of the embargo, the desire of the others to ship, the fact that they did not do so or attempt to do so, by reason of the embargo, and the method by which the defendants procured transportation service in violation of the embargo. I think the remarks of Judge Hazel, in United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 Fed. 598, 607 (D. C. W. D. N. Y.), support this view. The indictment in United States v. Hanley [71 Fed. 672] was framed under section 2 of the Act to regulate commerce, long before the Elkins Act was passed, and the objection was that it did not allege that the rebate which had been given to the defendant had been denied to others similarly situated. The fact that there were other shippers of lumber, who desired to avail themselves of transportation facilities while the embargo was in force, and who did not do so by reason of the embargo, coupled with the means by which the defendants did procure such service, readily distinguishes this case from the Hanley case."

In a prosecution for a violation of this section in obtaining a discrimination in transportation service during and in violation of an embargo authorized by the Director General of Railroads, it is no defense that the embargo was not submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission and its reasonableness ascertained and adjudicated by that body, or that the commission had not first determined that the defendants' actions constituted a violation of the embargo. U. S. v. Metropolitan Lumber Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 254 Fed. 335, wherein the court said: "It is further urged that the defendants cannot be prosecuted in the absence of proceedings before or previous action by the Interstate Commerce Commission. This proposition seems to be based on two theories. It is first claimed that the embargo should have been submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and its reasonableness ascertained and adjudicated by that body. The obvious answer is that the reasonableness of the embargo is not in issue in these cases; but the question is whether the defendants have knowingly received a discrimination or concession in transportation service which a strict and impartial enforcement of the embargo would not have permitted them to receive. If the railroad company were being prosecuted for having given, or the defendants for having received, discriminations by means of or through the embargo rather than by violating it, in all probability the defendants' contention would be well taken, for in such a case the question would be whether the embargo was reasonable, or whether it produced unjust and unreasonable discriminations among shippers. In that event an administrative question would probably be presented, which, under the decisions of the Supreme Court, must be passed on by the Interstate Commerce Commission prior to the institution of either 'civil or criminal proceedings. . . . In the cases at bar the defendants are charged, not with having secured discriminations through or by means of the embargo, but in violation of it; therefore, the reasonableness of the embargo is not in question. There would be nothing for the Interstate Commerce Commission, so far as any action on their part could affect the issues in this case, to pass upon."

Guaranty of train connections.—A statement by a station agent to a shipper that a certain train would stop to take on cattle, on the strength of which the shipper brought his cattle to the station, is not a preference in violation of the Elkins Act. It was so held in an action by the shipper for damages for failure to stop the train specified. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Stallings, (1918) 132 Ark. 446, 201 S. W. 294.

XI. INDICTMENT (p. 557)

Failure to collect demurrage.—Indictments which merely allege that a railroad has failed to collect demurrage and that shippers have not paid it, do not charge a violation of this section. U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 332. The court said: "Stripped of indictment language, all that these indictments amount to is a charge in one indictment that the railroads have not collected demurrage and a charge in the other indictment that the shippers have not paid it. The use of the word 'unlawfully' does not help out, because this is merely a conclusion. While, under certain circumstances, a device need not be set forth in the indictment, yet when, in point of fact, it is set forth, the court can determine whether such device is of a character to constitute or help constitute the crime charged. Of course it is plain that what is sought to be shown is that there was an agreement or understanding by which demurrage should not be collected; but these indictments do not set forth an agreement, but are drawn in such a way as to amount merely to charging that the railroad has not collected certain accrued and proper charges and that the shipper has not paid them. The demurrer to each of these indictments is sustained."

President's consent to laying embargo.—An indictment for a violation of this section in obtaining a discriminatory permit during an embargo laid by the railroad while under federal control, which alleges that the Director General of Railroads consented to the embargo, is sufficient in its averment of the authority to declare the embargo. U. S. v. Metropolitan Lumber Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 254 Fed. 335. The court said: "It is also urged that the railroad officials were without authority to lay the embargo, because the railroad had passed under the control of the President, and that the Pennsylvania Railroad was thereafter, as a corporate entity, powerless to act either in respect to laying an embargo or in granting discriminations or concessions. Hence it is argued that the indictments are defective, because they allege that the discriminations were received from the 'Pennsylvania Railroad,' and because the embargo was laid by it, notwithstanding that they also allege that the embargo was authorized by the Director General. It was, of course, intended by Congress that the President should, in the performance of the duties imposed upon him by the Act of August 29, 1917, act through agents. In the proclamation of December 26, 1917, he provided that the Director General of Railroads should perform the duties imposed upon him (which were the duties imposed upon the President, after he had assumed control) 'so long and to such extent as he shall determine, through the boards of directors, receivers, officers and employees of said systems of transportation.' The embargo, therefore, was laid through the agency which the President had created, and the discriminations or concessions were given or granted by those charged by him with the conducting of the Pennsylvania Railroad system of transportation, and that is what I construe the indictments to charge. They are entitled to receive a fair and reasonable construction."

car. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Gage, (Ark. 1918) 206 S. W. 141.

Receiving stolen goods.—Retaining character as stolen goods.—In Copertino v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 519, it appeared that property stolen while in transit was found by a railroad detective who secreted himself near by to watch and who arrested the accused when he came about an hour later to remove it. It was held that the discovery by the detective and his subsequent acts did not reinvest the carrier with possession of the stolen goods.

Constructive possession of goods stolen while in the course of interstate commerce is sufficient to justify a conviction for a violation of this section. Thus, where silk stolen from an express company while in interstate commerce was offered for sale to a saloon keeper by employees of the company, and he directed them to drive to a certain place and throw it off their wagon, which they did on signal from the accused who had preceded them, it was held that the saloon keeper's constructive possession of the goods through his agents was sufficient to justify a conviction under this section. U. S. v. Le Fanti, (D. C. N. J. 1919) 255 Fed. 210.

Possession by thief.—One who stole the goods found in his possession may be convicted of receiving and having them in possession. U. S. v. Sullivan, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 250 Fed. 632.

Belief that goods were either embezzled or stolen is sufficient to support a conviction for receiving the goods in violation of this section where the proof demonstrates that they were actually stolen as distinguished from embezzled. U. S. v. Le Fanti, (D. C. N. J. 1919) 255 Fed. 210.

Former conviction in state court.—In U. S. v. Porria, (W. D. Wash. 1918) 255 Fed. 172, the facts and holding were stated as follows:

"Count 1 charges larceny of property moving in interstate commerce, and count 2 with receiving property stolen while moving in interstate commerce. The conviction in the state court was upon the charge of—'did . . . receive and aid in concealing and withholding . . . the same property.'

"The protection intended is against second jeopardy for the same offense. Do the charges in the indictment require different or additional proof to that required in the state court? Is this charge the same in law and in fact? Consideration of the indictment and consideration of the charge and judgment of conviction in the state court bring the inevitable conclusion that the same character and degree of proof will be necessary to sustain count 2 of the indictment as was necessary to sustain the conviction in the state court. The same may not be said as to count 1, where a felonious taking, stealing and carrying away must be established. Every issue here presented was determined by the Supreme Court in Gavieres v. United States, 220 U. S. 338, 31 Sup. Ct. 421, 55 L. Ed. 489."

Indictment.—In Greenberg v. U. S. (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 728, 165 C. C. A. 322, the indictment was set out as follows:

Par.

- 1 in the county of St. Clair, in the state of Illinois, in the Eastern District aforesaid and within the jurisdiction of said court,
- 2 did unlawfully and feloniously break the seal of a certain railroad car then and there bearing the name and number to wit: "Southern 38005."
- 3 which said car then and there contained an interstate shipment of freight, to wit: a large quantity of cigarettes,
- 4 then and there consigned and in transit from Winston-Salem, in the state of North Carolina, to Paris, and Peoria, in the state of Illinois, and Baguella, Saint Louis, and Kansas City, in the state of Missouri,
- 5 which said railroad car was then and there in the possession of the Southern Railway Company, a corporation and common carrier then and there being,
- 6 with the unlawful and felonious intent then and there in them, the said [here naming all the defendants] and each of them, to then and there commit larceny in said car.

Holding it to be sufficient, the court said: "The attack upon the sufficiency of the indictment to set forth a crime arises out of the use of the word 'there' in the fifth paragraph quoted above, it being plaintiff's contention that this word refers to Kansas City, Mo. In other words, it is claimed that the government charged the plaintiffs in error with having stolen a large quantity of cigarettes from a box car in Kansas City, Mo. As we construe this count and the others similarly worded, so far as the use of the word 'there' is concerned, we unhesitatingly conclude that the government charged the plaintiffs in error with unlawfully breaking the seal of a box car located in the county of St. Clair, state of Illinois; that paragraphs 3 and 5 refer back to paragraphs 1 and 2, and contain descriptive clauses modifying the car referred to in paragraph 2. So construed, the indictment is sufficient."

Evidence.—Admissibility.—Evidence that the accused had received similar stolen goods from the same persons on a previous occasion, is admissible in a prosecution under this section for receiving stolen goods. U. S. v. Le Fanti, (D. C. N. J. 1919) 255 Fed. 210.

Sufficiency.—In Greenburg v. U. S. (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 728, 165 C. C. A. 322, the evidence was held to be sufficient, the facts being stated as follows:

"Plaintiffs in error did not testify in their own behalf. The testimony introduced by the government clearly justified the jury in finding: That there was a shipment of cigarettes of the Camel brand from North Carolina to Peoria, Ill.; that the car containing such shipment arrived in East St. Louis on June 9, 1917, seal intact, was there duly checked and found undisturbed; that such car remained in East St. Louis until June 16, 1917, when a new check was made, disclosing a cut seal and a shortage of some 32 cases of cigarettes; that on the night of June 9th or 10th, plaintiffs in error, who made a practice of breaking into box cars and stealing therefrom, selling the loot, and dividing the spoils, broke into several box cars in the yards wherein the car in question was located, and took therefrom many cases of cigarettes, also of the Camel brand, which were later sold to a retailer. It further appears from the record that this car seal was identified as R J R — 6, while the witness who testified against his co-conspirators described the seal of the car that was entered as being R J — 6. This discrepancy in the identification of the seal hardly justifies the argument of the counsel that the testimony affirmatively and conclusively establishes the innocence of his clients. The similarity in the identification marks suggests a corroboration of the witness's other testimony rather than a negation thereof. Taken altogether, the evidence presented a jury question."

In Copertino v. U. S. (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 519 it appeared that certain copper bars were stolen from a freight car, and placed in a cemetery adjacent to the track. The next morning the accused "entered the cemetery and immediately went to the place where the copper was located" and began to load it into an automobile. It was held that the circumstances were sufficient to show knowledge on the part of the accused that the property was stolen.

Scope of cross-examination.—In Heard v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 829, a prosecution for a violation of this section, the court said regarding the scope of cross-examinations: "The rule on this subject in the national courts is that the party in whose behalf a witness is called has the right to restrict his cross-examination to the subjects of his direct examination, and a violation of this right is reversible error. If the cross-examiner would inquire of the witness concerning matters not opened on direct examination, he must call him in his own behalf. Philadelphia & Trenton Railway Co. v. Stimpson, 39 U. S. (14 Pet.) 448, 460, 10 L. Ed. 535; Houghton v. Jones, 1 Wall. 702, 706, 17 L. Ed. 503; Resurrection Gold Mining Co. v. Fortune Gold Mining Co., 129 Fed. 668, 674, 64 C. C. A. 180, and cases there cited; Illinois Central Railway Co. v. Nelson, 212 Fed. 69, 74, 128 C. C. A. 525; Harrold v. Territory of Oklahoma, 169 Fed. 47, 52, 94 C. C. A. 415, 17 Ann. Cas. 868.

It is no answer to a refusal to permit a full cross-examination that the party against whom the witness is called might have made him his own witness, and might then have proved by him or by some other witness, or by some writing, the facts which the cross-examiner was entitled to draw from the testimony of his adversary's witness. No one is bound to make his adversary's witness his own to prove facts which he is lawfully entitled to establish by the cross-examination of that witness. The testimony given by a witness on his cross-examination is the evidence of the party in whose behalf he is called and the cross-examiner has the right to bind his adversary by the truth elicited from his own witness. Wilson v. Wagar, 26 Mich. 457, 458; Campau v. Dewey, 9 Mich. 417, 418; Chandler v. Allison, 10 Mich. 460, 473; New York Mine v. Negaunee Bank, 39 Mich. 644, 660. A full cross-examination of a witness upon the subjects of his examination in chief is the absolute right, not the mere privilege, of the party against whom he is called, and a denial of this right is a prejudicial and fatal error. It is only after the right has been substantially and fairly exercised that the allowance of cross-examination becomes discretionary. Gilmer v. Higley, 110 U. S. 47, 50, 3 Sup. Ct. 471, 28 L. ed. 62; Resurrection Gold Mining Co. v. Fortune Gold Mining Co., 129 Fed. 668, 674-676, 64 C. C. A. 180, and cases there cited;

Safford v. United States, 233 Fed. 495, 501, 503, 147 C. C. A. 381."

Repugnancy in verdict.—"The contention that the verdict is repugnant for the reason that a conviction on count 8 is necessarily inconsistent with a conviction on counts 5, 6, and 7, must fail for want of support in fact. Count 5 charges plaintiffs in error with breaking the seal of a box car; count 6 charges these same parties with entering the box car with intent to steal; while count 7 charges them with having stolen cigarettes from the box car. Count 8, which it is claimed is inconsistent with the other three, charges plaintiffs in error with having in their possession a large quantity of cigarettes. It is quite apparent to us that count 8 is in no way inconsistent with either count 5 or count 6, and it is therefore not even necessary to consider the asserted repugnancy between counts 8 and 7. There being two perfectly good counts, either one of which is sufficient to support the sentence, this assignment of error must be overruled." Greenburg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 728, 165 C. C. A. 322.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS

The Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution supersedes the statutes annotated in this title. For page where Amendment is set out, see Index.

Vol. IV, p. 593. [Shipment of liquors, etc.] [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 208.]

II. Constitutionality.
III. Purpose of statute.

V. State laws.

1. In general.

2. Validity, scope and effect of state laws.

VI. Duties and liabilities of common carriers.

II. CONSTITUTIONALITY (p. 594)

Act sustained.—The Webb-Kenyon law is valid. Ex p. Pratt, (W. Va. 1918) 97 S. E. 301.

III. PURPOSE OF STATUTE (p. 596)

To the same effect as original annotation, see U. S. v. Lazaro, (W. D. Wash. 1918) 255 Fed. 237.

V. STATE LAWS

1. In General (p. 600)

To the same effect as the "compare" decision in the third paragraph of the original annotation, see Stajcar v. Dickinson, (Ia. 1918) 169 N. W. 756, wherein the court said: "The Supreme Court of the United States, in Rhodes v. Iowa, (1898) 170 U. S. 412, 18 S. Ct. 664, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1088, held section 2419 unconstitutional. Although non-enforceable, it remained a part of the statute, and by the enactment of the so-called Webb-

Kenyon Act . . . became operative and enforceable the same as though it had not previously been declared unconstitutional or had been enacted by the legislature subsequent to the passage of the law of Congress. State v. United States Express Co., (1914) 164 Ia. 112, 145 N. W. 451; Miller Brewing Co. v. Stevens, (1897) 102 Ia. 60, 71 N. W. 186."

Since the Webb-Kenyon Act divests interstate shipments of intoxicating liquor of their immunity from state regulation, a state statute prohibiting the importation of liquor is valid. State v. Frazee, (W. Va. 1918) 97 S. E. 604.

The Act is not inconsistent with and does not supersede a state statute prohibiting the bringing of intoxicants into the state. Ex p. Pratt, (W. Va. 1918) 97 S. E. 301.

Laws of Oklahoma are held to make the sale of intoxicants illegal, so that the Webb-Kenyon Act applies to shipments to that state. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Danciger, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 36, 160 C. C. A. 176.

2. Validity, Scope and Effect of State Laws (p. 600)

When state law becomes operative.—A shipment of liquors from one state to another through a third state although by automobile and consequently over public highways is not affected by the liquor laws of the third state, as the shipment is an interstate one. Moragne v. State, (Ala. App. 1918) 78 So. 98.

A statute forbidding railroads to bring intoxicants into the state is valid since the federal Act removes the objection that it interferes with interstate commerce. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. State, (Tex. 1919) 212 S. W. 845.

Ordinances.—Shipments sought to be forbidden by an ordinance, but not in violation of any law of the state, are not prohibited by this Act. West Jersey, etc., R. Co. v. Millville, (1918) 91 N. J. L. 572, 103 Atl. 245.

Liquors passing through state.—In Moragne v. State, (Ala. 1917) 77 So. 322, L. R. A. 1918 E. 948, it was held that the state prohibition statutes as extended by the Webb-Kenyon Act were inapplicable to the transportation of intoxicating liquors through Alabama in transit from Georgia to Florida, and that if such statutes were construed to prohibit the transportation of intoxicating liquors in transit from Georgia to Florida through Alabama they would be unconstitutional.

VI. DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF COMMON CARRIERS (p. 601)

Liability for unlawful delivery.—Under the Act a common carrier has no right to transport and deliver intoxicating liquors into any state in contravention of its local laws. Kirksville v. Warden, (1918) 276 Mo. 105, 207 S. W. 66.

Carriers cannot be compelled to accept illegal shipment. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Danciger, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 36, 160 C. C. A. 176.

1918 Supp., p. 394, sec. 5.

Constitutionality.—This section is constitutional. U. S. v. James, (E. D. Tex. 1918) 256 Fed. 102.

Federal cognizance of state prohibition laws is given by this amendment, which also fixes a penalty for violation. U. S. v. Lazaro, (W. D. Wash. 1918) 255 Fed. 237.

The act is highly penal and is to be strictly construed, and in order to bring a case within its purview it must come within both the spirit and the letter of the Act. "There are no such things as constructive crimes." Sickel v. Com., (Va. 1919) 99 S. E. 678.

Effect on state laws.—This section does not supersede or abrogate a state statute forbidding the bringing of liquor into the state. Ex p. Pratt, (W. Va. 1918) 97 S. E. 301.

See to the same effect Sickel v. Com., (Va. 1919) 97 S. E. 783; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Hanna, (1918) 118 Miss. 40, 78 So. 953.

Necessity of state-wide prohibition.—This section does not apply unless the state, into which intoxicating liquors are transported, shall have prohibited their manufacture or sale throughout the entire state. U. S. v. Collins (W. D. La. 1919) 254 Fed. 869.

Necessity of using instrumentality of interstate commerce.—If the owner of liquor brings it into another state in violation of the law thereof but uses no instrumentality of interstate commerce and intends to use the liquor for his personal purposes he does not violate the federal Act. Sickel v. Com., (Va. 1919) 99 S. E. 678.

"Manufacture or sale."—This section applies to the transportation in interstate commerce of intoxicating liquors into a state where either their manufacture or sale is prohibited, the word "or" not being construed conjunctively. U. S. v. Collins, (W. D. La. 1919) 254 Fed. 869.

Transportation "into" state.—The prohibition of the Reed amendment against transporting intoxicating liquor in interstate commerce "into" any state or territory the laws of which prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes, does not include the movement through a dry state as a mere incident of the transportation to another state, whether such transportation be by personal carriage or by common carrier. U. S. v. Gudger, (1919) 249 U. S. 373, 39 S. Ct. 323, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Transportation of intoxicating liquors in order to be in violation of this section must be "into" a state the laws of which prohibit their manufacture or sale for beverage purposes. "There must be a transportation from a point without the state to a point within the state." U. S. v. Collins, (W. D. La. 1919) 254 Fed. 869.

Transportation of liquor on the person for personal use.—This section applies to the transportation of liquor on the person for personal use, and as so construed is constitutional, and it is immaterial that the state into which it is carried permits the introduction of liquor for personal use in limited quantities. U. S. v. Hill, (1919) 248 U. S. 420, 39 S. Ct. 143, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Transportation of intoxicating liquors by automobile from one state to another is transportation "in interstate commerce" within the meaning of this section. Ex p. Westbrook, (S. D. Fla. 1918) 250 Fed. 636.

Forfeiture of automobile.—A violation of this section by transporting liquor by automobile into a state where its manufacture or sale is prohibited, does not render the automobile liable to forfeiture under Act of March 2, 1917, ch. 146, for such Act relates only to Indian affairs and to the introduction of liquor into Indian country. U. S. v. One Cadillac Eight Automobile, (M. D. Tenn. 1918) 255 Fed. 175.

Sufficiency of indictments.—See Williams v. Boswell, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 889; Sickel v. Com., (Va. 1919) 99 S. E. 678.

Evidence.—In Malcolm v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 256 Fed. 363, it was held that, in a prosecution for a violation of this section in transporting liquor into a prohibition state, evidence of a prior trip made between the same places and by the same parties and as part of the same scheme, was admissible.

Variance.—A variance between the indictment and proof regarding the place from which the liquor was transported, is not fatal. Malcolm v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 26 Fed. 363.

JUDGMENTS

Judgments in criminal cases.—This section applies only to judgments in civil cases, and hence the United States is not entitled hereunder to interest on a judgment imposed as a fine for the violation of a criminal statute. U. S. v. Jacob Schmidt Brewing Co., (D. C. N. D. 1918) 254 Fed. 714.

JUDICIAL OFFICERS

XI. KEEPING BOATS, VESSELS OR OTHER PROPERTY (p. 685)

Agreement as to fees.—Since a marshal's fee for keeping an attached vessel is fixed by this section at $2.50 per day, no agreement is valid by which he may charge more than that sum. The Neptune, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 129, 164 C. C. A. 241.

Charge for raising sunken vessel.—The fee allowed a marshal by this section for keeping attached vessels covers only the cost of the custody proper of the vessel, and if it sinks without his fault, a charge for raising and beaching it is proper. The Neptune, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 129, 164 C. C. A. 241.

Inclusion of poundage in bill of costs.—The clerk should include in the libellant's bill of costs the marshal's poundage, calculated at the lesser rate allowed under subdivision 15 of this section. The Eros, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 45, 163 C. C. A. 295.

Vol. IV, p. 707, sec. 844. [First ed., vol. IV, p. 125.]

Interest moneys accruing on money collected by a clerk for official services rendered, and held by him pending his semi-annual return, do not constitute emoluments of the clerk's office to be accounted for to the United States. U. S. v. MacMillan, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 251 Fed. 55, 163 C. C. A. 305.

JUDICIARY

Vol. IV, p. 829, Jud. Code, sec. 17. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 136.]

Orders by judge while without district.—A district judge designated under this section to hold court in an adjacent district may make an order while without such district directing the drawing of a panel of petit jurors, for the order is one which may be made at the chambers of the judge, and in such case "it is not necessary that it be made within the territorial limits of the district in which the order is to be effective, if it is made where the judge at the time is performing the duties of his office, as the judge's chambers are considered to be where he is, and authorized to be, engaged in performing his judicial duties." Appar v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 16, 166 C. C. A. 344.

A territorial court is not within the purview of this section, which is applicable only to the district courts of the United States and does not extend to the United States District Court for Alaska. Tjosevig v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 5, 166 C. C. A. 333.

Discrediting judge by collateral evidence.—Where no application has been made under this section by a defendant for the transfer of a case to another judge, he cannot introduce evidence of a collateral nature for the purpose of discrediting the judge. Wierse v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 435, 164 C. C. A. 359.

Time of filing affidavit.—In Shea v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 433, 163 C. C. A. 451, it appeared that the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals on the first review of the case was handed down on October 13, 1916. The mandate was received below November 18th following. The then current term of the District Court began October 31st, and in due course the case was assigned for trial December 4th following, or as soon thereafter as it could be taken up. On the date last named, on application of plaintiff in error that the trial be passed for a few weeks, the case was specially set for trial on Monday, January 8, 1917. On Saturday, January 6th, when the jurors were under notice, and witnesses for the government at distant places had been subpoenaed to attend on the following Monday, an affidavit of plaintiff in error, verified on information and belief, but containing formally sufficient averments of the judge's disqualification, was tendered for filing and the tender refused. The certificate of counsel was made by an attorney who had not theretofore appeared in the case. The only reason given for failing to file the affidavit sooner was that the mandate of the Circuit Court of Appeals was not filed in the District Court until after the current term had begun. It was held that the affidavit was filed too late, the court saying: "Assuming, however, for the purposes of this case, that it could not have been filed before the mandate went down, it clearly could and should have been filed at the nearest available time thereafter. The delay in filing, after the mandate issued was in no way explained or accounted for. There is no claim of ignorance of the actual filing of the mandate, or of the announcement of this court's decision more than a month previously. Counsel's appearance had not been entered at the time the affidavit was tendered for filing. Appearance was entered later in the day, but was withdrawn still later in the same day, but after the denial of leave to file affidavit. We do not pass upon the sufficiency of the certificate, nor (though intimating no opinion to the contrary) whether the affidavit in question, made, as it was, on information and belief, was technically sufficient under the statute. We rest our affirmance of the action of the district judge upon the ground that the affidavit of disqualification was not tendered in due season, and that the circumstances were such as to justify belief that the affidavit was purposely held back, and its use on the eve of trial resorted to for the purpose of securing a postponement. The better practice would have been to permit the affidavit to be filed, and then strike it from the file, thus preserving a more complete record. But no prejudice resulted from the specific practice followed."

I. JURISDICTION IN GENERAL.

1. Definition and Nature (p. 845)

The burden of proving lack of jurisdiction falls on the defendant where the plaintiff in his declaration has alleged all the facts essential to federal jurisdiction. Bjornquist v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 929, 163 C. C. A. 179.

2. Judicial Power Granted by Constitution (p. 846)

A District Court's jurisdiction is the creature of the acts of Congress enacted in pursuance of the Constitution, and apart from the powers inherent in a lawfully constituted judicial tribunal, has no jurisdiction other than that legislatively conferred upon it. Venner v. Pennsylvania Steel Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 292.

5. Necessity for Pleading Jurisdiction (p. 847)

The ground of jurisdiction in the District Court is the statement of the suing party of his cause of suit, and there must be substance in it, not mere verbal assertion or the anticipation of defenses. Butte, etc., Copper Co. v. Clark-Montana Realty Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 12, 39 S. Ct. 231, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

8. Effect of State Legislation (p. 848)

Diversity of citizenship.—Where a suit is brought in a District Court by a resident of the district against a foreign corporation on the ground of diversity of citizenship, a state rule of procedure permitting the bringing in of additional defendants may not be invoked for the purpose of enlarging the court's jurisdiction and impleading thereunder a municipality of the state. Devost v. Twin State Gas, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 349, 162 C. C. A. 419.

II. SUITS OF CIVIL NATURE AT COMMON LAW OR EQUITY

2. "Suits" (p. 850)

Probate proceedings.—Proceedings in a probate court to probate a will are not "suits" within the meaning of this section. Thompson v. Nichols, (D. C. Me. 1919) 254 Fed. 973.

4. At Law and Equity

c. "In equity" (p. 853)

Partition of land.—A federal court of equity has jurisdiction to entertain suits for the partition of land where diversity of citizenship exists. Hastings v. Douglass, (N. D. W. Va. 1918) 249 Fed. 378.

6. Administration or Probate (p. 856)

Administration.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Hastings v. Douglass, (N. D. W. Va. 1918) 249 Fed. 378.

Although federal courts will not interfere in the administration of estates of decedents, where it is necessary for the court, through its officers, to lay its hands in any way upon the property, or interfere with the actual administration of the estate, yet where a case is made inter partes, the necessary diversity of citizenship and the jurisdictional amount existing, a federal court can hear a case looking to the determination of the rights of the plaintiff in and to property of a decedent's estate, without in any way interfering with the possession of the property or the management of the estate. Swann v. Austell, (N. D. Ga. 1918) 253 Fed. 807.

Probate.—To same effect as original annotations, see Thompson v. Nichols, (D. C. Me. 1919) 254 Fed. 973.

Establishment of claim.—A suit in equity by the United States to subject to a judgment land which has descended to the heirs of the judgment debtor, is within the jurisdiction of a federal District Court, where it is conceded that the administrator has no personal assets and it is necessary to bring in the decedent's heirs and other parties, such land by the provisions of a state statute not being subject to sale on execution. U. S. r. Minor, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 57, 165 C. C. A. 467.

V. SUITS AFFECTING LANDS UNDER GRANTS FROM DIFFERENT STATES (p. 862)

One who claims title to lands under a grant from one state as land situated in that state, may sue to recover it from citizens of another state who claim under a grant from that other state, in a federal court of the first state, and have the title finally adjudicated by that court. Ferguson v. Babcock Lumber, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 705, 164 C. C. A. 545.

VII. AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY

3. Cases Requiring Jurisdictional Amount

b. Diverse Citizenship (p. 864)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see New York Cent. R. Co. v. Mutual Orange Distributors, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 230, 163 C. C. A. 386; Fuerst v. Polasky, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 447, 162 C. C. A. 13.

4. Necessity of Matter in Dispute Having Pecuniary Value

c. Divorce and Alimony (p. 865)

To same effect as original annotation, see Hastings v. Douglass, (N. D. W. Va. 1918) 249 Fed. 378.

5. Ascertainment of Value of Matter in Dispute (p. 865)

In general.—“It is not the amount claimed in the prayer for relief which determines the jurisdiction of the court, if the unmistakable fact and legal certainty be that the plaintiff could not have had any reasonable expectation that she could recover, exclusive of interest and costs, an amount within the jurisdiction of the court. In such a case it is the duty of the court to dismiss it for want of jurisdiction, although the ad damnum clause demands judgment for a sum sufficient to confer jurisdiction on the court.” New York Life Ins. Co. v. Johnson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 958.

Injunction.—Protection of claimed property right.—In a suit to restrain the defendant from indulging in unfair competition, where there is proof that the plaintiff's property right, sought to be protected, exceeds the jurisdictional amount, a federal court has jurisdiction although the damages recovered are less than that amount. Ury v. Mazer Cigar Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 551, 165 C. C. A. 221.

6. Aggregate of Claims and Joinder (p. 872)

Several claims for fraudulent sales of stock.—A number of suits, each below the jurisdictional amount, against the same defendant for fraudulent sales of stock cannot be joined so as to aggregate the jurisdictional amount and give a federal court jurisdiction to restrain the complainants on the ground of a multiplicity of suits. Robinson v. Wemmer, (N. D. Ohio 1918) 253 Fed. 790.

Assignment of claims.—A creditor who acquires by absolute assignment other claims aggregating with his own over $3,000 may sue in the federal court if diversity of citizenship exists. Kentucky Wagon Mfg. Co. v. Jones, etc., Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 272, 160 C. C. A. 350.

7. Interest and Costs (p. 876)

In a suit by a purchaser of state tax certificates to enjoin a county treasurer from issuing redemption certificates without including interest and costs which had accrued to the date of the purchase, such interest and costs are not within the meaning of those terms as used in this section, where they are not incidental to the amount in controversy but are one of the main items in making up the amount. Glen Invest. Co. v. Romero, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 239, 165 C. C. A. 527.

In a tort action in which it was alleged that the plaintiff was damaged by the purchase of worthless stock, the court said: “The action was one of tort, and the jury might have allowed her an annual percentage, not as collateral interest, but as an element in giving her entire compensation for her loss. Damages of that kind, although computed at a percentage rate and equivalent to contract interest, would not be that ‘interest’ which the jurisdictional statute (then section 1 of Act of March 3, 1887; now section 24, Judicial Code) says must be excluded. Brown v. Webster, 156 U. S. 328, 329, 15 Sup. Ct. 377, 39 L. Ed. 440. With ‘interest’ thus defined and damages thus estimated, the damages might have exceeded $2,000 when the suit was commenced.” Chesbrough v. Woodworth, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 881, 164 C. C. A. 97.

In an action in assumpsit for failure to perform a contract, interest on the amount of the loss by the defendant's breach of contract may be included as part of the damages claimed in determining whether the amount is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction. Central Commercial Co. v. Jones-Dusenbury Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 13, 163 C. C. A. 283.

Where two specific and specified sums were alleged to be due the plaintiff, and were sued for and judgment therefor specifically demanded, “together with interest thereon from” the date when claimed to have become due the plaintiff, it was held that the demand for interest on the sums specifically named was a demand for “interest as such,” and not “an interest calculation as an instrumentality in arriving at the amount of damages to be awarded on the principal demand,” and therefore the amount of interest was not to be added to the principal demand to ascertain the amount in controversy. A. H. Marshall Co. v. Buick Motor Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 685.

Suit by beneficiary of life insurance policy.—Even though there is diversity of citizenship of the parties, a District Court has no jurisdiction of a suit to recover $3,000, with interest, brought by a beneficiary of a life insurance policy against the insurance company, where the policy entitles the beneficiary to that amount but makes no provision for the payment of interest, for in such case the interest is not a part of the principal sum but merely an incident to the recovery allowed as compensation for the withholding of the principal sum. Vorhees v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 484. In distinguishing this case from that of Continental Casualty Co. v. Spradlin, in the original annotation, the court said: “The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit followed Brown v. Webster in the case of Continental Casualty Co. v. Spradlin, supra. The suit in the latter case grew out of an insurance policy similar to the one involved in the case at bar. The company contracted to pay the beneficiary in said policy the sum of $3,000 in case her son, R. D. Spradlin, should receive personal bodily injuries purely from accidental causes within a year from the date of issuance, which injuries, solely and independently of all other causes, resulted in his death. Such injuries were received and death resulted. The company refused to pay. There was no contract to pay interest in the policy. The plaintiff did not sue for the $3,000, the amount due, 'the price' and interest thereon, but 'for breach of contract of assurance,' and laid 'her damages in $3,000,' and demanded judgment for that sum. The court said: 'The action is in assumpsit for damages for failure to perform. The interest, therefore, was not a mere incident or accessory to the amount demanded, but constituted, together with the amount set out in the policy, aggregate damages for the breach.' This case stretches the principle of Brown v. Webster almost to breaking. In this case, so far as can be discovered from the opinion, there is no ground for the damages demanded, except the delayed payment, and such damages are adequately measured, as a general rule, by legal interest, which is called by some courts and writers 'moratory interest.' The form of the action, rather than the substance, seems to be the basis of jurisdiction in Casualty Co. v. Spradlin. There seems to be nothing but amount of the policy and 'moratory interest' constituting the elements of damage in this case, while in Brown v. Webster there was price, interest, eviction, and 'other things,' for all of which interest simply might be a very inadequate measure of damages. So far as the facts appear, demand might have been made for the amount of the policy, $3,000, and interest thereon, in which case federal jurisdiction could not have been maintained. Simmons v. Life Association, supra. In the suit under consideration, the 'plaintiff as beneficiary demands $3,000, with interest thereon.' Since the insurance policy upon which suit is based does not provide for interest, the plaintiff is in fact asking for 'moratory interest.'

8. Pleading Amount by Plaintiff

a. Necessity and Sufficiency (p. 877)

Sum demanded as controlling.—The amount in dispute or matter in controversy which determines the jurisdiction of the District Court, in suits for the recovery of money only, is the amount demanded by the plaintiff in good faith. Central Commercial Co. v. Jones-Dusenbury Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 13, 163 C. C. A. 263.

Set-off.—For the purposes of jurisdiction it has been held that the matter involved includes the demands of both the plaintiff and defendant. Central Commercial Co. v. Jones-Dusenbury Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 13, 163 C. C. A. 263.

VIII. SUITS ARISING UNDER CONSTITUTION, LAWS OR TREATIES

d. Jurisdiction Independent of Merits (p. 884)

The jurisdiction does not turn upon the validity of the claim set up, but upon the fact that there is a real and substantial controversy respecting a federal question. Benedict v. New York, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 758, 159 C. C. A. 616.

f. Citizenship Immaterial (p. 885)

Diversity of citizenship is immaterial and unnecessary where a federal question is pleaded in good faith. Benedict v. New York, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 758, 159 C. C. A. 616.

g. Equitable Jurisdiction (p. 886)

Authority of state court to enjoin federal officer.—A suit to restrain action by a federal officer which is asserted to be in excess of his powers, to the detriment of the rights and duties of the state authority, could be entertained by a state court, although that court may have been mistaken in its view that the acts complained of were not authorized by the laws of the United States, unless the contentions concerning the want of power were so unsubstantial and frivolous as to afford no basis for jurisdiction, and hence caused the suit to be from the beginning one against the United States. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. North Dakota, (1919) 250 U. S. 135, 39 S. Ct. 502, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Enjoining enforcement of railway franchise ordinances.—Substantial federal questions sufficient to sustain the original jurisdiction of a federal District Court are presented by a bill which seeks to enjoin the continued enforcement of street railway franchise ordinances fixing rates, on the ground that such rates, because of increased operating costs and decreased net revenues, due to war conditions and an increased wage scale fixed by the war labor board, are inadequate and confiscatory, and that to compel street railway operation at unremunerative rates is to take the property of the street railway company without due process of law. Columbus, etc., Power Co. v. Columbus, (1919) 249 U. S. 399, 39 S. Ct. 349, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (S. D. Ohio 1918) 253 Fed. 499.

h. Suit by State (p. 886)

Recovery of taxes.—A suit by a state against a railroad company to recover certain taxes imposed under the laws of the state is not one arising under the Constitution, laws or treaties so as to give a federal court jurisdiction. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Nebraska, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 279, 163 C. C. A. 435.

k. Want of Jurisdiction Judicially Noticed (p. 887)

Noticed sua motu.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Nebraska, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 279, 163 C. C. A. 435.

It is the duty of the trial court on its motion to refrain from exercising jurisdiction in a case where no actual or colorable federal question is stated. Columbus R., etc., Co. v. Columbus, (S. D. Ohio 1918) 253 Fed. 499.

2. Pleading Federal Question

a. Plaintiff Required to Show (p. 888)

In general.—Jurisdiction must be determined not upon the conclusion on the merits of the action, but upon consideration of the grounds upon which federal jurisdiction is invoked. Flanders v. Coleman, (1919) 250 U. S. 223, 39 S. Ct. 472, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing on other grounds (S. D. Ga. 1918) 249 Fed. 757.

A bill to restrain the collection of a drainage tax under a state statute, which does not make any specific attack upon the statute but alleges that it deprives certain persons of their property without due process of law, sufficiently raises a federal question. Everglades Drainage League v. Napoleon B. Broward Drainage Dist., (S. D. Fla. 1918) 253 Fed. 246.

IX. SUITS ARISING UNDER CONSTITUTION

2. Municipal Ordinances

c. Violation of Due Process Clause (p. 914)

Illustrations.—Where it is alleged that the conditions of use of its streets imposed by municipal authorities upon a franchiseless and privately operated public utility, are so unfair and unreasonable as to amount to a deprivation of property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment, the District Court has jurisdiction. Doherty v. Toledo Rys., etc., Co., (N. D. Ohio 1918) 254 Fed. 597.

3. Impairment of Contract Obligation (p. 916)

In general.—"Even when the threatened act may be an impairment of a contract, or a deprivation of property without due process of law, still if the only means threatened to be used are resort to the courts or to legal proceedings, a case is not stated within the jurisdiction of a federal court." Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Columbus, (S. D. Ohio 1918) 253 Fed. 499.

5. Violation of Due Process Clause (p. 918)

Review of assessments.—If a state by valid and constitutional statutes establishes a board of tax commissioners and vests it with the sole power to make assessments, and provides for a review of its assessment by certiorari and for full relief against overvaluation and inequality of assessment, a federal court is without jurisdiction to review such an assessment, at least where the complainant has not exhausted his remedy under the state law. Spencer v. Babylon R. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 24, 162 C. C. A. 196.

10. Taxation of Federal Bonds (p. 922)

Exemption of Liberty Bonds from taxation.

—A federal court has jurisdiction of a dispute as to the application of a federal statute exempting Liberty Bonds from taxation. Iowa Loan, etc., Co. v. Fairweather, (S. D. Ia. 1918) 252 Fed. 605.

X. SUITS ARISING UNDER LAWS OF UNITED STATES

3. Where State Law is Real Determinant (p. 925)

Enforcement of fuel administrator's order.

—A federal court has jurisdiction to enjoin a mining company from disobeying an order of a state fuel administrator made under Act of August 10, 1917 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 181) that it furnish coal to a public service corporation with which it has a contract which it refuses to perform. But it has no jurisdiction to settle conflicting claims as to the construction of the contract, there being no diversity of citizenship between the parties. West Virginia Traction, etc., Co. v. Elm Grove Min. Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1918) 253 Fed. 772.

4. Suit By or Against Federal Corporation

c. Other Federal Corporation (p. 925)

Company engaged in performance of government contract.—A company manufacturing war munitions from materials purchased and supplied to it by the government is acting under the authority of the laws of the United States to as full an extent as though it had been incorporated under federal laws, and a suit by it to enjoin a labor union from interfering with the performance of government work involves a federal question and is within the jurisdiction of the federal courts. Wagner Electric Mfg. Co. v. District Lodge No. 9, (E. D. Mo. 1918) 252 Fed. 597.

24. Suit Involving Federal Mining Laws (p. 937)

Construction and application involved.

The jurisdiction of a District Court attaches where the statement of the suing party shows that the construction and application of statutes relating to mining claims are involved in the suit. Butte, etc., Copper Co. v. Clark-Montana Realty Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 12, 39 S. Ct. 231, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 609, 160 C. C. A. 509.

XII. DIVERSE CITIZENSHIP

1. In General (p. 942)

To the same effect as the first paragraph of original annotation, see Patterson v.

Delaware, etc. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 255, 163 C. C. A. 411.

Lack of diversity as jurisdictional defect.—Where diversity of citizenship is not established, the court may take notice of the defect on its own motion. Wise v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, etc., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 961, 164 C. C. A. 469.

Amendment of pleading as ousting jurisdiction.—Where defendants, in an action in a District Court based on diverse citizenship, implead as a defendant a municipal corporation of the state of which the plaintiff is a citizen, an amendment by the plaintiff to his declaration alleging that the defendants are joint tortfeasors, ousts the jurisdiction of the court and renders it incapable of entering judgment on the merits in favor of either party. Devost v. Twin State Gas, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 349, 162 C. C. A. 419.

2. Citizen of State (p. 942)

What constitutes.—The grant of jurisdiction to the federal courts by this section is not of controversies between citizens of the United States domiciled in different states, but of controversies between citizens of different states. This excludes a citizen of the United States who is a mere homeless wanderer and not a citizen of any state. Pannill v. Roanoke Times Co., (W. D. Va. 1918) 252 Fed. 910, wherein it was said: "Beyond any doubt a question of domicile (in fact) is often determinative of the question of citizenship (Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 315, 328, 9 Sup. Ct. 289, 32 L. Ed. 690); but it is a very different thing to assert that a mere theoretical domicile, existing with intent never to return to it, is the same thing as citizenship. In the case before us the plaintiff at the institution of the suit did not reside in California, he had no place of abode there, and he intended never to return there. Assuredly it is very difficult to reconcile any theory of citizenship or any definition of the word 'citizen' with such facts. Citizenship implies membership in a political society, the relation of allegiance and protection, identification with the state, and a participation in its functions. While a temporary absence may suspend the relation between a state and its citizen, the latter's identification with the former remains because of his intention to return."

The term "citizen" as used in this section means a citizen of the United States residing permanently in a particular state. Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Petrowsky, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 554, 162 C. C. A. 570.

Test of citizenship.—"Domicile is the test of citizenship for the purpose of the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States." Bjornquist v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 929, 163 C. C. A. 179.

Domicile of minor.—A minor, who has reached years of discretion and who has no natural or statutory guardian, may establish a domicile wherever he desires for the purpose of federal jurisdiction. Bjornquist v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 929, 163 C. C. A. 179.

7. Unincorporated Association as Citizen (p. 949)

Citizenship of members as determining jurisdiction.—If the defendant is an unincorporated society, the citizenship of its members determines the jurisdiction of the federal court. Wise v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, etc., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 961, 164 C. C. A. 469.

10. Nature of Suit (p. 951)

Ancillary suit.—A suit to enjoin the prosecution of an action at law in a federal court is so far ancillary to the original action that the federal court takes jurisdiction thereof without regard to diversity of citizenship. Sherman Nat. Bank v. Shubert Theatrical Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 256, 159 C. C. A. 350.

11. Several Parties Plaintiff or Defendant (p. 952)

In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see Rogers v. Chickamauga Trust Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 541, 165 C. C. A. 211.

Joint promissory note.—Where, in an action on a joint promissory note, both defendants appear and join in an answer objecting to the court's jurisdiction, on the ground that one of them and the plaintiff are residents of the same state, the plaintiff may not discontinue the action as to such defendant and deprive them of the right of making such objection. Chase v. Lathrope, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 713.

12. Arrangement of Parties as to Adverse Interest (p. 954)

In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see Brown v. Denver Omnibus, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 560, 166 C. C. A. 118.

By making persons who are necessary parties plaintiff defendants, jurisdiction is not conferred upon a federal court where, if they had been made plaintiffs, there would not have been the necessary diversity of citizenship. Bland v. Fleeman, (D. C.) 29 Fed. 669. Lindauer v. Compania Palomas, etc., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 428, 159 C. C. A. 482.

Suits by stockholder.—Where stockholders sue the corporation and its president in a District Court to set aside a fraudulent transfer of property, the corporation may not be placed with the plaintiffs so as to defeat the jurisdiction of the court, after it has joined in an answer denying the fraud. Cutting v. Woodward, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 633.

Suit for accounting.—Where a bill is amended by the plaintiff to bring in an indispensable party who is a citizen of the same state as the plaintiff the federal court thereby loses jurisdiction. Patterson v. Delaware, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 255, 163 C. C. A. 411, wherein the court said: "The bill was amended on the plaintiffs' own motion, and not against their objection or under the compulsion of an order, so that the proceeding is to be judged in the form they have chosen. Peninsular Iron Co. v. Stone, 121 U. S. 631, 7 Sup. Ct. 1010, 30 L. Ed. 1020; Merchants' Co. v. Ins. Co., 151 U. S. 384; 14 Sup. Ct. 367, 38 L. Ed. 195. Thus viewed, we cannot assent to the argument that the dispute should be treated as in substance between the plaintiffs and the company to which Coyne is merely an incidental party. On the contrary, he was an indispensable party (1 Fos. Fed. Prac. [5th Ed.], § 120), his rights are as directly involved as the rights of the company, and we do not see how the suit could have proceeded in his absence. He had not only bought the culm and paid for it, but was occupying the land and removing the culm, when the restraining order compelled him to forbear. If the plaintiffs' contention were sustained, he could remove no more, and must account for all he had taken, being remitted to his action against the company for such damages as he might be able to recover. Recognizing that he would of necessity be directly affected by an adverse decree, the plaintiffs properly made him a defendant; but they lost thereby the right to continue the action in a federal court."

Suit to establish title in certain property.—In Harris, etc., Corp. v. Tarr, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 570, 163 C. C. A. 564, it appeared that there was an agreement whereby the plaintiffs, with consent of certain of their creditors, continued in force previous assignments to the defendant of the leases of oil property mentioned in the agreement. There was a provision in the agreement for the appointment of a bank as the trustee of the parties, to disburse the receipts derived from the operation of the oil wells by the defendant until the creditors had been fully paid, and for the transfer of the possession of that property by the plaintiffs to the defendant after all the creditors had signed the agreement. It was held that the creditors and the bank were indispensable parties.

Dismissal as to dispensable parties.—Where the jurisdiction of a District Court is based on diverse citizenship of the plaintiff and principal defendant, the fact that another defendant is a citizen of the same state as the plaintiff will not divest the court of jurisdiction if such defendant is not an indispensable party. Brown v. Denver Omnibus, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 560, 166 C. C. A. 118.

18. Interveners and Substituted Parties (p. 963)

Where a bill is filed by a deceased partner's executor against the surviving partners, who are citizens of another state, for the purpose of winding up the partnership and dividing alleged assets, and creditors intervene, the court has jurisdiction to adjudicate the amount of the claims and enter decrees in favor of the claimants against the executor and surviving partners, irrespective of the creditors' citizenship and although the alleged assets prove worthless. Lackner v. McKechney, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 403, 164 C. C. A. 327.

19. Waiver as to Citizenship (p. 964)

To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Primos Chemical Co. v. Fulton Steel Corp., (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 454.

Diversity of citizenship, where jurisdiction is based on that ground, is absolutely essential, and cannot be waived, and the want of it will be error at any stage of the cause, even though assigned by the party at whose instance it was committed, and even if the parties consent that it may be waived. Devost v. Twin State Gas, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 349, 162 C. C. A. 419.

20. Pleading Citizenship (p. 964)

How issue raised.—In Parkerson v. Borst, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 242, the court said: "In the view we have taken of the side of the court upon which the case was properly triable, the issue as to the citizenship of the plaintiff would have been better presented by a plea in abatement in the nature of a plea to the jurisdiction, as held in the case of Hartog v. Memory, 116 U. S. 588, 6 Sup. Ct. 521, 29 L. Ed. 725; upon which plea an issue could have been framed, which would have been triable by a jury. However, the defendant elected to present the question by way of a motion, addressed to the court and tried by him, with the consent of the defendant. This was equivalent to a waiver of defendant's right to a jury trial upon this issue and a consent that it be heard by the district judge without a jury. The district judge found, upon the facts submitted to him upon hearing of the motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, that the plaintiff was a citizen of Mississippi, and the finding is supported by tendencies of the evidence set out in the record. Giving to the finding the effect a verdict of a jury would have been entitled to if the issue had been so tried, we do not think the evidence was so clearly against the conclusion of the district judge as to warrant us in setting aside his conclusion, on the motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction in the District Court as a federal court."

XVI. SUITS BY ASSIGNEES

2. Construction (p. 974)

A suit by the nonresident assignee of a remainder interest upon the life tenant's bond, given to secure the payment of the remainder interests, is within the provision of this section governing suits by assignees, although there was no formal assignment of the bond, and such suit is therefore not justiciable in a federal District Court, where both of the defendants, who are the executor of the life tenant and the surety on the bond, are residents and citizens of the same state as was the deceased assignor remainderman. Brainerd, etc., Quarry Co. v. Brice, (1919) 250 U. S. 229, 39 S. Ct. 458, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "Brown v. Fletcher, (1915) 235 U. S. 589 [35 S. Ct. 154, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 374], is an entirely different suit from the one now under consideration. In that action there was an assignment of an interest in a trust estate by the beneficiary, who was a resident and citizen of New York, to the complainants who were residents and citizens of Pennsylvania, and suit was brought in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, the defendants being residents and citizens of New York. It was held that the suit to recover this interest in a trust estate was not a suit by an assignee within the meaning of § 24 of the Judicial Code. That suit, this court held, was not a suit upon a chose in action, but was one to recover upon the conveyance of an alienable interest acquired from the owner in a trust estate. Such interests might be sued for in the federal courts when the requisite amount and diversity of citizenship exist. 235 U. S. 598, 599. But here the case is different, the suit was upon the bond, the right to recover arising from the assignment of the interest of Eugene Van Schaick in the fund in the hands of Henry Van Schaick. It was not a suit to recover the interest of Eugene Van Schaick in the estate because of the wrongful conversion thereof by Henry Van Schaick. To such a suit the surety company would not be a proper party. It was, as we have stated, an action upon a single cause of action against the executor of the principal and the surety upon the contract evidenced by the bond. The right to such action was derived by assignment from Eugene Van Schaick, a citizen and resident of New York, and, as he could not have sued in the federal court, his assignee, the plaintiff, could not by reason of § 24 of the Judicial Code."

4. "Chose in Action" (p. 975)

Construction of term—Assignment of oil and gas lease.—Where, under the law of the state in which the land is situated, an oil and gas lease grants a present vested interest in the premises to the lessee, a suit by an assignee of the lease for the protection of his interest thereunder is not a suit "on a chose of action" within the meaning of this section, and the citizenship of his assignor is therefore immaterial. Aggers v. Shaffer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 648, 168 C. C. A. 42.

7. Applicability

c. Application with Regard to Suit and Subject Matter (p. 983)

Assignment of building contract.—Where a contract for the construction of a courthouse provided for its assignment it was held that the amount earned by the assignee after the assignment was due primarily to the substitute contractor, and did not arise out of the assignment of a chose in action, and therefore was not within the prohibition of this subdivision. Cullman County v. Vincennes Bridge Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 473, 163 C. C. A. 467.

XVII. SERVICE OF PROCESS (p. 988)

Service on foreign corporation.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Golden, Belknap & Golden v. Connersville Wheel Co., (E. D. Mich. 1918) 252 Fed. 904.

XVIII. ANCILLARY PROCEEDINGS

1. Meaning of Term (p. 989)

Ancillary proceeding defined.—To same effect as original annotation, see Hume v. New York, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 488, 166 C. C. A. 564.

2. Jurisdiction in General (p. 989)

When ancillary relief may be had generally.—To the same effect as original annotation, see Pell v. McCabe, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 512, 168 C. C. A. 18, modifying and affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 356.

"A suit in equity, dependent upon an original suit or action of which the federal court had jurisdiction, may be maintained in that court (1) to aid, enjoin, or regulate the original suit; (2) to restrain, avoid, explain, or enforce the judgment or decree therein; (3) to enforce or adjudicate liens upon or claims to property in the custody of the court in the original suit; and (4) to enforce its decree or judgment in the original suit, to prevent the relitigation in other courts of the issues it has heard and adjudged in the original suit, and to protect the titles and rights acquired by purchasers under its decree, or judgment from attacks by suit or otherwise, based on the theory that its adjudications in the original suit were illegal and ineffective, and to accomplish these ends the court has the jurisdiction and authority to use its writs of injunction and its writs of assistance." St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. McElvain, (E. D. Mo. 1918) 253 Fed. 123.

Citizenship or amount or nature of controversy not controlling.—To same effect as original annotation, see Brown v. Crawford, (D. C. Ore. 1918) 252 Fed. 248; Pell v. McCabe, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 512, 168 C. C. A. 18, modifying and affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 356.

In Hume v. New York, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 488, 166 C. C. A. 564, regarding the right to institute ancillary suits the court said: "The right to institute and maintain ancillary suits in the District Court in which the action was originally instituted, in aid of the objects of the receivership, is well settled. The original equity action resulting in the appointment of the receiver was between a citizen of New Jersey and a citizen of New York, and if the present action is ancillary to that suit it is controlled by the rule announced in the Supreme Court in White v. Ewing, 159 U. S. 36, 15 Sup. Ct. 1018, 40 L. Ed. 67. There it was said:

"As was observed by this court in Porter v. Sabin, 149 U. S. 473, 479 [13 Sup. Ct. 1008, 1010 (37 L. Ed. 815)]: "When a court exercising a jurisdiction in equity appoints a receiver to hold the property of a corporation that court assumes the administration of the estate; the possession of the receiver is the possession of the court; and the court itself holds and administers the estate, through the receiver as its officer, for the benefit of those whom the court shall ultimately adjudge to be entitled to it." The Circuit Court obtained jurisdiction over the Cardiff Coal & Iron Company by the filing of the original creditors' bill by Bosworth, a citizen of Massachusetts, and by the appointment of a receiver, and any suit by or against such receiver, in the course of the winding up of such corporation, whether for the collection of its assets or for the defense of its property rights, must be regarded as ancillary to the main suit, and as cognizable in the Circuit Court, regardless either of the citizenship of the parties, or of the amount in controversy."

"In a later case, Pope v. Louisville, etc., Ry. Co., 173 U. S. 573, at page 577, 19 Sup. Ct. 500, at page 501 (43 L. Ed. 814), the Supreme Court again took occasion to say: "When an action or suit is commenced by a receiver appointed by a Circuit Court (now the District Court), to accomplish the ends sought and directed by the suit in which the appointment was made, such action or suit is regarded as ancillary so far as the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court as a court of the United States is concerned; and we have repeatedly held that jurisdiction of these subordinate actions or suits is to be attributed to the jurisdiction on which the main suit rested."

"In Hollander v. Heaslip, 222 Fed. 808, 137 C. C. A. 1, it was held that an ancillary bill would be sustained where the receiver in equity, administering the estate of an insolvent corporation, sought to recover against stockholders for liability against them for agreements to subscribe. Walker, J., said:

"We are not of opinion that the court was in error in overruling the abovementioned demurrer. The bill to which it was interposed was auxiliary to the original suit in which, by means of a receivership, the court had acquired possession of the assets of the World Publishing Company, Limited, for the purpose of applying them to the payment of its debts. This enabled it to cause a debtor to that corporation who was within reach of its process to be brought into the original cause, to the end that his debt might be ascertained and payment coerced. It was for the court, in its discretion, to decide whether it would determine for itself all claims of the corporation whose estate it was administering, or would allow them to be litigated elsewhere. It was within its power to hear and determine all controversies regarding such claims, at least in so far as it would acquire jurisdiction of the persons of those who were parties to such controversies, though the questions thus collaterally involved were of a purely legal nature."

Lack of jurisdiction in main controversy.—If a District Court has no jurisdiction of a suit, a District Court in another district cannot exercise ancillary jurisdiction therein, and it is the duty of the latter court on its own motion to raise the question and decline to act where such want of jurisdiction is apparent. Primos Chemical Co. v. Fulton Steel Corp., (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 454.

3. Particular Proceedings and Matters

b. Cross Bills (p. 991)

In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see Brown v. Crawford, (D. C. Ore. 1918) 252 Fed. 248.

e. Enjoining Pending Action (p. 993)

In general.—Where in a suit in a federal court the defendant files a bill, the subpoena being served on the attorneys of the non-resident plaintiff, to enjoin the plaintiff from suing him in other jurisdictions in the same cause of action, the bill is ancillary to the original suit and falls with its dismissal. Venner v. Graves, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 686.

Where a composition offered by a bankrupt firm provides that all creditors assenting thereto shall be regarded as having released a third person, whose relation to the firm is not stated or determined, from liability for debts of the firm, an order confirming the composition is not an adjudication of the question of his liability, and a suit to enjoin an action brought against him in another jurisdiction on the ground of fraud and his partnership with the bankrupts, by creditors who filed no claim in the bankruptcy proceeding and who did not assent to the composition, is not ancillary to the bankruptcy proceeding. Pell v. McCabe, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 512, 168 C. C. A. 18, modifying and affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 356.

f. Intervention (p. 994)

Ancillary jurisdiction may be invoked by a stranger to the original suit, and will not fail because new parties are brought in any more than a subsequent change in conditions arising pendente lite ousts federal jurisdiction after it has once attached. Venner v. Pennsylvania Steel Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 292.

g. Judgment and Decrees (p. 994)

Cancellation of release of judgment.—A suit brought to cancel a release of a judgment because of fraud, is ancillary to the suit in which the judgment was recovered and may be maintained in same court irrespective of the citizenship of the parties. Ross v. Miller, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 697, 164 C. C. A. 537.

j. Receivers (p. 997)

Foreign jurisdiction.—“Since the decision of this court in Booth v. Clark, 17 How. 322, it is the settled doctrine in federal jurisprudence that a chancery receiver has no authority to sue in the courts of a foreign jurisdiction to recover demands or property therein situated. The functions and authority of such receiver are confined to the jurisdiction in which he was appointed. The reasons for this rule were fully discussed in Booth v. Clark, and have been reiterated in later decisions of this court. Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56; Great Western Mining Co. v. Harris, 198 U. S. 561, 575, 577; Keatley v. Furey, 226 U. S. 399, 403. This practice has become general in the courts of the United States, and is a system well understood and followed. It permits an application for an ancillary receivership in a foreign jurisdiction where the local assets may be recovered and, if necessary, administered. The system established in Booth v. Clark has become the settled law of the federal courts, and if the powers of chancery receivers are to be enlarged in such wise as to give them authority to sue beyond the jurisdiction of the appointing court, such extension of authority must come from legislation and not from judicial action. Great Western Mining Co. v. Harris, supra, p. 577.” Sterrett v. Cincinnati Second Nat. Bank, (1918) 248 U. S. 73, 39 S. Ct. 27, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 753, 159 C. C. A. 55.

k. Miscellaneous Matters (p. 998)

Supplemental bill.—Where an original bill to restrain a corporation from selling its assets on the ground that it would violate the Sherman and Clayton Acts, does not make the proposed purchaser a defendant because it is a non-resident, a supplemental bill, filed after the consummation of the sale, asking the same relief, does not invoke the court's ancillary jurisdiction nor give it jurisdiction of the purchaser. Venner v. Pennsylvania Steel Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 292.

II. NATURE AND SCOPE OF JURISDICTION

1. In General (p. 1006)

In personam or in rem.—“Neither in jurisdiction nor in the method of procedure are our admiralty courts dependent alone upon the theory of implied hypothecation; it being established that in a civil cause of maritime origin involving a personal responsibility the libellant may proceed in personam if the respondent is within reach of process. The General Smith, 4 Wheat. 438, 443; Manro v. Almeida, 10 Wheat. 473, 486; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. 344, 390; Morewood v. Enequist, 23 How. 491; The Belfast, 7 Wall. 624, 644; The Kalorama, 10 Wall. 204, 210; The Sabine, 101 U. S. 384, 386; In re Louisville Underwriters, 134 U. S. 488, 490; Workman v. New York, 179 U. S. 552, 573; Ex p. Indiana Transp. Co., 244 U. S. 456; North Pac. Steamship Co. v. Hall Bros. Marine P., etc., Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 119, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Equitable powers.—“Though courts of admiralty are not courts of equity, and may not be able to give affirmative relief in the case of contracts induced by preliminary fraudulent representations (Williams v. Insurance Co. [D. C.] 56 Fed. 159), still they do proceed upon equitable principles and may prevent a party from taking advantage of his own fraud in the contract itself. Pew v. Laughlin (D. C.) 3 Fed. 39; The Hero (D. C.) 6 Fed. 526, and The Electron (D. C.) 48 Fed. 689, are examples.” Higgins v. Anglo-Algerian Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 386, 160 C. C. A. 396.

Non-maritime subjects.—The jurisdiction of a court of admiralty is confined to maritime subjects, and it cannot, after having obtained jurisdiction, dispose of non-maritime subjects, for the purpose of doing complete justice, after the manner of courts of equity. The Ada, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 194, 162 C. C. A. 330.

American seaman on British vessel.—The rights of an American seaman in the harbor of New York upon a British vessel can properly be adjudicated in a court of the United States according to the admiralty law, when this admiralty law is in exact accord with what his contract rights would be under the British statute. The Vestris, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 252 Fed. 201.

IV. SAVING OF COMMON-LAW REMEDY (p. 1008)

A stevedore injured while unloading a steamer at a wharf may sue in a state court where no remedy is sought against the vessel. Georgia Casualty Co. v. American Milling Co., (Wis. 1919) 172 N. W. 148, wherein the court said: "The common-law jurisdiction of the state courts over torts committed at sea is preserved by the clause cited, but remedies by proceedings in rem can only be administered in the admiralty courts. . . . If no remedy is sought against the vessel itself, the case is not within the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts, but the state courts, administering common-law remedies, have concurrent jurisdiction."

Wharfage.—Assumpsit lies in a state court to recover under an implied contract for wharfage. Adam v. White, (R. I. 1918) 103 Atl. 230, wherein the court said: "Of course, if there is an implied contract, a common-law action will lie, and the action in personam can properly be brought in a state court under the saving clause of the Judiciary Act of 1789."

State Workmen's Compensation Law.—By amendment to paragraph third in the Act of Oct. 6, 1917, ch. 97, 40 Stat. L. 395 (see 1918 Supp. p. 414) "rights and remedies under the Workmen's Compensation Law of any state" are saved to claimants. Prior to that amendment it was held that the remedy which state workmen's compensation laws give were of a character wholly unknown to the common law, incapable of enforcement by the ordinary processes of any court, and was not saved to suitors from the grant of exclusive jurisdiction given to the District Courts by the paragraph of section 24. Barrett v. Macomber, etc., Co., (D. C. R. I. 1918) 253 Fed. 205; Duart v. Simmons, (1918) 231 Mass. 313, 121 N. E. 10; Doey v. Clarence P. Howland Co., (1918) 224 N. Y. 30, 120 N. E. 53.

In an action in admiralty by a widow to recover damages for the death of her husband while working as a stevedore in unloading a vessel, a state workmen's compensation act has no application. Western Fuel Co. v. Garcia, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 817.

In Neumann v. Morse Dry Dock, etc., Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 97, it was held that even though a stevedore presented a claim for personal injuries and received compensation therefor under a state compensation law, the acceptance of such compensation did not bar a libel in admiralty, and that if the payments were made by the state they were to be regarded as gratuities, but if made by the employer they were deductible from the amount recovered.

Sale under process of state court.—Where a boat is subject to admiralty jurisdiction, its sale by process of a state court under a state statute on the ground that it is perishable property, does not effect an extinguishment of a maritime lien for supplies furnished prior to the proceedings in the state court. The Adeline, (N. D. Fla. 1918) 252 Fed. 953.

VI. WATERS AND PLACES (p. 1011)

In general.—"The Constitution, Art. III, § 2, extends the judicial power of the United States to 'all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction;' and the legislation enacted by Congress for carrying the power into execution has been equally extensive. Act of September 24, 1789, c. 20, § 9, 1 Stat. 73, 77; Rev. Stats., § 563 (8); Judicial Code, § 24 (3), 36 Stat. 1087, 1091, c. 231. In defining the bounds of the civil jurisdiction, this court from an early day has rejected those trammels that arose from the restrictive statutes and judicial prohibitions of England. Waring v. Clarke, (1847) 5 How. 441, 457-459 [12 U. S. (L. ed.) 226, 234, 235]; New England Mut. Marine Ins. Co. v. Dunham, (1870) 11 Wall. 1, 24 [20 U. S. (L. ed.) 90, 97]; The Lottawanna, (1874) 21 Wall. 558, 576 [22 U. S. (L. ed.) 654, 661]. It must be taken to be the settled law of this court that while the civil jurisdiction of the admiralty in matters of tort depends upon locality—whether the act was committed upon navigable waters—in matter of contract it depends upon the subject matter—the nature and character of the contract; and that the English rule, which conceded jurisdiction, with a few exceptions, only to contracts made and to be executed upon the navigable waters, is inadmissible, the true criterion being the nature of the contract, as to whether it have reference to maritime service or maritime transactions. People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, (1857) 20 How. 393, 401 [15 U. S. (L. ed.) 961, 964]; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Philadelphia Steam Towboat Co., (1859) 23 How. 209, 215, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 432, 435; New England Mut. Marine Ins. Co. v. Dunham, (1870) 11 Wall. 1, 26 [20 U. S. (L. ed.) 90, 99]; The Eclipse, (1890) 135 U. S. 599, 608 [10 S. Ct. 873, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 269, 272]. In some of the earlier cases the influence of the English rule may be discerned, in that the question whether a contract was to be performed upon the navigable waters was referred to as pertinent to the question whether the contract was of a maritime nature (The Thomas Jefferson, (1825) 10 Wheat. 428, 429 [6 U. S. (L. ed.) 358]; Peyroux v. Howard, (1833) 7 Pet. 324, 341 [8 U. S. (L. ed.) 700, 707]; Steamboat Orleans v. Phœbus, (1837) 11 Pet. 175, 183

[9 U. S. (L. ed.) 677, 680]; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, (1848) 6 How. 344, 392; [12 U. S. (L. ed.) 465, 486]; but a careful examination of the opinions shows that the place of performance was dealt with as an evidential circumstance bearing with more or less weight upon the fundamental question of the nature of the contract. If they go beyond this, they must be deemed to be overruled by Insurance Co. v. Dunham, supra; North Pac. Steamship Co. v. Hall Bros. Marine R., etc., (1919) 249 U. S. 119, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

VIII. CONTRACTS WITHIN ADMIRALTY JURISDICTION

1. Shipbuilding Contracts (p. 1014)

"It is settled that a contract for building a ship or supplying materials for her construction is not a maritime contract. People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, (1857) 20 How. 393 [15 U. S. (L. ed.) 961]; Roach v. Chapman, (1859) 22 How. 129 [16 U. S. (L. ed.) 294]; Edwards v. Elliott, (1874) 21 Wall. 532, 553, 557 [22 U. S. (L. ed.) 487, 491, 492]; The Winnebago, (1907) 205 U. S. 354, 363 [27 S. Ct. 509, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 836, 841]. In the case in 20 Howard the court said (p. 402): 'So far from the contract being purely maritime, and touching rights and duties appertaining to navigation (on the ocean or elsewhere), it was a contract made on land, to be performed on land.' But the true basis for the distinction between the construction and the repair of a ship, for purposes of the admiralty jurisdiction, is to be found in the fact that the structure does not become a ship, in the legal sense, until it is completed and launched. 'A ship is born when she is launched, and lives so long as her identity is preserved. Prior to her launching she is a mere congeries of wood and iron—an ordinary piece of personal property—as distinctly a land structure as a house, and subject to mechanics' liens created by state law enforceable in the state courts. In the baptism of launching she receives her name, and from the moment her keel touches the water she is transformed, and becomes a subject of admiralty jurisdiction.' Tucker v. Alexandroff, (1902) 183 U. S. 424, 438 [22 S. Ct. 195, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 264, 271]; North Pac. Steamship Co. v. Hall Bros. Marine R., etc., Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 119, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —."

5. Repairs and Supplies (p. 1015)

In rem or in personam.—"That a materialman furnishing supplies or repairs may proceed in admiralty either against the ship in rem or against the master or owner in personam is recognized by the 12th Rule in Admiralty adopted in its present form in the year 1872 (13 Wall. XIV) after a long controversy that began with The General Smith, 4 Wheat. 438, and ended with The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, 579, 581. See The Glide, 167 U. S. 606." North Pac. Steamship Co.

v. Hall Bros. Marine R., etc., Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 119, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Repairs in hull of vessel.—There is no difference in character as to repairs made upon the hull of a vessel dependent upon whether they are made while she is afloat, while in dry dock, or while hauled up by ways upon land. The nature of the service is identical in the several cases, and the admiralty jurisdiction extends to all. North Pac. Steamship Co. v. Hall Bros. Marine R., etc., Co. (1919) 249 U. S. 119, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "In The Robert W. Parsons, (1903) 191 U. S. 17, 33, 34 [24 S. Ct. 8, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 73, 80, 81], it was held that the admiralty jurisdiction extended to an action for repairs put upon a vessel while in dry dock; but the question whether this would apply to a vessel hauled up on land for repairs was reserved, the language of the court, by Mr. Justice Brown, being: 'Had the vessel been hauled up by ways upon the land and there repaired, a different question might have been presented, as to which we express no opinion; but as all serious repairs upon the hulls of vessels are made in dry dock, the proposition that such repairs are made on land would practically deprive the admiralty courts of their largest and most important jurisdiction in connection with repairs.' In The Jefferson, (1909) 215 U. S. 130 [30 S. Ct. 54, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 125, 17 Ann. Cas. 907], it was held that the admiralty jurisdiction extends to a claim for salvage service rendered to a vessel while undergoing repairs in a dry dock.

"What we have said sufficiently indicates the decision that should be reached in the case at bar. The contract as made contemplated the performance of services and the furnishing of the necessary materials for the repairs of the steamship Yucatan. It was an entire contract, intended to take the ship as he was and to discharge her only when completely repaired and fit for the Alaskan voyage. It did not contemplate, as is contended by appellant, either a lease, or a contract for use in the nature of a lease, of the libellant's marine railway and machine shop. The use of these was but incidental; the vessel being hauled out, when consistent with the progress of other work of the Shipbuilding Company, for the purpose of exposing the ship's bottom to permit of the removal and replacement of the broken plates and the examination of the propeller and tail shaft. In Peyroux v. Howard, (1833) 7 Pet. 324, 327, 341 [8 U. S. (L. ed.) 700, 702, 707], the vessel, requiring repairs below the water line as well as above, was to be and in fact was hauled up out of the water; and it was held that the contract for materials furnished and work performed in repairing her under these circumstances was a maritime contract. We think the same rule must be applied to the case before us; that the doubt intimated in The Robert W. Parsons, (1903) 191 U. S. 17, 33, 34, [24

S. Ct. 8, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 73, 80], must be laid aside; and that there is no difference in character as to repairs made upon the hull of a vessel dependent upon whether they are made while she is afloat, while in dry dock, or while hauled up by ways upon land. The nature of the service is identical in the several cases, and the admiralty jurisdiction extends to all.

"This is recognized by the Act of Congress of June 23, 1910, c. 373, 36 Stat. 604, which declares that 'Any person furnishing repairs, supplies, or other necessities, including the use of dry dock or marine railway, to a vessel whether foreign or domestic,' upon the order of a proper person, shall have a maritime lien upon the vessel."

13. Affreightment and Charter Parties (p. 1017)

A charter contract to be enforceable in admiralty must be wholly maritime. The Ada, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 194, 162 C. C. A. 330.

IX. FOREIGN PERSONS OR PROPERTY (p. 1019)

In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see Cunard Steamship Co. v. Smith, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 846.

Immunity from process of vessels of foreign navy.—A transport belonging to a foreign navy, even though temporarily chartered to private individuals, is immune from seizure on process issued by a federal court in admiralty in suit brought by a shipper to recover damages to the cargo. The Maipo, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 252 Fed. 627.

XIII. MARITIME CONTRACT (p. 1022)

Where a section of a dry dock in which a tug has been placed for repairs, is driven across a river and ashore by a storm, a contract by the owner of the dry dock with the owner of the tug to replace the tug in the river, is of a "maritime" nature and the service is a salvage service; hence, a suit to enforce the contract is within the admiralty jurisdiction of the District Court. The Gulfport, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 577, 162 C. C. A. 593.

XX. TORTS

2. Locality of Injury Complained of (p. 1027)

In general.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see North Pac. Steamship Co. v. Hall Bros. Marine R., etc., Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 119, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Keator v. Rock Plaster Mfg. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 574.

3. Injuries by Vessels (p. 1028)

Injuries to floating pontoons by a ship constitute maritime torts within the admiralty jurisdiction of the federal courts. The Bart Tully, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 856, 164 C. C. A. 72.

5. Injuries to Persons or Structures on Land (p. 1029)

A court of admiralty has no jurisdiction over an action by an administratrix for the death of her intestate, caused, while he was standing on a dock, by the falling upon him of rock being discharged from a vessel by buckets hoisted by a block and fall, for in such case the tort was not maritime. Keator v. Rock Plaster Mfg. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 574.

Vol. IV, p. 1037, Jud. Code, sec. 24, par. seventh. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 139.]

I. SUITS ARISING UNDER PATENT LAWS (p. 1037)

Royalties.—A suit does not arise under the patent laws so as to be within the jurisdiction of a District Court irrespective of the amount in dispute where the case, as stated in the bill, is really a suit for royalties based on contract, not at all involving the construction of any law relating to patents. Odell v. F. C. Farnsworth Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 501, 39 S. Ct. 516, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 257 Fed. 101.

Accounting for unfair competition.—Where a patent has been held valid and infringed, the unfair competition feature arising out of that infringement may be included in an accounting for profits and damages, although the parties are citizens of the same district, but where no infringement is found such feature may not be included. Detroit Show-case Co. v. Kawneer Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 234, 162 C. C. A. 370.

Vol. IV, p. 1047, Jud. Code, sec. 24, par. eighth. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 139.]

An action to recover freight charges on an interstate shipment under a through bill of lading issued pursuant to the Carmack amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act is a federal question under this paragraph irrespective of the amount in controversy. New York Cent. R. Co. v. Mutual Orange Distributors, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 230, 163 C. C. A. 386.

An action for injury to live stock, brought under the Carmack amendment, is within the jurisdiction of the federal District Court irrespective of the amount in controversy. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, (Tex. 1919) 211 S. W. 543.

Vol. IV, p. 1048, Jud. Code, sec. 24, par. ninth. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 139.]

Penalty for violation of Harter Act.—While a District Court has no jurisdiction in admiralty to collect by proceedings in personam the penalty prescribed by section 5 of the Harter Act (see vol. VI, p. 393) for refusal to give a clean bill of lading, nevertheless it has jurisdiction under this section of a qui tam action for the collection of the penalty, and where the libel is answered by the defendant it may be treated as the analogue of a complaint qui tam at common law and should not be dismissed for want of jurisdiction. In such case the answer is a concession of the admiralty jurisdiction of the court and a waiver of the right to a jury trial. U. S. v. Elwell, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 939, 163 C. C. A. 189.

Vol. IV, p. 1051, Jud. Code, sec. 24, par. fourteenth. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 140.]

Interruption of employment as deprivation of property right.—A person has no right of property in his employment, and he may not invoke jurisdiction of a District Court under this section to enjoin the adjutant-general and members of a local draft board from inducting him into military service under the provisions of the Selective Service Act (see vol. IX, p. 1136) on the ground that he would be deprived of a property right by the interruption of his employment. Boniface v. Thompson, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 252 Fed. 878.

Vol. IV, p. 1054, Jud. Code, sec. 24, par. sixteenth. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 140.]

Suits by receivers and agents.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Harriman Nat. Bank v. Seldomridge, (1919) 249 U. S. 1, 39 S. Ct. 244, 63, reversing on other grounds (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 111, 153 C. C. A. 147.

Vol. IV, p. 1059, Jud. Code, sec. 24, par. twentieth. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 140.]

Claims sounding in tort are not within the purview of this paragraph of section 24. Thus, an action against the United States to recover the value of property taken by the government in making a river improvement is not within the jurisdiction of the District Court under this paragraph where it appears that the improvement consisted in dredging submerged land adjoining a river to help navigation, and that while the claim of the plaintiff was that the land belonged to him the government claimed that it was a part of the bed of the de jure river. Such circumstances preclude any implied promise on the part of the government to compensate the owner for the property taken, and therefore no contract claim results. Tempel v. U. S., (1918) 248 U. S. 121, 39 S. Ct. 56, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, following Hill v. U. S., (1893)

149 U. S. 593), 13 S. Ct. 1011, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 862, wherein the court said: "It is unnecessary to determine whether this claim of the government is well-founded. The mere fact that the government then claimed and now claims title in itself and that it denies title in the plaintiff, prevents the court from assuming jurisdiction of the controversy. The law cannot imply a promise by the government to pay for a right over, or interest in, land which right or interest the government claimed and claims it possessed before it utilized the same. If the government's claim is unfounded, a property right of plaintiff was violated; but the cause of action therefor, if any, is one sounding in tort, and for such the Tucker Act affords no remedy. Hill v. United States, 149 U. S. 593, which both in its pleadings and its facts bears a strong resemblance to the case at bar, is conclusive on this point. See also Schillinger v. United States, 155 U. S. 163. The case at bar is entirely unlike both the Lynah Case [188 U. S. 445] and the Cress Case [243 U. S. 316]. In neither of those cases does it appear that, at the time of taking, there was any claim by the government of a right to invade the property in question without the payment of compensation. Under such circumstances it must be assumed that the government intended to take and to make compensation for any property taken, so as to afford the basis for an implied promise. And when the implied promise to pay has once arisen, a later denial by the government (whether at the time of suit or otherwise) of its liability to make compensation does not destroy the right in contract and convert the act into a tort. In both of those cases the facts required the implication of a promise to pay. But here the government has contended since the beginning of the improvement that, at the time of the dredging in 1899 and in 1909, it possessed the right of navigation over the land in question; which right of navigation, if it existed, gave it the right to dredge further in order to improve navigation. The facts preclude implying a promise to pay. If the government is wrong in its contention, it has committed a tort. The United States has not conferred upon the District Court jurisdiction to determine such a controversy. See Cramp & Sons v. Curtis Turbine Co., 246 U. S. 28, 40-41."

III. RIGHT OF REMOVAL IN GENERAL

1. Entirely Statutory (p. 31)

Dependent on Act of Congress.—To same effect as original annotation, see Matarazzo v. Hustis, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 882.

3. State Legislation Affecting Right

a. In General (p. 34)

Right not subject to abridgment.—A state statute which designates a person as a plaintiff in a certain class of cases when he is in reality a defendant, does not thereby deprive him of the right of removing the case to a federal court. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Drainage Dist. No. 8, (S. D. Ia. 1917) 253 Fed. 491.

Form of procedure for review as defeating right to removal.—Where a suit is based on attempted taxation by a state and involves the application of a federal statute, the removal of the cause to a federal court cannot be defeated because of the form of the procedure for review prescribed by the state. Iowa Loan, etc., Co. v. Fairweather, (S. D. Ia. 1918) 252 Fed. 605. Regarding the right of removal in such a case, the court said: "Parties have a legal and constitutional right to a trial in the courts of the United States in cases involving the construction or application of the Constitution or laws of the United States. It will not do to say that the plaintiff instituted this litigation. As in the Ditch Cases, the litigation has its foundation in an attempt on the part of the taxing authority of the state of Iowa to levy certain taxes which the plaintiff, under the law, would be compelled to pay. In other words, a proceeding was started to take away from the plaintiff certain money for certain purposes. The state prescribed the procedure by which, under the claim of defendants, this was to be done. It authorized an appeal from the board of review, and a trial in court—a judicial proceeding to have the rights of the plaintiff determined. If the plaintiff, asserting a right under the laws of the United States, cannot have that question tried in the courts of the United States, it is because the legislature, while giving the plaintiff the right to a trial in court, has so prescribed the conditions, or so named the parties, that this right has been denied.

"But the legislature has no such power; having given the plaintiff the right to a trial in court, it could not limit the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, nor the right of the plaintiff to a trial in such courts, provided the jurisdictional facts exist."

IV. REMOVAL "SUITS"

6. Proceedings for Taxation (p. 47)

Proceedings to assess inheritance taxes.—Where under the constitution and laws of a state, a proceeding by a county to assess an inheritance tax against a decedent's estate, when it reaches the county court, becomes a contest inter partes, which that court, acting judicially, is empowered to hear and determine, it is a "suit" within the meaning of this section and removable. Smith v. Douglas County, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 244, 165 C. C. A. 532. See also (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 894, 155 C. C. A. 482.

Appeal from assessment.—Where a state statute in establishing drainage districts and providing for the collection of taxes to pay for their construction, also makes provision for an appeal to the District Court of the state by any one dissatisfied with his assessment, such appeal is a "suit" within the meaning of this section. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Drainage Dist. No. 8, (S. D. Ia. 1917) 253 Fed. 491.

7. Probate and Contest of Wills (p. 48)

Proceedings for probate.—To same effect as original annotation, see Meadow v. Nash, (N. D. Ga. 1918) 250 Fed. 911.

10. Within Original "Jurisdiction by this Title"

a. In General (p. 52)

To same effect as original annotation, see Poorman v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Ill. 1918) 255 Fed. 987; Georgia v. Southern R. Co., (N. D. Ga. 1918) 255 Fed. 369.

V. REMOVAL FROM AND TO WHAT COURT

2. To What Court (p. 61)

In general.—In Matarazzo v. Hustis, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 882, it was held that the "proper district" to which a suit might be removed from a state court, was the district within the territorial limits of which the suit was pending in the state court. In defining the term "proper district," the court said: "It is now settled that the words 'for the proper district,' used in section 28 of the Judicial Code, refer to the proper district" to which a cause may be removed as stated in section 53 of the Judicial Code, and not to the 'proper district' for bringing such a suit originally, if brought in the District Court of the United States in the first instance."

VII. SUITS UNDER CONSTITUTION, LAWS, OR TREATIES

1. General Rules as to Removability (p. 77)

"Arising under."—In Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Tex. 1918) 251 Fed. 332, the court said: "What is meant by the words 'arising under' the laws of the United States? It is contended here that the case cannot be removed from the state court to the federal court, unless the petition or complaint filed in the state court shows that there is a dispute or controversy as to the proper meaning or construction of a federal law; that this is the meaning of the term 'arising under' a federal law; that it is not enough that the federal law controls or regulates the right of recovery. Is it necessary, therefore, for there to be a dispute as to the construction of the statute in order to make a suit 'arise' thereunder? It does not seem so to me. It seems to me a suit arises under a law when it is brought to enforce the provisions of or liability thereby given, or is controlled as to the right of recovery by the provisions of such law. To say it does not arise under a law, unless there is a dispute as to the construction or meaning of the law, seems to me to be a misnomer; for, if it is held that the law does not apply to the facts set up, then such suit cannot arise under it, but must arise under some other law. Thus a case would be removed, not because it arose under a federal law, but to determine whether it did or did not so arise. The statute does not so read.

"It seems to me the contention defeats itself, because the right of removal would depend not upon whether the cause of action arose under a federal law, but would depend upon whether there was a dispute as to whether the federal law applied to the facts or did not apply to the facts. This would be an entirely different ground for removal from that named in the act. The act does not say a case may be removed if there be doubt as to whether the federal law controls; but, on the contrary, it is specific that there is a right to remove if the controversy arises under a federal law. If, therefore, the holding should be that the provisions of the law did apply and control, then certainly the suit does arise under it. Therefore it follows that, if its removability is to depend on whether there be a dispute as to the meaning of the law, then where the holding is that its terms do not apply this would also require a decision that the federal court has no jurisdiction, and such suit, though removed, must be dismissed. This result must necessarily follow, because the same term, 'arise' under the Constitution or laws of the United States, is used in both the statute conferring jurisdiction and that providing for removal, so that the court would have no jurisdiction to remove unless it would also have jurisdiction to try."

11. Removal Cases

d. Suit Based on Carmack Amendment (p. 85)

A suit for injury to livestock in transit, based on the Carmack Amendment, is removable. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, (Tex. 1919) 211 S. W. 543; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Tex. 1918) 251 Fed. 332.

j. Miscellaneous Cases (p. 88)

An action in a state court attacking a title to property acquired under a decree of a federal court, upon the ground that it is void, involves a federal question and is removable. South Dakota Cent. R. Co. v. Continental, etc., Trust, etc., Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 941.

An action brought against the Emergency Fleet Corporation, organized under the Act of March 3, 1901, ch. 854, by a shipbuilding company on an alleged contract, is one arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States and may not be remanded by the District Court. Union Timber Products Co. v. U. S. Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corp., (W. D. Wash. 1918) 252 Fed. 320.

Failure of petition for removal to show federal question.—In Georgia v. Southern R. Co., (N. D. Ga. 1918) 255 Fed. 369, it was held that the amendment of the petition for removal, set forth in the report of case at page 374, did not show a federal question either that the obligations of the defendant's contract were impaired or that it was deprived of its rights without due process of law.

VIII. PROVISIO EXCLUDING CASES ARISING UNDER FEDERAL EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT (p. 92)

Diversity of citizenship.—An action arising under the federal Employers' Liability Act may not be removed to a federal court because of diversity of citizenship. Givens v. Wight, (N. D. Tex. 1918) 247 Fed. 233.

Relief sought under state and federal acts.—A case is not removable where relief is sought under the federal act though there is also a count based on a state statute. Mitchell v. Southern R. Co., (W. D. Ga. 1917) 247 Fed. 879; Givens v. Wight, (N. D. Tex. 1918) 247 Fed. 233.

Waiver.—The proviso does not confer a mere privilege but is jurisdictional. Mitchell v. Southern R. Co., (W. D. Ga. 1917) 247 Fed. 819.

X. DIVERSE CITIZENSHIP, ALIENAGE, OR FOREIGN STATE AS GROUND FOR REMOVAL

3. Several Parties Plaintiff or Defendant a. In General (p. 103)

All parties nonresident.—Where a suit is brought in South Carolina for a tort occurring there and the parties are all nonresidents, the plaintiff residing in Virginia and the two defendants in North Carolina, the cause is not removable. Powell v. Southern R. Co., (1918) 110 S. C. 70, 96 S. W. 292.

Case not originally triable in federal court.—A suit may be removed to a federal court because of diverse citizenship although, because of the venue provision of section 51 of the Judicial Code, it could not have been originally brought in the federal court. James v. Amarillo City Light, etc., Co., (N. D. Tex. 1918) 251 Fed. 337.

Foreign corporation, and negligent employee.—Under the statutes of Florida it is proper to sue jointly a corporation and its employee for injuries caused by the negligence of the employee, and accordingly a state court has jurisdiction though the corporation is foreign. Baker v. Jacksonville Traction Co., (S. D. Fla. 1917) 247 Fed. 718.

d. Proper, Necessary or Indispensable Parties (p. 107)

Specific performance.—In a suit brought in a state court for specific performance of a contract for the sale of land where the plaintiffs in their petition alleged that a bank, which was a resident of the same state as the plaintiffs, had a lien on the property, it was held that the defendant could not remove the case to the federal court. Bryan v. Barriger, (W. D. Ky. 1918) 251 Fed. 328, wherein the court said: "The defendant who made the contract is a citizen of New York, but the Trust Company, the defendant which has a lien created by Barriger, is, like the plaintiffs, a citizen of Kentucky. and the question upon which our decision of the motion to remand must turn is whether the joinder of that defendant should prevent the removal. In this connection it may be remarked that the petition for removal makes no charge of fraudulent joinder, but claims that the controversy between the plaintiffs and the defendant Barriger is separable from that between the plaintiffs and the Trust Company, and that the Trust Company is not a necessary party to the controversy between the plaintiffs and Barriger. It is quite obvious, however, that plaintiffs have no controversy with the Trust Company, except through the lien created by Barriger, and which stands in the way of the latter in conveying an unincumbered title to the plaintiffs. It has become the established construction of removal statutes that:

'A defendant has no right to say that an action shall be several which a plaintiff elects to make joint. Smith v. Rines, 2 Sumn. 338, Fed. Cas. No. 13,100. A separate defense may defeat a joint recovery, but it cannot deprive a plaintiff of his right to prosecute his own suit to final determination in his own way. The cause of action is the subject-matter of the controversy, and that is, for all the purposes of the suit, whatever the plaintiff declares it to be in his pleadings.' Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co. v. Ide, 114 U. S. 52, 56, 5 Sup. Ct. 735, 29 L. Ed. 63. See, also, many other cases, notably Powers v. Chesapeake & Ohio R. R. Co., 169 U. S. at page 97, 18 Sup. Ct. 264, 42 L. Ed. 673. In such a situation, and in view of the authorities cited, we must hold that the plaintiffs were entitled to sue in the state court for all the relief they seek, and in their one suit to set up their claim to have the amount of the Trust Company's lien ascertained, and provision made in any decree which might be entered either for the liquidation of that lien or for a reduction of the amount for which notes should be given—either one or both—as equity might demand, and therefore that the Trust Company is a proper, and indeed a necessary, party to the controversy between the plaintiffs and Barriger."

4. Fraudulent Joinder of Defendants

c. Joinder of Master and Servant (p. 116)

Where a state statute provides that in actions for injury to property occasioned by fire communicated by any locomotive engine the fact that the fire was so communicated shall be taken as prima facie evidence to charge with negligence the owners and lessees of the railroad and the person having the "care and management" of the engine, the engineer in charge of the locomotive may properly be joined in such an action as a defendant with the railroad company, and such joinder cannot be deemed fraudulent even though it prevents the removal of the action to a federal court on the ground of diversity of citizenship. Poorman v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Del. 1918) 255 Fed. 985.

6. Suits by Assignees (p. 119)

Where an assignee of a claim sues non-residents in a state court, the citizenship of his assignors controls on a removal of the case to a federal court and if they could not have originally maintained the suit in the district to which it is removed because some of them do not reside therein, the case will be remanded to the state court. Guaranty Trust Co. v. McCabe, (C. C. A. 2d. Cir. 1918) 250 Fed 699, 163 C. C. A. 31.

7. Suits by and against Aliens (p. 120)

To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Matarazzo v. Hustis, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 882.

XI. SEPARABLE CONTROVERSY AS GROUND OF REMOVAL

3. Tests of Separability (p. 123)

a. In General (p. 123)

"The test applied by the Supreme Court of the United States in many decisions seems to me: Does the declaration state a good case of joint liability under the state laws? If it does, the case is not separable." Baker v. Jacksonville Traction Co., (S. D. Fla. 1917) 247 Fed. 718.

That plaintiff might have been sued by defendants jointly.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Bryan v. Barger, (W. D. Ky. 1918) 251 Fed. 328.

14. Several Plaintiffs (p. 138)

Where neither all the plaintiffs nor the defendant are residents of the district where the suit is brought, the suit is not removable at the instance of a resident plaintiff, unless it involves a separable controversy between him and the defendant. Webb v. Southern R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 618, 160 C. C. A. 518.

In an action by a state and the lessee of a state-owned railroad against another railroad, there is no separable controversy where it appears that both plaintiffs claim that the defendant has encroached upon the state-owned railroad and it further appears that the lessee derives its right through its lease from the state. Georgia v. Southern R. Co., (N. D. Ga. 1918) 255 Fed. 369.

35. Action for Tort in General (p. 150)

Action against master and third person.—In Fuckett v. Columbus Power Co., (N. D. Ga. 1918) 248 Fed. 353, an action by a telegraph line man against his employer and a power company whose wires came in contact with those of the employer, causing a personal injury, was held to present a separable controversy, the employer being a foreign corporation and the power company a domestic corporation. The court said: "Of course, the duty to an employee arising from the relation of master and servant is a duty which cannot be charged to any one except the employer. The right claimed here against the Telegraph Company is that of being entitled to a safe place to work, and a claim for damages because he was injured by reason of the master's failure to provide him a safe place to work is an issue that could only arise between servant and master. The Power Company would not be liable in any way to the plaintiff for the duty which a master owes to his servant."

Action against railroad for damage by fire.

—Where a resident of a state sues a non-resident railroad company for fire damage, suing for himself and for the use of several nonresident fire insurance companies, there is no separable controversy. Webb v. Southern R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed 618, 160 C. C. A. 518.

36. Action of Tort Against Master and Servant (p. 153)

Removal denied.—In Forman v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Ill. 1918) 255 Fed. 985, an action was brought in a state court against a nonresident railroad company and its resident engineer to recover damages occasioned to the plaintiff's property by fire being communicated to it from a locomotive engine of the railroad company. A state statute provided that in such actions the fact that the fire was so communicated should be taken as prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the owners or lessees of the railroad and the person having care and management of the engine. It was held that the joinder of the engineer as a party defendant was proper and that there was no separable controversy authorizing removal by the company.

XII. REMOVAL FOR PREJUDICE OR LOCAL INFLUENCE

10. What Constitutes Required "Prejudice or Local Influence"

c. Prejudice of Judges (p. 177)

In general.—To the same effect as the original annotation see In re Sherwood, (1918) 259 Pa. St. 254, 203 Atl. 42, L. R. A. 1918 D. 447.

XIII. WHO MAY REMOVE A SUIT

2. Only a Defendant

b. Claimant of Funds Held by Trustee Process (p. 186)

Persons summoned as trustees of the defendant have no interest in the main controversy but are merely stakeholders and their residence is immaterial upon the question of removal. Dunbar v. Rosenbloom, (1918) 230 Mass. 176, 119 N. E. 829.

XIV. FEDERAL JURISDICTION TO BE SHOWN IN RECORD ON REMOVAL

1. In General (p. 213)

In Dunbar v. Rosenbloom, (1918) 230 Mass. 176, 119 N. E. 829, which was an appeal from an order of the superior court accepting defendants' petition and bond for the removal of the cause, the court said: "The only question presented is whether as matter of law a case for removal is made out on the face of the record. If any issues of fact are raised, they must be heard and determined in the federal and not in the state court. Long v. Quinn, (1913) 215 Mass. 85, 102 N. E. 348. All the elements requisite to make out a case for removal on the face of the record are present. This is a civil action at law involving the requisite jurisdictional amount, between citizens of different states, the defendant not being a resident of this state and being the party petitioning for the removal to the federal court, and the petition for removal is in proper form."

XV. REMAND RESTORING STATE COURTS' JURISDICTION

2. Conclusiveness of Order of Remand (p. 223)

The order of remand is conclusive and it cannot be reviewed in the state court. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Wade, (1918) 132 Ark. 551, 201 S. W. 787.

7. Time to Plead in Various States

j. In Massachusetts (p. 241)

In Dunbar v. Rosenbloom, (1918) 230 Mass. 176, 119 N. E. 829, the court said: "The petition for removal must be filed by the defendant 'at the time or any time before the defendant is required by the laws of the state or the rule of the state court in which such suit is brought to answer or plead to the declaration or complaint of the plaintiff.' Judicial Code, § 29. Answers and like pleadings must be filed within twenty days from the return or entry day of the writ under our practice. Rule 7 of Superior Court Common-Law Rules 1915. It is a necessary implication of this rule that the twenty days do not begin to run until the time specified in a precept of the court served in some adequate form upon the defendant ordering him to appear. A defendant cannot be required to plead to an action at law until he has first been summoned to court. Wind- sor v. McVeigh, (1876) 93 U. S. 274, 279, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 914. See Herbert v. Bicknell, 233 U. S. 70, 34 S. Ct. 562, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 854. Special provision is made by our laws for service of a precept upon a nonresident defendant upon whom no personal or other adequate service has been made. R. L. c. 167, § 34; chapter 170, § 6. On this record no service has been made on the defendant. Therefore, the time for him to answer under the rule had not come. Leavis v. Northern R. Co., (1885) 139 Mass. 294, 1 N. E. 546. It is of no consequence whether he had actual knowledge of the matter or not. He had not appeared voluntarily before filing the petition for removal. Cases like Olds v. City Trust, etc., Co., (1901) 180 Mass. 1, 61 N. E. 223; Morrison v. Underwood, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 52, and Cheshire Nat. Bank v. Jaynes, (1916) 224 Mass. 14, 112 N. E. 500, relied upon by the plaintiff, have no relevancy in this connection. No discussion is required to demonstrate that the defendant might at his option appear at an earlier time than that limited by the rule, in order to file his petition for removal. Courts interpose no barrier to the voluntary appearance of defendants seeking an early adjudication of their rights."

See Williams v. Miller, (W. D. Va. 1918) 249 Fed. 495.

8. When Time Begins to Run (p. 242)

Personal service superseding previous constructive service.—F., a citizen of Oklahoma, commenced an action against D., a citizen of the state of Texas, causing a summons to be issued and served upon D. in the latter state, which required the defendant to answer the petition of the plaintiff on or before the 1st day of April, 1914. After the service of this summons, which by statute (section 4727, Rev. Laws 1910) was entitled to no other or greater force and effect than service by publication, the defendant voluntarily came within the jurisdiction of the trial court, whereupon personal summons was duly issued and served upon him, which required him to answer the petition of the plaintiff on or before the 6th day of March, 1914. It was held (1) that the latter personal summons superseded the former summons by publication, and that the answer day fixed therein was the time the defendant was required by the laws of the state to answer or plead to the petition of the plaintiff; (2) that a petition for the removal of said cause from the state to the federal court, which was not made and filed until after the expiration of said date, was made and filed too late to comply with the requirements of this section 29; (3) that the plaintiff is not estopped from complaining of the defendant's delay. Dickinson v. Foot, (Okla. 1918) 173 Pac. 522.

10. Extension of Time by Order or Stipulation (p. 242)

Under Act of 1887-1888 and Judicial Code.—Stipulation of parties.—Where a state statute requires a defendant to answer within the time specified in the summons or "such further time as may have been granted" and an extension of time is granted by stipulation of counsel, the defendant may file a petition for removal at any time within the period of the extension. Citizens' Trust, etc., Bank v. Hobbs, (S. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 479.

Order of court.—The enlargement by order of court of the time to answer does not extend the time of filing a removal petition. Malloy v. Marshall-Wells Hardware Co., (1918) 90 Ore. 303, 173 Pac. 267, 175 Pac. 659, 176 Pac. 589.

Stipulation of parties.—The enlargement by stipulation of the parties of the time to answer does not extend the time for filing a removal petition. Malloy v. Marshall-Wells Hardware Co., (1918) 90 Ore. 303, 173 Pac. 267, 175 Pac. 659, 176 Pac. 589.

24. Waiver of Objection for Delay (p. 265)

A petition for removal should be filed on the return day of the writ, but this requirement is in the nature of a limitation and may be waived. Williams v. Miller, (W. D. Va. 1918) 249 Fed. 495.

Where the defendant's attorney filed a petition for removal two days after the latest time for filing the petition, and several days thereafter an agreed order was entered by the plaintiff's and defendant's attorneys that the petition for removal should be treated as filed upon the first day of the term, and the same day an order filing the bond for removal was entered, it was held that the plaintiff was estopped from claiming that the petition for removal was not filed in time. Bryan v. Barriger, (W. D. Ky. 1918) 251 Fed. 328.

IV. PETITION FOR REMOVAL

1. Necessity of Petition (p. 273)

a. In General—Mere Motion (p. 273)

All parties sued for a joint tort must join in a petition for removal. Powell v. Southern R. Co., (1918) 110 S. C. 70, 96 S. E. 292, holding that an action for personal injuries against a railway company and a bridge company, if it is alleged that the transaction was one and that the defendants had concurrent parts therein, is for a joint tort, though the railway company was sued as employer under the federal employer's liability act and the bridge company at common law.

V. BOND FOR REMOVAL

5. Condition (p. 319)

A bond conditioned for the filing of the record in the District Court of the district where the suit is pending or the District Court of another named state is insufficient. Webb v. Southern R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 618, 160 C. C. A. 518.

Vol. V, p. 380, Jud. Code, sec. 33.
[First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 148.]

III. Right to remove.

1. In general.

IV. Procedure for removal.

1. Time for filing petition.

III. RIGHT TO REMOVE

1. In General (p. 383)

Suits by aliens.—In a suit by an alien against an officer of the court brought in a state where the defendant does not reside, the question of its removability to a federal court is governed by this section rather than by section 34. Matarazzo v. Hustis, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 882.

Receiver as "officer of court."—A receiver of a railroad appointed by the District Court in the district where he resided, and later appointed as receiver in ancillary proceedings by the federal court in the district to which a suit brought by an alien against him as receiver is removed, is an "officer of the court" in the latter district within the meaning of this section. Matarazzo v. Hustis, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 882.

IV. PROCEDURE FOR REMOVAL

1. Time for Filing Petition (p. 384)

A petition of an accused for the removal of a prosecution against him for grand larceny instituted in a state court, is sufficient under this section where it denies his guilt, alleges that he is a revenue officer and that the prosecution resulted from the transaction of his official duties. State v. Peak, (S. D. Ala. 1918) 252 Fed. 306. Regarding the denial of guilt by the accused, the court said: "It is true that the terms of the act as written give the right of removal when a suit or criminal prosecution is commenced against a revenue officer on account of any act done under color of his office. I do not, however, concede that the accused must necessarily admit the doing of the specified act in the terms as charged in the state indictment. I think that he has just as much right, if whatever act he did was under color of his office, to have the benefit of a trial of the facts in the federal court, as well as to try the question of the intent with which these acts were done. The accused might well deny that he is guilty of the specified acts with which he is charged, and yet concede that he did do certain acts at that time, but deny that he did the acts he is specifically charged with. The facts may be so charged in the indictment as to involve a confession, if conceded as charged. The officer may admit doing an act, but claim that the statement of facts in the indictment are incorrectly stated. The terms of the Removal Act provide that, when a criminal prosecution is commenced in a state court against any officer 'on account of any act done under color of his office or of any such law,' it may be removed.

Certainly the officer must admit the doing of some act under color of his office or of the law for which he is indicted, but he is not required to admit the doing of the acts as charged in the indictment."

7. Sufficiency of motion.

I. DISMISSAL OF SUIT

4. Procedure for Dismissal

a. In general (p. 403)

Dismissal by court on its own motion.—

Where it appears that a District Court has no jurisdiction over a controversy before it, the court on its own initiative should dismiss the suit, and if it fails to do so it is the duty of the Circuit Court of Appeals to dismiss it. Cunard Steamship Co. v. Smith, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 846.

Costs.—Where a suit is brought in the District Court against a foreign corporation and a citizen of the same state as the plaintiff impleaded as defendant, the purpose being to give the federal court jurisdiction of the latter defendant, the Circuit Court of Appeals in reversing the judgment of the District Court and dismissing the suit for lack of jurisdiction, may direct the lower court to enter judgment under this section against the plaintiff for costs in both courts. Devost v. Twin State Gas, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 125, 164 C. C. A. 237.

II. GROUNDS FOR REMAND

1. Want of Jurisdiction, in General (p. 407)

Amount in controversy.—A case will not be remanded to the state court unless it is certain that the maximum limit of possible recovery at the date of commencing suit, and under any theory which plaintiff might have fairly entertained, was less than the jurisdictional amount. Chesbrough v. Woodworth,

(C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 881, 164 C. C. A. 97.

2. Suit Not within Original Federal Jurisdiction in the Particular District (p. 408)

To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Fitzhugh v. Reid, (E. D. Ark. 1918) 252 Fed. 234.

Where an action removed to a federal court could not have originally been brought there, and the plaintiff objects and moves to remand, there is no waiver by him and the federal court is without jurisdiction. Guaranty Trust Co. v. McCabe, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 699, 163 C. C. A. 31.

III. WAIVER OR AMENDMENT OF DEFECTS

1. Waiver of Objection—Estoppel to Object (p. 414)

"If general federal jurisdiction exists, the want of local jurisdiction or venue in the particular federal court to which a cause has been removed, is waived, where the plaintiff, after the removal, without challenging such jurisdiction by motion to remand or otherwise, consents to and accepts such jurisdiction by affirmative acts in recognition thereof and submission thereto." General Invest. Co. v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 160, 162 C. C. A. 296, modifying (N. D. Ohio 1915) 228 Fed. 976.

After removal of a case to a federal court, a special appearance and motion to remand by the plaintiff protects and preserves his rights in that regard, and his subsequent amendment of the complaint after a denial of the motion to remand is not a waiver of his rights. Guaranty Trust Co. v. McCabe, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 699, 163 C. C. A. 31.

3. Amendment of Petition for Removal

a. In General (p. 417)

Amendment after removal.—In Georgia v. Southern R. Co., (N. D. Ga. 1918) 255 Fed. 369, it was questioned, but not decided, whether the petition for removal was amendable in the federal court, after removal, by the addition of an allegation designed to show a federal question, as set forth in the report of the case at p. 374.

c. As to Alienage (p. 420)

Amendment of petition.—Where a defendant in an action in a state court assumes, from the allegations of the complaint and the information at his disposal, that the plaintiff is a citizen of the United States and of the state in which the action is brought, and makes such allegations in his petition for removal, but subsequently on a motion to remand the plaintiff states he is an alien and citizen of Italy, the defendant will be permitted to amend his petition for removal to accord with the facts. Matarazzo v. Hustis, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 882.

IV. ISSUES OF FACT IN REMOVED CASES

1. Necessity of Issue (p. 421)

Failure to put in issue averments of petition for removal.—The jurisdictional facts averred in the petition for removal constitute the basis of jurisdiction of the federal court, and where the plaintiff fails to put in issue the averments of the petition and to offer any evidence in support of the same, his petition to remand will be denied. Woodall v. Clark, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 526, 166 C. C. A. 84.

V. PROCEDURE FOR REMAND

1. *Remand on Court's Own Motion*a. For Want of Jurisdiction (p. 429)

Where the venue in the District Court is not jurisdictional, in the sense that it cannot be waived, there being a diversity of citizenship, the court may not remand the cause of its own motion because of the fact that neither of the parties to the action is a citizen of the state and federal district from which the case is removed. Fitzhugh v. Reid, (E. D. Ark. 1918) 252 Fed. 234.

7. Sufficiency of Motion (p. 987)

A plea to the jurisdiction of a federal court, to which a case has been removed from a state court, should be treated as a motion to remand where it appears from the plea that the court has no jurisdiction of the case. Poorman v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Ill. 1918) 255 Fed. 987.

As all jurisdictional objections may be made in a federal court after removal, a motion may be granted to set aside service of summons on a foreign corporation for want of jurisdiction on the ground that it was not doing business in the state in which the suit was originally brought. Partola Mfg. Co. v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 250 Fed. 273.

III. PROCEDURE AFTER REMOVAL

1. Status of Proceedings Had in State Court
(p. 462)

If a cause of action has no right to exist in the jurisdiction where suit is brought, the plaintiff cannot vitalize it by getting it transferred to another jurisdiction. Accordingly, where a suit, instituted in a territorial court and prohibited from being maintained there by a statute of the territory, is removed to a federal court, such court takes the case as it stood at the time of removal, subject to the legal status and rights of the parties as they were established at that time. Utah Constr. Co. v. St. Louis Constr., etc., Co., (D. C. N. M. 1916) 254 Fed. 321.

I. Construction and scope of provision.

4. "Regular and Established Place of Business."

II. Jurisdiction.

1. Generally.

I. CONSTRUCTION AND SCOPE OF PROVISION

4. "Regular and Established Place of Business" (p. 478)

"Place of business" as used in this section "is understood to mean, not a place at which any transactions having any reference to the foreign corporation are carried on, but a place at which it does such business as makes it 'found' within the district for the purpose of service; i. e., business carried on in such manner and to such an extent as will warrant the inference that it is present there through its agents." American Electric Welding Co. v. Lalance, etc., Mfg. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1917) 256 Fed. 34.

Office for soliciting business only.—The maintenance of an office by a manufacturing corporation for the purpose of soliciting orders and forwarding them to the main office of the corporation in another state, does not constitute a "regular and established place of business" within the meaning of this section. American Electric Welding Co. v. Lalance, etc., Mfg. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1917) 256 Fed. 34.

Another corporation as agent.—If an incorporated jobbing company solicits orders and forwards them to its principal, a corporation, at its home office in another state, and the goods are shipped direct by the principal, the sale is consummated in the latter jurisdiction and does not constitute an infringement of patent within the district in which the jobbing company is located so as to confer jurisdiction. Stryker Deflector Co. v. Perrin Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 656, 168 C. C. A. 50.

1. Generally (p. 480)

Diversity of citizenship unnecessary.—So far as the suit is to recover from the defendant for the alleged infringement of the patent, and to restrain further infringement thereof, it is not denied that so much of the suit as so claims is within the jurisdiction of this court, irrespective of the citizenship of the parties thereto. Shrauger v. Phillip Bernard Co., (N. D. Ia. 1917) 247 Fed. 547.

Aliens.—It seems to be settled law that aliens are not inhabitants of any district, and may be sued in any district within which process can be served on them. Sandusky Foundry, etc., Co. v. DeLavaud, (N. D. Ohio 1918) 251 Fed. 631.

Waiver of objections as to venue.—In Stryker Deflector Co. v. Perrin Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 656, 168 C. C. A. 50, it was held that where the question of jurisdiction was raised on preliminary motion and denied, an answer reserving objections previously taken to the court's jurisdiction did not waive an objection as to venue.

Waiver of objections to jurisdiction.—“The proper rule is that section 48 should have the same construction as section 51 of the Judicial Code; that is to say, it does not take away the jurisdiction of the District Court in patent cases, but prescribes merely the district in which such a suit may be brought, and is a privilege conferred upon a defendant, which he may waive. In other words, in suits arising under the patent laws, a defendant has a right to insist on the privilege of being sued in a district of which he is an inhabitant, or in a district where he shall have committed acts of infringement and have a regular and established place of business; in other causes of action, the defendant is entitled to insist that he shall be sued in the district of which he is an inhabitant, or, if jurisdiction is invoked only because of diversity of citizenship, in the district of which either the plaintiff or defendant is a resident. This, however, is a personal privilege respecting only the forum within which the action may be maintained. It is a privilege upon which the defendant only may insist, and which he may waive. He will be held to have waived it if he does not, prior to entering a general appearance to the action, take objection in proper form to the jurisdiction of the court over him.” Sandusky Foundry, etc., Co. v. DeLavaud, (N. D. Ohio 1918) 251 Fed. 631, wherein the court further said: “In this case, as appears from the facts above stated, the two individual defendants appeared generally to the action and answered to the merits before the motion to dismiss was made. From this it follows that the objection that the defendants are sued in a district in which they are not inhabitants, or in a district in which they did not infringe and did not have an established place of business, is waived. It is open to complainant to prove infringement anywhere within the United States.”

IV. PARTIES (p. 483)

Provision declaratory of former equity rule.—To same effect as original annotation, see Brown v. Crawford, (D. C. Ore. 1918) 252 Fed. 248.

State laws and practice.—Where state statutes provide for judgments against a firm by the service of process on one partner and give the holder of a written obligation signed by two or more persons the right to proceed against the survivors in case of the death of one of them, a District Court in such state has jurisdiction under this section of an action against a partnership for breach of contract, although only one of the partners is a resident of the district. Calder v. Rosenthal, (S. D. Ga. 1918) 250 Fed. 507.

Action by minority stockholders against corporation and directors.—Where minority stockholders bring suit against the corporation in a federal court of the state in which it is incorporated and has its property and business, and join as a party defendant the managing director, who is a citizen and resident of the state, alleging in the bill that the directors, they being also the principal stockholders, defrauded the corporation for their individual benefit by certain transactions, the court should not dismiss the suit on the defendant's motion because the other directors, who are not indispensable parties, are not joined as defendants, if by reason of their being absent from the state they cannot be served or because their joinder would oust the court's jurisdiction, but under this section and equity rule 39 should proceed without them and grant such necessary relief as is within its jurisdiction. Krouse v. Brevard Tannin Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 538, 161 C. C. A. 464.

IV. JURISDICTION

3. Objections to Jurisdiction (p. 494)

Objections to venue of suit.—Where there is requisite diversity of citizenship in a suit in a federal court and the court's jurisdiction is founded solely on that fact, an objection that the suit should have been brought in the district of the defendant's residence rather than in that of the plaintiff's residence, is one regarding venue rather than jurisdiction and is not well taken. Tate v. Baugh, (W. D. Tenn. 1918) 252 Fed. 317.

The Postmaster General cannot be sued over his objection in a federal court in a district in which he is not a resident, for the purpose of enjoining him, as administrator of a telegraph and telephone system under federal control, from enforcing rates which he has established, on the ground that such action violates the joint resolution of Congress authorizing such federal control. Railroad Commissioners v. Burleson, (N. D. Fla. 1919) 255 Fed. 604.

4. Change of Citizenship or Residence and Effect of (p. 495)

Fraudulent change of residence — burden of proof.—The defendant in a suit for damages in a federal court has the burden of proving that the plaintiff has fraudulently changed his residence and removed from one district to another for the purpose of bringing suit in the latter district. Davis v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1919) 256 Fed. 407.

5. *Where Parties Are Joined*b. Plaintiffs (p. 496)

See to the same effect as the original annotation, James v. Amarillo City Light, etc., Co., (N. D. Tex. 1918) 251 Fed. 337.

c. Defendants (p. 496)

Defendants living in different states.—The limitation of the jurisdiction of federal district courts to the district of the residence "of either the plaintiff or the defendant," which is made by this section, where jurisdiction is rested solely on diversity of citizenship, must, if there are several defendants, be construed to confine jurisdiction to the district of the plaintiff's residence, or that in which all of the defendants reside, notwithstanding the provision of section 50 that if there are several defendants and one or more of them are neither inhabitants of nor found within the district and do not voluntarily appear, the court may entertain jurisdiction and proceed to trial between the parties who are properly before it. The only exceptions to the rule laid down in section 51 is the one made by section 52, which provides that if there are two or more defendants residing in different districts of the same state, suit may be brought in either district. Camp v. Gress, (1919) 250 U. S. 308, 39 S. Ct. 478, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 121, 156 C. C. A. 549.

The diversity of citizenship requisite to federal jurisdiction exists where the defendants, though not citizens of the same state, are all citizens of states other than that of the plaintiff. Camp v. Gress, (1919) 250 U. S. 308, 39 S. Ct. 478, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 121, 156 C. C. A. 549.

One defendant improperly joined.—Where it is apparent from the pleadings that a co-defendant is not responsible for the alleged injurious acts and it appears that the other defendant may be sued in the district in which he is a resident, the suit will be dismissed as to the defendant who has been improperly joined. Railroad Commissioners v. Burleson, (N. D. Fla. 1919) 255 Fed. 604.

Who may object.—A resident defendant cannot avail himself of the objection that, under this section, his nonresident codefendant was not suable within the district. This is an exemption from suit personal to the nonresident of the district. Camp v. Gress, (1919) 250 U. S. 308, 39 S. Ct. 478, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 121, 156 C. C. A. 549.

Error in retaining jurisdiction of a non-resident codefendant, contrary to this section, in an action upon a joint contract, does not require that a judgment for plaintiff be set aside as against the resident defendants unless the latter were prejudiced thereby, since, if the trial court had sustained the nonresident's plea to the jurisdiction, the suit might, under section 50, have proceeded to judgment as against the resident defendants. Camp v. Gress, (1919) 250 U. S. 308, 39 S. Ct. 478, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 121, 156 C. C. A. 549.

V. APPLICABILITY

4. *Corporations*b. Effect of Doing Business in State (p. 502)

Maintenance of office force in state.—A foreign railroad corporation will be regarded as doing business in a state so as to subject it to a suit for damages because of injury to a passenger, where it maintains an office and office force in such state in charge of an agent, known as its New England agent, through which office it solicits passenger and freight business for its lines. Walsh v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1916) 256 Fed. 47. But the contrary was held on a similar state of facts in Davis v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1919) 256 Fed. 407, wherein it was said: "On the question whether a defendant corporation was doing business in any given district to such an extent that it can be said to have been corporately present there, the cases shade into one another. In St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Alexander, 227 U. S. 218, 33 Sup. Ct. 245, 57 L. Ed. 486, Ann. Cas. 1915B 77; Reynolds v. M., K. & T. Ry. Co., 228 Mass. 584, 117 N. E. 913, and Walsh v. Atlantic Coast Line Ry., 256 Fed. 47, D. C. Mass., Feb. 19, 1916, the corporation was held to be present. In Green v. C., B. & Q. R. R. Co., 205 U. S. 530, 27 Sup. Ct. 595, 51 L. Ed. 916, and in American Electric Welding Co. v. Lalanc & Grosjean Co., 256 Fed. 34, D. C. Mass., July 31, 1917, it was held not to be present. This case seems to me to be distinguishable from the Walsh Case, and to fall within the latter class of cases rather than in the former." To same effect, see Graustein v. Rutland R. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1919) 256 Fed. 409.

Section 53 not applicable.—The venue of an action against a foreign corporation doing business in a state is governed by section 51 of the Judicial Code permitting action in the district of the residence of the plaintiff and not by section 53 requiring action in the district where the defendant resides, where the district is one having more than one division. McCullough v. United Grocers' Corp., (N. D. Ohio 1918) 247 Fed. 880.

5. Action or Proceeding and Subject Matter (p. 506)

Personal injury and death.—An action based upon a state statute providing for the maintenance of an action for death by wrongful act, neglect or default, where the deceased might have maintained an action for damages if death had not ensued, is of a transitory and remedial nature and may be brought in a District Court sitting in a state having a similar statute. Lauria v. Du Pont De Nemours, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 353, 162 C. C. A. 423.

Suits for violation of Sherman and Clayton Acts.—Although a bill charging a violation of the Sherman Act (see vol. IX, p. 644) and the Clayton Act (see vol. IX, p. 730), presents a federal question justiciable in a District Court under section 24 of the Judicial Code, yet under this section the suit cannot be brought by original process in any other district than that in which the defendant resides, as none of the venue provisions of the Sherman or Clayton Acts is applicable.

Venner v. Pennsylvania Steel Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 292.

VI. WAIVER

1. Generally (p. 511)

Right a personal one which may be waived.—To same effect as original annotation, see Matarazzo v. Hustis, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 882.

The limitation in section 48 as to the district of residence of defendant or of place of business and acts of infringement relates merely to the place of suit and may be waived. Champion Spark Plug Co. v. Champion Ignition Co., (E. D. Mich. 1917) 247 Fed. 200.

2. Appearance and Pleading to the Merits a. Generally (p. 513)

Filing of answer with reservations.—Where the court has allowed a substitution of plaintiffs over the defendant's objection, the filing of an answer with reservation of all objections previously made to the court's jurisdiction is not a waiver of the right to object to the jurisdiction. Lchigh Valley Coal Co. v. Lazusaskine, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 93.

Request for costs.—An inadvertent request for costs is not a waiver of the right to object to the maintenance of the action itself. Budris v. Consolidation Coal Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 673.

b. General Appearance (p. 514)

Action by alien against domestic corporation.—It has been settled that a waiver by any act equivalent to a general appearance will confer jurisdiction upon a District Court of the United States to hear an action brought by an alien against a domestic corporation, in a district other than that in which the corporation was organized and of which it is a citizen. Budris v. Consolidation Coal Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 673.

Appointment of receiver.—A foreign corporation by voluntarily appearing and filing its answer to a petition for the appointment of a receiver, filed in the District Court in the state in which it is doing its principal business, waives any objections to the court's lack of jurisdiction of it. Scattergood v. American Pipe, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 23, 161 C. C. A. 83.

c. Special Appearance (p. 515)

Special appearance coupled with application for extension of time to answer.—It has now been settled that a defendant does not consent to jurisdiction by a special appearance, even when coupled with an application for extension of time to answer, if the plea be overruled. Budris v. Consolidation Coal Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 673, wherein the court said: "A special appearance for the purpose of dismissing the particular action for lack of jurisdiction over the defendant, and not on the merits, would not be waived by the mere exercise of the jurisdiction, with the consent of the defendant, necessary to hear the motion. . . . An incidental suggestion to the court that a plea in bar, on the ground of prior adjudication, could also be interposed, added nothing, and was not a consent for the exercise of jurisdiction in the particular case, unless interposed before the making of the special plea, or as a waiver thereof, if made subsequently."

4. Removal (p. 517)

Objections as to venue.—In a case where jurisdiction depends upon diversity of citizenship under this section, the plaintiff, in case of removal, has the right to insist upon or to waive his objection to the venue of the suit. Guaranty Trust Co. v. McCabe, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 699, 163 C. C. A. 31.

5. Acceptance of Service (p. 517)

Effect of acceptance.—The exemption of a nonresident defendant, under this section, from suit in a federal court in a district other than that of the residence of plaintiff or defendant, where jurisdiction is based solely on diversity of citizenship, cannot be said to have been waived by an acknowledgment of service on the summons, if such defendant properly asserted his privilege by plea to the jurisdiction. Camp v. Gress, (1919) 250 U. S. 308, 39 S. Ct. 478, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 121, 156 C. C. A. 549.

Vol. V, p. 518, Jud. Code, sec. 52.

Waiver of proper venue.—"In suits not of a local nature, if there be but one defendant, he may waive being sued in the wrong district, or consent to being sued anywhere; but when there are two or more defendants, residing in different districts of the state, then to reach the defendants not residing in the district where the suit is brought it must be brought as the statute directs, unless the other defendants waive or consent." Primos Chemical Co. v. Fulton Steel Corp., (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 454.

II. Jurisdiction.

III. Applicability.

II. JURISDICTION (p. 521)

"If the plaintiff sues in the state court outside the jurisdiction in which he must have brought suit had he sued in the United States District Court, he cannot thereby defeat removal pursuant to section 53 of the Judicial Code, for 'in all cases of the removal of suits from the courts of a state to the District Court of the United States such removal shall be to the United States District Court in the division in which the county is situated from which the removal is made.' In this case the removal was made from the state court in Saratoga county in the Northern District of New York, in which county the plaintiff resided and in which county he laid the venue and commenced his action to the United States District Court of the Northern District of New York, and this was done pursuant to and in strict accordance with the provisions of section 53, Judicial Code. The right of removal was absolute even if the plaintiff could not have sued in that district. M. Hohenberg & Co. v. Mobile Liners, (D. C.) 245 Fed. 109. In that case plaintiff sued defendant in the state court in a state of which defendant was not a resident. The defendant removed it to the United States District Court of the district in which the county in which the suit was brought was situated. The plaintiff moved to remand the cause. Held, he could not contest the removal on the ground that he could not have brought the suit in the District Court of the United States of that district over the defendant's objection. Where an alien sues a citizen in a state court in which state such defendant does not reside, the defendant may remove the case into the United States court, and it will not be remanded. H. J. Decker, Jr., & Co. v. Southern Ry. Co., (C. C.) 189 Fed. 224. Having there brought his suit, and defendant not objecting, the plaintiff cannot then complain that he could not have sued defendant in such district, and that hence the cause was improperly removed. H. J. Decker & Co. v. Southern Ry. Co., supra. In Rones v. Katalla Co., (C. C.) 182 Fed. 946, it was held that an action brought by an alien in a state court against a nonresident of such state in which the suit was brought may be removed to the United States District Court. O'Connor v. Texas, 202 U. S. 501, 26 Sup. Ct. 726, 50 L. Ed. 1120, is not a decision to the contrary. There the state of Texas sued an alien, Thos. O'Connor, domiciled in the republic of Mexico, in the state courts of Texas, to recover the possession of a large tract of land in said state. No constitutional question was involved, nor any question under any treaty or law of the United States. The alien was defendant, and of course was not a citizen of the United States, nor was he a resident of or domiciled in the United States. The action was local in its nature and character, and the United States courts had no jurisdiction of the case, as it was not one between citizens, or a citizen of a state and a foreign state, or a citizen or a subject of a foreign state. The plaintiff was the state of Texas, not a citizen of Texas, nor of any state, and hence the case was not within section 24 of the Judicial Code." Matarazzo v. Hustis, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 882.

III. APPLICABILITY (p. 522)

Action against foreign corporation.—The venue of an action against a foreign corporation doing business in the state is governed by section 51 of the Judicial Code permitting action in the district of the residence of the plaintiff and not by section 53 requiring action in the district where the defendant resides, where the district is one having more than one division. McCullough v. United Grocers' Corp., (N. D. Ohio 1918) 247 Fed. 880.

Bank deposit as property "of a fixed character."—Although a corporation admits the jurisdiction of a District Court in a district other than that in which it has its domicile and principal place of business, such court is without jurisdiction under this section where the only property of the corporation in the district is a bank deposit, for the deposit is not "property of a fixed character," the money becoming the property of the bank and the relation of debtor and creditor existing between the depositor and the bank. Primos Chemical Co. v. Fulton Steel Corp., (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 454.

Lease as property "of a fixed character." A lease of real property for a term of years is personal property and not "property of a fixed character" within the meaning of this section. Primos Chemical Co. v. Fulton Steel Corp., (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 454. See a case involving the same parties in (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 427.

Suit to protect assets for receivership.—Under section 54, a suit to protect the assets of a corporation and to appoint a receiver is one of a local nature and not maintainable under this section in a district where the corporation has no property of a fixed character. Primos Chemical Co. v. Fulton Steel Corp., (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 454.

Waiver of jurisdiction.—In actions of a local nature jurisdiction can be waived neither by consent of the parties nor assumption of jurisdiction by the court, nor by both together. Matarazzo v. Hustis, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 882.

Petition by receiver to prevent interference by public utilities commissions.—A federal District Court which, having acquired jurisdiction and complete control of the property of a natural gas company operating as a unit in three states, turned over the property in one state to a state receiver upon grounds of priority of action, and subsequently appointed the same person as receiver of the property in the other two states, in order that the property could be operated under a single management, has jurisdiction of a suit by such receiver to enjoin alleged confiscatory rates fixed by state commissions. Public Utilities Commission v. Landon, (1919) 249 U. S. 236, 39 S. Ct. 268, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing on other grounds (D. C. Kan. 1917) 234 Fed. 152, (D. C. Kan. 1917) 242 Fed. 658, (D. C. Kan. 1917) 245 Fed. 950.

II. Applicability to particular matters, suits and proceedings.
VII. Judgment or decree.

II. APPLICABILITY TO PARTICULAR MATTERS, SUITS AND PROCEEDINGS (p. 529)

Corporate matters.—Where a railroad leases all its property to another railroad, the lessee agreeing to pay the rental in dividends directly to the lessor's stockholders, and it is adjudged that the rental constitutes net income of the lessor which is subject to the federal corporation tax, nonresident stockholders, who are indispensable parties to a suit by the lessor to have the taxes declared an equitable lien on the dividends in the hands of the lessee, may be brought in by publication under this section. Rensselaer, etc., R. Co. v. Irwin, (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 252 Fed. 921.

Action to set aside fraudulent conveyance.—An action by a judgment creditor to set aside a fraudulent conveyance is not a suit to remove a cloud on title or to enforce a lien. Bank of Commerce, etc. v. McArthur, (S. D. Fla. 1918) 248 Fed. 138.

Other particular suits.—Suits by a state and by the lessee of a state-owned railroad against another railroad for encroachment, which have been removed to a federal court, will be remanded to the state court, where it appears that under a state statute it is doubtful whether the state can be regarded as an unnecessary party, and its lessee as the sole necessary party, so as to give the federal court jurisdiction under this section on the ground that the property is within its jurisdiction. Georgia v. Southern R. Co., (N. D. Ga. 1918) 255 Fed. 369.

VII. JUDGMENT OR DECREE (p. 537)

Decree pro confesso.—Where, on a bill to quiet title brought in a Circuit Court, a necessary party defendant, resident of another state, defaults, after being served with process and being thereby required to meet the allegations that the land is situated in the state where the suit is brought, he admits by such default that the land is in that state and brings himself within the provisions of this section, under which the court may enter judgment against him. Ferguson v. Babcock Lumber, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 705, 164 C. C. A. 545.

  - 2. State courts.
- III. Applicability.
  - 3. Leave to sue.

II. JURISDICTION AND POWERS OF FEDERAL AND STATE COURTS*2. State Courts (p. 543)

Rendition of judgment.—A state court may render a judgment for personal injuries against a railroad operating under a federal receivership. Bush v. Southern Grocery Co., (Ark. 1918) 208 S. W. 299.

Effect of sale by receiver.—Since no leave of court is necessary to give to a state court jurisdiction of an action against a receiver of railroad property appointed in a federal court, a subsequent sale of the property by the receiver and a decree therefor do not oust that jurisdiction. Hawkins v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (Mo. App. 1918) 202 S. W. 1060.

III. APPLICABILITY*3. Leave to Sue (p. 544)

Withdrawal of permission.—Where a District Court, which, through its receivers, is in complete possession of all of the property of a railroad company, grants leave to sue the receiver in a state court, it may thereafter recall its leave to sue there and take jurisdiction of the subject matter of the suit. Investment Registry v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 510, 163 C. C. A. 504, wherein the court said: "The prime end to be served is the due and proper conservation of the property in the hands of the court, in order that there may be prompt and proper administration thereof for the benefit of all having any interest therein. If at any stage of the proceedings the court deems it proper and advisable that any demand or question be litigated elsewhere than in the federal court, it can authorize such litigation to be elsewhere instituted. But neither on principle nor authority does it follow that the court granting the leave to sue may not recall it, if before adjudication in such other tribunal the court granting the leave shall consider, either because of facts subsequently arising, or of new light coming to it as to then existing conditions, it would best subserve the due administration of the estate to recall the granted leave."

"Under such circumstances there is involved no question of comity between different courts, but only that of the best interest of the estate which the court is administering."

[First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 160.]

Jurisdiction of District Courts.—Under the provisions of sections 69-115 of the Judicial Code, the jurisdiction of each of the various District Courts is coextensive with the boundaries of the judicial district in and for which it is established or created, and extends no further, except in those cases where Congress has expressly extended it. Primos Chemical Co. v. Fulton Steel Corp., (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 454.

II. "APPELLATE JURISDICTION TO REVIEW BY APPEAL OR WRIT OF ERROR" (p. 609)

In general.—Where an appeal does not present solely the question of the jurisdiction of the District Court, it may properly be taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals. Hume v. New York, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 488, 166 C. C. A. 564.

III. "FINAL DECISIONS"*2. Definition and Nature (p. 611)

A decision which completely deprives a party in a pending proceeding who is not jointly liable with others of a substantial right or equity is a final decision, and reviewable by appeal or writ of error under this section. Bankers' Trust Co. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 789, 164 C. C. A. 23.

6. Bankruptcy (p. 614)

What are "bankruptcy proceedings."—A petition by a trustee to have a deed by the bankrupt declared to be a mortgage and the land sold subject thereto is not a "bankruptcy proceeding" but is appealable under the general appellate jurisdiction of the Circuit Court of Appeals. Sauve v. M. L. More Invest. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 642, 160 C. C. A. 542.

14. Mortgage Foreclosure Proceedings (p. 615)

An order in a railroad trust mortgage foreclosure suit which adjudged that "the acceptance of the benefit of the consolidation or of the extension of the receivership, by this order, shall be deemed a consent to all administrative orders heretofore made in the consolidated or constituent causes," was held to be a final decision and appealable. Bankers' Trust Co. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 789, 164 C. C. A. 23.

18. Miscellaneous (p. 616)

An order sustaining a demurrer to a declaration in an action at law and one denying leave to the plaintiff in the case to file an amended declaration, are not "final decisions" within the meaning of this section. J. W. Darling Lumber Co. v. Porter, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 455.

Denial of a motion to set aside a verdict is not reviewable on writ of error. American Trading Co. v. North Alaska Salmon Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 665, 160 C. C. A. 565.

V. "CASES" REVIEWABLE

2. Admiralty (p. 618)

Matters of law and fact.—The Circuit Court of Appeals now has the same appellate jurisdiction in admiralty, both as to matters of law and fact, that the Supreme Court had before the Act of Feb. 16, 1875, ch. 77 (see vol. 6, p. 130). The Kia Ora, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 507, 164 C. C. A. 423.

Finality of District Court's decree.—Where the owner of a sunken vessel, after making a contract to have it salvaged, files a petition to limit his liability and the salvor intervenes and files a petition for a preferred lien, which is denied, the decree is final as to the salvor and appealable to the Circuit Court of Appeals. Great Lakes Towing Co. v. St. Joseph-Chicago Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 635, 165 C. C. A. 261.

Considering case de novo.—An appeal in an admiralty case gives the appellate court jurisdiction to consider the case de novo. The John Twohy, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 224.

Withdrawal of appeal.—Where an appeal in an admiralty case is taken by one party only, the appellee is not entitled to a review of the case, and hence the court is not prevented from exercising its discretion to permit a withdrawal of the appeal. The John Twohy, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 224.

VI. CASES WHICH "MAY BE TAKEN DIRECT TO THE SUPREME COURT" (p. 622)

Review of a question of jurisdiction.—If the jurisdiction of the District Court is in issue and decided in favor of the defendant, as that disposes of the case, the plaintiff should have the question certified and take his appeal or writ of error to the Supreme Court. This rule, however, does not apply where the District Court dismisses an action in ejectment because of the objection that the lands which are the subject of the suit are not within its territorial jurisdiction, as such an objection is not one to the jurisdiction of the District Court as a federal court. Davis v. Anderson-Tully Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 681, 164 C. C. A. 521.

VIII. FINALITY OF JUDGMENT AND DECREE OF CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS

3. "Opposite Parties . . . Citizens of Different States" (p. 623)

Removal cases.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Stewart, (1917) 245 U. S. 359, 562, 38 S. Ct. 130, 203, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 345, 472, as set forth in 1918 Supp. at p. 1118, was followed in Southern Pac. Co. v. Stewart, (1919) 248 U. S. 446, 39 S. Ct. 139, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, holding that the Supreme Court had jurisdiction.

4. Federal Question Alone Involved (p. 627)

A federal Circuit Court of Appeals may not entertain appellate jurisdiction in a suit in which the jurisdiction of the District Court was based solely upon the ground that it was one arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States. The decree of the District Court is, under this section and 238, reviewable only by direct appeal to the federal Supreme Court. Raton Water Works Co. v. Raton, (1919) 249 U. S. 552, 39 S. Ct. 384, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court on a certificate from the Circuit Court of Appeals said: "The certificate states that in a cause pending before it on appeal from the district court, the jurisdiction of the court below to entertain the cause on appeal was questioned on the ground that the judgment of the district court was exclusively susceptible of being reviewed by direct appeal to this court. The certificate further states that the parties to the cause in the district court were both corporations of New Mexico and the jurisdiction of the district court to entertain the suit was based solely upon the ground that it was one arising under the Constitution of the United States.

"Resulting from these conditions the question which the certificate propounds is this: 'Has this court [the Circuit Court of Appeals] jurisdiction of the appeal?' The solution of the question is free from difficulty, since whatever at one time may have been the basis for hesitancy concerning the question the necessity for a negative answer is now conclusively manifest as the result of a line of decisions determining that, under the circumstances as stated, the Circuit Court of Appeals was without jurisdiction of the appeal, as the exclusive power to review was vested in this court. Judicial Code, §§ 128, 238; American Sugar Refining Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277-281; Huguley Mfg. Co. v. Galetton Cotton Mills, 184 U. S. 290, 295; Union, etc., Bank v. Memphis, 189 U. S. 71, 73; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co., 202 U. S. 453, 458; Carolina Glass Co. v. South Carolina, 240 U. S. 305, 318. A negative answer to the question propounded is therefore directed."

6. Trademark Cases (p. 627)

Since this section as amended makes trademark decisions in the Circuit Court of Appeals final, an appeal does not lie to the Supreme Court but the only remedy is by certiorari. United Drug Co. v. Theodore Rectanus Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 90, 39 S. Ct. 48, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 545, 141 C. C. A. 301.

IV. "Interlocutory order or decree."

XII. Scope of review.

XIII. Effect of appeal.

IV. "INTERLOCUTORY ORDER OR DECREE" (p. 632)

Whether the District Court has jurisdiction may be determined by the Circuit Court of Appeals on an appeal under this section from an interlocutory decree. Soler v. Scoville, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 932, 166 C. C. A. 32.

XII. SCOPE OF REVIEW (p. 639)

Appeal from an order granting, etc., injunction.—"The appellate court will overrule or reverse an order granting a preliminary injunction only when satisfied that there was error of law in the action of the trial court, or that, upon the facts, there was no reasonable field for discretionary action." Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 29, 164 C. C. A. 141.

The granting of a temporary injunction pending a final hearing is within the discretion of the court and not subject to review if abuse is not shown. Amarillo v. Southwestern Tel., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 638, 165 C. C. A. 264.

XIII. EFFECT OF APPEAL (p. 642)

Appeal from interlocutory order.—Where a defendant appeals from an interlocutory order of a District Court adjudging certain claims of a patent to be infringed, the District Court cannot enter a final decree as to all the issues in the case, as its proceedings are stayed in respect to the issue to be reviewed by the appellate court. Accordingly, where the court attempts to enter such a decree, it is not final and no appeal lies therefrom. Draper Corp. v. Stafford Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 554, 166 C. C. A. 622.

Finality of judgment of Circuit Court of Appeals.—Congress in enacting the Judicial Code contemplated no change as to the finality of the judgments of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in cases taken to that court from the District Court of Alaska. And where a case involving issues relating to the Constitution and also issues not relating to the Constitution goes to the Circuit Court of Appeals on a writ of error to the District Court the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is by the terms of this section final and a writ of error will not lie to it from the Supreme Court. Alaska Pac. Fisheries v. Alaska, (1919) 249 U. S. 53, 39 S. Ct. 208, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (dismissing writ of error to review (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 52, 70, 149 C. C. A. 262, and followed in Alaska Salmon Co. v. Alaska, (1919) 249 U. S. 62, 39 S. Ct. 210, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —), wherein the court set out in the opinion sections 504 and 505 of the Alaska Civil Code as they stood before the enactment of the Judicial Code and then said: "A reading of these sections shows that two classes of cases were provided for: (1) Prize cases, and cases involving the Constitution and treaties; (2) other cases wherein the amount involved exceeds five hundred dollars. In the first class of cases appeal or writ of error was to this court direct. In the second class of cases the writ of error or appeal was to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Under § 505 the judgments of the Circuit Court of Appeals were made final in all cases coming to it from the district court, with the provision that the Circuit Court of Appeals might certify propositions of law to this court in any cases pending before it upon writs of error or appeals. The like provision as to the finality in the Circuit Court of Appeals was, we think, carried into the Judicial Code in § 134 thereof, and a writ of error or appeal to this court was allowed where the Federal Constitution was involved, under the provisions of § 247. In § 134, as in the Alaska Code from which we have quoted, the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals was made final 'in all such cases,' that is, in cases in which the section permitted appeals or writs of error to the Circuit Court of Appeals. . . .

"The plaintiff in error might have taken a writ of error from this court to the District Court. (§ 247.) It did not choose to do so, and as the cases involved issues other than those relating to the Constitution, sued out a writ of error from the Circuit Court of Appeals. By the terms of § 134 the judgment of that court is made final.

"The contention that the effect of this construction is to make the Circuit Court of Appeals a court of final jurisdiction in cases involving questions of the construction and application of the Constitution is met by the suggestion that this court has ample power under the Judicial Code to review judgments of the Circuit Court of Appeals, made final in that court, by writs of certiorari. (§ 240.)"

4. Claims Founded upon Law of Congress (p. 653)

Refund of excess payment made under Public Land Laws.—The jurisdiction of the Court of Claims under this section of claims founded upon any law of Congress extends to a claim based on the refusal of the Secretary of the Interior to grant a refund in a case in which the facts were not in dispute, under the Act of March 26, 1908, § 2 (see vol. 8, p. 528), providing "that in all cases where it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Interior that any person has heretofore or shall hereafter make any payments to the United States under the Public Land Laws in excess of the amount he was lawfully required to pay under such laws, such excess shall be repaid to such person or to his legal representatives." Vol. V, p. 662, Jud. Code, sec. 148. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 201.]

Matters referable.—The language of sections 148 and 149 of the Judicial Code contemplates the reference by a head of a department of a matter in which there is a claimant, to which the United States are defendants, and in which there is a money demand. In re Proposed Reference by Secretary of Navy, (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 370.

Advisory opinions.—A claim or matter pending in a department which involves any controverted questions of fact or law in order to be transmitted to this court under the provisions of section 148, Judicial Code, must be one for the "guidance and action" of said department, and not one that is to be merely advisory. In re Proposed Reference by the Secretary of Navy, (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 370.

Vol. V, p. 664, Jud. Code, sec. 149. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 202.]

Finality of judgment.—Where a claim has been finally disposed of by this court under its general jurisdiction the same cannot be reopened upon the application of the claimant or indirectly presented again for consideration upon the application of someone else; the matter is res judicata. In re Proposed Reference by the Secretary of Navy, (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 370.

IV. COMPUTATION OF TIME (p. 670)

Suit for unrepaid residue of succession tax.—A suit against the United States in the Court of Claims for the unrepaid residue of a succession tax collected contrary to the terms of the Act of June 27, 1902, § 3 (see vol. 4, p. 232), under the War Revenue Act of June 13, 1898 (30 Stat. 448, ch. 448, § 29, is in time, under the six years' limitation prescribed by this section for suits in the Court of Claims, if begun within six years from January 1, 1914, where a claim for a refund was presented to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue not later than that date, since, under the Act of July 27, 1912 (see vol. 4, p. 236), provision is made for the presentation of claims on or before January 1, 1914, for taxes so erroneously collected, and repayment is directed in section 2 to such claimants as have presented or shall hereafter so present their claims and establish them. Sage v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 33, 39 S. Ct. 415, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 628.

Property taken under Abandoned and Captured Property Act.—Money legally exacted by a government agent conformably to the Act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. 375, ch. 225), § 8, from persons availing themselves of the privilege conferred by that Act of bringing in cotton grown in insurrectionary districts to a market opened by the United States forces, conditioned upon the turning over to the government of one-fourth of the cotton or its money equivalent, to become immediately the property of the United States, cannot be deemed to have been property taken under the Abandoned and Captured Property Act of March 12, 1863 (12 Stat. 820, ch. 120), and acts amendatory thereof, within the meaning of this section, conferring jurisdiction on the court to hear and determine the claims of those whose property was so taken and sold, and the net proceeds thereof placed in the Treasury of the United States, since the Act of 1864 deals with a different subject-matter and expressly states that it is an act "in addition" to the "several acts concerning commercial intercourse between loyal and insurrectionary states, and to provide for the collection of captured and abandoned property and the prevention of frauds in states declared to be in insurrection," and therefore cannot be considered as an amendment to the preceding legislation. O'Pry v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 323, 39 S. Ct. 305, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916 51 Ct. Cl. 111.

Service of copy of assignment of error.—The requirement of this section that, upon appeal to the United States Court of Customs Appeals, a copy of the assignment of error "shall be served on the collector, or on the importer, owner, consignee, or agent, as the case may be," is not jurisdictional; and, if omitted or unreasonably delayed, the United States Court of Customs Appeals has ample power to direct its issue. Its delay for more than the 60 days prescribed by the statute is not ground for a motion to dismiss the appeal. Germania Importing Co. v. U. S., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 97.

II. GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS AFFECTING REVIEW OF JUDGMENTS OF STATE COURTS

7. State Practice as Determining Whether Federal Question is Raised (p. 727)

Where a state court decides as a matter of state practice that a federal question presented to it comes too late to be considered, the question will not be considered on writ of error to the United States Supreme Court. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Sealy, (1919) 248 U. S. 363, 38 S. Ct. 97, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review, (1916) 98 Kan. 225, 158 Pac. 62.

III. "FINAL JUDGMENT OR DECREE" (p. 727)

Discretionary power to review.—The fact that the power of an appellate court to review a judgment is discretionary and not imperative or obligatory does not make the judgment a final one so long as that discretion to review exists. Andrews v. Virginian R. Co., (1919) 248 U. S. 272, 39 S. Ct. 101, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Rehearing.—A judgment of a state court becomes final for purposes of review in the federal Supreme Court by writ of error or certiorari in a case in which a petition for rehearing is entertained, upon the date of the denial or other disposition of such petition.

Citizens' Bank v. Opperman, (1919) 249 U. S. 448, 39 S. Ct. 330, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review, (Ind. 1917) 115 N. E. 55.

"It is only a judgment marking the conclusion of the course of litigation in the courts of the state that is subjected to our review. Hence, whatever its form of finality, if a judgment be in fact subject to reconsideration and review by the state court of last resort through the medium of a petition for rehearing, and such a petition is presented to and entertained and considered by that court, we must take it that by the practice prevailing in the state the litigation is not brought to a conclusion until this petition is disposed of, and until then the judgment previously rendered cannot be regarded as a final judgment within the meaning of the act of Congress. We said recently in an analogous case: 'If it were not so, a judgment of a state court susceptible of being reviewed by this court would, notwithstanding that duty, be open at the same time to the power of a state court to review and reverse.' Andrews v. Virginian R. Co., (1919) 248 U. S. 272, 39 S. Ct. 101, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —." Chicago Great Western R. Co. v. Basham, (1919) 249 U. S. 164, 39 S. Ct. 213, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review, (1916) 178 Ia. 998, 154 N. W. 1019, 157 N. W. 192.

V. "HIGHEST COURT OF A STATE" (p. 730)

"Highest" court — In general.—Two writs of error directed respectively to the Supreme Court of a state and to the state trial court are not essential where the former court has reversed a decree of the trial court, with a direction to dismiss the complaint, and such direction has been followed. One writ is sufficient. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Denver, (1919) 250 U. S. 241, 39 S. Ct. 450, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

An intermediate appellate court is, with respect to a case wherein its jurisdiction is exclusive, the highest court of the state. Mitchell v. Joplin Nat. Bank, (1918) 200 Mo. App. 243, 204 S. W. 1125.

VI. QUESTIONS REVIEWABLE BY SUPREME COURT

1. Federal Questions

a. Necessity (p. 733)

To the same effect as the first paragraph, see Palmer v. Ohio, (1918) 248 U. S. 32, 39 S. Ct. 16, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing on writ of error to review (1917) 96 Ohio St. 513, 118 N. E. 102.

Where a case presents no substantial federal question a writ of error will be dismissed. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Maucher, (1919) 248 U. S. 359, 36 S. Ct. 108, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review (1916) 100 Neb. 237, 159 N. W. 422.

Where a motion to dismiss is made in the Supreme Court on the ground that the federal questions raised were not passed upon by the courts of the state, but it appears from the motion that the courts rested their decision on a disputed proposition of fact affecting the merits of the case, the Supreme Court will not grant the motion. American F. Ins. Co. v. King Lumber, etc., Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 2, 39 S. Ct. 431, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming on other grounds 74 Fla. 130.

The Supreme Court will not assume in advance that a state court will so construe a state Employers' Liability Act as to render it obnoxious to the Federal Constitution. Arizona Employers' Liability Cases, (1919) 250 U. S. 400, 39 S. Ct. 553, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 19 Ariz. 151, 182, 166 Pac. 278, 1183, 165 Pac. 1101, 1185.

b. Nonfederal Question in Case in Addition to Federal Question (p. 733)

The general rule.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Petrie v. Nampa, etc., Irrigation Dist., (1918) 248 U. S. 154, 39 S. Ct. 25, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review (1915) 28 Idaho 227, 153 Pac. 425; Farson v. Bird, (1919) 248 U. S. 268, 39 S. Ct. 111, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review (1916) 197 Ala. 384, 72 So. 550.

c. Fictitious, Frivolous or Moot Federal Questions (p. 737)

Moot question.—The moot character of the controversy prevents the federal Supreme Court from deciding, on the merits, appeals from decrees presenting the question as to the right of the Postmaster General or his representatives to interfere with the control, by cable companies, of their property taken over by the President under the authority of the Joint Resolution of July 16, 1918, where, pending the decision of the appeals, such property was all turned back to the cable companies. Commercial Cable Co. v. Burleson, (1919) 250 U. S. 360, 39 S. Ct. 512, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 255 Fed. 99.

An appeal from a decree refusing to enjoin a state auditor and a county sheriff from enforcing a tax levied under the state law on the ground of the repugnancy of such tax to the Federal Constitution must be dismissed where the terms of office of the defendant officials have expired and their successors have qualified, and there is no law of the state authorizing a revival or continuance of the cause of action against such successors. Shaffer v. Howard, (1919) 249 U. S. 200, 39 S. Ct. 255, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (E. D. Okla. 1918) 250 Fed. 873.

Denial of due process and equal protection of law.—The contention of a carrier that an order of a state commission requiring it to transport a carnival show equipment between two points in the state at a specified reasonable rate deprived such carrier of its right to make or refuse to make a contract as a private carrier for the transportation of traveling shows, and thereby denied due process of law and the equal protection of the laws, is too clearly without merit to require consideration by the federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court, where it had been the carrier's practice to transport such shows on application under special contract, and the commission's order permitted the carrier to make the special terms for transportation which had been customary with it in like cases. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Arizona, (1919) 249 U. S. 472, 39 S. Ct. 313, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 19 Ariz. 20, 165 Pac. 303.

2. Questions of Fact (p. 739)

In general.—To the same effect as first paragraph of the original annotation, see Watters v. Michigan, (1918) 248 U. S. 65, 39 S. Ct. 29, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming on other grounds (1916) 192 Mich. 462, 158 N. W. 865.

To the same effect as the second paragraph of the original annotation, see King v. Putnam Invest. Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 23, 39 S. Ct. 15, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (dismissing writ of error to review (1915) 96 Kan. 109), 150 Pac. 559, wherein the court said: "Having previously considered this case (82 Kansas 216; 87 Kansas 842) the court awarded relief because of the violation of a contract of employment to procure the sale of real estate. 96 Kansas 109.

"The case is here in reliance upon a federal question based upon the assumption that the authority to sell included land belonging to the United States covered by an inchoate homestead entry. But the court below expressly found that such land was not included in the contract, hence the sole basis for the asserted federal question disappears. And this result is not changed by considering, to the extent that it is our duty to do so, the question of fact upon which the existence of the alleged federal question depends. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. North Dakota, 236 U. S. 585, 593; Creswill v. Knights of Pythias, 225 U. S. 246, 261; Kansas City Southern Ry. Co. v. Albers Commission Co., 223 U. S. 573, 591. We so conclude because the result of discharging that duty leaves us convinced that the finding below was adequately sustained; indeed, that the record makes it clear that the alleged ground for the federal question was a mere afterthought. The case, therefore, must be and is dismissed for want of jurisdiction."

3. Local and General Law (p. 742)

Rule stated.—To the same effect as the first paragraph of the original annotation, see Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Fletcher Paper Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 30, 39 S. Ct. 13, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming on other grounds (1917) 198 Mich. 469, 164 N. W. 528; Palmer v. Ohio, (1918) 248 U. S. 32, 39 S. Ct. 16, 63

U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review (1917) 96 Ohio St. 513, 118 N. E. 102.

Legislative discretion.—The states are left with a wide range of legislative discretion, notwithstanding the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, and their conclusions respecting the wisdom of their legislative acts are not reviewable by the courts. Arizona Employers' Liability Cases, (1919) 250 U. S. 400, 39 S. Ct. 553, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 19 Ariz. 151, 182, 166 Pac. 278, 1183, 165 Pac. 1101, 1185.

Railroad commission's power.—A controversy as to which of two existing agencies or arms of a state government, a municipality or a state corporation commission, is authorized for the time being to exercise in the public interest the power of rate regulation of a public utility, subject to which power the franchise confessedly was granted, involves no question under the contract clause of the Federal Constitution, but only a question of local law, the decision of which by the highest court of the state is final. Pawhuska v. Pawhuska Oil, etc., Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 394, 39 S. Ct. 526, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review (Okla. 1917) 166 Pac. 1058, wherein the court said: "In Dartmouth College v. Woodward, (1819) 4 Wheat. 518 [4 U. S. (L. ed.) 629], it was distinctly recognized that as respects grants of political or governmental authority to cities, towns, counties and the like the legislative power of the states is not restrained by the contract clause of the Constitution, pp. 629-630, 659-664, 668, 694; and in East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., (1850) 10 How. 511 [13 U. S. (L. ed.) 518], where was involved the validity of a state statute recalling a grant to a city, theretofore made and long in use, of power to operate and maintain a ferry over a river, it was said, p. 533, that the parties to the grant did not stand 'in the attitude towards each other of making a contract by it, such as is contemplated in the Constitution, and as could not be modified by subsequent legislation. The legislature was acting here on the one part, and public municipal and political corporations on the other. They were acting, too, in relation to a public object, being virtually a highway across the river, over another highway up and down the river. From this standing and relation of these parties, and from the subject-matter of their action, we think that the doings of the legislature as to this ferry must be considered rather as public laws than as contracts. They related to public interest. They changed as those interests demanded. The grantees, likewise, the towns being mere organizations for public purposes, were liable to have their public powers, rights, and duties modified or abolished at any moment by the legislature. . . . Hence, generally, the doings between them and the legislature are in the nature of legislation rather than compact, and subject to all the legislative conditions just named, and therefore to be considered as not violated by subsequent legislative changes.'"

4. State Procedure (p. 747)

Federal question first raised in amended motion for new trial.—A federal question first raised in an amended motion for a new trial, and refused consideration by the highest court of the state, in accordance with the state practice, because the trial judge had denied the motion and declined to approve any of the grounds on which it was based, is not before the federal Supreme Court for review on writ of error to the state court. Barbour v. Georgia, (1919) 249 U. S. 454, 39 S. Ct. 316, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming on other grounds (1917) 146 Ga. 667, 92 S. E. 70, 3 A. L. R. 1095.

The question as to the full faith and credit which should be given by the Missouri courts to the judgment of a Connecticut court was not so presented or ruled upon by the highest court of the former state as to sustain a writ of certiorari from the federal Supreme Court to that court, where the latter court refused to consider the question because the judgment of the trial court having been rendered before the Connecticut judgment was entered, the federal right was first asserted in the highest Missouri court, and there is no suggestion that the decision was framed to evade consideration of the question. Hartford L. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, (1919) 249 U. S. 490, 39 S. Ct. 336, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (dismissing writ of certiorari to review (1917) 271 Mo. 562, 197 S. W. 132), wherein the court said: "The jurisdiction of this court to review the final judgment or decree of the highest court of a state, in such a case as we have here, is defined in § 237 of the Judicial Code, as amended September 6, 1916, c. 448, 39 Stat. 726, which provides that it shall be competent for this court by certiorari to require any such cause to be certified to it for review when there is claimed in it any title, right, privilege or immunity under the Constitution of the United States and 'the decision is either in favor of or against the title, right, privilege, or immunity especially set up or claimed, by either party, under such Constitution.' It is the settled law that this provision means 'that the claim must be asserted at the proper time and in the proper manner by pleading, motion or other appropriate action under the state system of pleading and practice, . . . and upon the question whether or not such a claim has been so asserted the decision of the state court is binding upon this court, when it is clear, as it is in this case, that such decision is not rendered in a spirit of evasion for the purpose of defeating the claim of federal right.' Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Mims, (1917) 242 U. S. 532, 535 [37 S. Ct. 188, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 476, 478]; Gasquet v. La Peyre, (1917) 242 U. S. 367, 371 [37 S. Ct. 165, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 367, 370], and cases cited. No suggestion is or could be made, that the Missouri state Supreme Court's holding in this case was framed to evade the consideration of the federal right now asserted, for it had long been the established law of that state that under its system of practice the construction of either the federal or state constitution would not be treated as involved in a case, in a jurisdictional sense, unless it appeared that such question was raised and ruled on in the trial court, and also that constitutional questions could not be injected into a case for the first time in an appellate court by argument or brief of counsel for the purpose of giving jurisdiction. Miller v. Connor, (1913) 250 Mo. 677, 684 [157 S. W. 81]. It has further been uniformly held by that court since 1836 that it will not take judicial notice of the laws of other states, but that they must be proved, as other facts, by evidence introduced at the trial. Southern Illinois, etc., Bridge Co. v. Stone, (1903) 174 Mo. 1, 33 [73 S. W. 453, 63 L. R. A. 301]."

8. Presumptions (p. 750)

A regulation of a state board of health, in effect sustained by a decree of the highest court of the state, must be assumed, on writ of error from the federal Supreme Court to the state court, to have been within the authority conferred upon the board by the state law. Corn Products Refining Co. v. Eddy, (1919) 249 U. S. 427, 39 S. Ct. 325, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 99 Kan. 63, 163 Pac. 615.

VII. VALIDITY OF TREATY OR STATUTE OF, OR AUTHORITY, EXERCISED UNDER UNITED STATES "DRAWN IN QUESTION" (p. 750)

Validity of a treaty is not involved in the assertion of a right based only on construction of the treaty. Erie R. Co. v. Hamilton, (1919) 248 U. S. 369, 39 S. Ct. 95, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

IX. VALIDITY OF STATUTE OF, OR AUTHORITY EXERCISED UNDER, STATE "DRAWN IN QUESTION"

1. "Statute of State" (p. 752)

Following construction of state statute.—The ruling of the highest court of a state that the pole fees imposed by a municipal telegraph franchise ordinance were not an agreed compensation for the franchise, but amount to a license tax, concludes the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error. Mackay Tel., etc., Co. v. Little Rock, (1919) 250 U. S. 94, 39 S. Ct. 428, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 131 Ark. 306, 199 S. W. 90.

The Federal Supreme Court accepts as conclusive, where no question is raised under the contract clause of the Federal Constitution, the decision of the highest court of a state that a municipal telegraph franchise ordinance imposed a pole tax with respect to poles standing upon a railway right of way and poles which, at the time of the acceptance of the ordinance, were without the limits of the city, but which were later brought within such limits by extension of the municipal boundaries. Mackay Tel., etc., Co. v. Little Rock, (1919) 250 U. S. 94, 39 S. Ct. 428, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 131 Ark. 306, 199 S. W. 90.

Following construction of state statute.—While the Supreme Court follows the decision of the highest state court as to the meaning of a state statute which is asserted to violate the Federal Constitution, the name given to the statute is not conclusive. It must be judged by its necessary effect, and if that is to violate the Constitution of the United States the law must be declared void. Standard Oil Co. v. Graves, (1919) 249 U. S. 389, 39 S. Ct. 320, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing on other grounds (1917) 94 Wash. 291, 162 Pac. 558.

In reviewing the judgment of a state court in a case in which it was unsuccessfully contended that a state law deprived a party of rights secured by the Federal Constitution, the Federal Supreme Court is concerned not with the characterization or construction of the state law by the state court, nor even with the question whether it has in terms been construed, but solely with the effect and operation of the law as put in force by the state. Corn Products Refining Co. v. Eddy, (1919) 249 U. S. 427, 39 S. Ct. 325, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — affirming (1916) 99 Kan. 63, 163 Pac. 615.

An order of a state Public Utilities Commission, upheld by the highest court of the state, requiring the restoration of a sidetrack by a railway company, being legislative in its nature, and made by an instrumentality of the state, is a state law within the meaning of the Federal Constitution and the laws of Congress regulating the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts. Lake Erie, etc., R. Co. v. State Public Utilities Commission, (1919) 249 U. S. 422, 39 S. Ct. 345, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 277 Ill. 574, 215 N. E. 519.

X. "REPUGNANT TO CONSTITUTION, TREATIES OR LAWS OF UNITED STATES"

4. Due Process of Law (p. 754)

Pollution of oyster beds.—A judgment of the highest court of a state which affirmed the dismissal below of the bill in a suit to enjoin a municipality from discharging its sewage in such a way as to pollute and ruin plaintiff's oysters, upon his beds under tidal waters, is reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court, where the bill alleges that if the applicable state statutes purport to authorize the destruction of the plaintiff's oysters they are contrary to the Constitution of the United States, and, specifically, to the 14th amendment, and in the assignment of errors to the highest state court the statutes are said also to violate the contract clause of such Constitution. Darling v. Newport News, (1919) 249 U. S. 540, 39 S. Ct. 371, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1918) 123 Va. 14, 96 S. E. 307.

I. SCOPE OF STATUTE AND GENERAL MATTERS

8. Frivolous Grounds and Moot Questions (p. 799)

Frivolous grounds.—The contention that if the provisions of R. S. sec. 828 (see vol. 4, p. 657) allowing clerks of the district courts a fee of 1 per cent for receiving, keeping, and paying out money in pursuance of any statute or order of court, be construed to be applicable where cash is voluntarily deposited in lieu of bail for the appearance of one charged with crime, and is paid back on request, it conflicts with the due process, privileges and immunities, and excessive bail clauses of the Federal Constitution,—is too lacking in merit to support the jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court of a writ of error to a district court to review the refusal to direct the clerk to return such fee as having been unlawfully retained. Berkman v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 114, 39 S. Ct. 411, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

III. FINAL JUDGMENTS (p. 800)

A supplementary decree of a district court in a subordinate proceeding which was not merely ancillary to the main cause, in which federal jurisdiction was invoked solely on the ground of the presence of a federal question, but was in effect a part of the main cause, taken for the purpose of carrying into effect a decree of the Federal Supreme Court reversing the final decree in the main cause, and also for the purpose of giving effect to a reservation of jurisdiction by the court below as contained in such final decree, must be treated as itself presenting a federal question so as to justify, under the Judicial Code, sec. 238, a direct appeal to the Supreme Court. Arkadelphia Milling Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 134, 39 S. Ct. 237, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

IV. "JURISDICTION OF COURT IN ISSUE."

2. Separate Appeals and Right of Election Between Supreme Court and Circuit Court of Appeals.

b. Jurisdiction Sole Question in Issue (p. 805)

To same effect as third paragraph of original annotation, see Great Northern R. Co. v. Blaine County, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 548, 164 C. C. A. 464.

5. When Jurisdiction Is in Issue (p. 806)

Whether a District Court or a state court has priority of possession of, or control over, property which is the subject-matter of a suit, is not a question involving the jurisdiction of the District Court and hence is not directly appealable to the Supreme Court under this section. Central Dist. Printing, etc., Co. v. Farmers', etc., Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 59, 166 C. C. A. 387.

Proper District Court.—An appeal from an order dismissing a bill for infringement of a patent, brought under Judicial Code, section 48 (see vol. 5, p. 478), and denying a preliminary injunction, because of the non-residence of the defendant and his not having a regular place of business in the district where the suit is brought, involves a question of jurisdiction of which the Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction under this section, and cannot be taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals under Judicial Code, section 128 (see vol. 5, p. 607). American Electric Welding Co. v. Lalancé, etc., Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 968, 162 C. C. A. 166.

Admiralty.—A direct appeal lies under this section where the question is whether the cause was within the admiralty jurisdiction of a District Court of the United States. North. Pac. Steamboat Co. v. Hall Bros. Marine R., etc., Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 119, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The Circuit Court of Appeals has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal to consider whether a court of admiralty possesses jurisdictional power to grant costs when dismissing a libel for lack of jurisdiction over the subject-matter. Such a question is one of jurisdiction and directly reviewable by the Supreme Court under this section. The Ada, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 25 Fed. 50, 166 C. C. A. 378.

Question of loss of jurisdiction.—Where the question was not whether jurisdiction originally existed, but whether it had been lost by bringing in a defendant whose citizenship was the same as the plaintiffs' the Circuit Court of Appeals decided the question instead of dismissing the appeal. Fatterson v. Delaware, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 255, 163 C. C. A. 411.

Other illustrations.—"The 6 S." (1919) 250 U. S. 269, 39 S. Ct. 452, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, as to jurisdiction of libel in rem against a scow for pecuniary penalties under Act of June 29, 1888, ch. 496, 25 Stat. L. 209, as amended.

Odell v. F. C. Farnsworth Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 501, 39 S. Ct. 516, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming decree dismissing suit as not arising under the patent laws.

Collett v. Adams, (1919) 249 U. S. 545, 39 S. Ct. 372, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, as to jurisdiction of the District Court of a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside a voidable preference.

Matters v. Ryan, (1919) 249 U. S. 375, 39 S. Ct. 375, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, holding that petition for habeas corpus involved no federal question adequate to sustain the jurisdiction.

North. Pac. Steamship Co. v. Hall, (1919) 249 U. S. 119, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, a question of admiralty jurisdiction.

Brainerd, etc., Quarry Co. v. Brice, (1919) 250 U. S. 229, 39 S. Ct. 458, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, holding that the plaintiff was an assignee disabled by Judicial Code, sec. 24 (vol. 4, p. 839) from suing in a federal court.

Public Service Co. v. Carboy, (1919) 250 U. S. 153, 39 S. Ct. 440, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, as to jurisdiction to enjoin a state officer from executing a state law, in connection with Judicial Code, sec. 265.

Ohio 1918) 253 Fed. 499, the court said: "As to the jurisdiction of the court. If the court had decided the case upon the question of jurisdiction alone, that question should have been certified here, and none other would have been presented upon such appeal."

VI. CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTIONS IN ISSUE

1. "Construction or Application of Constitution of United States," Involved

a. General Matters (p. 828)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Raton Water Works v. Raton, (1919) 249 U. S. 552, 39 S. Ct. 384, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Substantial constitutional question.—The Federal Supreme Court will not review a judgment of a district court in a criminal case on the ground that the construction or application of the Federal Constitution was drawn in question unless the writ of error presents a constitutional question substantial in character and properly raised below. Mere reference to a provision of the Federal Constitution, or the mere assertion of a claim under it, does not suffice. No substantial constitutional question of the character necessary to support a direct writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a district court in a criminal case is involved in the refusal of the trial court to give requested instructions concerning the constitutional freedom of speech, where a passage in the court's charge to the jury clearly embodied the substance of the instructions requested, since the judge was not obliged to adopt the exact language of the requests, nor to repeat instructions already given in substance. Sugarman v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 182, 39 S. Ct. 191, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review, (D. C. Minn. 1917) 245 Fed. 604.

3. "Constitution or Law of State Claimed to Be in Contravention of Constitution of United States"

e. Illustrations (p. 832)

Orders of a state railroad commission fixing rates by virtue of authority conferred by the legislature are state laws and a direct appeal lies to the Supreme Court where they are claimed to conflict with the United States Constitution. Arkadelphia Milling Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 134, 39 S. Ct. 237, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

7. Scope of Review (p. 836)

Whole case.—Where a constitutional question is involved an appeal to the Supreme Court takes the whole case there. Columbus, etc., Power Co. v. Columbus, (1919) 249 U. S. 399, 39 S. Ct. 349, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming on other grounds (S. D. Ohio 1918) 253 Fed. 499.

VII. "VALIDITY OR CONSTRUCTION OF ANY TREATY DRAWN IN QUESTION" (p. 837)

In Cordova v. Grant, (1919) 248 U. S. 413, 39 S. Ct. 138, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, a writ of error to a District Court was dismissed, it appearing that the only color of right to take the case to the Supreme Court by direct appeal consisted in a suggestion that the construction of a treaty was involved.

I. POWER AND DISCRETION TO CERTIFY

2. Character of Questions (p. 840)

Certificates dismissed as insufficient.—In Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co. v. Arctic Iron Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 178, 39 S. Ct. 91, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, a certificate was dismissed because of the admixture of law and fact, and because it failed to distinguish between facts which were merely evidential and those which were ultimate. The court said: "The certificate upon which this case is before us contains what are denominated findings of fact grouped under eighteen paragraphs covering eight pages of the record. Upon these findings we are asked to instruct as to six propositions of law, really amounting to twelve since each is two-fold, that is, stated in the alternative. But we are of opinion that we may not instruct as to these propositions for the following reasons:

"In the first place, because we think it is clear that the statements which are declared in the certificate to be findings of fact are in no true sense entitled to that characterization, since the statements amount but to a narrative of facts mixed with questions of law so interblended, the one with the other, as to cause it to be impossible to conclude as to either the law or the facts without a separation of the two, a duty which we may not be called upon to perform in giving instructions upon questions of law propounded under the statute controlling that subject.

"In the second place, because even if the admixture of law and fact which inheres in the recitals in the certificate be overlooked, the recitals nevertheless, in and of themselves, fail to distinguish between facts which are merely evidential and those which are ultimate and which for that reason would be susceptible of furnishing support for the legal propositions as to which instructions are asked.

"It is true, indeed, that the statute gives us the discretion, when a case is certified, to direct the sending up of the whole record, but obviously the exercise of that discretionary power is not called for by a case where the certificate is of such a character as not to be embraced by the statute.

"It must be, therefore, that this case affords no ground for directing the sending up of the whole record since here the certificate is inadequate to sustain the right to answer the questions stated. To hold to the contrary would be to cause a mistaken exercise of the right to certify specific questions to become the instrument by which the division of powers made by the statute would be disregarded."

Exclusion of Chinese by Secretary of Labor.

—Where there are conflicting decisions by several of the Circuit Courts of Appeal regarding the Secretary of Labor's right to deport Chinese found in this country in violation of the Chinese Exclusion Act, and the Supreme Court has not passed upon the question, a Circuit Court of Appeals may properly certify the question to the Supreme Court for instructions. U. S. v. Woo Jan, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 250 Fed. 595, 162 C. C. A. 611.

3. Certifying Entire Case (p. 843)

Were the entire case to be certified a decision by the Supreme Court would be an exercise of original jurisdiction not given to the Supreme Court by the Constitution. Hence the provision in the Expedition Act of Feb. 11, 1903, ch. 544, sec. 1, 32 Stat. L. 823, 6 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 137, note, permitting the judges of the Circuit Court in certain suits, in case of a division of opinion, to certify "the case" to the Supreme Court "for review in like manner as if taken there by appeal," was invalid. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, (1909) 215 U. S. 216, 30 S. Ct. 86, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 164.

II. PROCEDURE

2. Form and Frame of Certificate (p. 848)

A certificate which fails to contain a proper statement of the facts on which the questions of law arise as required by rule 37 will be dismissed even though the certificate concludes: "For information as to the facts of case copies of the transcript and briefs are herewith transmitted." Dillon v. Strathearn Steamship Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 182, 39 S. Ct. 83, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) wherein the court said: "Counsel argue the case by reference to the transcript of the record in the Circuit Court of Appeals, and it is apparent that a proper consideration of the case requires such reference. This transcript is no part of our record. This court alone has authority to have it sent up. The briefs in the Circuit Court of Appeals are no part of the record here. The certificate is required to state the pertinent facts in order that this court may answer the questions of law certified with reference to such facts, and not by searching the records and briefs of the Circuit Court of Appeals itself."

Statements of fact mixed with questions of law so interblended, the one with the other, as to cause it to be impossible to conclude as to either the law or the facts without a separation of the two, are fatal to the certificate. Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co. v. Arctic Iron Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 178, 39 S. Ct. 91, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing a certificate.

III. TABLE OF CASES WHERE QUESTIONS WERE CERTIFIED (p. 848)

DeGanay v. Lederer, (1919) 250 U. S. 376, 39 S. Ct. 524, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, as to taxability of certain income under Income Tax Law of 1913.

Louisville, etc., Bridge Co. v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 534, 39 S. Ct. 355, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, as to construction and application of the Safety Appliance Act of Congress.

Webb v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 96, 39 S. Ct. 217, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, constitutional and other questions in a criminal case.

Raton Waterworks Co. v. Raton, (1919) 249 U. S. 552, 39 S. Ct. 384, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, as to jurisdiction of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the instant case.

IV. "WHOLE RECORD AND CAUSE" BROUGHT UP (p. 853)

If a certificate is insufficient to sustain the right to answer the questions stated, the Supreme Court is without power to direct the sending up of the whole record. Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co. v. Arctic Iron Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 178, 39 S. Ct. 91, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

V. HEARING AND EXAMINATION, DETERMINATION, AND REMAND (p. 862)

Disposition of case.—“This court . . . has power not only to correct error in the judgment entered below, but to make such disposition of the case as justice may at this time require. . . . And in determining what justice now requires the court must consider the changes in fact and in law which have supervened since the decree was entered below. . . . Since the certiorari was granted the relation of the parties to the court has radically changed.” Watts v. Unione Austriaca, etc., (1918) 248 U. S. 9, 21, 39 S. Ct. 1, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Jurisdiction based on diverse citizenship.—The whole case is up for review in the Supreme Court on writ of certiorari to a circuit court of appeals in a case in which the jurisdiction of the district court was based solely upon diverse citizenship. Camp v. Gress, (1919) 250 U. S. 308, 39 S. Ct. 478, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 121, 156 C. C. A. 549.

A writ of certiorari was dismissed on motion for want of jurisdiction in Hartford Life Ins. Co. v. Johnson, (1919) 249 U. S. 490, 39 S. Ct. 336, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

II. MODE AND SCOPE OF REVIEW (p. 878)

The ground of jurisdiction in the District Court and ultimately in the Supreme Court on appeal from the Circuit Court of Appeals is the statement of the suing party of his cause of suit. And there must be substance in it, not mere verbal assertion or the anticipation of defenses. Butte, etc., Copper Co. v. Clark-Montana Realty Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 12, 39 S. Ct. 231, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming on other grounds (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 U. S. 609, 160 C. C. A. 509.

Vol. V, p. 890, Jud. Code, sec. 243.

Findings of fact.—Findings of the Court of Claims are to be treated as the verdict of a jury, and the Federal Supreme Court on appeal is not at liberty to refer to the evidence any more than to the opinion for the purpose of eking out, controlling, or modifying the scope of such findings. Brothers v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 88, 39 S. Ct. 426, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 462.

A finding of the Court of Claims that there was no unreasonable delay on the part of the federal government in approving a contract for a public work is a finding of an ultimate fact by which the Federal Supreme Court is bound, unless such finding was made without supporting evidence, or is inconsistent with other facts found. Hathaway v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 460, 39 S. Ct. 346, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 267.

Vol. V, p. 907, Jud. Code, sec. 248.

Judgments and decrees subject to review—Cases involving a treaty.—A decision of the Philippine Supreme Court holding that the name "Isabella" which appellee was charged with using was a geographical and descriptive term and incapable of registration as a trademark either under the Philippine Act No. 666, or the law as it existed under the Spanish regime, does not involve the provisions of the treaty of Paris of 1898. Campania General, etc., v. Alhambra Cigar, etc., Mfg. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 72, 39 S. Ct. 224, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (dismissing appeal to review 33 Phil. 485), wherein the court said: "By the treaty of Paris of 1898, Spain ceded to the United States the archipelago known as the Philippine Islands. In Article VIII of the treaty it is provided that the relinquishment or cession, as the case may be, 'cannot in any respect impair the property or rights which by law belong to the peaceful possession of property of all kinds, of provinces, municipalities, public or private establishments, ecclesiastical or civic bodies, or any other associations having legal capacity to acquire and possess property in the aforesaid territories renounced or ceded, or of private individuals, of whatsoever nationality such individuals may be.' Article XIII provides that 'The rights of property secured by copyrights and patents acquired by Spaniards in the Island of Cuba and in Porto Rico, the Philippines and other ceded territories, at the time of the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty, shall continue to be respected.' Treaties in Force, 194, pp. 722, 725, 726, [30 Stat. 1754.]

"It is the evident purpose of these provisions, in view of the cession of territory made by Spain to the United States, to preserve private rights of property, and to provide that the change of sovereignty should work no impairment of such rights. . . .

"Certainly the treaty, in providing that property rights of this class should be respected, did not intend to prevent the consideration by the courts of the nature and extent of the rights granted, or prohibit the application of laws for the enforcement and regulation of such property rights when not in derogation thereof."

Salvage cases.—Unless there has been some violation of principle or clear mistake an appeal in a salvage case concerning the amount of an allowance is not encouraged. Oelwerke Teutonia v. Erlanger, (1919) 248 U. S. 521, 39 S. Ct. 180, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Street railway franchise ordinance.—The contention that the construction by the Philippine Supreme Court of a street railway franchise ordinance requiring free transportation of members of the police department wearing official badges as not embracing detectives whose badges are concealed upon their persons, and its consequent ruling that the duty does not rest upon the street railway company to give the free transportation to such persons which the board of public utility commissioners had ordered, involves the Constitution or any statute, treaty, title, or privilege of the United States, within the meaning of this section, governing the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the Philippine Supreme Court, is too unsubstantial, not to say frivolous, to afford any basis for the exercise of such jurisdiction. Board of Public Utility Com'rs v. Manila Electric R., etc., Light Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 262, 39 S. Ct. 272, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) (dismissing writ of error and appeal to review 30 Phil. 387) wherein the court said: "As the action of the court complained of was taken before the Act of September 6, 1916, [see 1918 Supp. p. 422] and the appellate jurisdiction of this court was invoked before that Act went into effect, our power to review is governed by § 248 of the Judicial Code."

Amount in controversy—In general.—To the same effect as the original annotation see Board of Public Utility Com'rs v. Manila Electric R., etc., Light Co., (1919) 249 U. S.

262, 39 S. Ct. 272, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error and appeal to review 30 Phil. 387.

Scope of review—Review of questions to fact.—Questions of fact are not open for review on writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands. Tayabas Land Co. v. Manila R. Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 22, 39 S. Ct. 420, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming 32 Phil. 286.

Failure to make return of writ of error and citation in time.—An appeal from and writ of error to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands will not be dismissed on the ground that the writ of error and citation were not made returnable in time, where plaintiff in error and appellant had color of authority from that court and a judge of that court. Beaumont v. Prieto, (1919) 249 U. S. 554, 39 S. Ct. 383, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Weight given decision of Philippine Supreme Court.—A decision of the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to the effect that an offer to sell real property was not accepted will not be disturbed by the Federal Supreme Court unless clearly erroneous. Beaumont v. Prieto, (1919) 249 U. S. 554, 39 S. Ct. 383, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

  11. Prohibition.

I. SCIRE FACIAS

1. Nature of Writ (p. 929)

A scire facias is a judicial writ used to enforce execution of some matter of record on which it is usually founded; but, though a judicial writ or writ of execution, it is so far original that the defendant may plead to it. As it discloses the facts on which it is founded, and requires an answer from the defendant, it is in the nature of a declaration and the plea is properly to the writ. Writs of scire facias are of two kinds: (1) The continuation of a previous action such as a scire facias to revive a judgment and to have execution on it. (2) A scire facias which is in the nature of a new suit, such as a writ to review that which has happened, to recover upon recognizance or bail bond, etc. A writ of the latter class is original only in the sense that once obtained the resultant procedure is the same as any action at law entitling a defendant to answer and to a jury trial. Universal Transp. Co. v. National Surety Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 252 Fed. 293.

2. Power to Issue (p. 929)

A District Court may issue a writ of scire facias under the provisions of this section even though the state in which the federal forum is situated has abolished the writ. Universal Transp. Co. v. National Surety Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 252 Fed. 293.

II. "ALL WRITS NOT SPECIFICALLY PROVIDED FOR BY STATUTE"

9. Mandamus

a. Jurisdiction in General (p. 934)

Nature of remedy.—This court has lately said that while mandamus is classed as a legal remedy, it is a remedial process which is awarded, not as a matter of right, but in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion and upon equitable principles. Duncan Tounsite Co. v. Lane, 245 U. S. 308. It is an extraordinary remedy, which will not be allowed in cases of doubtful right, L. Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 8 Pet. 291, 302; and it is generally regarded as not embraced within statutes of limitation applicable to ordinary actions, but as subject to the equitable doctrine of laches, Chapman v. Douglas County (1882) 107 U.

S. 348, 355; Duke v. Turner, 204 U. S. 623, 628; Grant v. Lane, (1919) 249 U. S. 367, 39 S. Ct. 293, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 336.

Power of United States Supreme Court.—Mandamus will not be granted to stay an accounting in a patent and copyright infringement and unfair competition suit pending in a federal District Court until the decision of the federal Supreme Court upon a writ of certiorari bringing up for review a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in another circuit, reversing a temporary injunction decree in a similar suit, where the District Court was called upon to determine judicially the scope of the decision of such Circuit Court of Appeals and to decide whether or not that decision was in conflict with a decision by the Circuit Court of Appeals of its own circuit and to forecast as best it might what the scope and effect of the decision of the Federal Supreme Court would be upon the rights of the parties as determined in the case at bar, and, having regard to the rights of the plaintiff and the conduct of the defendant, to decide whether, after four years of strenuous litigation, the accounting should be further delayed by the prospect that the decision of the Federal Supreme Court might render the results of it valueless. Ex p. Wagner, (1919) 249 U. S. 465, 39 S. Ct. 317, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Power of Circuit Court of Appeals.—It is a conclusive answer to the prayer for a writ of mandamus to a Circuit Court of Appeals and the judges thereof, to direct the entry of a stay of proceedings, that the case was not, when the stay was refused, and is not now, pending in that court. Ex p. Wagner, (1919) 249 U. S. 465, 39 S. Ct. 317, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Limitation on power to issue.—The Supreme Court and Circuit Courts of Appeals may issue writs of mandamus and prohibition under this section only when necessary to their appellate jurisdiction. Muir v. Chatfield, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 24, 166 C. C. A. 352.

Conformity with state practice.—Under this section, R. S. sec. 918, and equity rule 13, a district court may issue a writ of mandamus as ancillary to a judgment previously rendered by it, and need not conform to the state practice notwithstanding the provisions of R. S. sec. 914. Evans v. Yost, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 726.

b. Controlling Judicial Action or Discretion (p. 937)

Minor orders.—Mandamus may not be resorted to for the purpose of controlling minor orders made in the conduct of judicial proceedings, and the fact that the result of litigation may possibly be such that interlocutory proceedings taken may not prove of value is not a sufficient reason for calling the writ into use for the purpose of forbidding such proceedings, even though the cost of them cannot be recovered from the opposing party, or even though the order cannot be reversed on error or appeal. Ex p. Wagner, (1919) 249 U. S. 465, 39 S. Ct. 317, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The signing of a bill of exceptions may be compelled by mandamus where signing is refused under a mistaken view that the bill was not presented in time. In re Federal Life Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 908, 161 C. C. A. 26.

V. OTHER PARTICULAR MATTERS AND PROCEEDINGS (p. 976)

Drainage proceedings.—The prohibition of this section against enjoining proceedings in a state court, does not preclude a suit against a drainage commissioner whom a state court, after having established a drainage district and authorized the construction of a ditch, has appointed to do the work, to enjoin the execution of the same on the ground that the effect of the ditch will be to draw off from an interstate stream such a quantity of water as seriously to diminish the flow in that stream and thereby practically cripple, if not destroy, the capacity of petitioner to continue to operate a plant for the production of electrical energy, established and owned by it on the banks of such stream in another state. Public Service Co. v. Corboy, (1919) 250 U. S. 153, 39 S. Ct. 440, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "Although a state may not be sued without its consent, nevertheless a state officer acting under color of his official authority may be enjoined from carrying into effect a state law asserted to be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States even though such injunction may cause the state law to remain inoperative until the constitutional question is judicially determined. . . . There was jurisdiction therefore in the court below as a federal court to afford appropriate relief unless the want of power resulted from the prohibition of sec. 265 of the Judicial Code. . . . In Frentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co., (1908) 211 U. S. 210, 29 S. Ct. 67, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 150, the facts, briefly stated, were these: By the constitution and laws of Virginia the Corporation Commission of that state was constituted a court and was authorized in that capacity to establish railroad rates and to enforce them. The authority thus conferred was exerted and the jurisdiction of a court of the United States was invoked to enjoin the commission from enforcing the rates so fixed on the ground that to put them in operation would amount to a confiscation of the property of the railroad and hence would be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States. The power to afford relief was challenged on the ground that as the Corporation Commission was a court under the constitution and law of the state, its proceedings could not be stayed by a court of the United States because of the prohibition of section 265 of the Judicial Code. It was held, however, that as the power to fix rates was legislative and not judicial, the prohibition had no application and the injunction prayed was granted. . . . It is certain that the prohibitions which the statute imposes secure only the right of state courts to exert their judicial power; that is, a power called into play alone between parties to a controversy, and the operation of which power when exerted was, from the very fact that it was judicial, confined to the parties, their duties, interests and property, in other words, to a power falling within the general limitation of things judicial as demarked by the great distinction between legislative, executive and judicial power upon which the Constitution was framed. This is the necessary result of the ruling in the Prentis Case, by which it is made certain that although a state may have power to confer upon its courts such authority as may be deemed appropriate, it cannot by the exertion of such right draw into the judicial sphere powers which are intrinsically legislative and executive or both, and thus bring the exercise of such powers within the scope of the prohibition of the statute, with the result of depriving the courts of the United States to that extent of their omnipresent authority to enforce the Constitution."

Execution of state process.—A federal District Court has jurisdiction of a suit by the director general of railroads to enjoin the sale of land, belonging to a railroad under federal control, under execution issued on a state court's judgment, for the special statutory exemption from process, created by Act of March 21, 1918 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 757), must be construed, in connection with this section, as modifying its language, and creating another exception, under which the attempted enforcement of the meane and final process from a state court may be restrained in proper cases. U. S. Railroad Administration v. Burch, (E. D. S. C. 1918) 254 Fed. 140.

Injunction proceedings.—Where a state court, in a proceeding to obtain a mandatory injunction to compel the defendants to remove certain balconies, rooms, etc., from certain land, issued a temporary injunction restraining the plaintiff from interfering with such improvements, the federal court, in an action in which the parties and the subject matter were substantially the same, refused to issue an injunction which would, in effect, restrain the injunction of the state court. Amusement Syndicate Co. v. El Paso Land Imp. Co., (W. D. Tex. 1918) 251 Fed. 345.

Judgment of state courts.—"United States courts, by virtue of their general equity powers, have jurisdiction to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment in a state court upon the usual principles under which courts of equity will enjoin the enforcement of a judgment." U. S. Railroad Administration v. Burch, (E. D. S. C. 1918) 254 Fed. 140.

A federal court has no jurisdiction under this section to grant an injunction staying an action in a state court for want of service on the defendant, if no final judgment has been rendered in such action. Essanay Film Mfg. Co. v. Kane, (D. O. N. J. 1919) 256 Fed. 271.

III. EFFECT OF STATE RULE

3. State Statutes (p. 993)

That the facts authorize a bill in equity under a state statute does not preclude a transfer to the law courts because an adequate remedy at law exists. John A. Roebling's Sons Co. v. Kinnicutt, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 248 Fed. 596.

VI. APPLICATION OF RULES IN PARTICULAR MATTERS AND PROCEEDINGS

11. Damages Generally (p. 1004)

After denial of injunction.—After denying an injunction a suit in equity should not be retained to award damages. American Falls Milling Co. v. Standard Brokerage, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 487, 160 C. C. A. 497.

14. Judgments (p. 1005)

Cancellation of release of judgment.—Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, a federal court has equitable jurisdiction of a suit to cancel a release of a judgment of a state court, for a law court in setting aside such a release exercises an equitable power and no jury trial may be demanded, and therefore equitable jurisdiction may not be denied on the ground that there is an adequate remedy at law in the state court. Williams v. Miller, (W. D. Va. 1918) 249 Fed. 495.

21. Specific Performance (p. 1007)

Contract to sell coal.—A suit for specific performance of a contract to sell and deliver coal to a railroad company is not within the jurisdiction of a federal court of equity, where no allegation of the defendant's insolvency or of the plaintiff's inability to procure coal from other persons is made, for the plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law by an action for breach of contract. Consolidated Fuel Co. v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 395, 162 C. C. A. 465.

III. POWER TO PUNISH FOR CONTEMPT GENERALLY

1. Inherent Power in Courts (p. 1015)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Sweptston v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 205, 163 C. C. A. 361.

V. PARTICULAR ACTS OR CONDUCT AS CONTEMPTS

5. Injunction Violations (p. 1020)

Violation by strikers or members of labor union of injunction.—A final decree in a strike suit enjoining the defendants therein and all other persons having notice of the decree from interfering by threats, violence, or intimidation with employees of the complainant, binds persons who have notice of the decree and who are in privity with the defendants, but such persons are not amenable to the decree because ten years after its issuance they, as members of the same union, take part in another, unrelated strike. Tosh v. West Kentucky Coal Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 44, 164 C. C. A. 156.

24. Warrant of Commitment of Prisoner Violated (p. 1028)

To same effect as the original annotation, see Sweptston v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 205, 163 C. C. A. 361.

25. Witnesses' Acts (p. 1028)

By testimony given.—A federal court may not punish a witness for contempt solely because of the opinion of the court that he is committing perjury, without reference to any circumstance or condition giving to such perjury an obstructive effect. Exp. Hudgings, (1919) 249 U. S. 378, 39 S. Ct. 337, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "That the contumacious refusal of a witness to testify may so directly obstruct a court in the performance of its duty as to justify punishment for contempt is so well settled as to need only statement. Despite some confusion caused by certain ambiguous forms of expression used by the court below in dealing with the subject, it is indisputable that the punishment for contempt was imposed solely because of the opinion of the court that the witness was wilfully refusing to testify truthfully, that is, was committing perjury."

"Whether, then, power to punish for contempt exists in every case where a court is of the opinion that a witness is committing perjury, is the test we must here apply. Because perjury is a crime defined by law and one committing it may be tried and punished does not necessarily establish that when committed in the presence of a court it may not, when exceptional conditions so justify, be the subject-matter of a punishment for contempt. For an application of this doctrine to perjury, see Berkson v. People, 154 Illinois 81; In re Rosenberg, 90 Wisconsin 581; Stockham v. French, 1 Bing. 365; and see In re Schulman, 177 Fed. Rep. 191; In re Steiner, 195 Fed. Rep. 299; In re Ulmer, 208 Fed. Rep. 461; United States v. Appel, 211 Fed. Rep. 495. This being true, we must ascertain what is the essential ingredient in addition to the elements constituting perjury under the general law which must be found in perjury when committed in the presence of a court to bring about the exceptional conditions justifying punishment under both."

"Existing within the limits of and sanctioned by the Constitution, the power to punish for contempt committed in the presence of the court is not controlled by the limitations of the Constitution as to modes of accusation and methods of trial generally safeguarding the rights of the citizen. This, however, expresses no purpose to exempt judicial authority from constitutional limitations, since its great and only purpose is to secure judicial authority from obstruction in the performance of its duties to the end that means appropriate for the preservation and enforcement of the Constitution may be secured. Toledo Newspaper Co. v.

"An obstruction to the performance of judicial duty resulting from an act done in the presence of the court is, then, the characteristic upon which the power to punish for contempt must rest. This being true, it follows that the presence of that element must clearly be shown in every case where the power to punish for contempt is exerted—a principle which, applied to the subject in hand, exacts that in order to punish perjury in the presence of the court as a contempt there must be added to the essential elements of perjury under the general law the further element of obstruction to the court in the performance of its duty. As illustrative of this, see United States v. Appel, 211 Fed. Rep. 495. It is true that there are decided cases which treat perjury, without any other element, as adequate to sustain a punishment for contempt. But the mistake is, we think, evident, since it either overlooks or misconceives the essential characteristic of the obstructive tendency underlying the contempt power, or mistakenly attributes a necessarily inherent obstructive effect to false swearing. If the conception were true, it would follow that when a court entertained the opinion that a witness was testifying untruthfully the power would result to impose a punishment for contempt with the object or purpose of exacting from the witness a character of testimony which the court would deem to be truthful; and thus it would come to pass that a potentiality of oppression and wrong would result and the freedom of the citizen when called as a witness in a court would be gravely imperiled."

28. Affidavit for Change of Venue [New]

Affidavit for change of venue as contempt.—An attorney may in a proper case, in a respectful manner, as, for example, on an application for change of venue, allege that the judge is prejudiced against his client, and unless the act is done with reckless disregard of truth, or with the express intention to reflect upon the honor and integrity of the judge, it is not a contempt. The fact that no statute authorizes an application on such ground is immaterial. Tjosevig v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 5, following Le Hane v. State, 48 Neb. 105, 60 N. W. 1017.

VII. PROCEEDINGS TO PUNISH FOR CONTEMPT

3. Mode of Procedure

c. Setting Out the Offense (p. 1035)

Sufficiency of charge.—Under a charge of contempt against a sheriff and his jailer for conspiring to permit the escape of a prisoner they may be convicted for permitting the escape although the conspiracy alleged was not proved. Swepton v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 205, 163 C. C. A. 361.

6. Purging by Oath (p. 1039)

Common-law rule not in effect.—The common-law rule in certain classes of contempt cases permitted the accused to purge himself through answer under oath; but the common-law rule of purgation does not prevail in the federal courts; indeed the settled rule now is that disavowal by sworn answer or otherwise is not conclusive, and that the whole matter is for the court upon the evidence. Swepton v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 205, 163 C. C. A. 361.

XI. REVIEW (p. 1045)

Review of findings of fact.—Although the Circuit Court of Appeals is limited in contempt cases to a review of questions of law, it will reverse the lower court's findings on the fact if unsupported by competent evidence. Tjosevig v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 5, 166 C. C. A. 333.

Conclusiveness of lower court's findings.—On appeal in a proceeding for criminal contempt, the finding of the lower court has the conclusiveness of a verdict of a jury, if it is sustained by substantial evidence. Kelly v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 947, 163 C. C. A. 197.

III. GROUNDS FOR GRANTING NEW TRIAL

1. In General (p. 1050)

The fact that voluntary admissions of a defendant are erroneously admitted in evidence is not ground for granting a new trial where the fact admitted was not in real controversy and was independently proven. U. S. v. Stilson, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 254 Fed. 120.

5. Inadequate Verdict (p. 1052)

Where the jury has returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff but has failed to award him damages, to which the undisputed evidence shows him to be entitled, the court has discretion to grant a new trial as to that single issue for the purpose of assessing the amount of damages. Original Sixteen to One Mine v. Twenty-One Min. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1918) 254 Fed. 630.

8. Newly Discovered Evidence (p. 1055)

Newly discovered evidence which is merely cumulative or which merely contradicts a witness is not ordinarily ground for a new trial. Such evidence must be so conclusive as to raise a reasonable presumption that the result of a new trial would be different from the first, or it is insufficient as ground for a new trial. Shelton v. Southern R. Co., (E. D. Tenn. 1918) 255 Fed. 182.

Vol. V, p. 1059, Jud. Code, sec. 274a.

Amendment after expiration of term of court.—The right of a party to amend his pleadings under this section "at any stage of the cause," includes the right to make a motion therefor under a mandate from an appellate court directing further proceedings, although the term of court during which the mandate was filed has expired. District of Columbia v. Washington Terminal Co., (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 570.

Adequate remedy at law.—Where a bill for partition is dismissed on the ground that there is a disputed question of title involved and that the plaintiffs have an adequate remedy at law, an appellate court, in view of the provisions of this section, may entertain an appeal by the plaintiff from the decree of dismissal, the record showing there was no disputed question of fact involved. Staub v. Staub, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 180.

Equitable defense to action on mortgage note.—A mortgagee cannot urge, in an action against him on the mortgage note, as an equitable defense under this section, that because of an extension of time of payment granted by the mortgagee to his grantee, who assumed the debt, and the consequent failure of the mortgagee to foreclose when the note became due by its original terms, he was damaged, and is entitled to have his damages considered in determining the amount due upon the note; since he did not become a surety as to the mortgagee by the assumption of the debt by his grantee. Wolfe v. Murphy, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 296.

Erroneous transfer.—Where, in an action at law for breach of a building contract, the defendant pleads a general denial and sets up a counterclaim, but no accounting is necessary, it is error to transfer the case from the law to the equity side of the court. Special School Dist. v. Jones, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 440, 162 C. C. A. 510.

Waiver of right of transfer.—Failure to make a motion to transfer a bill from the equity to the law side of the court because there is an adequate remedy at law, and proceeding to a hearing, is a waiver of the right to make such an objection. Fay v. Hill, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 415, 161 C. C. A. 389.

Vol. V, p. 1061, Jud. Code, sec. 274b.

Abolition of distinctions between proceedings at law and in equity.—The provisions of this section do not abolish all distinctions between actions at common law and suits in equity and establish one form of civil action for all cases. Full effect may be given to the provision that an equitable defense may be interposed by replication, by construing "replication" as a special replication setting up a defense to an answer interposing an equitable defense and asking affirmative relief. Hence, where an answer sets up a purely legal defense, this section does not permit a replication interposing an equitable defense. Keatley v. U. S. Trust Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 296, 161 C. C. A. 304.

Effect as precluding ancillary suit.—The remedy provided by section 274b is confined to the original parties, and accordingly does not prevent a suit in equity to enjoin the prosecution of an action at law where the interpleader of additional parties is necessary. Sherman Nat. Bank v. Shubert Theatrical Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 256, 159 C. C. A. 350.

Appeal treated as writ of error.—Since this amendment, a case brought to the Circuit Court of Appeals by appeal, in an action at law, will be treated as though it had been brought up by writ of error. Ana Maria Sugar Co. v. Quinones, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 499, 163 C. C. A. 493.

Defense of reformation of instruments.—Under this section, the defendant, in an action for breach of contract, may, by answer in the nature of a cross-petition, ask for reformation of the contract upon the ground of mutual mistake. Upson Nut Co. v. American Shipbuilding Co., (N. D. Ohio 1918) 251 Fed. 707.

Vol. V, p. 1073, Jud. Code, sec. 280.

Disqualification of marshal by prejudice.—"When a marshal, without authority of law or instructions from competent authority, hires a private individual to detect suspected violations of a particular law and pays such person out of his own private funds, and upon the information furnished by such person, who admits that he also participated in the offense under investigation, prosecution is instituted against certain persons, and the principal evidence relied on is to come from such employed detective, a situation is presented where, if on the trial a jury panel is exhausted, and it becomes necessary to draw jurymen from the bystanders, a defendant may well object to the drawing of such jurymen by the marshal or his deputies, upon the ground that he is not an indifferent person, and, if there be no denial of the facts and circumstances shown, the duty of the court is to specially appoint a fit person as provided by the statute. The question is not whether there is a personal malice or ill will on the part of the marshal, but whether his acts and the surrounding circumstances have been such that they impel the belief that he is no longer indifferent in his official attitude as between the United States and the persons on trial, and for that reason is not a fit person to be intrusted with the power to return jurymen from bystanders to complete the panel for the immediate case. We are keeping in mind the presumption that the marshal will do his duty without favor; but, lest he may not do so, the particular statute quoted interposes, with the object of insuring that absolute fairness of procedure which can best be had by not allowing one who is not indifferent to select jurors from bystanders." Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 92, 159 C. C. A. 310.

Effect of local statute.—The fact that a local statute in Alaska provides for the summoning of talesmen and makes no provision for disqualification of the marshal does not prevent the application of the federal statute. Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 92, 159 C. C. A. 310, wherein it was said: "Certainly this statute must control as a rule. But if it should come about that a showing is made of the manifest unfitness of the marshal to summon jurors, in the absence of local legislation directing how to proceed, the general law of the United States becomes wholly applicable and controlling. If this were not so, we would find that the guaranty that one accused shall have the right to trial by an impartial jury would mean less in Alaska than in the states. We are unable to assent to such a proposition."

Vol. V, p. 1097, sec. 8. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 376.]

Transitory action arising in Panama.—An action for damages to an automobile resulting from a collision with an electric car, being of a transitory nature, is within the jurisdiction of the District Court of the Canal Zone, if the defendant may be served with process within the Zone, regardless of the citizenship of the parties and although the collision occurred in Panama. Panama Electric R. Co. v. Moyers, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 19, 161 C. C. A. 79.

Jurisdiction on appeal—Amount in controversy.—To same effect as original annotation, see Pacific Mail Steamship Co. v. Beneby, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 444, 162 C. C. A. 514.

Application to procedure on appeal.—The provision of this section that appellate jurisdiction "may be exercised by said Circuit Court of Appeals in the same manner, under the same regulations, and by the same procedure as nearly as practicable as is done in reviewing the final judgments and decrees of the District Courts of the United States," shows that the provision, appearing in the earlier part of this section, that "all existing laws in the Canal Zone governing practice and procedure in existing courts shall be applicable and adapted to the practice in the new courts," does not include the manner of bringing cases from the District Court of the Canal Zone to the Circuit Court of Appeals, and that existing laws of the Canal Zone were not intended to be made applicable to anything done after judgment looking to a review by the Circuit Court of Appeals. Panama R. Co. v. Curran, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 768, 168 C. C. A. 114. To same effect see Panama R. Co. v. Robert, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 773, 168 C. C. A. 119.

Controversies arising in China between United States citizens are within the jurisdiction of the United States Court for China. Swayne v. Everett, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 71, 166 C. C. A. 399.

Vol. V, p. 1108. [Procedure, etc.] [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 230.]

"Parties upon whose petition order was made."—A suit to enjoin the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission authorizing an increase in westbound transcontinental freight rates in order to remove a discrimination against intermountain territory may be brought in any federal District Court in which is the residence of one of the carriers, made a party defendant, who originally made application to the Commission, under the Act of February 4, 1887, as amended by the Act of June 18, 1910, § 8 (see vol. 4, p. 396), for relief from the long-and-short-haul clause of that section in respect to certain westbound transcontinental rates, although the order complained of was made after the proceedings were reopened upon application in behalf of shippers, since the carriers who made the original applications must be deemed to be "the parties upon whose petition the order was made," within the meaning of the provision of the Act of October 22, 1913 (38 Stat. at L. 219, ch. 32), that "the venue of any suit hereafter brought to enforce, suspend, or set aside, in whole or in part, any order of the Interstate Commerce Commission shall be in the judicial district wherein is the residence of the party or any of the parties upon whose petition the order was made." Skinner, etc., Corp. v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 557, 39 S. Ct. 375, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Vol. V, p. 1110, Jud. Code, sec. 208.

[First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 221.]

Statutory powers exceeded by commission.—A federal District Court has jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission authorizing an increase in westbound transcontinental freight rates in order to remove a discrimination against intermountain territory, the invalidity of which is asserted, not on the ground that the new rate is unreasonably high, or that it is discriminatory, or that there is mere error in the action of the commission, but on the ground that the commission, in making the order, exceeded its statutory powers; and plaintiff is not first required to attempt to secure redress in a proceeding before the commission. Skinner, etc., Corp. v. U. S. (1919) 249 U. S. 557, 39 S. Ct. 375, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "The defendants contend that the District Court did not have jurisdiction of the subject-matter of this suit; because orders entered in a fourth section proceeding cannot be assailed in the courts; at least, not until after a remedy has been sought under §§ 13 and 15 of the Act to regulate commerce. This contention proceeds apparently upon a misapprehension of plaintiff's position. If plaintiff had sought relief against a rate or practice alleged to be unjust because unreasonably high or discriminatory, the remedy must have been sought primarily by proceedings before the commission, Loomis v. Lehigh Valley R. R. Co., 240 U. S. 43, 50; Texas & Pacific Ry. Co. v. American Tie & Timber Co., 234 U. S. 138, 146; The Minnesota Rate Cases, 230 U. S. 352, 419; Robinson v. Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co., 222 U. S. 506; Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. v. Pitcairn Coal Co., 215 U. S. 481; and the finding thereon would have been conclusive, unless there was lack of substantial evidence, some irregularity in the proceedings, or some error in the application of rules of law, Manufacturers Ry. Co. v. United States, 246 U. S. 457, 482; Pennsylvania Co. v. United States, 236 U. S. 351, 361; Los Angeles Switching Case, 234 U. S. 294, 311; Kansas City Southern Ry. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 423, 440; Procter & Gamble Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 297-298; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 222 U. S. 541. But plaintiff does not contend that 75 cents is an unreasonably high rate or that it is discriminatory or that there was mere error in the action of the commission. The contention is that the commission has exceeded its statutory powers; and that, hence, the order is void. In such a case the courts have jurisdiction of suits to enjoin the enforcement of an order, even if the plaintiff has not attempted to secure redress in a proceeding before the commission. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diefenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 49; Louisiana & Pacific Ry. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. Rep. 244, 251; Atlantic Coast Line R. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 194 Fed. Rep. 449, 451. The Sacramento Case, supra, was a case of this character. Compare Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co., 227 U. S. 88, 92; Southern Pacific Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 433. The District Court properly assumed jurisdiction of this suit."

Review.—A judgment of a District Court in a suit against the United States is only reviewable in the Supreme Court. The Circuit Court of Appeals has no jurisdiction to review such a judgment. J. Homer Fritch v. U. S., (1919) 248 U. S. 458, 39 S. Ct. 158, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 608, 148 C. C. A. 374, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 133, 149 C. C. A. 343, and overruling Ogden v. U. S., (1893) 148 U. S. 390, 13 S. Ct. 602, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 493, wherein the court said: "Liability of the United States for the hire of a ship for two charter periods was asserted. The trial court allowed recovery for one period and rejected it for the other and the court below affirmed its action. The case is here because of alleged error committed in not allowing for both. The government insists that we have no jurisdiction because the judgment of the trial court was exclusively susceptible of being reviewed directly by this court; hence, that the court below had no jurisdiction and we must reverse and remand with directions to dismiss for want of jurisdiction. The contention is well founded, and we might content ourselves with referring to the authorities by which its correctness is conclusively established. As, however, some contrariety of opinion on the question is manifested in the decisions of the lower federal courts resulting either from a misconception of the governing principle upon which the right of direct review rests, or, it may be, caused by previous decisions of this court which if unexplained may continue to be the source of misconception, we briefly review and dispose of the subject from an original point of view. When the United States made claims against it justiciable by conferring authority upon the Court of Claims to entertain and decide them, the grant was accompanied by a provision giving this court direct and exclusive jurisdiction to review the judgments of the Court of Claims rendered in the exercise of the new power given. When by the Tucker Act (Act of March 3, 1887, c. 359, 24 Stat. 505) authority was conferred upon the circuit and district courts of the United States to exert, concurrently with the Court of Claims, the power to decide claims against the United States, the question arose whether the judgments of those courts rendered in the exercise of such jurisdiction were reviewable exclusively and directly by this court.

"Determining the principle by which the question was to be solved, it was decided that in the absence of express provision or necessary implication to the contrary, the judgments of courts of the United States rendered as the result of the new power would be subject to be reviewed only by the exclusive method theretofore provided for the Court of Claims. Applying the principle of interpretation thus announced to the Tucker Act, it was held that judgments of the courts of the United States in suits against the United States under that act were reviewable only directly by this court. United States v. Davis, 131 U. S. 36."

I. GENERAL RULES AND PRINCIPLES

1. General Scope and Effect of Section
(p. 1125)

The jurisdiction of the federal court given to nonresidents against citizens of the local state, is to insure an impartial trial, not to create rights of action which citizens of the state, in like condition, do not have. Paterlini v. Memorial Hospital Ass'n, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 639, 160 C. C. A. 49.

2. Federal Questions (p. 1126)

The decision of a state court as to whether a state statute infringes the Federal Constitution is not conclusive. Webb v. Southern R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 618, 160 C. C. A. 518.

3. Suits in Equity (p. 1126)

Specific performance.—A federal court is not bound to follow the rule laid down by a state court for granting specific performance of a contract and, hence, may specifically enforce a contract which lacks mutuality even though the rule in the state court is otherwise. Union Bag, etc., Corp. v. Bischoff, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 187.

4. Criminal Cases (p. 1128)

To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Myres v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 779, 168 C. C. A. 125. See further U. S. v. De Bolt, (S. D. Ohio 1918) 253 Fed. 78, also holding that in such cases state statutes and decisions may be persuasive.

5. Questions of Unwritten or Common Law

b. Present Rule (p. 1129)

In general.—To same effect as second paragraph of original annotation, see Aktieselskabet Korn-og, etc. v. Rederiaktiebolaget, etc., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 935, 163

6. Constitutional and Statutory Questions Generally

a. General Rule Stated (p. 1133)

To same effect as original annotation, see Rockaway Pac. Corp. v. Stotesbury, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 255 Fed. 345; Ludlow v. Ludlow, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 559, 165 C. C. A. 9; National Enameling, etc., Co. v. Zirkovics, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 184, 163 C. C. A. 340.

Constitutionality of state statute.—A federal court in determining the constitutionality of a state statute under the state constitution, is bound by decisions of the highest court of the state regarding the constitutionality of similar state statutes. Union Sulphur Co. v. Reed, (E. D. La. 1918) 249 Fed. 172.

Construction violating federal statutes.—Although a federal court is usually bound by the construction of state statutes by the highest court of the state, it is not so bound in an inquiry as to whether such statutes, as enforced, effect results contrary to the express language of federal statutes. Iowa Loan, etc., Co. v. Fairweather, (S. D. Ia. 1918) 252 Fed. 605.

c. Local Law; Rules of Property (p. 1130)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Quinette, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 773, 164 C. C. A. 7.

e. Questions Not Decided until after Accrual of Rights (p. 1140)

A state decision on the constitutionality of a state statute will be treated as conclusive in a proceeding begun in the federal court before the rendition of the decision where the decision was rested on the rule of cases decided prior to the accrual of the rights in question. Nichols v. Cleveland, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 731, 159 C. C. A. 589.

f. Effect of Earlier Federal Decisions or Institution of Action in Federal Court (p. 1141)

To the same effect as first paragraph of the original annotation, see St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Quinette, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 773, 164 C. C. A. 7.

l. Passage or Repeal of Statutes (p. 1147)

Notice of local law.—A state holding that the sufficiency of the publication of notice of a special law is to be determined solely by the legislature is binding on the federal court. Bush v. Branson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 377, 160 C. C. A. 387.

7. Decisions of Intermediate Appellate and Lower Courts (p. 1148)

It is not incumbent upon a federal court to adopt a construction given to a state statute by a trial judge in a state court. In re F. & D. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 73.

II. APPLICATION OF RULES TO PARTICULAR SUBJECTS

1. Adverse Possession (p. 1148)

Title by limitation.—A federal court is bound by state decisions as to title by limitation, and hence a judgment of a District Court following the latest state decision on the subject will be reversed where pending the writ of error the state court decision is reversed. Conn v. Drew, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 852, 162 C. C. A. 166.

2. Assignments for Benefit of Creditors and State Insolvency Proceedings (p. 1149)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Bryan v. Barriger, (W. D. Ky. 1918) 251 Fed. 328.

5. Commercial Paper

b. Effect of State Statute and Construction Thereof by State Court (p. 1159)

In Walker v. Arkansas Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 1, it was held that in an action based on a promissory note, executed and payable in a certain state, the laws of that state controlled, and hence where a state statute removed all restrictions on contracts of married women, a wife could be held liable as surety on a note executed for her husband.

7. Contracts Generally (p. 1163)

Construction of contracts.—In considering in bankruptcy proceedings the construction and legal effect to be given to a contract of a certain state, a federal court will follow the settled rule in force in such state. In re American Steel Supply Syndicate, (E. D. Mich. 1919) 256 Fed. 876.

Voidability of contract as against public policy.—Where a decision in the highest court of a state declaring a contract void as against public policy, is not based on any state statute, such decision is not binding on a federal court in that state in construing a similar contract, executed prior to the decision of the state court and which is valid under the decisions of the federal courts. Interstate Compress Co. v. Agnew, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 508, 168 C. C. A. 199, wherein the court said: "When a ruling of the highest court of a state is controlling, when the same question arises in an action pending in a national court of that state, has been determined by the national Supreme Court so frequently, that it has ceased to be an open question. Like most important legal principles, it has been of gradual growth, until it has finally become a well-established rule of law. In Kuhn v. Fairmont Coal Co., 215 U. S. 349, 380, 30 Sup. Ct. 140, 143 (54 L. Ed. 228), the court, after a full review of the former rulings of that court on the subject, epitomizes the law as follows:

"We take it, then, that it is no longer to be questioned that the federal courts in determining cases before them are to be guided by the following rules: (1) When administering state laws and determining rights accruing under those laws, the jurisdiction of the federal court is an independent one, not subordinate to but co-ordinate and concurrent with the jurisdiction of the state courts. (2) Where, before the rights of the parties accrued, certain rules relating to real estate have been so established by state decisions as to become rules of property and action in the state, those rules are accepted by the federal court as authoritative declarations of the law of the state. (3) But where the law of the state has not been thus settled, it is not only the right, but the duty, of the federal court to exercise its own judgment, as it also always does when the case before it depends upon the doctrines of commercial law and general jurisprudence. (4) So, when contracts and transactions are entered into and rights have accrued under a particular state of the local decisions, or when there has been no decision by the state court on the particular question involved, then the federal courts properly claim the right to give effect to their own judgment as to what is the law of the state applicable to the case, even where a different view has been expressed by the state court after the rights of parties accrued. But even in such cases, for the sake of comity and to avoid confusion, the federal court should always lean to an agreement with the state court if the question is balanced with doubt."

Actions on contracts with county.—In an action against a county on a contract made with it, a federal court will enforce a state statute requiring all persons having claims against a county to present them to the county board before bringing suit thereon. Such requirement will not be enforced, however, if the county board has taken action which is equivalent to a rejection of the claim and which makes the presentation of it futile. Covington County v. Stevens, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 328.

Municipal contracts.—A rule, established by the decisions of the highest court of a state, affecting rights of parties arising out of municipal contracts for street improvements and sureties on bonds filed in pursuance of statutory provisions, if fixed and definite and uniform in its application, should be followed by a federal court where no question of general or commercial law or of rights under the Federal Constitution or the laws of Congress is involved. American Surety Co. v. Bellingham Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 54, 165 C. C. A. 464.

12. Decedents' Estates Generally (p. 1169)

Testator's residence.—The decision of a state court has been held to be controlling in the determination of the testator's residence where property is situated. Swann v. Austell, (N. D. Ga. 1918) 253 Fed. 807.

Effect of judgment against administrator.—The decisions of the highest court of a state as to whether a judgment against an administrator is conclusive against the sureties on his bond, are binding on the federal courts. Gillespie v. Riggs, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 943, 165 C. C. A. 385.

13. Death by Wrongful Act

b. Who May Maintain Action (p. 1172)

Federal courts will follow the decisions of state courts upon the question whether a right of action for the death by wrongful act inures to the personal representative of the deceased or to his surviving spouse and next of kin. Sarpy County v. Galvin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 888, 164 C. C. A. 104.

14. Deeds, Mortgages and Leases of Realty

a. Deeds (p. 1174)

Grant of mineral rights.—Where grants of mineral rights are made in view of the local rule of a state, the federal courts will follow it, whether or not it is to be considered strictly as a rule of property. Marquette Cement Min. Co. v. Oglesby Coal Co., (N. D. Ill. 1918) 253 Fed. 107.

Grant of right to cut timber.—In construing a provision in a deed regarding the cutting and removal of timber from certain land, a federal court will follow decisions of the state court, even though there were no decisions in the state courts establishing a rule of property binding upon it when the rights of the parties accrued. Norfolk Bank For Sav., etc. v. Whipple, (E. D. S. C. 1918) 254 Fed. 195.

21. Immigration and Naturalization (p. 1192)

Decision of state court as res judicata.

The decision of a state court denying leave to file a naturalization petition is res judicata and binding on a federal court, and if the government insists upon the benefit of such judgment the applicant's only remedy is to renew his application five years after the date of its denial by the state court. In re Norman, (D. C. Mont. 1919) 256 Fed. 543.

22. Insurance Contracts

b. Effect of State Statute (p. 1194)

The decisions of the highest state court construing statutes in relation to insurance are in general binding upon the federal courts and it has been so held with reference to the construction of the terms of a fire insurance policy the form of which is prescribed by a state statute. Grant Lumber Co. v. North

River Ins. Co., (D. C. Idaho 1918) 253 Fed. 83.

24. Judgments (p. 1197)

What constitutes final judgment.—The ruling of the highest court of a state on the question of what constitutes a final judgment reviewable on a writ of error or appeal, is not controlling on a federal court sitting in that state. J. W. Darling Lumber Co. v. Porter, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 455.

"Circuit courts of this state."—In Denny v. Giles, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 987, 163 C. C. A. 237, it was held that the term "circuit courts of this state" as used in a state statute providing "all final judgments and decrees heretofore or hereafter rendered and entered in the circuit courts of this state, and certified copies thereof, shall be admissible as prima facie evidence in the several courts of this state of the entry and validity of such judgments and decrees," meant circuit courts of that state and could not be enlarged by a federal court to include the former Circuit Courts of the United States.

25. Lien (p. 1199)

The construction of a mechanic's lien law by the state court is binding on the federal court. Follansbee Bank v. Follansbee Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 645, 160 C. C. A. 545.

26. Limitations of Actions

In the absence of any statute of limitations enacted by Congress, the federal courts of equity usually follow the state statutes; and they do this even in actions which depend upon or arise under the laws of the United States. Benedict v. New York, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 758, 159 C. C. A. 616.

27. Master and Servant

b. Liability of Master for Injuries to Servant Generally (p. 1206)

Effect of state statute generally.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Fillippon v. Albion Vein State Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 76, 39 S. Ct. 435, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing on other grounds (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 258, 155 C. C. A. 98.

Instructions.—In an action under a state Employers' Liability Act to recover damages for the death of an employee, an instruction defining contributory negligence as shown by the evidence in the case is proper, where it follows an established rule set forth in the decisions of the state. Roberts v. Tennessee Coal, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 469, 166 C. C. A. 545.

30. Municipal and Quasi Municipal Corporations (p. 1211)

The national courts uniformly follow the construction of the constitution and statutes of a state announced by its highest judicial tribunal in all cases that involve no question of general or commercial law and no question of right under the national Constitution or the acts of Congress. The character and limits of the powers and liabilities of the municipal and quasi municipal corporations of a state are generally questions of state or local law. Vincennes Bridge Co. v. Atoka County, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 248 Fed. 93, 160 C. C. A. 233.

31. Negligence Questions

a. In General (p. 1215)

Violation of statute regulating speed of automobiles.—A federal court will follow the decision of the highest court of a state on the question whether the violation of a statute of the state regulating the speed of automobiles is negligence per se. Harmon v. Barber, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 1, 159 C. C. A. 219.

Liability of charitable corporation for tort.—A federal court will as a matter of comity apply the settled rule of the state where it sits that a charitable corporation is not liable for the negligence of its employees. Paterlini v. Memorial Hospital Ass'n, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 639, 160 C. C. A. 49.

33. Practice, Procedure and Remedies Generally (p. 1217)

Sufficiency of service.—Service upon a foreign corporation doing business within a district, will be regarded as sufficient in a federal court if it is sufficient under the state law. Walsh v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1916) 256 Fed. 47.

35. Private Corporations

a. Generally (p. 1219)

To same effect as original annotation, see Ramsay v. Crevlin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 813, 166 C. C. A. 259.

In the absence of any controlling state statute, a federal court can be justified in declining to adopt the general rules of corporate law approved by the United States Supreme Court only in case there is a clear, definite and settled rule to the contrary in the state. Thoms v. Goodman, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 39, 165 C. C. A. 449.

37. Statute of Frauds (p. 1225)

38. Taxation

a. In General (p. 1226)

Tax penalties.—A federal court is bound by a decision of the highest court of a state regarding a state statute imposing tax penalties. Bright v. Arkansas, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 953, 162 C. C. A. 151.

i. Levy and Collection of Taxes Generally (p. 1231)

Lien of tax.—The decision of the highest court of a state as to the nature and extent of the lien of a personal property tax is binding on a federal court in a bankruptcy proceeding. Polk County v. Burns, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 399, 159 C. C. A. 453.

Notice to property owners.—Where the Supreme Court of a state deliberately considers and construes a clause of a state statute concerning a notice to property owners fixing a certain date for their appearance before a board of equalization to object to assessments, such construction is binding on the federal courts, regardless of the fact that it criticised as dictum. Skagit County v. Puget Mill Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 965, 162 C. C. A. 163.

k. Special or Local Assessments (p. 1231)

The decision of the Supreme Court of a state holding valid under the state constitution a law vesting power in boards of supervisors to submit propositions relating to special road taxes, is binding on a federal court. Lancaster v. Police Jury, (W. D. La. 1917) 254 Fed. 179.

In a suit by a statutory receiver appointed by a state court, the decisions of the highest court of the state as to the interpretation of his powers are binding on the federal court. Hopkins v. Lancaster, (N. D. Ala. 1918) 254 Fed. 190.

I. CONSTRUCTION GENERALLY.

3. Principles Controlling Construction

a. In General (p. 23)

State decisions and statutes not conclusive.—"Whenever the question of the jurisdiction of a federal court is raised in an action pending therein, that court is not bound by the laws of the state in which it is sitting, but follows its own rules of practice in determining such question." Golden v. Connersville Wheel Co., (E. D. Mich. 1918) 252 Fed. 904.

4. Clauses in Act Construed

c. "As Near as May Be" (p. 26)

General doctrine.—A federal court is not required by this section to follow a rule of practice of a state which directly conflicts with a well-settled rule prevailing in the federal courts. Sligo Furnace Co. v. Dalton, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 532, 166 C. C. A. 600.

V. APPLICABILITY IN PARTICULAR INSTANCES

11. Counterclaim (p. 35)

The question whether a claim is available as a counterclaim in an action in a federal court, is governed by the laws of the state in which the court is sitting. Walsh Constr. Co. v. Cleveland, (N. D. Ohio 1918) 250 Fed. 137.

13. Criminal Cases (p. 36)

State statutes relating to the competency of a wife to testify against her husband in a criminal case do not control in a federal court. Denning v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 468, 159 C. C. A. 517, L. R. A. 1918 E. 487.

20. Evidence and Mode of Obtaining (p. 37)

Burden of proof.—In Harmon v. Barber, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 1, 159 C. C. A. 219, it was held that the rule that the burden is on a carrier in a suit by a passenger for personal injury to show contributory negligence "is one of general law, enforced by the federal courts even where the rule of the state practice is otherwise."

24. Judgments and Proceedings Subsequent to

a. In General (p. 40)

Application generally of section.—The Conformity Act by its express terms refers only to proceedings in district (and formerly circuit) courts, and has no application to appellate proceedings either in the Supreme Court or in the Circuit Court of Appeals. Camp v. Gress, (1919) 250 U. S. 308, 39 S. Ct. 478, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 121, 156 C. C. A. 549.

Any local rule of practice which might require the reversal as against all defendants in an action on a joint contract for error not prejudicial to the resident defendants in retaining jurisdiction over a nonresident co-defendant can have no effect in a case coming up to the Supreme Court from a lower federal court, since in such cases the Supreme Court is given by statute full power to enter such judgment or order as the nature of the appeal or writ of error or certiorari requires, and by the Act of February 26, 1919, amending the Judicial Code, § 269 (see Pamph. Supp. No. 19, p. 155), the duty is especially enjoined of giving judgment in appellate proceedings "without regard to technical errors, defects, or exceptions which do not affect the substantial rights of the parties." Camp v. Gress, (1919) 250 U. S. 308, 39 S. Ct. 478, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 121, 156 C. C. A. 549.

27. Jury and Jurors

a. In General (p. 46)

Drawing of talesman by disqualified officer.—The fact that an Alaska statute providing for the drawing of talesmen makes no provision for the disqualification of the marshal does not prevent the application of section 280 of the Judiciary Act providing for such a contingency. Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 92, 159 C. C. A. 310.

Waiver of jury.—In cases in which by stipulation a jury is waived, state practice should be followed by a federal court. Pannill v. Roanoke Times Co., (W. D. Va. 1918) 252 Fed. 910.

b. Submission of Case to Jury (p. 47)

Where a case is submitted to the jury, the federal court should follow the state practice and statute. Pannill v. Roanoke Times Co., (W. D. Va. 1918) 252 Fed. 910.

Argument of counsel.—The rule of the New York practice that a counsel in opening a personal injury case may state the amount claimed obtains in a federal court sitting in that state, though the cause of action arose in a state where the rule is otherwise. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Skerman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 269, 159 C. C. A. 363.

32. Nonsuit

a. Voluntary Nonsuit (p. 49)

The Conformity Act gives plaintiff in a suit in a District Court, sitting in Virginia, the same right that he has under the Virginia statutes, in the absence of a demurrer to the evidence and joinder therein, to take a nonsuit at any time before submission of the case to the jury and their retirement. Barrett v. Virginian R. Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 473, 39 S. Ct. 540, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 397, 157 C. C. A. 23.

In the Eighth Circuit, the Circuit Court of Appeals, following the practice of the state courts, has decided that a plaintiff may take a voluntary nonsuit "at any time before the jury has actually retired." Alsop v. McCombs, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 949, 165 C. C. A. 391.

Where the state practice permits a voluntary nonsuit at any time before the jury retires to consider its verdict, a federal court sitting in that state will permit the taking of a nonsuit under the same conditions. Cybur Lumber Co. v. Erkhart, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 284, 159 C. C. A. 378.

If there is no state practice regarding the granting of a voluntary nonsuit, federal courts in the state are governed only by general law. Pannill v. Roanoke Times Co., (W. D. Va. 1918) 252 Fed. 910.

36. Pleadings

a. General Matters (p. 53)

Necessity of plea.—Under this section a decision by the highest court of a state regarding the necessity of pleading an estoppel in pais is binding on a federal court holding sessions within such state. Shelton v. Southern R. Co., (E. D. Tenn. 1918) 255 Fed. 182.

41. Set-off and Counterclaim (p. 58)

Set off of usurious interest against national bank.—The rule that the penalty prescribed by R. S. sec. 5198 for the taking of usury by a national bank cannot be enforced by set-off in an action for the principal (see annotations vol. 6, p. 754), is a rule of federal law and the Conformity Act does not make state rules on that subject applicable. Planters' Nat. Bank v. Wysong, etc., Co., (N. C. 1919) 99 S. E. 199.

48. Witnesses (p. 60)

Competency of wife against husband.—State statutes regulating the competency of a wife to testify against her husband in a criminal proceeding have no application to a trial in a federal court. Denning v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 463, 159 C. C. A. 517, L. R. A. 1918 E. 487.

Calling adversary for cross-examination.—A state statute giving the right to call an adversary party for cross-examination does not fix a rule of procedure and will not be followed in a federal court. American Issue Pub. Co. v. Sloan, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 251, 160 C. C. A. 329.

49. Writs and Process

b. Mode and Sufficiency of Service (p. 60)

Computation of time.—The rule of the state practice will not be followed in determining whether a final Sunday is excluded in computing the time for suing out a writ of error. Siegelschiffer v. Penn. Mut. Life Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 248 Fed. 226, 160 C. C. A. 304.

d. On Foreign Corporations (p. 62)

The manner of service of summons on a foreign corporation is governed by the state law. McCullough v. United Grocers' Corp. (N. D. Ohio 1918) 247 Fed. 880.

Vol. VI, p. 80, sec. 921. [First ed., vol. IV, p. 587.]

Actions against several stockholders.—It is not an abuse of discretion to order the consolidation of a number of actions by a corporation against stockholders to recover in each case a balance due on the stock subscription, each stockholder defending the action and bringing a cross action to recover the amount paid by him on the stock on the ground that his subscription was procured by fraud, the alleged fraudulent representations being substantially identical. Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Co. v. Abbott, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 833, 160 C. C. A. 55.

Foreclosure suits affecting railroad trust mortgages were consolidated in Bankers' Trust Co. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 789, 164 C. C. A. 23.

I. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION GENERAL (p. 83)

Where no bond is given or deposit made for the release of a vessel pursuant to this section, or the rules of court, the vessel remains for all purposes of the action in the custody of the court. In re Whitney Steamboat Corp., (1919) 249 U. S. 115, 39 S. Ct. 192, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

I. In general.

III. Signature.

3. Time of signing.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 94)

Necessity for bill of exceptions.—On writ of error from a final judgment, errors of law appearing on the face of the record proper may be availed of without resorting to a bill of exceptions or other equivalent proceeding. But errors in rulings of law occurring in the course of a trial are not a part of the record proper, and in order that they may be reviewed on writ of error by an appellate court must be excepted to at the time they are made, and incorporated into the record by a bill of exceptions or other equivalent proceeding. Ana Maria Sugar Co. v. Quinones, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 499, 163 C. C. A. 493.

III. SIGNATURE

3. Time of Signing (p. 95)

When bill deemed presented.—A bill is presented when counsel takes it to the judge for signatures, though on the suggestion of the judge he takes it away again to substitute a photographic copy of the policy in suit for a typewritten copy. In re Federal Life Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 908, 161 C. C. A. 26.

Delay in second presentation.—Counsel having withdrawn a bill for correction was held not negligent in failing to present it again during the term. In re Federal Life Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 908, 161 C. C. A. 26.

II. TRIAL BY JURY (p. 121)

Condemnation proceedings.—Where a state statute authorizing the condemnation by telegraph companies of easements over railroad rights of way, plainly contemplates that the question of the necessity of condemnation and similar precedent conditions shall be decided by the court in advance of or separately from the jury trial concerning compensation, the fact that a condemnation proceeding is a suit at law within this section for some purposes, does not warrant it being so regarded for all purposes where it is brought in a federal court nor require a jury trial on the question of the necessity of the condemnation. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 385, 161 C. C. A. 359.

V. PROVINCE OF COURT AND JURY (p. 127)

Comment on evidence.—The rule is well settled in the federal courts that the trial judge has the right to express his opinion upon the facts of the case and to advise the jury regarding their conclusions thereon, provided the jury is given to unequivocally understand that it is not bound by the judge's expressed opinion. This general rule is subject to the limitation that his comments upon the facts should be "judicial and dispassionate, and so carefully guarded that the jurors, who are the triers of them, may be left free to exercise their independent judgment." Shea v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 440, 163 C. C. A. 458.

Findings.—This section gives the court discretion as to finding the facts either generally or specially. Virginia, etc., Coal Co. v. Charles, (W. D. Va. 1917) 251 Fed. 83.

Scope of review.—Where under the provisions of this section parties to an action have waived a jury, the Circuit Court of Appeals on a writ of error is limited to the inquiry whether the findings of the referee as altered or amended by the district judge justify his conclusions of law. Roesler, etc., Chemical Co. v. Standard Silk Dyeing Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 777, 166 C. C. A. 223.

Conclusiveness of findings.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see The Beaver, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 312, 165 C. C. A. 94; Charles W. Lewis Towing, etc., Co. v. Corbin, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 990, 164 C. C. A. 663; Lake Drummond Canal, etc., Co. v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 796, 164 C. C. A. 636; The W. H. Flannery, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 349, 161 C. C. A. 357; The Baron Napier, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 126, 161 C. C. A. 178.

Where the trial court in an admiralty suit "has rejected the positive testimony of witnesses who were in the best position to know exactly what the truth was as to some disputed fact, and accepted the testimony of others whose opportunity to know the truth was manifestly not as good, and does this on the expressed ground that the testimony rejected does not harmonize . . . with the inherent probabilities of the case, there is no reason why the appellate court should not review the testimony unembarrassed by the finding as to such facts." The Mason, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 718, 161 C. C. A. 628.

Relation to Sherman Act.—This section "legalizes regular and proper strikes by trade unions, and takes combinations or agreements to bring about that class of strikes out of the purview of section 1 of the Sherman Act [9 Fed. Stat. Ann. 644], but . . . it does not apply to irregular or malicious strikes, those not entered into for the betterment of labor conditions." U. S. v. Norris, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 255 Fed. 423.

Picketing.—Under this section of the Clayton Act picketing, if carried on without violence, and peaceful efforts to prevent the sale of the product of an employer in whose works a strike has been declared cannot be enjoined. Duplex Printing Press Co. v. Deering, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 192.

Strike for closed shop.—A suit by an employer maintaining an open shop, for an injunction against the officers and members of unions that have gone out on a strike for a closed shop, comes within the provisions of this section. Duplex Printing Press Co. v. Deering, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 722, 164 C. C. A. 562.

Unlawful conduct of striking employees.—This section does not legalize any act or acts which were unlawful at the time of its passage. Accordingly, where employees of a company conducting a chain of retail grocery stores, go on a strike, congregate in front of various stores of the company, and use threatening and abusive language to the employees and customers in an effort to enforce a boycott, at a time when they know that the closing of the stores will result in the loss of a large quantity of perishable supplies, their unlawful conduct may be enjoined by a federal court under this section on the ground that the injunction is "necessary to prevent irreparable injury to property, or to a property right" and also under the Food Conservation Act of Aug. 10, 1918, ch. 53, § 4 (see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann., p. 183) providing that it shall be illegal "for any person or persons to knowingly commit waste or willfully to permit preventable deterioration of any necessities in or in connection with their production, or distribution." Kroger Grocery, etc., Co. v. Retail Clerks' International Protective Ass'n, (E. D. Mo. 1918) 250 Fed. 890.

Legalizing secondary boycotts.—This section, perhaps in conjunction with section 6 of the Act (see vol. 6, p. 737), legalizes the secondary boycott, at least so far as it rests on, or consists of, refusing to work for any one who deals with the principal offender. Duplex Printing Press Co. v. Deering, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 722, 164 C. C. A. 562.

Constitutionality.—Where a defendant has been found guilty by the court of an attempt to influence a juror as to his verdict in a case on trial and punished under section 268 of the Judicial Code (see vol. 5, p. 1009) for contempt in misbehaving so near the court as to obstruct the administration of justice, despite the fact that his act was a criminal offense both under the statutes of the state in which the court was sitting and under section 135 of the Penal Laws (see vol. 7, p. 688), he cannot, after failing to demand a jury trial, attack the constitutionality of this section on the ground that it is invalid as class legislation because it denies a person prosecuted for such a contempt of the right to a jury trial, whereas sections 21 and 22 of this Act permit a person accused of certain other contempts to demand a jury trial. Couts v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 595, 161 C. C. A. 521.

Permitting escape of prisoner.—A prosecution for violating an order of commitment by conspiring to permit the escape of the prisoner committed by the order is within the exception of this section. Sweepston v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 205, 163 C. C. A. 361.

Vol. VI, p. 145, sec. 2. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 136.]

"Final judgments."—In view of section 306 of the Revised Statutes and Codes of Porto Rico requiring the Supreme Court of Porto Rico upon reversal of a judgment of the court below, to render such judgment as the lower court should have rendered, except in certain cases when it must remand the case for a new trial, a judgment of the Supreme Court reversing the judgment of the lower court and remanding the case for a new trial, is not "final" within the meaning of this section and hence not reviewable by the Circuit Court of Appeals on writ of error. Caballero v. Criado, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 345, 162 C. C. A. 415.

Review of decision.—The determination of a pure question of local law is one which the Circuit Court of Appeals will not disturb, but, on the contrary, will uphold, except on conviction of clear error committed. Graham v. O'Ferral, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 10, 160 C. C. A. 150.

Provisions of this section as to Porto Rico adopted by reference, see section 43 of the Act of March 2, 1917, ch. 145, 39 Stat. L. 966, in title Porto Rico, 1918 Supp. 627.

III. Construction and sufficiency of indictment.

IV. Demurrer to indictment.

III. CONSTRUCTION AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT (p. 151)

Construction of indictment.—The District Court's interpretation of the indictment must be accepted by the Supreme Court on a direct writ of error sued out under this Act to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to the indictment, which is based upon the construction of the statute upon which the indictment is founded. Review in such case is confined to the question of the construction of the statute involved in the decision below. U. S. v. Colgate, (1919) 250 U. S. 300, 39 S. Ct. 465, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (E. D. Va. 1918) 253 Fed. 522.

IV. DEMURRER TO INDICTMENT (p. 152)

In U. S. v. Comyns, (1919) 248 U. S. 349, 39 S. Ct. 98, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, it appeared that the lower court sustained a demurrer to an indictment brought under section 215 of the Penal Law (see post, p. 711, where the facts on which the indictment was based are briefly stated). On the question whether the Supreme Court had jurisdiction to review the judgment sustaining the demurrer that court said: "Notwithstanding a contention to the contrary, it seems to us that the decision was based upon a construction of section 215 of the Criminal Code, and hence that we have jurisdiction under the Criminal Appeals Act. United States v. Patten, 226 U. S. 525, 535; United States v. Nixon, 235 U. S. 231, 235."

I. In general.

III. Computation of time.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 161)

Contempt proceedings.—An appeal in a contempt proceeding will be dismissed if it is not taken within six months. Shuler v. Raton Waterworks Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 634, 160 C. C. A. 44.

III. COMPUTATION OF TIME (p. 163)

Exclusion of Sunday.—Where the last day of the six months falls on Sunday a writ of error cannot be sued out on the following day. Siegelschiffer v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 248 Fed. 226, 160 C. C. A. 304.

Vol. VI, p. 163, sec. 997. [First ed., vol. IV, p. 605.]

An exception is an indispensable basis for an assignment of error in the Circuit Court of Appeals. Finley v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 845, 168 C. C. A. 191, a criminal case.

Vol. VI, p. 170, sec. 11. [First ed., vol. IV, p. 428.]

Where there was direct and positive testimony connecting the defendant with the charge, the Circuit Court of Appeals held that the verdict was beyond its power to review. Banks v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 889, 164 C. C. A. 105.

III. NEW EVIDENCE

3. Allowance of New Proof (p. 179)

Suit in admiralty affecting alien enemy.—In admiralty, cases are tried de novo on appeal, and the Supreme Court in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction has power not only to correct error in the judgment entered below, but to make such disposition of the case as justice may at the time require. And in determining what justice requires the court must consider the changes in fact and in law which have supervened since the decree was entered below. Thus, where a libel in personam was brought in the District Court by a British corporation against an Austro-Hungarian corporation during the progress of the world war and the court assumed jurisdiction and dismissed the libel without prejudice, on the ground that the belligerent countries forbid a payment by one belligerent subject to his enemy during the continuance of the war, which decree was affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals on the ground that it was within the discretion of the trial court whether to take or to decline jurisdiction, whereupon the case went to the Supreme Court on certiorari, that court, reversing the courts below, said: "Since the certiorari was granted, the relation of the parties to the court has changed radically. Then, as earlier, the proceeding was one between alien belligerents in a court of a neutral nation. Now it is a suit by one belligerent in a court of a co-belligerent against a common enemy. A suit may be brought in our courts against an alien enemy. McVeigh v. United States, 11 Wall. 259, 267. See also Dorsey v. Kyle, 30 Maryland 512. If the libel had been filed under existing circumstances, security for the claim being obtained by attachment, probably no American court would, in the exercise of discretion, dismiss it and thus deprive the libellant not only of its security, but perhaps of all possibility of ever obtaining satisfaction. Under existing circumstances, dismissal of the libel is not consistent with the demands of justice.

"The respondent, although an alien enemy, is, of course, entitled to defend before a judgment should be entered. McVeigh v. United States, supra. See also Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 280; Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409. It is now represented by counsel. But intercourse is prohibited by law between subjects of Austria-Hungary outside the United States and persons in the United States. Trading with the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917, § 3 (c), c. 106, 40 Stat. 411. And we take notice of the fact that free intercourse between residents of the two countries has been also physically impossible. It is true that more than three years ago a stipulation as to the facts and the proof of foreign law was entered into by the then counsel for respondent, who has died since. But reasons may conceivably exist why that stipulation ought to be discharged or modified, or why it should be supplemented by evidence. We cannot say that, for the proper conduct of the defense, consultation between client and counsel and intercourse between their respective countries may not be essential even at this stage. The war precludes this.

"Under these circumstances, we are of opinion that the decree dismissing the libel should be set aside and the case remanded to the District Court for further proceedings, but that no action should be taken there (except such, if any, as may be required to preserve the security and the rights of the parties in statu quo) until, by reason of the restoration of peace between the United States and Austria-Hungary, or otherwise, it may become possible for the respondent to present its defense adequately. Compare The Kaiser Wilhelm II, 246 Fed. Rep. 786; Robinson & Co. v. Continental Insurance Company of Mannheim, [1915] 1 K. B. 155, 161-162." Watts v. Unione Austriaca Di Navigazione, (1918) 248 U. S. 9, 39 S. Ct. 1, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 136, 143 C. C. A. 412, which reversed (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 188.

III. Applicability generally of section.
VIII. Effect of supersedeas.

III. APPLICABILITY GENERALLY OF SECTION (p. 199)

Supersedeas on certiorari to state court.—Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Horton, (1918) 248 U. S. 553, 39 S. Ct. 8, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, a petition for a writ of certiorari was granted to review the decision in (1918) 175 N. C. 472, 95 S. E. 883. In the same case (1918) 248 U. S. 21, 39 S. Ct. 21, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, a motion for supersedeas submitted by the petitioner for certiorari was "granted, a bond for $25,000 to be given within ten days, to be approved by the clerk of this court."

VIII. EFFECT OF SUPERSEDEAS (p. 203)

Proceedings for contempt.—Where on appeal from a decree a supersedeas bond is given under R. S. sec. 1000 (see vol. 6, p. 187) and this section, obedience to the decree may not be enforced by contempt proceedings. Smith v. Government of Canal Zone, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 273, 161 C. C. A. 281. Regarding the court's jurisdiction in such a case, it was said: "By the terms of that superseded decree it perpetuated the preliminary injunction issued when the suit was brought, ordered the appellant to convey the lands described in the deeds which the complaint in the case prayed to be annulled, and ordered him to account for all rents, issues and profits of the properties described in those deeds. By the decree rendered in the contempt proceedings there was what amounted to an ascertainment by the court that the sum of $30,050 was what the appellant was chargeable with because of his conveying the lands in question, and what he was required to pay to satisfy the superseded decree, and it was ordered that the appellant be committed to jail, there to remain until he pay the said sum as he was ordered to do. We are of opinion that the court was without power so to coerce obedience to a decree which had ceased to be enforceable by it."

On a writ of error to review a special finding, the only inquiries open to the Appellate Court are whether the evidence tends to support the ultimate finding, and the finding in turn is sufficient to sustain the respective judgments. *Turner v. right, the Appellate Court is amply justified in ordering an affirmance. Hughitt v. Wayne County Securities Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 251 Fed. 57, 163 C. C. A. 307.

Effect of request for peremptory instruction.—When both parties request a peremptory instruction and do nothing more, they thereby assume the facts to be undisputed and in effect submit to the trial judge the determination of the inferences proper to be drawn therefrom. And upon review a finding of fact by the trial court under such circumstances must stand if the record discloses substantial evidence to support it. Williams v. Vreeland, (1919) 250 U. S. 295, 39 S. Ct. 438, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 346, 156 C. C. A. 632.

In general.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Sharpless Separator Co. v. Skinner, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 25, 163 C. C. A. 275.

Effect of statute.—This statute is amendatory of the Judicial Code and must be taken as requiring that a suit by or against a railroad company incorporated under an act of Congress be not regarded for jurisdictional purposes as arising under the laws of the United States, unless there be some adequate ground for so regarding it other than that the company was thus incorporated. Bankers' Trust Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 295, 36 S. Ct. 569, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1010, wherein the court said: "Plainly, there was a purpose to effect a real change in the jurisdiction of such suits. Counsel for plaintiff concede that this is so. But they urge that all that is intended is to eliminate the mere creation of a railroad corporation under an act of Congress as a ground for regarding the suit as arising under the laws of the United States. In this there is an evident misapprehension of what constitutes incorporation, as also of the real basis of the jurisdiction affected. A corporation is never merely created. Being artificial, possessing no faculties or powers save such as are conferred by law, and having in legal contemplation no existence apart from them, its incorporation consists in giving it individuality and endowing it with the faculties and powers which it is to possess. It is upon this theory that the decisions have proceeded. The ruling has been that a suit by or against a federal corporation arises under the laws of the United States, not merely because the corporation owes its creation to an act of Congress, but because it derives all of its capacities, faculties and powers from the same source. . . . And so, when due regard is had for the terms of the amendatory section of 1915 and for the real basis of the jurisdiction affected, the conclusion is unavoidable that what is intended is to make the fact that a railroad company is incorporated under an act of Congress, that is to say, derives its existence, faculties and powers from such an act, an entirely negligible factor in determining whether a suit by or against the company is one arising under the laws of the United States."

1918 Supp., p. 401, sec. 1.

Amendment as retroactive.—This amendment saves claimants the rights and remedies under the Workmen's Compensation Acts of any state. It is prospective, however, and does not validate a compensation action begun in a state court before its passage and which at the time of such passage the state court had no jurisdiction to entertain. Coon v. Kennedy, (1918) 91 N. J. L. 598, 103 Atl. 207, writ of error to review dismissed in 248 U. S. 457. See to the same effect Thornton v. Grand Trunk-Milwaukee Car Ferry Co., (1918) 202 Mich. 609, 168 N. W. 410, wherein it was held that an award under a state Workmen's Compensation Act, made before the amendment took effect, in the case of an injury to a "coal passer" on a car ferry running between two states was held invalid on the ground that the contract of service was clearly maritime. There is authority, however, that re'roactive effect may be given the amendment since it is remedial in its nature. Veasey v. Peters, (1918) 142 La. 1012, 77 So. 948.

"Remedies under Workmen's Compensation Law."—By virtue of the amendment saving to the claimant the rights and remedies under the workmen's compensation law of any state a workman injured while engaged in helping to unrig a derrick on a barge, the work being concededly of a maritime nature, may proceed under a state workmen's compensation law. Stewart v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. (1919) 226 N. Y. 302, 123 N. E. 382, wherein the court said: "This is an appeal from an affirmance of an award made under the Workmen's Compensation Act (Consol. Laws, c. 67) for injuries received by one Stewart, while engaged in helping to unrig a derrick on one of the defendant's barges. It is conceded that the work in which the injured man was engaged was of a maritime nature, and upon that conceded fact the argument is made that our Workmen's Compensation Act is not applicable, because it is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States and with the federal statute passed thereunder. The attempt is made to support this argument almost exclusively by reference to the decision of the United States Supreme Court in Southern Pac. Co. v. Jensen, (1917) 244 U. S. 205, 37 S. Ct. 524, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1086, L. R. A. 1918C, 451, Ann. Cas. 1917E 900.

"The Jensen Case was one involving the applicability of our Workmen's Compensation Act to injuries received by a stevedore while engaged in helping to unload a vessel belonging to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. The two questions which were considered by Judge Miller in his opinion (1915) (215 N. Y. 514, 109 N. E. 600, L. R. A. 1916A 403, Ann. Cas. 1916B 276) were the ones whether our act was unconstitutional, as depriving employers of property without due process of law; and, second, whether it was in conflict with the Federal Constitution, because attempting directly to regulate or impose a tax or burden on interstate or foreign commerce—the Southern Pacific Company, owner of the vessel, being concededly engaged in such commerce. He reached the conclusion, concurred in by all members of the court voting, that the act was not vulnerable in either of those respects. When the case reached the Supreme Court, however, a new question was argued, and it was held by a closely divided vote that, inasmuch as the injured man was engaged in maritime work, our Compensation Act was violative of the United States Constitution as embodied in the federal statutes adopted thereunder conferring jurisdiction in such a case upon the federal courts. . . . The enactment by the states of Workmen's Compensation Acts has become very general. Public sentiment has justified and demanded the enactment of these statutes, as offering speedy and simple relief to injured workmen and their dependents, and as being a positive and decided step in the interest of industrial welfare and of better relations between employers and employees. In recognition of this widespread public sentiment, and realizing it is desirable that the states should be given power to enact and administer such statutes as these, the Congress, since the decision of the Jensen Case, has very materially modified the federal statute under which it was held that our decision in the latter case could not stand. It has amended this statute, so that it now saves from the jurisdiction of the federal courts 'to suitors in all cases the right of a common-law remedy when the common law is competent to give it, and to claimants the rights and remedies under the Workmen's Compensation Law of any state.' In view of the close division of opinion amongst the learned justices of the Supreme Court, involved in the decision of the Jensen Case, and in view of the concession made in the prevailing opinion that it was difficult to determine just how far the jurisdiction of the federal courts in maritime matters might be limited or affected by such legislation, we think that we are justified in assuming that the Congress has acted within its powers under the Constitution when, after due consideration, it has confided to the states the power to enact and enforce Workmen's Compensation Acts in respect of injuries received in the course of maritime employment. We think that it would be altogether an unjustifiable concession of lack of state jurisdiction in this field of compensation to injured workmen or their dependents, if, after this amendment by the Congress, we should hold that our statute was unconstitutional."

So an employee of a stevedore sustaining injuries while engaged in loading a vessel lying at a dock in navigable waters through the negligence of the employer is not obliged to resort to admiralty for relief but may proceed under a state Workmen's Compensation Law. Veasey v. Peters, (1918) 142 La. 1012, 77 So. 943, which reversed on a rehearing a contrary decision.

Although a stevedore, injured while loading a vessel, is entitled under this section to remedies afforded by the state Workmen's Compensation Act, he does not elect them by signing, at the request of an attorney, the notice to his employer contemplated by the Compensation Act. Siebert v. Patapsco Ship Ceiling, etc., Co., (D. C. Md. 1918) 253 Fed. 685.

In Fuget Sound Bridge, etc., Co. v. Industrial Ins. Commission, (Wash. 1919) 177 Pac. 788, the court said that the Amendment of 1917 did not extend to the Industrial Insurance Commission jurisdiction of persons engaged in maritime work, for the reason that the Workmen's Compensation Act of this state withdraws all "remedy of workmen against employers for injuries received in hazardous work 'from private controversy,' and excludes 'every other remedy,' and therefore the Federal Act cannot create a liability where one already exists in admiralty."

- I. In general.
- II. Writ of error.
- III. Certiorari.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 412)

"Or otherwise" as used in the second paragraph of this section after the words "by writ of certiorari," add nothing of substance to the thought expressed by the new act. Chicago Great Western R. Co. v. Basham, (1919) 249 U. S. 164, 39 S. Ct. 213, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review (1916) 178 Ia. 998, 154 N. W. 1019, 157 N. W. 192.

"Since the passage of the amendment, cases brought within its effect, of the character of this one, cannot be brought here by writ of error unless there is drawn in question the validity of a statute of or an authority exercised under the state on the ground of their being repugnant to the Federal Constitution, treaties or laws. Other cases of alleged denial of federal rights as specified in the statute can be reviewed in this court only upon writ of certiorari." Dana v. Dana, (1919) 250 U. S. 220, 39 S. Ct. 449, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing a writ of error to the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court resting upon the assertion that the state court erred in sustaining a state succession tax because it was imposed on or on account of real estate situated outside the state; and holding that the only right of review was by writ of certiorari.

Finality of the judgment of the state court is essential to a review by the federal Supreme Court, either by writ of error or by certiorari. And where the state court after judgment entertained a petition for rehearing the date on which it entered an order denying such petition was the date on which the original judgment became effective for the purpose of review. Chicago Great Western R. Co. v. Basham, (1919) 249 U. S. 164, 39 S. Ct. 213, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —. To the same point, see Citizens' Bank v. Opperman, (1919) 249 U. S. 448, 39 S. Ct. 330, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

See also notes to vol. 5, p. 723, Jud. Code, sec. 237, supra, p. 624.

II. WRIT OF ERROR (p. 412)

A writ of error must be dismissed.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see J. Homer Fritch v. U. S., (1919) 248 U. S. 458, 39 S. Ct. 158, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (dismissing writ of error to review Coon v. Kennedy, (1918) 91 N. J. L. 598, 103 Atl. 207) wherein the court said: "This writ of error runs to a judgment of the Court of Errors and Appeals of New Jersey filed March 11, 1918, 103 Atl. Rep. 207, denying relief to Rebecca Coon who sued to recover under the New Jersey Workmen's Compensation Act on account of her husband's death by drowning in the navigable waters of that state while employed as a fireman on a tug boat. The court held that as the accident occurred August 4, 1915, the Act of Congress approved October 6, 1917, c. 97, 40 Stat. 395, 'saving . . . to claimants the rights and remedies under the workmen's compensation law of any state' was inapplicable, and that under the doctrine announced in Southern Pacific Co. v. Jensen, 244 U. S. 205, the rights of the parties depended upon the maritime law of the United States. There was no decision against the validity of a treaty or statute of or an authority exercised under the United States, nor in favor of the validity of a statute of or an authority exercised under a state challenged because of repugnance to the Constitution, treaties or laws of the United States."

A writ of error from the federal Supreme Court to a state court to review a judgment which became final after the effective date of the Act of September 6, 1916, must be dismissed where an examination of the record shows that there was not really drawn in question in the courts below the validity of a treaty or statute of or an authority exercised under the United States, or the validity of a statute of or an authority exercised under any state, on the ground of their being repugnant to the Federal Constitution, treaties, or laws. Citizens' Bank v. Opperman, (1919) 249 U. S. 448, 39 S. Ct. 30, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review (Ind. 1917) 115 N. E. 55.

Since this amendment to the Judicial Code, § 237, cases brought within its effect, involving alleged denials of federal rights, cannot be brought up to the federal Supreme Court by writ of error to a state court unless there is drawn in question the validity of a statute of or an authority exercised under the state, on the ground of their being repugnant to the Federal Constitution, treaties, or laws. Other cases can be reviewed only upon writ of certiorari. Dana v. Dana, (1919) 250 U. S. 220, 39 S. Ct. 449, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "This is a writ of error seeking to review in this court a decree of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. The controversy concerned the right to tax under the Massachusetts Statutes of 1909, c. 490, Part IV, § 1, as amended by Stats. 1912, c. 678, the passing of certain interests under the will of Edith L. Dana, in the Duluth and Gladstone Real Estate Trust, in thirty preferred shares, forty-five common shares of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company and in one hundred and thirty shares of the Boston Ground Rent Trust. The probate court held in favor of the treasurer and receiver general,—that all of the interests of the testatrix in the several trusts and companies named were taxable under the Massachusetts statute. The case was decided in the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts on June 29, 1917, and final decree entered July 23, 1917. 227 Massachusetts 502. The ground upon which it is sought to bring the case here on writ of error rests upon the assertion that the Supreme Judicial Court erred in sustaining the succession tax because it was imposed on or on account of real estate situated outside of Massachusetts; therefore rendering the assessment of the tax a violation of rights secured by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, in that it took the property of the plaintiff in error without due process of law. . . . An examination of the record in the case and the opinion of the Supreme Judicial Court shows that neither the validity of the statute nor the validity of any authority exercised under the state was drawn in question. The case was decided on the view which the Supreme Judicial Court entertained of the character of the property involved, and neither in the record nor in the opinion of the court does it appear that any question was raised or decided which involved the validity of the statute of the state, or of an authority exercised under the state, on the ground of their repugnancy to the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States. It follows that the only right of review in this court of the decree of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts was by writ of certiorari. . . . The writ of error must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction."

Review of judgment made final after taking effect of amendment.—In Andrews v. Virginian R. Co., (1919) 248 U. S. 272, 39 S. Ct. 101, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, a writ of error to a Circuit Court of Virginia to review a judgment rendered in that court June 16, 1916, was dismissed on the ground that the judgment was by virtue of this amendment only reviewable by the Supreme Court by certiorari, for while it was rendered before the amendment took effect the state Court of Appeals had discretion to review it and did not exercise that discretion and decline to take jurisdiction till after the amendment became effective. It was said that not until the state Court of Appeals acted did the judgment become a final one.

Construction of treaty.—Where the construction and not the validity of a treaty is the subject of consideration, a writ of error will not lie. Erie R. Co. v. Hamilton, (1919) 248 U. S. 369, 39 S. Ct. 95, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (dismissing writ of error to review (1915) 169 App. Div. 936, 154 N. Y. S. 1125, (1916) 219 N. Y. 343, 114 N. E. 399, Ann. Cas. 1918A 928), wherein the court said: "Since, as we have seen, the plaintiff in error has not assailed the validity of the Russian treaty but on the contrary has claimed under an asserted construction of it, which was denied, it is clear that the case cannot come into this court by writ of error, under the statute quoted. At most the railroad company asserted a right under the treaty which was denied to it by the state courts, and this under the plain reading of the statute could give it a right to review here only by writ of certiorari. The distinction between assailing the validity of a treaty or of a statute and relying upon a special construction of either is patent and has been the subject of such full discussion by this court that it should not now be considered either doubtful or obscure."

Right, privilege, or immunity claimed under Federal Constitution or treaties.—A question respecting a right, privilege, or immunity claimed under the Federal Constitution or the treaties made thereunder will not, since the amendment of September 6, 1916, to the Judicial Code, § 237, afford the basis of a writ of error from the federal Supreme Court to a state court. The only possible review is by writ of certiorari. Rust Land, etc., Co. v. Jackson, (1919) 250 U. S. 71, 39 S. Ct. 424, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Validity of authority exercised under United States.—No question respecting the validity of an authority exercised under the United States which would support a writ of error from the federal Supreme Court to a state court under the Judicial Code, § 237, as amended by the Act of September 8, 1916, was involved in the contention urged as the ground for continuance in the highest state court that the original jurisdiction of the federal Supreme Court over boundary controversies between states was of such a nature as to render a decree made in a suit of that kind binding upon private parties asserting opposing claims to lands in the disputed territory, and to prevent such private parties from prosecuting their litigation in a state court pending determination of a suit between the states. This is but the assertion of a title, right, privilege, or immunity under the Federal Constitution which at most affords ground for a review of the resulting judgment by certiorari. Rust Land, etc., Co. v. Jackson, (1919) 250 U. S. 71, 39 S. Ct. 424, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Rights and immunities under Employers' Liability Act.—In Chicago Great Western R. Co. v. Basham, (1919) 249 U. S. 164, 39 S. Ct. 213, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review (1916) 178 Ia. 998, 154 N. W. 1019, 157 N. W. 192, the question raised by the record and assignments of error related wholly to the alleged denial by the Supreme Court of Iowa of certain rights and immunities asserted by the plaintiff in error under the Employers' Liability Act. It was held that under the new system established by the Act of 1916, the judgment was in the class of those that were reviewable in the Supreme Court not by writ of error but by certiorari.

Validity of state statute.—Writ of error, not certiorari, is the proper method of reviewing in the federal Supreme Court a judgment of the highest court of a state in a case in which the conflict of a state statute with a valid law of the United States was involved, and the decision was in favor of the validity of the state statute. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Scarlet, (1919) 249 U. S. 528, 39 S. Ct. 369, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing on other grounds (1917) 115 Miss. 285, 76 So. 265; Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Mullins, (1919) 249 U. S. 531, 39 S. Ct. 368, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 115 Miss. 343, 76 So. 147.

Validity of state statute or authority.—A real and substantial question under the contract clause of the Federal Constitution which would afford the basis for a writ of error to a state court under this section, cannot be said to have been involved in a decision of the state court which makes no reference to the state law that is asserted to impair contract obligations, but undertakes to support its conclusions by former relevant and apposite opinions, there being nothing to indicate a purpose to give effect to the specified act. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Oklahoma, (1919) 250 U. S. 111, 39 S.

Ct. 399, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (dismissing writ of error to review, (Okla. 1917) 168 Pac. 234), wherein the court said: "In support of our jurisdiction it is said: 'The case is properly here by writ of error because it involves the validity of legislation of the state of Oklahoma alleged by the plaintiff in error to impair the obligation of its contract.' But we have often held that mere assertion of a claim in respect of some constitutional right is not sufficient; there must be a real and substantial controversy of the required character which deserves serious consideration. Ennis Waterworks v. Ennis, (1914) 233 U. S. 652, 658, [34 S. Ct. 767, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1139, 1141]."

Validity of municipal ordinance.—A decision of the highest court of a state adverse to the contention that the taxing provision of a telegraph franchise ordinance as construed and applied has the effect of depriving the telegraph company of rights secured to it by the Constitution and laws of the United States is reviewable in the federal Supreme Court by writ of error. Mackay Tel., etc., Co. v. Little Rock, (1919) 250 U. S. 94, 39 S. Ct. 428, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 131 Ark. 306, 199 S. W. 90.

III. CERTIORARI (p. 413)

Writ by whom granted.—In Seaboard Airline R. Co. v. Horton, (1918) 176 N. C. 115, 96 S. E. 954, the court after quoting the statute said: "It will be seen that such application for certiorari could not be made to this court, but must be made to the United States Supreme Court, which alone can decide whether such application can be granted or not. It will be granted only where sufficient cause, doubtless, is shown why the petitioner had failed to make his application for writ of error in the time allowed by law, or, where such writ of error would not lie, it would be a substitute for a writ of error if the Supreme Court in its discretion should think fit to issue it. But when there is a writ of error the supersedeas is granted as ancillary and by the presiding officer of the state court, or by a judge of the United States Supreme Court, who grants the writ of error. And where the certiorari is granted in lieu of a writ of error, this cannot be done by a single judge, but by the United States Supreme Court in its discretion, and that court alone can grant the supersedeas. In such cases the supersedeas is ancillary to the writ of error, or to the certiorari issued in lieu thereof, and can be granted only in aid of such process, and by the same authority which grants the writ of error or the certiorari."

Federal question relating to full faith and credit clause when not raised.—The exercise by state courts of an independent judgment in placing a construction upon the legislative charter of a foreign corporation cannot present a federal question under the full faith and credit clause of the Federal Constitution, so as to sustain a writ of certiorari from the federal Supreme Court to a state court, where no statute of the state of incorporation, nor decision of any court of that state, giving a construction to the provision of the charter interpreted, was pleaded or introduced in evidence. Hartford L. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, (1919) 249 U. S. 490, 39 S. Ct. 336, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of certiorari to review (1917) 271 Mo. 502, 197 S. W. 132.

Dismissal of writ after allowance.—Although a writ of certiorari has been allowed, it may subsequently be dismissed, on motion, for want of jurisdiction, as in Hartford Life Ins. Co. v. Johnson, (1919) 249 U. S. 490, 39 S. Ct. 336, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The question of validity of a state statute in respect of the Federal Constitution is not reviewable by certiorari, but only by writ of error. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Scarlet, (1919) 249 U. S. 528, 39 S. Ct. 369, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Mullins, (1919) 249 U. S. 531, 39 S. Ct. 368, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Federal Employers' Liability Act of 1908. In an action on that act resulting in a judgment against the defendant, a claim that rights and immunities asserted by said defendant under that act were denied, can be presented to the Supreme Court only on a writ of certiorari, and not by writ of error. Chicago Great Western R. Co. v. Basham, (1919) 249 U. S. 164, 39 S. Ct. 213, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Reported cases.—Certiorari was granted in Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Woodbury, (1919) 250 U. S. V, 39 S. Ct. 493, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — and Southern Pac. Co. v. Berkshire, (1919) 250 U. S. A writ of error to review a decree in equity was treated as an appeal, in consequence of this section, in Howard v. Lee's, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 918, 922, 169 C. C. A. 68.

1918 Supp., p. 422, sec. 5.

No retroactive effect.—In Compania General, etc., v. Alhambra Cigar, etc., Mfg. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 72, 39 S. Ct. 224, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, an appeal perfected before this section was enacted was held controlled by section 248 of the Judicial Code.

A writ of certiorari was granted in Board of Public Utility Com'rs v. Yuchausti, (1918) 248 U. S. 554, 39 S. Ct. 10, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

A writ of certiorari was denied in Guzman v. Lichanco, (1919) 250 U. S. XII, 39 S. Ct. 494, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Gsell v. Insular Collector of Customs, (1919) 250 U. S. XIII, 39 S. Ct. 494, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Dick v. Hohmann, (1918) 248 U. S. 568, 39 S. Ct. 10, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1918 Supp., p. 422, sec. 6.

In general.—A writ of certiorari from the federal Supreme Court to a state court is expressly forbidden by this act unless duly applied for within three months after the entry of the judgment or decree sought to be reviewed. Citizens' Bank v. Opperman, (1919) 249 U. S. 448, 39 S. Ct. 330, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review (Ind. 1917) 115 N. E. 55.

Time of making as affected by question whether record shows proper case.—An application for a writ of certiorari to a state court, made after the expiration of the three months limited by this act, cannot be entertained by the federal Supreme Court, irrespective of whether the record shows a proper case for the allowance of that writ. Rust Land, etc., Co. v. Jackson, (1919) 250 U. S. 71, 39 S. Ct. 424, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Court rule affecting application for certiorari.—In (1917) 243 U. S. 623, there is an amendment of section 4 of Rule 37 of the rules of this court which makes it read as follows, viz.: "4. An application for a writ of certiorari will be deemed in time when the petition therefor, accompanied by the printed record and brief, is filed within the period prescribed by law: Provided this is followed by submitting the petition in open court on some motion day not later than the first one which follows a period of four weeks after such filing. Notice of the date of submission and copies of the petition and brief must be served as required by section 3 of this rule." It was promulgated by the Supreme Court March 26, 1917. This amendment slightly changes the same paragraph in (1916) 241 U. S. 635. See also Jud. Code, sec. 240, 5 Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 859.

1918 Supp., p. 422, sec. 7.

Final judgments.—This section has to do with final judgments and not a judgment subject to reconsideration through the medium of a petition for rehearing. Chicago Great Western R. Co. v. Basham, (1919) 249 U. S. 164, 39 S. Ct. 213, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review (1916) 178 Ia. 998, 154 N. W. 1019, 157 N. W. 192.

A judgment was not entered "before this act takes effect" so as to be unaffected by this section, where, though entered before the enactment of the statute, its finality for the purpose of review was suspended by consideration of a petition for rehearing, until an order denying such petition was entered after the act took effect. Chicago Great Western R. Co. v. Basham, (1919) 249 U. S. 164, 39 S. Ct. 213, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Writ of error.—In Campbell v. Wadsworth, (1918) 248 U. S. 169, 39 S. Ct. 63, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, it was held that a judgment of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma (see (1916) 53 Okla. 728, 157 Pac. 713), being within the provisions of this section, was properly before the Supreme Court of the United States.

1918 Supp., p. 423. [Act of Feb. 22, 1917.]

Venue of suit.—Under the proviso of this section, suits must be brought in the district where the beneficiaries reside, regardless of whether the policies have been assigned. New York L. Ins. Co. v. Kennedy, (S. D. Fla. 1918) 253 Fed. 287.

LABOR

Vol. VI, p. 270, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. IV, p. 779.]

Person employed in dredging work on Panama Canal.—This act does not apply to persons performing services similar to those of laborers and mechanics employed in connection with dredging work on the Panama Canal. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 139.

Vol. VI, p. 278, sec. 1. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 236.]

Improvement of selected roads.—This Act and the Act of August 1, 1892, ch. 352, as amended (see vol. 6, p. 270), do not apply to the improvement of selected roads over which rural delivery is or may be established as provided for under the provisions of the Post Office Appropriations Act of August 24, 1912. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 210.

Necessity of insertion of eight-hour provision—Excepted contracts.—The requirement as to the insertion in a contract of a provision as to eight-hour labor does not apply to contracts in the excepted classes. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 31.

Letters of proposal and acceptance.—Where a contract is made by letters of proposal and acceptance, the latter should contain the provision regarding eight-hour labor. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 31.

Appropriation made prior to passage of act.—Contracts for public buildings for which appropriation was made in full prior to the passage of this act, are not required to contain the eight-hour work day provision prescribed by this section. So also where the limit of cost of a public building has been fixed by law and the authority has been given to enter into contracts up to the full limit prior to the passage of this act, but the appropriation therefor has been only partly made prior to that time, the contracts for that portion of the work appropriated for subsequent thereto are not required to contain such provision. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 137.

The same rule applies where Congress has fixed the limit of cost of a public building and made a partial appropriation therefor prior to the passage of this act, but subsequent thereto has increased the limit of cost. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 150.

Employment of labor.—This section applies to the employment of labor on the work contemplated by the contract regardless of who employs it. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 31.

Vol. VI, p. 279, sec. 2. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 237.]

Repeal of former acts.—By express provision of this section, this act does not repeal or modify the eight-hour law of August 1, 1892, ch. 352 (see vol. 6, p. 270), which still applies to work done on public buildings, no matter when the appropriation therefor may have been made. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 137.

"Such materials or articles as may usually be bought in the open market."—Articles or materials used in printing or binding, such as printing and binding machinery, paper, bookbinding leathers, bookcloths, etc., are "materials or articles as may usually be bought in the open market" within the meaning of this section, and hence contracts for their purchase are excepted from the operation of this act. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 24.

On the same principle, contracts for the purchase of materials and articles entering into the construction of public buildings, are excepted under the provisions of this section. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 31, (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 134.

The same rule applies to labor employed in the dressing of marble and stone for public buildings, such labor not being performed at the sites of the buildings themselves. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 211. To same effect see (1915) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 364.

Likewise, contracts for the purchase of locomotives made according to standard designs and assembled, as ordered, of parts kept in stock, are excepted from the operation of this act. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 49.

Vol. VI, p. 282, sec. 4. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 331.]

Final authority to determine claims arising under this act, as amended, rests in the Secretary of Labor. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 145.

1918 Supp., p. 429, sec. 1.

Exclusiveness of remedy.—"The petition alleges that the plaintiff was an employé of the government, in the performance of his duties as a mail clerk upon the Illinois Central Railroad in Iowa, at the time of the accident which resulted in the injuries of which he complains. The Congress, in the act to which reference is above made, has imposed upon the United States a liability for injuries to its employés when in the performance of their duties, except under the conditions prescribed in the act; and it may be that the Congress might have required the injured employé to seek redress for such disability or injury exclusively from the United States, and in the manner provided in the act. New York Central R. R. v. White, 243 U. S. 188, 37 Sup. Ct. 247, 61 L. ed. 667, L. R. A. 1917D, 1 Ann. Cas. 1917D 629, and cases cited; and New York Central R. R. v. Winfield, 244 U. S. 147, 150, 37 Sup. Ct. 546, 61 L. Ed. 1045, L. R. A. 1918C, 439, Ann. Cas. 1917D 1139. But, be this as it may, the Congress has not done so. By section 1 of that act it is provided:

"That the United States shall pay compensation as hereinafter specified for the disability or death of an employé resulting from a personal injury sustained while in the performance of his duty," except under the conditions prescribed in the act.

"Other sections of the act provide in detail the method and procedure by which the injured employé may recover from the United States the compensation therein provided for such injury. That a mail clerk employed by the United States upon a mail car used in the carriage of mails upon railroads is an employé of the United States, within the meaning of this act, is not doubted, nor is it disputed, and when such an employé is disabled or killed in the performance of his duties, and seeks to recover from the United States the compensation so provided, it is obvious that he must proceed in the manner provided by this act. But in no part of the act is it directly or by reasonable implication provided that the injured employé or his legal representatives shall be limited to the amount of compensation so provided in this act as against a wrongdoer, who by some negligent or other wrongful act has caused the death or disability of the injured employé, and to so prohibit would be to amend the act, which the court will not do." Dahn v. McAdoo, (N. D. Ia. 1919) 256 Fed. 549, holding that a railway mail clerk may bring suit for personal injuries against the director general of railroads.

LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNERS' LIABILITY

Vol. VI, p. 330, sec. 4281. [First ed., vol. IV, p. 837.]

Effect of statute—Extent of exemption.

—It is now settled that this section is to be construed so as to relieve the carrier only of its liability as a common carrier, and not of any liability as a bailee. Kuhnhold v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 387.

III. CONSTRUCTION (p. 338)

These statutes are, of course, to be enforced in such spirit and with such liberality as will effect their purpose—the encouragement of shipbuilding and the employment of ships in commerce. But such liberality of enforcement should not be carried to an extent that will deprive cargo owners and passengers of that degree of care on the part of those owning and operating ships which their safety demands and to which they are entitled. The Santa Rosa, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 249 Fed. 160.

IV. SCOPE OF STATUTE

3. Owners Affected (p. 338)

Towing company.—A company which was under contract to tow all the boats of another company for a period of time and which employed a tug owned by others to do some of the towing cannot take advantage of this section. In re Reichert Towing Line, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 214, 163 C. C. A. 370.

5. Losses Covered (p. 341)

Sinking by submarine.—The sinking of the steamship Lusitania by a German submarine, in violation of international law, was an illegal act for which the owners of the steamship were in no way to blame, and therefore they had a right to limit their liability under this section. The Lusitania, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 715.

V. PRIVY OR KNOWLEDGE OF OWNER

Knowledge or privy shown by evidence.

—In The Santa Rosa, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 249 Fed. 160, it appeared that the corporation owning a steamer carrying passengers was informed by wireless that the steamer was aground and that two steam schooners were standing by. Messages were exchanged, the owner discouraging the acceptance of assistance. The master asked permission to transfer the passengers, and was directed not to do so unless an agreement as to payment was made, which agreement was refused by the schooners. Consent of the owner to a transfer without agreement was not given until the condition of the sea made transfer impossible. It was held that liability for loss of the lives and effects of passengers could not be limited.

Knowledge not shown.—In an action to limit a tug owner's liability for injury to a tow caused by the breaking of a crank pin on the tug, it was held that the evidence was not sufficient to overcome the presumption of fault on the part of the tug owner. In re Reichert Towing Line, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 214, 163 C. C. A. 370.

2. Corporation (p. 345)

In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see The Erie Lighter 108, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 490, also holding that the superintendent of the marine department of a railroad is "a managing officer" of the corporation within the rule set forth in the original annotation.

Superintendent.—Where a superintendent has the general control and direction of a corporation's business at a place where a collision occurs, his privy or knowledge is the privy or knowledge of the corporation, but notice to him of the sinking of a boat in the channel does not preclude a limitation of liability for collision with the sunken boat unless the superintendent had time after receiving the notice to have the wreck marked. Eastern Steamship Corp. v. Great Lakes Dredge, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 497, 168 C. C. A. 3, affirming (D. C. Mass. 1917) 250 Fed. 916.

Manager.—In McKie Lighter Co. v. Collins, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 524, 166 C. C. A. 592, it was held proper to refuse to limit liability for a personal injury where the general manager of the shipowners saw work being done in a dangerous manner and did not stop it before the accident happened.

Delegation of duties by managing officers.—The managing officers of a corporation may employ others to perform the duties ordinarily imposed by law upon the owner, such as equipment, examination, repairs, etc., and, if due diligence is exercised in selecting persons competent for such work, losses or damage done or occasioned through their fault, without actual complicity or knowledge on the part of the owner, are done or occasioned without the "privity or knowledge" of the owner within the meaning of this Act. The Erie Lighter 108, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 490, holding that the liability should be limited where the accident was caused by a defect in a rail which had been rebuilt shortly before by competent carpenters and inspected in the usual manner.

3. Competency of Master and Crew (p. 346)

Where a collision occurred during the master's watch because of faulty navigation, the absence of the mate is not a fault chargeable to the owners and does not prevent limitation of liability. The North Star, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 955.

Charter as continuing warranty.—A monthly charter of a tug, the owner to furnish the crew, is a continuing personal contract of warranty as to the competency of the crew, and accordingly there can be no limitation of liability for a loss caused by the negligence of members of the crew. The Ice King, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 256 Fed. 895.

VI. MEASURE OF LIABILITY

1. Value of Vessel (p. 348)

Tug and tow.—Where the death of the captain of a lighter was caused by the tearing off of a defective cap on the rail, under the strain of the tow line, and there was no negligence on the part of the tug, the liability is to be limited to the value of the lighter. The Erie Lighter 108, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 490.

Where a collision is due entirely to the fault of the tug the tow is an innocent instrument and the liability is to be limited to the value of the tug alone. The O'Brien Bros., (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 252 Fed. 185.

Only claim less than vessel owner's interest.—Where the only claim filed is of less amount than the appraised value of the vessel owner's interest and the claimant waives any demand for interest on his claim the petition for a limitation of liability should be dismissed. Shipowners', etc., Tugboat Co. v. Hammond Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 266, 163 C. C. A. 422.

VIII. PROCEDURE

1. Jurisdiction (p. 351)

Determination of vessel owner's liability.—If a vessel owner is entitled to limit his liability under this Act, the court may proceed to determine whether he is liable at all and, if so, to fix and assess the damages that should be awarded the claimant. But if the vessel owner is not entitled to avail himself of the provisions of this Act, the court is without jurisdiction to proceed further but must dismiss the proceeding. The Erie Lighter 108, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 490.

While a petition to limit liability would primarily presuppose some liability to be limited, the language of the statute and the decisions thereunder have made it plain that the petitioner has the right to contest the sufficiency of the claims in the same way and to the same extent as if the actions were being tried in admiralty, upon pleadings originally filed in this court. The O'Brien Bros., (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 252 Fed. 185.

9. Answer (p. 355)

Sufficiency.—In a proceeding to limit the liability of the operator of a vessel for damages growing out of the death of a passenger who fell through an open doorway, an answer which alleged that the deceased had been for a long time prior to the accident a regular passenger on the boat and had always been accustomed to see a bar across the doorway and relied upon its being in place for his protection, and that relying upon the bar being in place as usual and upon the duty of the petitioners as common carriers to place either the said bar in its proper position or other proper protection, and by reason of there being no proper protection at the time in question, and not because of his own negligence, the deceased fell through the open doorway into the waters of the bay and was drowned, was held to be sufficient. Coggeshall Launch Co. v. Early, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 1, 160 C. C. A. 141.

10. Evidence (p. 356)

Burden of proof.—The burden is on the petitioner for limitation of liability to show that the loss occurred without its privity or knowledge. The Santa Rosa, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 249 Fed. 160.

In the case of In re Reichert Towing Line, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 214, 163 C. C. A. 370, the injury was the result of a broken crank pin on a tug. The court said: "Although the Reichert Company has been held liable for negligence, it will not be liable beyond the value of the tug, if it was without knowledge or privity of the insufficiency of the crank pin. The burden of proving this is on it. Its officers knew of the prior breaking of a steel crank pin of the same size, and no sufficient explanation of that accident is given. They do not show whether they knew the size of the pin, or whether they knew the prevailing practice as to the size of such pins, nor whether, if they did, they made any inquiry whatever as to what the requirements of such crank pins should be, in view of the prevailing practice of employing a much stronger one. Although the boat had been inspected by the United States local inspectors some three or four months before the accident, and the owners employed an engineer to supervise their equipment from time to time, we do not think that they have discharged the burden of proving their want of knowledge or privity."

Contributory negligence is an affirmative defense, is always relative, and the burden of establishing it is upon the party who asserts it. Coggeshall Launch Co. v. Early, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 1, 160 C. C. A. 141.

Sufficiency.—For evidence held sufficient to establish negligence on the part of the operator of a vessel for failure to guard properly an open doorway, through which a passenger fell and was drowned, see Coggeshall Launch Co. v. Early, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 1, 160 C. C. A. 141.

Vol. VI, p. 367, sec. 4289. [First ed., vol. IV, p. 852.]

Scope of statute—Drill boat.—The term "vessel" includes a "drill boat" described as follows: "Drillboat No. 4 was about 132 feet long, 33 feet beam, and about 8 feet deep; it was divided into five watertight compartments, and carried a boiler, drilling machinery, four two-cylinder engines, and other apparatus used in connection with its work. It was built of steel, and, when at work on a ledge, was held in place by four spuds or iron legs 65½ feet long, about 23½ inches square, and weighing 12½ tons each. . . . The drillboat was towed from the Great Lakes around through the St. Lawrence to Boston Harbor. When being towed, the spuds are raised and held by pawls fastened to the deck." Eastern Steamship Corp. v. Great Lakes Dredge, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 497, affirming (D. C. Mass. 1917) 250 Fed. 916, and holding further that "the drillboat by being temporarily sunk did not cease to be a vessel."

Direct personal contracts.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Luckenbach v. W. J. McCahan Sugar Refining Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 139, 39 S. Ct. 53, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 388, 14 C. C. A. 650.

The liability of shipowners under their personal contract for a loss of cargo due to unseaworthiness is not affected, despite their want of privity or knowledge, by the provisions of R. S. sec. 4283 and this section, for a limitation of liability to the value of the ship and pending freight. Capitol Trans. Co. v. Cambria Steel Co., (1919) 240 U. S. 334, 39 S. Ct. 292, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 95, 156

C. C. A. 523, wherein the court said: "This is a petition to limit liability for the loss of cargo on The Benjamin Noble, brought by the present petitioner after libels in personam had been filed in different districts by the cargo owners, the Cambria Steel Company. The right was denied by the District Court on the ground that the vessel was unseaworthy with the privity and knowledge of the owner when she sailed, and that the owner had made a personal contract by which it warranted seaworthiness. 232 Fed. 382. The findings, rulings and decree of the District Court were affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, 244 Fed. 95. . . . We are urged to reconsider the question whether the limitation of liability is not made independent of the 'privity or knowledge' of the owner by the omission of those words from the Act of June 26, 1884, c. 121, § 18, 23 Stat. 53, 57, coupled with the repeal, in § 30, of all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of that act. It is argued that the effect of the omission and the repealing section is to do away with the former qualification in Rev. Stats., § 4283, and the argument is fortified by a reference to the history of the act, which shows that some of the senators thought it important to make the limitation absolute. On the other hand in Butler v. Boston & Savannah S. S. Co., 130 U. S. 527, 553, 554, it was said by Mr. Justice Bradley that possibly the later act was intended to remove all doubt as to the application of the law to all cases of loss 'caused without the privity or knowledge of the owner.' We find no different expression on O'Brien v. Miller, 168 U. S. 287, 303. Mr. Justice Bradley's opinion was adopted after considerable discussion in Richardson v. Harmon, 222 U. S. 96, 106, and Richardson v. Harmon was accepted as establishing that the statute does not limit liability for the personal acts of the owners done with knowledge, in the late case of Pendleton v. Benner Line, 246 U. S. 353, 356. In that case the argument that the limitation of the exoneration to acts, etc., done or incurred without the privity or knowledge of the owner was repealed by the Act of 1884, was presented in the fullest way. We very much appreciate the danger that the act should be cut down from its intended effect by too easy a finding of privity or knowledge on the part of owners, as also by too liberal an attribution to them of contracts as personally theirs. We are not disposed to press the law in those directions further than the cases go. But in this case in addition to the finding of the owner's privity to the unseaworthiness was the further finding that the contract was the personal contract of the petitioner—a finding that seems warranted if any contract by a corporation can fall within the class. That such contracts may impose a liability that cannot be transferred to what is left of the ship is decided. Luckenbach v. McCahan Sugar Refining Co., 248 U. S. 139, 149 [39

S. Ct. 53, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —]. Upon the whole case we cannot escape from the conclusion that the decree must be affirmed."

I. IN GENERAL (p. 378)

Construction of statute.—This Act should be enforced with such liberality as will effect its purpose, but the liberality should not be carried to such an extent as to deprive cargo owners and passengers of that degree of care on the part of those owning and operating ships which their safety demands and to which they are entitled. The Santa Rosa, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 249 Fed. 160.

The statute should be strictly construed and not extended to include exemptions which are clearly within its scope. Mallory Steamship Co. v. Harriess-Irby Cotton Co., (Tex. 1918) 204 S. W. 789.

IV. SEAWORTHY VESSEL (p. 384)

That a vessel developed serious leaks in a voyage from France to San Francisco during which no unusual storm was encountered shows lack of seaworthiness. Compagnie Maritime, etc. v. Meyer, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 881, 160 C. C. A. 639.

Loss due to failure to cap sounding pipes.—Where damage to cargo was due to the failure of the carpenter to replace caps on the sounding pipes, whereby large quantities of water entered the hold, the damage resulted from a mere fault of management and liability may be limited. The Carisbrook, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 247 Fed. 583.

Manner of stowing cargo.—The Harter Act does not relieve the carrier from liability for damage due to improper stowage. The Aki Maru, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 721, holding the evidence sufficient to show improper stowage of eggs for a trans-Pacific voyage.

V. NAVIGATION OR MANAGEMENT OF SHIP (p. 389)

Failure to keep hatches covered, whereby cargo is damaged by water, is not within the exemption. Mallory Steamship Co. v. Harriess-Irby Cotton Co., (Tex. 1918) 204 S. W. 789.

Vessel driven aground from anchorage.—Under this section no recovery can be had for damage to a cargo caused by errors in navigation which resulted in the vessel being driven aground in a storm from the place where she was anchored. The John B. Robbins, (E. D. Va. 1919) 256 Fed. 61. The court said: "The court has given much consideration to this case, and its conclusion is that the evidence does not establish the unseaworthiness of the vessel at the beginning of the voyage, nor does it show that there was any negligence either in the loading, stowage, or custody of the goods after their delivery. It is true that the cargo was not loaded below deck of the vessel, where perhaps it would have been safer from exposure to rain or storm; but those conditions did not enter especially into this disaster, and the fact that the cargo was loaded on deck in no manner, in the opinion of the court, affected the loss, as it would have been quite as seriously damaged in the hold, and probably more so than upon deck."

VI. BURDEN OF PROOF

The burden is on the vessel owner to show that the damage was due to one of the causes specified in the statute. Mallory Steamship Co. v. Harriess-Irby Cotton Co., (Tex. 1918) 204 S. W. 789.

The burden is on the owner to show seaworthiness in a proceeding to limit liability. The Carisbrook, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 247 Fed. 583.

If by failure to make proper inspection and tests at the port of departure the question of seaworthiness is left in doubt, the doubt must be resolved against the seaworthiness of the vessel. Compagnie Maritime, etc. v. Meyer, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 881, 160 C. C. A. 639.

Recital in the bill of lading that the goods are in "apparent good order and condition" casts the burden on the vessel to show that the loss proceeded from a cause which existed but was not apparent. The Aki Maru, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 721.

Vol. VI, p. 393, sec. 5. [First ed., vol. IV, p. 863.]

Nature of proceeding to enforce.—Wrong remedy without objection.—There is no jurisdiction in admiralty to collect the penalty imposed by this section in proceedings in personam. The proper procedure is by a qui tam action. But if an admiralty proceeding is heard without objection, the court has jurisdiction of the subject matter and the libel may be treated "as the analogue of a complaint qui tam at common law." The right to a jury trial is waived by this proceeding, and the decision will be reviewed as one in admiralty and not as the equivalent of a verdict. U. S. v. Elwell, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 939, 163 C. C. A. 189.

MINERAL LANDS, MINES AND MINING

Location of nonmineral lands—Cancellation of patent.—A patent procured under the mining law to nonmineral lands will not be cancelled as against a bona fide purchaser, and bona fides is not negated by the fact that the purchaser knew that no mining operations were being carried on. U. S. v. Grand Canyon Cattle Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 446, 159 C. C. A. 500.

Vol. VI, p. 512, sec. 2320. [First ed., vol. V, p. 8.]

III. Discovery of vein or lode.

IV. Legal limits of lode.

V. Conflicting lode claimants.

III. DISCOVERY OF VEIN OR LODE (p. 517)

Essentiality of discovery.—To same effect as original annotation, see McKenzie v. Moore, (Ariz. 1918) 176 Pac. 568.

A discovery of mineral is essential to create valid rights in, or initiate a title to, mineral lands, as against the United States. Union Oil Co. v. Smith, (1919) 249 U. S. 337, 39 S. Ct. 309, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1913) 166 Cal. 217, 135 Pac. 966.

Discovery subsequent to location.—The discovery of mineral may follow the location of a mining claim and give validity to the claim as of the time of discovery, provided no rights of third persons have intervened. Union Oil Co. v. Smith, (1919) 249 U. S. 337, 39 S. Ct. 309, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1913) 166 Cal. 217, 135 Pac. 966.

IV. LEGAL LIMITS OF LODE (p. 517)

Rejection of excess.—The general rule is that, where the claim is excessive in length, if the error is innocently made the claim is valid, but the excess is void. Nelson v. Smith, (Nev. 1918) 176 Pac. 261.

V. CONFLICTING LODE CLAIMANTS (p. 521)

Invalid prior location.—Every competent locator has the right to initiate a lawful claim to unoccupied public land by a peaceable adverse entry upon it while it is in the possession of those who have no superior right to acquire title or to hold the possession. Nelson v. Smith, (Nev. 1918) 176 Pac. 261.

Vol. VI, p. 523, sec. 2322. [First ed., vol. V, p. 13.]

II. Possessory rights.

III. Extralateral rights.

II. POSSESSORY RIGHTS (p. 524)

Nature of right.—Even without a patent the possessory right of a qualified locator of a mining claim after discovery of minerals upon the claim is a property right in the full sense, unaffected by the fact that the paramount title to the land is in the United States, and such right is capable of transfer by conveyance, inheritance, or devise. Union Oil Co. v. Smith, (1919) 249 U. S. 337, 39 S. Ct. 309, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1913) 166 Cal. 217, 135 Pac. 966.

Actual possession.—Actual and continuous occupation of a valid mining location, based upon discovery, is not essential to the preservation of the possessory right. The right is lost only by abandonment, as by nonperformance of the annual labor, which R. S. sec. 4324 (see vol. 6, p. 523) requires. Union Oil Co. v. Smith, (1919) 249 U. S. 337, 39 S. Ct. 309, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1913) 166 Cal. 217, 135 Pac. 966.

III. EXTRALATERAL RIGHTS (p. 527)

Extent of right—Obstruction of vein.—In Original Sixteen to One Mine v. Twenty-One Min. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1918) 254 Fed. 630, it was conceded throughout the trial that there is a vein on the Sixteen to One claim; that this vein dips in an easterly direction at an angle of 45 or 50 degrees; that the vein terminates at a fault at about the 200-foot level; and that by dropping down a distance of 15 or 20 feet at the shaft, and a distance of 35 or 40 feet at the northerly boundary of the claim, another vein is picked up, likewise terminating at a fault. It was held that a finding that the two were in fact a single vein which the owner of the apex was entitled to follow would be sustained.

IV. Notice of location.

VI. Notice to co-owner.

VII. Forfeiture of interests.

IV. NOTICE OF LOCATION (p. 541)

Actual notice cures defects.—If a subsequent locator obtains from markings and monuments on the ground actual notice of the extent of a prior location, the fact that the notice of that location is indefinite in its description is immaterial. Thompson v. Underwood, (Ark. 1919) 211 S. W. 164.

VI. NOTICE TO CO-OWNER (p. 549)

Record of notice as evidence.—To bring a case within the California statute providing that a certified copy of a recorded notice shall be prima facie evidence of delinquency, the notice must have been filed for record within ninety days after it was served. Robinson v. Buie, (Cal. 1918) 173 Pac. 88.

VII. FORFEITURE OF INTERESTS (p. 551)

Co-owner excluded from possession.—Where a cotenant in possession excludes his cotenant and refuses to permit him to contribute to the assessment work he is not entitled to forfeit the interests of the excluded cotenant. Becker-Franz Co. v. Shannon Copper Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 522.

Vol. VI, p. 555, sec. 2325. [First ed., vol. V, p. 31.]

Jurisdiction of land department—Cancellation of location.—The Land Department, on an application for a patent, has power to cancel the location after finding the land is not of a mineral character. Cameron v. U. S. (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 943, 163 C. C. A. 193. The court said: "On the hearing of Cameron's application much testimony on the part of the claimant, as well as on the part of the government, appears to have been given before the officers of the Land Department respecting the character of the land applied for, and its location, some of it of a conflicting nature, the decision of which questions was not only within the jurisdiction of the Land Department, but within its exclusive determination. It is altogether too late to contend to the contrary, for nothing is better settled than that the facts in respect to the character of public land applied for under the laws authorizing its disposition, as well as the facts in respect to the performance of the acts required by the law to be performed by the applicant, are for the exclusive determination of the Land Department. Very many decisions of the Supreme and other federal courts to that effect might readily be cited, but we think it needless to do so. And even though it be conceded that the Land Department was without jurisdiction to order, as it did in the instant case, the cancellation of the applicant's mining location, yet its determination of the fact that the ground applied for was not mineral land in effect cut up by the roots every step taken by the applicant under the mining laws, necessarily including his mining location; and such was the decision of the Supreme Court of Arizona in the case of Cameron v. Bass, 168 Pac. 645, regarding, in part, the very ground here in controversy."

I. NATURE OF PROCEEDINGS (p. 564)

Suits arising under laws of United States.—To same effect as original annotation, see Ralph v. Cole, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 81, 161 C. C. A. 133.

Vol. VI, p. 577, sec. 2330. [First ed., vol. V, p. 42.]

Excess area.—A location of a placer claim made in good faith, but by mistake containing an excessive area, is not wholly void, but is invalid only as to the excess, which may be rejected from such portion as the owner may select, and until the owner is advised that there is an excess, and has had a reasonable time within which to make his selection, his possession extends to the entire claim, and any one who goes upon it and makes a location becomes a trespasser, and his location is a nullity and void for any purpose. Adams v. Yukon Gold Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 226, 163 C. C. A. 382.

Permission to locate excess.—One of the owners of an association placer claim which contains an excess acreage cannot give permission to a person to locate the excess and thereby bind his co-owners who have no knowledge that the claim was excessive. Adams v. Yukon Gold Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 226, 163 C. C. A. 382.

Mill site—abandonment.—Under the mining law mill sites may be located either in connection with the ownership of a vein or lode or independently of the ownership of a mine by the owner of a quartz mill or reduction works. R. S. sec. 2337. The findings in this case expressly declare that the mill sites in question were located and used in connection with lode mining claims owned by the Mines Company, "and not otherwise." The company's right was therefore founded upon the first provision of section 2337, the one permitting the location of a mill site as an adjunct to a lode claim. Where the locator of such a site ceases, by reason of abandonment or forfeiture, to be the proprietor of the vein or lode, the right to the associated mill site is also ended. Watterson v. Cruise, (Cal. 1918) 176 Pac. 870, holding further that by the abandonment the land and mill site became open to relocation and that the relocater became entitled to all that had been affixed to the land.

Vol. VI, p. 593, sec. 2347. [First ed., vol. V, p. 55.]

Entry by one in interest of another.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see U. S. v. Kirk, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 248 Fed. 30, 160 C. C. A. 170, wherein the court found from the evidence that "each coal land entry involved herein was not made in the interest of the entrymen, but, on the contrary, either in the interest of an association of persons who were seeking to obtain from the United States more coal land than they were entitled to, or in the interest of individuals who were seeking to obtain more coal land than they were entitled to."

Entry for benefit of corporation.—Where a private person has made an entry on coal lands for the benefit of a corporation the corporation is not entitled thereafter to make another entry. Union Coal, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 106, 159 C. C. A. 324, wherein it was said: "It is not contended that Westlake could not enter coal lands for the coal company in the absence of evasion as to quantity (United States v. Colorado Anthracite Co., 225 U. S. 219, 32 Sup. Ct. 617, 56 L. Ed. 1063), but that the coal company, having received the benefit of the entry made by Oakes, could not make another entry either itself or by an agent. There is nothing in the case cited opposed to this view. The restriction to one entry found in section 2350, supra, must be given full effect. To decide that an individual or an association could make several coal land entries, provided the total amount of land filed upon did not exceed the maximum allowed by the statute, would be to read out of section 2350 the words 'only one entry.' United States v. Keitel, 211 U. S. 370-388, 29 Sup. Ct. 123, 53 L. Ed. 230."

Entry of one person for another.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see U. S. v. Kirk, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 248 Fed. 30, 160 C. C. A. 170, wherein the court found from the evidence that "each coal land entry involved herein was not made in the interest of the entrymen, but, on the contrary, either in the interest of an association of persons who were seeking to obtain from the United States more coal land than they were entitled to, or in the interest of individuals who were seeking to obtain more coal land than they were entitled to."

Vol. VI, p. 607. [Act of Feb. 12, 1903.] [First ed., vol. X, p. 236.]

Annual assessment labor.—One who has acquired the possessory rights of locators before discovery in five contiguous placer claims taken up as oil-bearing lands cannot preserve and maintain an inchoate right as to all of them by means of a continuous actual possession of one claim, coupled with diligent prosecution in good faith of a sufficient amount of discovery work thereon having a tendency to determine the oil-bearing character of the other claims, despite the provisions of this Act that where oil lands are located as placer mining claims, the "annual assessment labor" upon such claims may be done upon any one of a group of claims lying contiguous and owned by the same person, not exceeding five claims in all, provided that such labor will tend to the development or to determine the oil-bearing character of the contiguous claims, since this statute will not be construed as dispensing with discovery as an essential of a valid oil location, or as in any wise breaking down the recognized distinction between the possessory right of a prospector doing work for the purpose of discovering oil, and the more substantial right of one who has made a discovery and performed annual development work to exclusive possession and enjoyment until patent is obtained. Union Oil Co. v. Smith, (1919) 249 U. S. 337, 39 S. Ct. 309, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1913) 166 Cal. 217, 135 Pac. 966.

MONEY PAID INTO COURT

Requiring depositary to pay interest.—"The District Court, in the suit of the Kingdom of Roumania against the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, entered an order substituting one Arditti as defendant in place of the trust company upon its paying into court to the credit of the action $73,433.55, with interest at the rate of two per cent. per annum, the trust company thereupon to be discharged of all liability either to Arditti or to the Kingdom of Roumania.

"The trust company paid the money, with interest, to the clerk of the court, who deposited it with the Chatham & Phenix National Bank, a designated depositary of the United States, in his account as clerk, and he has never received any interest upon it. This order we reversed, upon the ground that the court had no jurisdiction to make it;

the Kingdom of Roumania being a sovereign state, immune from suits in the courts of this country. 250 Fed. 341, 162 C. C. A. 411, Ann. Cas. 1918E 524.

"Thereafter the District Court, upon motion of the trust company, entered an order that the clerk pay to it the money so deposited, less his statutory fee of one per cent., and that the Chatham & Phenix National Bank pay to it interest at the rate of two per cent. per annum on the said fund to date of payment. This is a writ of error taken by the bank to the said order.

"We do not think that the bank's motion to vacate amounts to a general appearance by it, submitting it to the jurisdiction of the court. Wood v. Furtick, 17 Misc. Rep. 561, 40 N. Y. Supp. 687; Regelmann v. South Shore Co., 67 Misc. Rep. 590, 123 N. Y. Supp. 353. The bank was not a party to the action, had made no contract with the trust company, and if it owed interest on the deposit it owed it to its depositor, the clerk of the court, who alone had standing to collect the same. The objection that the court was without jurisdiction to make the order is good." Chatham, etc., Nat. Bank v. Guaranty Trust Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 90.

MOTOR BOATS

Vol. VI, p. 642, sec. 3. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 39.]

Sufficiency of lights.—Where the stern of a motor boat anchored for repairs was toward a tug which ran her down, and her aft light was sufficient to comply with the provisions of this section, it was held that the sufficiency of her bow and side lights was immaterial. The O'Brien Bros., (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 252 Fed. 185.

Discharge by directors.—Under the National Bank Act, cashiers of national banks hold their office subject to dismissal at the pleasure of the board of directors. So where the cashier of a national bank is elected for a fixed time, and is dismissed prior to the expiration of the period for which he was employed, he cannot recover his wages for the unexpired period, even though dismissed without a cause. Colquitt First Nat. Bank v. Miller, (1919) 23 Ga. App. 441, 98 S. E. 402.

V. "INCIDENTAL POWERS AS SHALL BE NECESSARY," ETC.

1. Banking Powers, in General (p. 663)

Guaranty of deposits.—A national bank may enter into a contract with a guaranty company under which, in consideration of premiums paid by the bank, the company insure and guarantees each depositor in the bank the full payment of his deposit therein. (1915) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 341.

12. Miscellaneous Transactions

The buying and selling of cattle at a profit is not within the incidental powers granted to national banks. Leslie First Nat. Bank v. Stokes, (1918) 134 Ark. 368, 203 S. W. 1026.

e. Assuming Obligations of Insolvent Bank (p. 676)

A national bank has no authority to join with other banks in undertaking to supply funds, whatever might be necessary, to pay the deficiencies of an insolvent state bank. Lake County v. Citizens' Trust, etc., Bank, (Ind. App. 1919) 123 N. E. 130.

Vol. VI, p. 687, sec. 5138. [First ed., vol. V, p. 95.]

The word "place," as used in this section, means a corporate or quasi corporate body organized for the purpose of local government in a defined territory. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 173.

Vol. VI, p. 711, sec. 5153. [First ed., vol. V, p. 109.]

Money paid into court not "public money."—To same effect as original annotation, see Chatham, etc., Nat. Bank v. Guaranty Trust Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 90.

Interest on money paid into court.—Where the Secretary of the Treasury under the provisions of this section has required banks which are depositaries of public moneys to pay interest to the United States upon its average monthly balance, including moneys deposited by courts, this is not an authorization to a court to require a bank to pay interest to the clerk of the court or to a party to a suit on money deposited by the clerk. Chatham, etc., Nat. Bank v. Guaranty Trust Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 90.

Notice of withdrawal—To whom given.—A notice of withdrawal under this section to the president of a bank is insufficient unless shown to have been communicated to the board of directors. The same is true of a notice addressed to the bank. Conway v. Rome First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 277.

Time of giving notice.—A notice of withdrawal may be given under the provisions of this section only after an amendment of the bank's articles of association has been approved by the comptroller. It must, however, be received by the directors within thirty days thereafter in order to be effective. Conway v. Rome First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 277.

Letter as notice.—A letter by a stockholder to the president of a national banking association, in answer to a request by the latter to consent to a disposition of certain assets of the bank, preliminary to a renewal of its charter, stating that he has purchased the stock with intent to liquidate it and is not in a position to carry it, cannot be regarded by reason of the language used as a notice of withdrawal, nor can be it treated as a substitute for such notice where the stockholder at a later date attempts to give such notice. Conway v. Rome First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 277.

Waiver.—A resolution of a board of directors of a bank authorizing its president or cashier to apply to the comptroller of the currency to have an amendment to its articles of association approved, does not authorize the president to receive or waive for them a notice of withdrawal made by a nonassenting shareholder pursuant to this section. Conway v. Rome First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 277.

Estoppel.—The power to act regarding withdrawals being vested by this section exclusively in the directors of a bank, its president is without authority to commit it by any statement relative to notice of withdrawals, and want of such authority to represent the bank prevents an estoppel. Conway v. Rome First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 277.

I. Who are liable as stockholders.

2. Married women.

II. Contracts, debts and engagements.

I. WHO ARE LIABLE AS STOCKHOLDERS

2. Married Women (p. 723)

Unauthorized transfer of stock to wife.—The mere transfer of stock in a national bank from husband to wife, without the latter's knowledge and consent, does not impose upon her the individual liability attached by law to the position of a shareholder, and she cannot be deemed to have approved, ratified, or acquiesced in such transfer so as to assume the position of a shareholder by indorsing the certificates in blank, in the belief that she was enabling her husband to correct his avowed mistake. Williams v. Vreeland, (1919) 250 U. S. 295, 39 S. Ct. 438, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 346, 156 C. C. A. 632, wherein the court said: "In Keyser v. Hitz, (1890) 133 U. S. 138 [10 S. Ct. 290, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 531], which involved the liability of a married woman for an assessment levied against national bank stockholders, speaking through Mr. Justice Harlan, this court approved a charge—'If the stock in controversy was transferred upon the books of the German-American Savings Bank to and in the name of the defendant without her knowledge and consent, she was entitled to a verdict, unless she subsequently ratified and confirmed such transfer.' And it was further said—'We must not be understood as saying that the mere transfer of the stocks on the books of the bank, to the name of the defendant, imposed upon her the individual liability attached by law to the position of shareholder in a national banking association. If the transfers were, in fact, without her knowledge and consent, and she was not informed of what was so done—nothing more appearing—she would not be held to have assumed or incurred liability for the debts, contracts and engagements of the bank. But if, after the transfers, she joined in the application to convert the savings bank into a national bank or in any other mode approved, ratified or acquiesced in such transfers, or accepted any of the benefits arising from the ownership of the stock thus put in her name on the books of the bank, she was liable to be treated as a shareholder, with such responsibility as the law imposes upon the shareholders of national banks. Approval, ratification and acquiescence all presuppose the existence of some actual knowledge of the prior action and what amounts to a purpose to abide by it. Owings v. Hull, 9 Pet. 607, 629; Western Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 152 U. S. 346, 352; Glenn v. Garth, supra. When defendant in error signed blank powers of attorney she did not know what her husband had done and certainly entertained no purpose to approve transfer of the certificates to herself. She thought she was merely doing something to enable him to correct his avowed mistake and nothing else. Nobody was misled or put in a worse position as the result of her act."

Facts and circumstances concerning a wife's indorsement in blank of national bank stock certificates are admissible in evidence to negative the inference that by such indorsement she ratified a prior unauthorized transfer of such stock to her by her husband and assumed the duty promptly to remove her name from the bank books or suffer the liability imposed upon duly registered shareholders. Williams v. Vreeland, (1919) 250 U. S. 295, 39 S. Ct. 438, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 346, 156 C. C. A. 632.

II. "CONTRACTS, DEBTS AND ENGAGEMENTS" (p. 724)

Contracts for consolidation.—Where two national banks contract to consolidate, one agreeing to liquidate and transfer its assets to the other which agrees to assume its liabilities and act as liquidating agent, and the contract is thus construed and acted upon by the parties, the relation of debtor and creditor is created between the banks, and the stockholders of the liquidating bank may be held individually responsible under this section. American Nat. Bank v. Commercial Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 249, 165 C. C. A. 537.

I. INTRODUCTORY (p. 748)

Federal decisions controlling.—Decisions of the federal court of last resort as to the construction of the Act are conclusive in a state court. Planters' Nat. Bank v. Wysong, etc., Co., (N. C. 1919) 99 S. E. 199.

State statutes relating to usury, and prescribing penalties for the charging, reserving, or taking of usury, have no application to negotiable instruments held by national banks. Young v. Covington First Nat. Bank, (1918) 22 Ga. App. 58, 95 S. E. 381.

III. VALIDITY OF CONTRACT (p. 748)

Attorney's fees as constituting usury.—A stipulation for the recovery of 10 per cent. as attorney's fees, in a note payable to a national bank, is not usurious and unenforceable, but may be enforced when the provisions of the law as to notice are complied with. Young v. Covington First Nat. Bank, (1918) 22 Ga. App. 58, 95 S. E. 381.

Discharge of surety or guarantor.—A surety or guarantor of a debt to a national bank is not discharged from liability on the note given although the bank charged or received usury. Young v. Covington First Nat. Bank, (1918) 22 Ga. App. 58, 95 S. E. 381.

IV. "FORFEITURE OF ENTIRE INTEREST" 2. Renewal Notes (p. 749)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Young v. Covington First Nat. Bank, (1918) 22 Ga. App. 58, 95 S. E. 381.

Submission to jury of disputed question of renewal.—The courts will countenance no device or contrivance to evade the usury laws, but will always look to the actual nature of the transaction, and not to the form which the parties may have given to it. Where it is uncertain from the evidence whether, in a transaction by a national bank with the makers of a note due the bank, the debt was actually paid by a loan negotiated with an individual director of the bank, or whether it was in fact a renewal by the bank and an attempt to evade the usury laws by the ostensible substitution of a new creditor and a transfer of the new note to the bank, the issue should be submitted to the jury. Young v. Covington First Nat. Bank, (1918) 22 Ga. App. 58, 95 S. E. 381.

4. Necessity that Interest Stipulated for Be Unpaid (p. 750)

Distinction between clauses of statute.—There are two entirely different divisions of section 5198; the first provides for a forfeiture when usury has been knowingly contracted for and such usury entered into the note; the second provides for the recovery back of twice the amount of all interest actually paid when said interest is in part usurious. The courts uniformly hold that under the first provision the maker of the note or debtor can interpose the plea of usurious interest in a suit on the note, and defeat the payment of any interest where said interest is in part usurious; while on the other hand, if he has in fact made any payment on interest which includes a payment in part of usurious interest, he cannot plead such payment either as a credit on the principal or as an offset or counterclaim to the principal, but his only remedy for such usury thus paid is found in the second provision of section 5198, and consists solely in his right to recover in a separate suit double the amount of interest actually paid. Mitchell v. Joplin Nat. Bank, (1918) 200 Mo. App. 243, 204 S. W. 1125, holding that acquiescence in application of payment to interest precluded an action to forfeit the entire interest.

9. Limitation of Action (p. 751)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Young v. Covington First Nat. Bank, (1918) 22 Ga. App. 58, 95 S. E. 381.

V. RECOVERY BACK OF TWICE AMOUNT OF INTEREST PAID

5. Exclusiveness of Remedy Provided (p. 754)

Set-off of interest paid.—Although payments made directly as interest will be so regarded, and cannot be made use of as a set-off or counterclaim, yet where a payment is made generally, without any direction as to the application, it will ordinarily be applied on the principal instead of on the interest, all right to which was forfeited under such section by the agreement for usury. Young v. Covington First Nat. Bank, (1918) 22 Ga. App. 58, 95 S. E. 381.

Set-off of penalty.—Payment of the penalty provided can be enforced only by a separate and independent action in the nature of an action of debt, and cannot be enforced by way of set-off in an action for the principal debt. Planters' Nat. Bank v. Wysong, etc., Co., (N. C. 1919) 99 S. E. 199, wherein the court said: "Although state courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the federal courts in actions by and against national banks, in an action in a state court the practice and pleadings prescribed by the legislature of the state in regard to a counterclaim or recoupment cannot be resorted to, so as to defeat the object and intention of a federal enactment. The provision of the United States statute (section 914), that the practice, pleadings, forms, and modes of proceedings, in civil cases, in the circuit and district courts, shall conform, as near as may be, to those existing at the time in the courts of record of the state, has no application in such case; it cannot annul or operate to prevent the application and enforcement of a statutory provision of a penal character."

12. Limitation of Action (p. 757)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Young v. Covington First Nat. Bank, (1918) 22 Ga. App. 58, 95 S. E. 381.

The date of payment is the date from which an action to recover twice the amount of usurious interest begins to run. Mitchell v. Joplin Nat. Bank, (1918) 200 Mo. App. 243, 204 S. W. 1125.

II. EMBEZZLEMENT

2. Elements of Offense (p. 774)

Elements stated.—"The crime of embezzlement from a national bank by an officer, clerk, or agent, within Revised Statutes, 5209, involves two general elements; one a breach of trust or duty with respect to the moneys, funds, or credits of the bank embezzled, which must have been lawfully in the custody or possession of the accused by virtue of his office or employment, although such possession need not have been exclusive of that of other officers, clerks, or agents; and, second, wrongful appropriation of such moneys, funds, or credits to his own use, with intent to injure or defraud the association or others. . . .

"The intent to injure or defraud . . . need not necessarily have been the object or purpose with which the act was done; but it is sufficient if the natural and necessary effect of the act was to injure or defraud the bank or others, and it was willfully and intentionally done." Union Nat. Bank v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (1918) 143 La. 329, 78 So. 582.

IV. MISAPPLICATION OF FUNDS, ETC.

2. Elements of Offense

d. Withdrawal of Funds (p. 777)

Sufficiency of evidence.—In McCallum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 27, 159 C. C. A. 245, the evidence was summarized by the court as follows: "The sum of the evidence was that the St. Louis bank owed and had credited the Arkansas bank on August 31, 1914, $110.80 interest on deposit balances during August; that on receipt of the St. Louis bank's statement of account during the first half of September, McCallum entered that $110.80 on the reconciliation book of the Arkansas bank as an exception which showed a credit to the Arkansas bank of that amount with the St. Louis bank; that on October 15, 1914, he caused that $110.80 to be charged in the regular account books of the Arkansas bank against the St. Louis bank, but failed to credit it to profit and loss, or to interest account, as he should have done; that the effect of this failure to credit profit and loss necessarily was to make the cash balance on that night appear to be $110.80 over, but that balance was in fact $5.53 short; that this discrepancy might have resulted from the abstraction of the $110.80 from the bank by some one, or by a corresponding error in entries in the books regarding the accounts of others." It was held that the evidence was insufficient to show any abstraction or misapplication of funds.

9. Indictment

e. Conversion (p. 780).

An averment of the taking of a false credit on the books of a bank, without alleging that the money was checked out or that the bank was in any way deprived of the use of it, is insufficient. McCallum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 27, 159 C. C. A. 245.

g. Felonious Intent (p. 781)

Specific allegation.—An indictment for misapplication of the funds of a national bank must allege specifically the intent to defraud or injure. McCallum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 27, 159 C. C. A. 245.

10. Evidence (p. 781)

Misleading question.—In McCallum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 27, 159 C. C. A. 245, the evidence showed that the accused failed to make a proper credit entry to profit and loss of a sum due to another bank. The court interrogated a witness as follows: "By the Court: Q. Supposing I came in the bank and deposit $1,000, and I get it entered on my book, but on that evening there is no entry made on the books showing that I was credited with $1,000 and the cash balance, what became of that $1,000? A. It must have taken out of the cash." It was held that this question was misleading and improper.

Intent.—In a prosecution of a cashier of a national banking association under this section for misapplying the association's moneys, evidence tending to prove that the defendant, while acting as cashier, obtained money from the bank by discounting a note purporting to be that of a third party, but which was known to the defendant to be a forgery, such transaction not being one that was charged in any count of the indictment, is admissible on the question of the intent which accompanied the alleged misapplications for which the defendant was tried. Apgar v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 16, 166 C. C. A. 344, wherein the court said: "The existence of an intent on his part to injure or defraud the bank was in issue. The fact that, while acting as cashier, he obtained money from the bank on a note he knew to be forged, had some tendency to prove that when, on other occasions, he obtained the bank's money in the way charged in the indictment, he did so with intent to injure or defraud it."

12. Instructions (p. 781)

In McCallum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 27, 159 C. C. A. 245, the court, in commenting on a charge to the effect that intent to defraud is to be inferred from an act whose necessary tendency is to defraud, said: "If the court had instructed the jury that the defendant's intent to defraud the bank was an indispensable element of each offense with which he was charged, that there is a presumption of law that one intends the natural and probable effect of the acts he intentionally does, that this presumption may be overcome by evidence, that a defendant's testimony as to his intent and his explanations of his acts and omissions are competent and material evidence upon the subject of his intent, that acts are sometimes more persuasive evidence of intent than words, and that it was their duty to consider all the evidence of the acts and omissions of the defendant, the rebuttable presumption that one intends the natural and probable effect of his acts intentionally done, the testimony of the defendant as to his intent and his explanations of his transactions, and from them all to determine whether or not they were satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the acts with which he was charged were done with intent to defraud the bank, the charge would have been more satisfactory. As given it minimized, it almost ignored, the testimony of the defendant regarding his intent, and it in effect instructed the jury that they must determine his intent, not from his testimony on that subject, his acts, his explanations, and the rebuttable presumption of law, but that they must determine it by the natural and probable effect of his acts in view of the legal presumption without regard to his explanations and testimony. It deprived the defendant of the just and proper consideration by the jury of his explanations and testimony, and for that reason was erroneous."

I. POWER OF STATE TO TAX

1. Rule Stated (p. 797)

"Without considering some modifications made by the Act of February 10, 1868, c. 7, 15 Stat. 34, which are negligible for the purposes of the questions before us, the section is but the reproduction of a provision of § 41 of the Act of June 3, 1864, dealing with the organization of national banks. (13 Stat. 99, 112.) The forms of expression used in the section make it certain that in adopting it the legislative mind had in view the subject of how far the banking associations created were or should be made subject to state taxation, which presumably it was deemed necessary to deal with in view of the controversies growing out of the creation of the Bank of the United States and dealt with by decisions of this court. McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 436; Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 867; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449. There is also no doubt from the section that it was intended to comprehensively control the subject with which it dealt and thus to furnish the exclusive rule governing state taxation as to the federal agencies created as provided in the section. All possibility of dispute to the contrary is foreclosed by the decisions of this court. People v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539; Mercantile Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 154; Owensboro National Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 664; Covington v. First National Bank, 198 U. S. 100. Two provisions in apparent conflict were adopted. First, the absolute exclusion of power in the state to tax the banks, the national agencies created, so as to prevent all interference with their operations, the integrity of their assets, or the administrative governmental control over their affairs. Second, preservation of the taxing power of the several states so as to prevent any impairment thereof from arising from the existence of the national agencies created, to the end that the financial resources engaged in their development might not be withdrawn from the reach of state taxation, but on the contrary that every resource possessed by the banks as national agencies might in substance and effect remain liable to state taxation. The first aim was attained by the non-recognition of any power whatever in the states to tax the federal agencies, the banks, except as to real estate specially provided for, and, therefore, the exclusion of all such powers. The second was reached by a recognition of the fact that, considered from the point of view of ultimate and beneficial interest, every available asset possessed or enjoyed by the banks would be owned by their stockholders and would be, therefore, reached by taxation of the stockholders as such. Full and express power on that subject was given, accompanied with a limitation preventing its exercise in a discriminatory manner, a power which again from its very limitation was exclusive of other methods of taxation and left, therefore, no room for taxation of the federal agency or its instrumentalities or essential accessories, except as recognized by the provision in question." California Bank v. Richardson, (1919) 248 U. S. 476, 39 S. Ct. 165, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 175 Cal. 813, 165 Pac. 152.

"The legislation in this state respecting the taxation of banks is based upon and is responsive to the federal legislation permitting the taxation by the state of shares in national banks which, because of their character as governmental agencies, would not otherwise be subject to such taxation; and the object and effect of this legislation was to enable the state to reach for taxing purposes the capital of banks as the property of its stockholders, thus placing the burden of state taxation equally upon national and state banks." In re Feliciana Bank, etc., Co., (1918) 143 La. 46, 78 So. 169.

IV. MODE OF COLLECTING TAX

1. Rule Stated (p. 799)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Junction City First Nat. Bank v. Moon, (1918) 102 Kan. 334, 170 Pac. 33, L. R. A. 1918C 986.

Ascertainment of tax as of what time.—As relates to the function, liability, or authority of a bank, in its capacity as agent, for the payment of the tax upon its shareholders and their shares under the statute, an assessment is completed and the amount of the tax ascertained only upon the deposit of the tax rolls by the assessor. And this is true notwithstanding that the completed assessment, in so far as the direct liability of the stockholders and their shares is concerned, may perhaps relate back to the 1st day of January of the tax year. A proceeding by the state against the liquidator of an insolvent bank for the collection of the taxes assessed against its shareholders and their shares under the statute cannot be maintained, where it is neither alleged nor proved that the liquidator has, or that the bank had at the time of the deposit of the assessment rolls or on the date of its insolvency, any assets belonging or accruing to the shareholders. In re Feliciana Bank, etc., Co., (1918) 143 La. 46, 78 So. 169.

Duty of bank to pay tax on shares when statute does not provide for recovery over against shareholders.—In Adams v. Gulfport First Nat. Bank, (1917) 116 Miss. 450, 77 So. 195, the facts involved and conclusions reached were stated by the court as follows: "This is a proceeding in which the revenue agent is attempting to back-assess the shares of appellee's capital stock, together with the accumulations thereon for the years 1902 to 1907, inclusive, during which it is alleged that these shares have escaped taxation. Appellee is a national bank, and claims, and the court below held, that the tax is imposed against it upon its capital stock as such, which the state is without power to do. It is true that a national bank is not subject to taxation upon its capital stock by the state or any subdivision thereof, but the shares into which its capital stock is divided, and which are the property not of the bank but of the holders thereof, may be taxed under the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5219, and the taxes imposed thereon may be collected in the first instance from the bank itself, 'as the debt and in behalf of the shareholders, leaving to the corporation the right to reimbursement for the tax paid from the shareholders' (Home Sav. Bank v. Des Moines, (1907) 205 U. S. 503, 27 S. Ct. 571, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) at p. 910; Jackson First Nat. Bank v. McNeel, [C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917] 238 Fed. 559, 151 C. C. A. 495); and such is the object sought to be accomplished by the statute by which the tax here sought to be collected is imposed (Oxford Bank v. Oxford, (1892) 70 Miss. 504, 12 So. 203; Constitution, § 181; Code of 1906, § 4273; Hemingway's Code, § 6907). That the statute makes no provision for a recovery by the bank from its shareholders for the taxes paid by it pursuant thereto is not material, for the reason that such recovery may be had 'under the general principle of law that one who pays the debt of another at his request, can recover the amount from him.' Home Savings Bank v. Des Moines, supra."

V. DISCRIMINATION

1. In General (p. 800)

Overvaluation.—In Greeley First Nat. Bank v. Patterson, (1918) 176 Pac. 498, the court in sustaining a tax said: "The injustice and discrimination, if any, arise wholly from an alleged overvaluation of property for taxation purposes enforced by action of the state tax commission and the state board of equalization. No claim is made of actual fraud or intentional wrong. The alleged overvaluation was the result of a flat increase ordered by the state tax commission and by the state board of equalization upon the aggregate value of all the property within the county originally assessed by the assessor, and imposed by the aforesaid central tax assessing agencies in strict conformity with the provisions of section 31 of the Act of 1911, ch. 216, p. 623."

2. "Moneyed Capital" (p. 801)

The phrase "moneyed capital" does not include capital which does not come into competition with national banks and therefore does not cover capital in the hands of individuals. Richmond v. Merchants Nat. Bank, (Va. 1919) 98 S. E. 643.

8. Shares Taxed to Owners (p. 804)

If a national bank owns shares of stock in other banks, state or national, it is subject to taxation on account of such shares as a shareholder, but those shares cannot be considered as assets of the bank in determining the amount the shareholders of the bank shall be taxed based on the value of its assets, for to do so might be to impose a double burden on such shareholders. California Bank v. Richardson, (1919) 248 U. S. 476, 39 S. Ct. 185, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 175 Cal. 813, 165 Pac. 152; California Bank v. Roberts, (1919) 248 U. S. 497, 39 S. Ct. 171, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1916) 173 Cal. 398, 160 Pac. 225.

VI. EXEMPTIONS AND DEDUCTIONS

4. Real Estate (p. 807)

A state statute taxing the stock of a national bank and providing that the value thereof shall be determined by deducting from the cash value of the shares the money invested in real estate within the state which has been taxed, is invalid. Dennis v. Great Falls First Nat. Bank, (1919) 55 Mont. 448, 178 Pac. 580.

Vol. VI, p. 817, sec. 2. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 261.]

Abolition of federal reserve districts or banks.—The Federal Reserve Board has no power to abolish any of the existing federal reserve districts or federal reserve banks, for the merely negative statement of this section. (1915) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 497.

Change of location of federal reserve banks.—The Federal Reserve Board cannot legally change the present location of any federal reserve bank, whether there has been an alteration or readjustment in the district lines or not. (1916) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 517.

Preservation of minimum capitalization.—This section in prescribing a minimum capitalization of $4,000,000 for federal reserve banks as a condition precedent to commencing business, does not require that such minimum capitalization shall be preserved when member banks reduce their capital stock or surplus, or cease to be members. (1916) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 517.

Independent powers of Federal Reserve Boards.—While one of the purposes of this section is to insure the preservation and supremacy of all existing powers of the Secretary of the Treasury in all cases where it may be claimed that such powers overlap or conflict with those of the Federal Reserve Board, nevertheless it clearly recognizes the existence of powers of the board independent of the Secretary in cases where no such conflict exists. (1914) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 308.

"Revenues of the Government."—All postal receipts, including fees only from the money-order business, are "revenues of the Government" within the meaning of this section, and may be deposited in federal reserve banks or in their member banks. (1916) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 553.

Deposit of postal savings.—The provision of this section that "No public funds of the . . . postal savings . . . shall be deposited, in the continental United States, in any bank not belonging to the system established by this Act," does not take effect until after a reserve bank has been authorized by the comptroller to "commence business" in the district and the Secretary "shall have officially announced" its establishment. Funds of the postal savings on deposit elsewhere at the time that the above clause becomes operative, need not be then transferred to, and redeposited in, a member or reserve bank. (1914) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 304.

Mailing reserve notes under penalty envelopes.—This section prohibits sending federal reserve notes through the mails under penalty envelopes or labels by the members of the Federal Reserve Board. (1915) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 456.

Vol. VI, p. 843, sec. 5220. [First ed., vol. V, p. 166.]

Liability of stockholders.—A transaction whereby one bank was dissolved by the vote of two-thirds of its stockholders, and its assets transferred to another bank, was held to be a sale creating no debt enforceable against the stockholders of the dissolved bank. American Nat. Bank v. Commercial Nat. Bank, (S. D. Ga. 1918) 248 Fed. 187.

Actions pending dissolution.—A national bank even in the process of dissolution may sue and be sued in its own name until its affairs are completely settled. Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Johnston, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 236, 3 A. L. R. 99.

II. Common law liability of directors and enforcement thereof.

1. Liability in general.

4. Pleading.

III. Statutory liability of directors and enforcement thereof.

1. Duties as to management in general.

d. Delegation of duties.

3. "Knowingly violate or knowingly permit," etc.

II. COMMON LAW LIABILITY OF DIRECTORS AND ENFORCEMENT THEREOF

1. Liability in General (p. 874)

Such liability affirmed.—Directors of a national bank are not relieved from the common-law duty diligently to administer the affairs of the bank by the provisions of the National Bank Act, as is shown by the oath which they are required to take "to diligently and honestly administer the affairs of the association," as well as not "to knowingly violate or willingly permit the violation of any of the provisions" of such Act. Bowerman v. Hamner, (1919) 250 U. S. 504, 39 S. Ct. 549, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming McCormick v. King, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 737, 154 C. C. A. 439.

The residence of a national bank director some 200 miles from the location of the bank does not excuse such utter abdication of his common-law responsibility for the conduct of its affairs and the flagrant violation of his oath of office, resulting in loss to others, as is shown by his failure to attend a single directors' meeting, regular or special, during the entire five and one-half years of the bank's existence, and his failure, being himself a banker, to make, or cause to be made, any examination whatever of the books or papers of the bank to determine its condition and the way in which it is being conducted. Bowerman v. Hamner, (1919) 250 U. S. 504, 39 S. Ct. 549, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming McCormick v. King, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 737, 154 C. C. A. 439.

The common law liability of directors for damages flowing from their negligent acts still remains, not being affected by this section. Grandprey v. Bennett, (S. D. 1919) 172 N. W. 514.

4. Pleading (p. 877)

The bill in a suit against national bank directors to obtain an accounting and a decree for money lost by alleged unlawful and negligent management of the bank's affairs may be so framed that, if the evidence fails to establish statutory negligence, but establishes common-law negligence, a decree may be entered accordingly; and thus the necessity for a resort to a second suit avoided. Bowerman v. Hamner, (1919) 250 U. S. 504, 39 S. Ct. 549, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming McCormick v. King, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 737, 154 C. C. A. 439.

III. STATUTORY LIABILITY OF DIRECTORS AND ENFORCEMENT THEREOF

1. Duties as to Management in General

d. Delegation of Duties (p. 879)

Waiver of by-law.—A by-law, adopted by the directors of a bank at the time of its organization, and prior to the passage of this Act, providing for the appointment of a committee by the directors every six months to examine the affairs of the bank and report to the board at its next regular meeting, may be waived. Dresser v. Bates, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 525, 162 C. C. A. 541.

3. Knowingly Violate or Knowingly Permit, etc. (p. 880)

In general.—Directors of national banks are liable for violations of the provisions of this section only when such violations were committed knowingly. But there is in effect an intentional violation whenever a director deliberately refuses to examine that which it is his duty to examine, or deliberately refuses to do any act which under such provisions it is his duty to perform. Grandprey v. Bennett, (S. D. 1919) 172 N. W. 514.

Declaration of dividends.—The liability of a national bank director for voting and declaring dividends out of the capital stock is not an absolute liability, but the question of good faith, diligence, or knowledge on the part of the director enters into the question of his liability. Williams v. Spensley, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 251 Fed. 58, 163 C. C. 308.

II. ATTACHMENT, INJUNCTION, OR EXECUTION

4. Injunction or Execution

a. In General (p. 913)

Injunctions prohibited.—The Act is broad enough "to inhibit a state court from issuing an injunction against a national banking association before final judgment against it." America Nat. Bank v. Dure, (1918) 148 Ga. 498, 97 S. E. 70.

NATURALIZATION

Vol. VI, p. 947, sec. 2171. [First ed., vol. V, p. 208.]

Section repealed.—This section was repealed by Act of May 9, 1918, sec. 1, par. 11, set out in 1918 Supp. p. 491. That paragraph also contains the law affecting the admission to citizenship of alien enemies.

The words "at the time of his application" as used in this section refer to the time when the alien files his application for citizenship properly in the clerk's office of the court in the district of which he is at the time a resident. In re Weisz, (W. D. Ga. 1918) 250 Fed. 1008.

War declared after filing of petition.—Naturalization should not be granted where during the ninety days required to elapse after the filing of the petition war is declared whereby the petitioner becomes an enemy alien. U. S. v. Kamm, (E. D. Wis. 1918) 247 Fed. 968.

Correction of petition filed before war.—A petition by a native of Germany prior to the declaration which is insufficient to give jurisdiction cannot be amended and filed nunc pro tunc after the applicant has become an alien enemy. In re Lindner, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 138, wherein the court said: "There is no statute forbidding the filing of a petition while a state of war is existing. On the contrary, such petitions should be received when offered, and will go far to show the real purpose of those honestly acting with loyalty to the United States. But the law of April 14, 1802, as amended by the Act of July 30, 1813 (section 2171, R. S.), prohibits the admission 'then'—i. e., during the war—of a subject or denizen of the country at war with the United States. The court might have allowed the applicant to file his application before the declaration of war and the accidental omission of a clerical signature could have been later supplied. But the court has not the power to actually receive the petition after the declaration of war and 'then' complete a court proceeding over which jurisdiction had not been obtained before the declaration. The statute was enacted when the application and hearing could be completed at one hearing. The present law compels the lapse of 90 days before final hearing, and the case of United States v. Meyer, 241 Fed. 305, 154 C. C. A. 185, established the law for this circuit by excluding from the effect of section 2171 those cases in which the application was made (petition filed) before the declaration of war. But this does not allow the court to file nunc pro tunc those petitions which the court might feel would, if some physical occurrence had not intervened, have been actually on file."

1918 Supp., p. 491, sec. 1, par. 11.

Alsatian as German citizen.—An Alsatian must be regarded as a German citizen and not entitled to naturalization under this section except by consent of the President, where it appears that he was born before the cession of Alsace to Germany, but was at that time a child, and that his parents remained in Alsace, thus becoming German citizens. Where, however, the President has consented to his naturalization, no notice of his application need be given to the Department of Labor. In re Pfeiffer, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 511. In discussing the effect of the provisos of this paragraph it was said: "The Department of Labor suggests in opposition that no notice has been given to it as required under the first proviso to the eleventh paragraph of section 4 of the Naturalization Act, as amended. It is, however, an error to suppose that such a notice is necessary in cases of Germans where the declaration was made after April 6, 1915. In such cases the President alone may grant consent to the naturalization of an alien enemy under the third proviso of that section, and the inquiry precedent to that consent must be conducted by the Department of Justice. As the Department of Labor has no duties to perform respecting such cases, it is obviously unnecessary that notice should be given to it, and, indeed, to give such notice might presuppose the possibility of a decision by the Department of Labor different from the Department of Justice, an untoward result. The words in the third proviso, 'foregoing exemption,' mean the condition or exception set forth in the body of the eleventh paragraph, beginning with the words 'unless he made,' etc. The first proviso is attached both grammatically and in its meaning to this condition, but to nothing more. The third proviso reaches all cases within the general prohibition of the eleventh paragraph, except those included within the condition or exemption, but it does not reach those which are within the exclusive purview of the Department of Labor."

I. FIRST CLAUSE (p. 948)

Omission of name from petition and certificate.—The fact that in the petition and the certificate the name of a minor child of the alien was inadvertently omitted does not prevent the child from becoming a citizen. In re Hennig, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 248 Fed. 990, wherein an amendment of the certificate was allowed.

A master mariner is a "seaman" within the meaning of this section. In re Scott, (S. D. Ala. 1918) 250 Fed. 647. Concerning the meaning of the word "seaman" as used herein, the court said: "It is common knowledge that a man must be a seaman before he can be a master. It is manifest that the word 'seaman' might be used in different enactments in different senses, and the intended sense might appear from the context. If there is nothing in the context to show the sense in which the word is used, then it seems to me that it should be given the broadest meaning, so as to include a master, as well as a common seaman before the mast. Certainly an enabling act, such as this, should not receive such a narrow construction as to deprive one who comes within its terms of any rights thereby given, merely because he happened to be a high-class man instead of a low-class one. The fact that a man has made the most of his opportunities, and has risen to the head of his profession, should not bar him from receiving the benefits conferred on his profession. Nor, again, looking at the act from the angle of the benefit to this country from the people who are admitted as citizens, we should not admit the lower classes of a profession and deny admission to the heads of the profession, as it is manifest that the higher the class and more skillful the applicant, the more valuable citizen he would make."

Time for application.—The provision of the Act of June 29, 1906, requiring petition within seven years from the time of the declaration is applicable. In re Britton, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 248 Fed. 607.

Vol. VI, p. 958, sec. 4, par. first.
[First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 366.]

Omission of name of ruler of country.—In Banning v. Penrose, (N. D. Ga. 1919) 255 Fed. 159, it was held that under section 2165 of the Revised Statutes (repealed by section 26 of this Act), a declaration which substantially complied with the statute and clearly indicated the country with which the applicant was severing his relations, was sufficient although the name of the ruler of such country was omitted.

Error of clerk in stating residence.—The fact that by an error of the clerk in filling out the declaration of intention the residence of the alien was insufficiently and ambiguously stated does not prevent the subsequent grant of naturalization on the declaration. U. S. v. Smith, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 131.

Petition filed at temporary domicil.—A declaration filed in good faith by an alien at a place where he is temporarily sojourning is sufficient to confer jurisdiction thereafter to grant naturalization. In re Von Bernhardt, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 247 Fed. 129.

II. Signature and verification.

1. Signature.

III. Filing petition.

1. Time of filing.

V. Certificate.

II. SIGNATURE AND VERIFICATION

1. Signature (p. 961)

Under the proviso that if the declarant "filed his petition before the passage of this act" he need not sign the petition in his own handwriting, a person who made his declaration five days after the enactment of the statute, to wit, on July 5, 1906, but before it became effective, need not sign the petition. In re Famolaro, (W. D. Pa. 1918) 247 Fed. 596, wherein it was said: "From this proviso I think it is clear that all cases would be included where the declaration was in conformity with the law in force at the date of making such declaration. In other words, that the words 'passage of the act' refer to the date when the law went into effect, rather than the date of its actual enactment. If this were not so, then the legal status of an applicant declaring his intention immediately after the passage of the Act would be different from that of one declaring his intention immediately before that date, although their declaration was made under and in compliance with the same Act of Congress. This could hardly be, under an Act whose purpose, as expressed by the title, is 'to provide for a uniform rule for the naturalization of aliens throughout the United States.' And so I would read the proviso to the second paragraph of section 4 (section 4352), in these words:

"Provided, that if he has filed his declaration before the passage of this Act, he shall not be required to sign the petition in his own handwriting."

"The declarant in this case complied with the law in all respects as it was when he filed his declaration of intention. While it had been enacted that the petition for admission to citizenship 'must be signed by the applicant in his own handwriting,' such enactment had not gone into effect, and as to him was the same as if it had never been passed. The whole Act speaks, and of necessity must speak, as of the date when it became effective. Prior to that date, all the provisions of the Act in relation to naturalization had no legal existence. In legal effect, they were as if the Act had not been passed. It is entirely natural that that date should be regarded as the date of its passage. This interpretation, which makes all of its provisions harmonious, should be adopted unless there is a compelling reason to the contrary. In other words, I think the spirit of the Act should prevail over its mere letter."

III. FILING PETITION

1. Time of Filing (p. 982)

Declaration filed before 1906.—Where the declaration of intention was made before the enactment of the statute of June 29, 1906, the petition must be filed within seven years of the date of the Act. U. S. v. Morena, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 484, 159 C. C. A. 538.

Effect of seaman's act.—The requirement of petition within seven years is not affected by R. S. sec. 2174 relating to naturalization of seamen. In re Britton (N. D. Cal. 1918) 248 Fed. 607.

V. CERTIFICATE (p. 964)

Correction of errors.—By a subsequent petition unintentional errors of the original petition in stating the age of the alien and the names and ages of his minor children may be corrected. In re Hennig, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 248 Fed. 990.

Vol. VI, p. 967, sec. 4, par. fourth.

[First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 368.]

An alien who has pleaded guilty of conspiring to hire persons to enlist in the service of a foreign prince in violation of section 10 of the Penal Laws [see vol. 7, p. 430] and has been sentenced to pay a fine therefor, although subsequently pardoned by the President, will be denied naturalization on the ground that he has not behaved "as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same." In re Addis, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 252 Fed. 886.

Vol. VI, p. 987, sec. 15. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 373.]

III. Grounds for cancellation.

2. Fraud.

3. Illegal procurement.

III. GROUNDS FOR CANCELLATION

2. Fraud (p. 991)

False statement as to surrender of foreign allegiance.—Where a native of Germany is naturalized under R. S. sec. 2165, now repealed by this Act, and some years later during a war between the United States and Germany is shown to have expressed a desire for the victory of Germany and recognized his allegiance to that country as superior to that owing by him to the United States, his certificate of naturalization may be cancelled on the ground that it was obtained by fraud. U. S. v. Wursterbarth, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 249 Fed. 908.

Cancellation of certificate of member of I. W. W.—In U. S. v. Swelgin, (D. C. Ore. 1918) 254 Fed. 884, it was held that the certificate of naturalization of an alien should be cancelled, where it was shown that at the time of his naturalization and during the five years preceding it, he was a member of an organization known as the I. W. W., which advocated anarchy and the overthrow of the government, and the defendant admitted that he believed in the principles of the organization.

3. Illegal Procurement (p. 992)

Meaning of "illegally procured."—"A reading of the cases gives the impression that an effort to define the terms 'illegally procured' has at times resulted in their conversion into words either of identical meaning or scope, or such as themselves necessitate or are susceptible of further interpretation or definition. For example, to say that a certificate is 'illegally procured,' when it is issued without 'authority of law,' or when it is in effect 'false' or 'spurious,' is not very helpful in the very cases before us. If section 2171 [see vol. 6, p. 947] be construed one way, it can surely be said that there is no authority in law for admitting the alien enemy subjects; whereas, a different view of the section leads to the opposite result. The question whether there has been continuous residence may upon one view of the facts bring the applicant within, and another view leave him without, the authority of the law to have his application granted; and as hereinafter shown, whether an application was heard in 'open' court may, upon the facts, lead to a diversity of views.

"Obviously, the term 'illegally procured' was used to comprehend something in addition to fraud; and the difficulties which attend a restricted interpretation have been referred to as preliminary to a consideration of two cases decided by the United States Supreme Court, dealing with the scope of section 15, to the end of answering the question whether the proposition urged by the defendants here, in view of the result in those two cases, can be considered any longer open to debate. These cases are Johannessen v. United States, 225 U. S. 227, 32 Sup. Ct. 613, 56 L. Ed. 1066, and United States v. Ginsberg, 243 U. S. 472, 37 Sup. Ct. 422, 61 L. Ed. 853." U. S. v. Kamm, (E. D. Wis. 1918) 247 Fed. 968.

Naturalization of alien enemy.—Naturalization granted in a state court to one who became an alien enemy by the outbreak of war after the filing of his petition but before the hearing thereof may be set aside by a proceeding in a federal court. U. S. v. Kamm, (E. D. Wis. 1918) 247 Fed. 968.

Sufficiency of indictment.—An indictment for a violation of this section which alleges that the defendant in a naturalization proceeding testified that he had never operated a saloon, nor been arrested, nor charged with the commission of crime, nor found guilty of violating any state law, whereas in fact it was not and is not true, and that at the time of so swearing the defendant did not believe it to be true, that he had not operated a saloon, etc., is not subject to attack upon the ground that it does not affirmatively state such facts. Also such an indictment which alleges that the defendant knowingly gave false testimony regarding a material fact need not allege that the defendant took oath falsely nor that the fact was "required to be proved in such proceeding." Gregorat v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 470, 161 C. C. A. 428.

NAVY

Vol. VI, p. 1104. [Dental Reserve Corps.] [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 300.]

Repeal of earlier Acts.—This Act does not repeal the provision of the Act of August 22, 1912, ch. 335 (see vol. 6, p. 1101), authorizing appointments to the grade of acting assistant dental surgeon in the navy from among dental graduates in civil life. (1914) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 279.

Vol. VI, p. 1148. [Machinists, etc.] [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 399.]

Commission to machinist invalid.—In Hooper v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 90, a commission granted to a machinist was held to be invalid because made in violation of R. S. secs. 1493 and 1505 (6 Fed. Stat. Ann. 1140, 1143).

Vol. VI, p. 1226, sec. 22. [First ed., vol. V, p. 343.]

Permanent detachment of staff officers of Marine Corps from headquarters.—Article 4141 of the Navy Regulations, in that it permits officers of the staff departments of the Marine Corps to be detached permanently from headquarters of the command and gives the power to the commandant of the corps to impose duties upon these staff officers inconsistent with their staff functions, is invalid as contravening this section. (1913) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 234.

OFFICERS OF MERCHANT VESSELS

Vol. VI, p. 1256, sec. 4442. [First ed., vol. V, p. 400.]

Revocation of license.—A pilot's license cannot be revoked for violation of this section where the charge against him is for violation of article 16 of the Pilot Rules, 2 Fed. Stat. Ann. 389, the reference to this section in the charge preferred being merely incidental. Benson v. Bulger, (W. D. Wash. 1918) 251 Fed. 757.

PATENTS

Vol. VII, p. 11, sec. 4883. [First ed., vol. V, p. 417.]

Purpose and effect of patent right.—"A patent conveys to the patentee only a negative right of exclusion, not the natural original right to make, use, and sell the device covered by it." Webster Electric Co. v. Podlesak, (N. D. Ill. 1919) 255 Fed. 907.

Presumption of validity.—The presumption of the validity of a patent extends to the fact that the patentee was the inventor and not an appropriator of the invention of another. "Nothing could be more completely invalid than a patent for invention to one who invented nothing." Proctor, etc., Co. v. Berlin Mills Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 23.

- II. Who may obtain patents.
- III. What may be patented.
- IV. Invention.
- VI. Novelty and anticipation.
- VII. Prior use or sale.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 23)

Effect of earlier decisions.—"The view entertained by the courts in the earlier days of the life of a patent is usually a safer guide with which to judge invention and scope of claims than new and later contentions, which, as the case may be, seek to enlarge or defeat the inventor's accomplishment."

American Graphophone Co. v. Emerson Phonograph Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 574.

II. WHO MAY OBTAIN PATENTS (p. 23)

Right to patent—requirements—Necessity of discovery.—To same effect as original annotation, see Knapp v. Will, etc., Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 191.

Knowledge of inventor.—To same effect as original annotation, see Proctor, etc., Co. v. Berlin Mills Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 23.

Employer and employee.—If an employee of a corporation is "only a hired man" taking orders from another, an invention by him relating to the industry in which the corporation is engaged belongs to him and the corporation takes merely an implied license or shop right to use it. But if a principal or directing officer makes an invention which is essential to the success of the corporation and which is "developed by the whole corporate force as something absolutely necessary," it is inequitable to permit him to retain title thereto. Dowse v. Federal Rubber Co., (N. D. Ill. 1918) 254 Fed. 308.

III. WHAT MAY BE PATENTED (p. 35)

An art dependent on mechanism.—To same effect as original annotation, see Buffalo Forge Co. v. Buffalo, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 83.

Means of producing results generally.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Dudlo Mfg. Co. v. Varley Duplex Magnet Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 745, 165 C. C. A. 339.

Different improvements as separate inventions.—To same effect as original annotation, see Jay v. Weinberg, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 250 Fed. 469.

Patent for function.—To sustain a subsequent patent, there must be something distinctively different from that covered by the first patent. The mere function of a patented invention cannot be made the subject of a separate and subsequent patent. Paramount Hosiery Form Drying Co. v. Moorhead Knitting Co., (M. D. Pa. 1918) 251 Fed. 897.

Scope of patent.—In Henry v. Los Angeles, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 769, the court, in holding that the scope of every patent was limited to the invention described in the claims, said: "As has been very recently said by the Supreme Court, referring to the claims of a patent:

"These so mark where the progress claimed by the patent begins and where it ends that they have been aptly likened to the description in a deed, which sets the bounds to the grant which it contains. It is to the claims of every patent, therefore, that we must turn when we are seeking to determine what the invention is, the exclusive use of which is given to the inventor by the grant provided for by the statute; 'he can claim nothing beyond them.' Motion Picture

Device patent.—The patentee cannot patent a combination of device and material upon which the device works, nor limit other persons from the use of similar material by claiming a device patent. F. N. Burt Co. v. Ritchie, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 909.

A hit or miss formula which is not such a disclosure to those skilled in the art as would enable them to practice its manufacture without experimentation is not patentable. Solva Waterproof Glue Co. v. Perkins Glue Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 64, 163 C. C. A. 314.

IV. INVENTION (p. 44)

Conception of invention.—Whenever a new thought of real value is brought into combination with some means by which the thought is given physical expression, the combination is patentable, although the means may by itself show limited novelty, or even be such as that by itself it would not be patentable. Aeolian Co. v. Cunningham Piano Co., (E. D. Pa. 1918) 251 Fed. 301.

Product of mechanical skill.—Mechanics who have only general mechanical skill, and who have had no part in the invention of the general organization of a machine, are called upon to remedy defects in details of construction, or to make, by application of their mechanical skill, improvements in the mechanical construction and operation of parts. For example: A mechanic who prevents overrotation of a numeral wheel in a counting machine by means of a stop does not invent a counting machine, even though he was first to use a positive stop in a counting machine. If an improved detail of construction is one within the knowledge and practice of mechanics, it does not matter that it was made by one who was also inventor of new combinations which he is justly entitled to claim as inventions. For what he does merely as a mechanic he stands exactly as other mechanics. Scott v. Hemphill Mfg. Co., (D. C. R. I. 1917) 247 Fed. 540.

A mere mechanical adaptation of familiar materials and methods not rising to the dignity of invention was held to be shown by the patents under consideration in Werk v. Parker, (1919) 249 U. S. 130, 39 S. Ct. 197, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 121, 145 C. C. A. 309.

Improvement along lines suggested by engineering skill.—A patent for an improvement of a shallow beam construction of a concrete floor will be declared invalid, where, apart from simplifying the engineering analysis in placing the reinforcement in regions of tension, it simply proceeds along lines suggested by engineering skill. Condron Co. v. Corrugated Bar Co., (N. D. Ill. 1919) 256 Fed. 672.

Improvement infringing prior patent.—A device may be at the same time an infringement upon the relatively generic claim of a prior patent and also be a patentable improvement thereon, and there is no inconsistency—even presumptive—between these conclusions. General Electric Co. v. Cooper Hewitt Electric Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 61, 161 C. C. A. 121.

Change of size or proportion.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Benjamin Electric Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Electric Equipment Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 288, 163 C. C. A. 444.

Increase in strength.—"It is said that these patents relate to the means for doing a difficult thing, viz., inserting apparatus strong enough to withstand the increasing demands of railway service into that very contracted space between the sills of a car allowed by the Master Car Builders' Association for the insertion of draft-rigging. From this premise it is argued that those who furnish such increased strength in draft-rigging without increase of size should be deemed to have displayed invention (as counsel put it) 'the solution of these difficulties.' This assertion is erroneous as matter of law. Mere increase in strength is not 'invention' (Planing Machine Co. v. Keith, 101 U. S. 490, 25 L. Ed. 939); and that no change in form, proportions, or degree so as to do the same thing in the same way, though with better results, is invention, has been recently reasserted in Railroad Supply Co. v. Elyria, etc., Co., (May 21, 1917) 244 U. S. 285, 37 Sup. Ct. 502, 61 L. Ed. 1136." Miner v. T. H. Symington Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 515, 160 C. C. A. 25.

Improvement in degree.—To same effect as original annotation, see Huebner-Toledo Breweries Co. v. Mathews Gravity Carrier Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 435, 165 C. C. A. 177; Willamette Iron, etc., Works v. Columbia Engineering Works, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 594, 164 C. C. A. 510.

The application of an old force "through known instruments, used in their accustomed manner to known objects and producing known effects," is not invention. Matteawan Mfg. Co. v. Emmons Bros. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 372, 165 C. C. A. 154.

Discovery of a previously unknown law of operation involved in a known method is not invention. Luten v. Whittier, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 590, 163 C. C. A. 584.

Omission of useless parts.—The accomplishment of the same result by the deletion of one of the elements of another invention, without substitution, is not infringement. Ritter v. Veneer Machinery Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 610, 163 C. C. A. 604.

Substitution of equivalents.—To same effect as second paragraph of original annotation, see Butler v. Pratt, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 654, 165 C. C. A. 280; W. S. Tyler Co. v. Ludlow-Saylor Wire Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 436, 166 C. C. A. 68.

Combinations.—Where there are two devices in the same machine, each successively doing its work precisely as it would if the other was altogether absent, they do not form a true combination, and in considering whether the machine is an infringement the claims relating to the two devices will be considered separately. E. W. Bliss Co. v. Southern Can Co., (D. C. Md. 1918) 251 Fed. 903.

Combination of old devices.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Willard v. Union Tool Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 48, 165 C. C. A. 646.

New combination of old elements.—That the various elements entering into a mechanical combination, considered separately and apart from each other, are old and well known, does not negative patentability where through the exercise of the inventive faculty they are so assembled as to produce a new and useful result. Patentable invention is often displayed in the selection and adjustment of old and well-known devices to be used in combination to produce such a result. And by analogy the same is true of the various steps entering into a patented process. Union Sulphur Co. v. Freeport Tex. Co., (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 634.

If a new combination and arrangement of known elements produces a new and beneficial result never attained before, it is evidence of invention. Lyon Non-Skid Co. v. Hartford, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 524.

If invention is wholly lacking, a patent cannot be sustained even for the specific combination of specifically contrived elements. Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Cahuff Supply Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 598, 163 C. C. A. 592.

Where all the elements of invention are old but one, and the addition of that one is not invention, even a combination claim is void. Cutler Mail Chute Co. v. American Mailing Device Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 508, 160 C. C. A. 18.

A combination of old elements so that each performs successively its customary function without coaction of the elements combined is not patentable. Moore v. Saunders, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 314, 159 C. C. A. 408.

If the thing is old, and is applied to perform its old functions, it remains in the prior art, and cannot be made novel, in the sense of the patent law, merely because used in new surroundings that do not affect its character or mode of operation. Robinson v. Tubular Woven Fabric Co., (D. C. R. I. 1917) 248 Fed. 526.

Changing position of old elements.—And the question of invention is just this—was it of patentable novelty to reposition the old parts of a well-known machine, if the change produced either a new or an improved result? The answer to this query depends on whether the result is new or merely an improvement, whether the difference obtained is one of kind or of degree. Mayer v. Mutschler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 911, 161 C. C. A. 29.

Combination with new element.—To same effect as original annotation, see Liquid Carbonic Co. v. Gilchrist Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 54, 165 C. C. A. 652.

Extraneous combination.—The patentee cannot claim as invention a combination that has nothing whatever to do with the purposes of the device, unless the patentee uses some clear language making the extraneous combination applicable. F. N. Burt Co. v. Ritchie, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 909.

Combination producing new result.—To same effect as original annotation, see Knapp v. Will, etc., Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 191; Disc Grader, etc., Co. v. Austin-Western Road Machinery Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 430, 166 C. C. A. 62.

Merely bringing together old devices.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Huebner-Toledo Breweries Co. v. Mathews Gravity Carrier Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 435, 165 C. C. A. 177.

Old device separated into parts.—A porcelain insulator knob duplicating in two parts a device previously made in one lacks invention. Avery-Loeb Electric Co. v. Markel, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 109, 159 C. C. A. 327.

Practical value as criterion.—The union of the selected elements may be an improvement upon anything the art contains, but if, in combining them, no novel idea is developed, there is no patentable invention, however great the improvement may be. Turner v. Lauter Piano Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 930, 161 C. C. A. 48.

Old process applied to analogous subject or use.—To same effect as original annotation, see Armstrong Seatag Corp. v. Smith's Island Oyster Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 821, 166 C. C. A. 267.

Use of additional apparatus to accomplish particular purpose.—In considering the charge of infringing a patent of an apparatus and process for mining sulphur, the court in Union Sulphur Co. v. Freeport Tex. Co., (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 634, said: "The charge of infringement cannot be avoided by some additional apparatus or operation necessitated by the difference between the formations containing the sulphur respectively at Bryan Mound and on the premises of the plaintiff, so long as such additional apparatus and operation do not change the nature or elements of the combination process under the patents in suit or the apparatus thereunder for the conduct of such process, but are resorted to merely for the purpose of enabling the apparatus and process of the patents in suit to be used with effect."

Reduction to practice.—An invention may be patentable as possessing utility in the sense of the law, although an improvement may be necessary to its commercial success. Union Sulphur Co. v. Freeport Tex. Co., (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 634.

Obtaining successful results.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Union Sulphur Co. v. Freeport Tex. Co. (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 634, wherein the court said: "The extreme importance of effecting the raising of sulphur from great depths to the surface of the ground was widely felt and recognized. It had long claimed the attention of scientific men and mining engineers. Yet it was Frasch, and he alone, who reached the long sought goal. Under these circumstances the law requires that whatever question may exist as to patentability in the improved apparatus and process covered by the patents in suit should, so far as consistent with reason, be resolved in favor of patentability. The conclusion of patentability is not, however; exclusively to be based upon the presumption arising from the grant of letters patent, or from the meeting of a long-felt need, or the utility of mining sulphur under the improved methods of the patents in suit, but also upon the essential character of the improvements as respects invention, novelty and utility."

Commercial success.—"We are well aware of the risk of assuming that the mere success of an invention determines its patentability; but, when it follows a long history of failure, we think it puts upon one who challenges its originality a duty of showing that the success arose from advertising, exploitation, or the removal of external commercial conditions, which had nothing to do with the difficulties of invention." Auto Pneumatic Action Co. v. Kindler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 323, 159 C. C. A. 417.

The presumptions from the issuance of the patent and from the commercial success in the sale of plaintiff's bracelet links are not sufficient to overbear the manifest equivalency of functions between the two patents, and the extent of sales is more directly traceable to the unique advertising the article has received (see Eisenstadt Mfg. Co. v. J. M. Fisher Co., 241 Fed. 241, 154 C. C. A. 161) than to any patentable novelty. Butler v. Pratt, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 654, 165 C. C. A. 280.

To enter an art crowded with a multitude of similar forms and secure an immediate and notable success is in itself sufficient evidence of invention and conclusive evidence of novelty. The very fact that there are many similar devices generally resembling the new one, which have had only a brief success, or none at all, instead of indicating a want of invention, is the best evidence to the contrary. Where many failed, one has succeeded, and in so brilliant a fashion as to suggest the presence of the magic touch which is invention. Luminous Unit Co. v. Freeman-Sweet Co., (N. D. Ill. 1918) 249 Fed. 876.

"It is true that the books are full of cases in which courts have regarded the success of the plaintiff's patent as an important test of invention, and we are in no sense disposed to question its value in proper cases. Yet it is a hazardous rule, and one which is quite likely to result in confusing genuine invention with imagination in advertising and energy and business skill in promotion. Where the art presents a case of earlier efforts, unsuccessful because of the absence of what the patentee contributed, and followed by a wide success after that contribution was added, it is reasonable to infer that the art needed that feature, and that it was not so easy to invent as might seem to us, who necessarily have no proficiency in the art. It by no means follows that every successful exploitation of a patent complies with these conditions; there are many other reasons for success, which need not be detailed." National Sweeper Co. v. Bissell Carpet Sweeper Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 196, 161 C. C. A. 232.

Commercial success is not a controlling factor where lack of novelty is clear. Avery-Loeb Electric Co. v. Markel, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 109, 159 C. C. A. 327.

In Benjamin Electric Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Electric Equipment Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 288, the court said: "Inasmuch, however, as the problem and its solution, in a mechanical sense and to those who look backward, seem very simple, while electrically there is no novelty at all, we consider it appropriate to invoke commercial success as evidence of invention, and a reason for broad construction of claims, if that be necessary. No instance is at present remembered of a more marked or rapid success achieved by a patented article which, to get a market, had to displace existing appliances made by skilled and powerful manufacturers. This is a feat very different from inducing the public to form a new habit, due quite as much to plausible advertising as intrinsic merit, or from obtaining a species of success for a patented adjunct to an existing and meritorious article. Locklin v. Buck, 159 Fed. at 436, 86 C. C. A. 414. Prompt and extensive use plus displacement of earlier devices is 'of itself' persuasive evidence of invention (Minerals Separation v. Hyde, 242 U. S. at 270, 37 Sup. Ct. 82, 61 L. ed. 286), a form of statement stronger, we think, than has before fallen from that court on this subject."

Acquiescence not only assists in finding invention, but justifies breadth of construction. Benjamin Electric Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Electric Equipment Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 288, 163 C. C. A. 444.

VI. NOVELTY AND ANTICIPATION (p. 83)

Pioneer patent.—A pioneer patent is one which meets an old or plainly recognized want by an entirely new method of approach. F. N. Burt Co. v. Ritchie, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 909.

Prior art.—Although an invention has never been patented or described in any printed publication and is not known to a patentee of a similar invention, yet it is a part of the prior art with reference to which the character of the patentee's variation therefrom must be judged. Jones v. Sykes Metal Lath, etc., Co. (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 91, 165 C. C. A. 501.

Concealed invention.—"It will not be usually easy to make sure that the first inventor or user had been successful in keeping that which he was doing or using an absolute secret. In spite of all his precautions, some hint, suggestion, or rumor of it may have come indirectly, if not directly, to the second Richmond. . . To find out the real truth in such matters is well-nigh impossible. The second inventor may have himself forgotten, or never clearly appreciated, what originally put the inventive idea into his head, and yet it may well have been something said or suggested by one who, all unknown to him, had some information as to the earlier device. Into such inquiries it will seldom be profitable to go. They will be unnecessary, if we hold fast to the letter of the statute, which forbids the patenting of anything before known or used by others in this country, admitting such exceptions to it only as are clearly recognized and precisely defined by decisions of courts of controlling authority. It is believed that if any such exception as that contended for by the plaintiff has been so established (and it is not intended to intimate that it has been), it is limited, so far as concerns inventions which are clearly anticipations and have been in continuous use, to cases in which (a) the first inventor had deliberately made up his mind to practice his invention secretly, because he thought he could thereby make out of a monopoly in fact more than he could obtain from one legally given by the patent laws, and (b) in which there was proved to demonstration that his efforts to keep the invention secret had been absolutely successful." E. W. Bliss Co. v. Southern Can. Co., (D. C. Md. 1918) 251 Fed. 903.

Reduction to practice—The first reducer.—To same effect as original annotation, see Hildreth v. Mastoras, (D. C. Ore. 1918) 253 Fed. 68.

Application as reduction to practice.—To same effect as original annotation, see Willard v. Union Tool Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 48, 165 C. C. A. 646.

Where several months prior to the plaintiff's application for a patent for the idea of rolls for cutting expanded metal, the defendants' predecessor perfected such a machine which was operated by hand sufficiently to demonstrate its effectiveness, this is a sufficient reduction to practice of the idea involved to establish a claim of anticipation of the plaintiff's patent, and the fact that the rolls were not operated by power at that time, because they were intended to be only a part of the complete machine which should cut and expand, and the expanding part was not ready, is immaterial, as there was not necessary connection between the two parts. Jones v. Sykes Metal Lath, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 91, 165 C. C. A. 501.

A patent for a device which is not practical and is never reduced to practice is not an anticipation. U. S. Metal, etc., Co. v. American Keyless Kap Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 250 Fed. 1024. Compare Dalton Adding Mach. Co. v. Rockford Milling Mach. Co., (N. D. Ill. 1918) 253 Fed. 187.

Seniority of patents.—To the same effect as the original note, see Camp v. Portable Wagon Dump, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 603, 163 C. C. A. 597.

"When two patents for the same invention have been issued to independent inventors, the rule is that the dates of their inventions are: (1) The date of the patents; (2) the dates of the applications, provided the application sufficiently describes the invention; and (3) the dates of actual reduction to practice." Willard v. Union Tool Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 48, 165 C. C. A. 646.

Invention first patented in foreign country—Date of patent.—Where an invention is first patented abroad and later in this country, the date of the foreign application is the effective date of the American patent. Jay v. Weinberg, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 250 Fed. 469.

Imitation of another product.—A "sample card" showing on paper the exact appearance of a fabric attached to paper is not patentable. "In one use of the word, its novelty consists wholly in the perfection of imitation. The new 'product' is the production of illusion; i. e., making the eye believe that actual pieces of cloth are in view. But patentable novelty must be more than this. Never can the patent law wholly divorce itself from the idea of 'means,' for that word suggests or implies the meritorious human effort which is the object of the law to reward. If successful imitation were per se patentable, the selection and use of a natural product for that purpose would be within the Act (compare Denton v. Fulda, 225 Fed. 537, 140 C. C. A. 521." Simplex Lithograph Co. v. Renfrew Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 863, 163 C. C. A. 177.

Public disclosure or publication to be effective as such must be a revelation of an invention so publicly published or disclosed as to raise a presumption that the public concerned with the art would know of it. Where application for a patent is filed, and no change therein is made in the Patent Office, the specifications as filed become part of the subsequently issued patent. But where changes in the application are made after filing, particularly where a division is ordered, and pursuant thereto certain features of the original application are eliminated therefrom, there is nothing in the issued patent to show the specification as originally filed, nor, indeed, anything to indicate that any specification was ever filed, other than the one which appears as part of the patent as issued. The file wrapper alone will disclose what the original application was, and what, if any, changes in the application intervened before issuing of patent. It is within the domain of possibility that as to every patent which has been granted the original application disclosed some other invention unrelated to that for which the patent issued, and which only an examination of the file wrapper would reveal. If, therefore, disclosure of invention other than that for which the patent was issued, but which only the file wrapper would reveal, is to be considered as prior publication within the meaning of the law, no patentee could be certain that there had not been prior publication of his invention through its inclusion in some application as originally filed, unless every file wrapper in the Patent Office were searched to eliminate the possibility that the invention in question at some prior time had been in such manner disclosed. Camp v. Portable Wagon Dump etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918), 251 Fed. 603, 163 C. C. A. 597.

Date determined by application.—To same effect as original annotation, see Camp v. Portable Wagon Dump, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 603, 163 C. C. A. 597.

Oral proof of anticipation.—Written proof of anticipation "is not an invariable necessity." Crone v. John J. Gibson Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 503, 160 C. C. A. 13.

Degree of proof.—Anticipation must be made out clearly and satisfactorily. The law requires not conjecture, but certainty. The burden of proof rests upon the defendants, and every reasonable doubt should be resolved against them. Eddy v. Kramer, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 247 Fed. 962.

VII. PRIOR USE OR SALE (p. 117)

Showing nature of sale.—It is immaterial to the effect of a sale of a machine as a prior use that as between the parties it was intended as a mere chattel mortgage. Mayer v. Mutschler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 911, 161 C. C. A. 29.

Two years necessary.—Prior use does not invalidate a patent, where the period of such use does not exceed two years prior to the application and the patentee was the first actually to make the invention. Tiffany v. Paper Products Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 953, 165 C. C. A. 395.

Computing time of use—amendment.—An amendment relates back to the time of the filing of the original application, and in order that the claims may be defeated by reason of two years' prior public use that use must have extended over a period of at least two years before the date of the original application. Union Sulphur Co. v. Freeport Texas Co., (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 634.

Experimental use to defeat patent.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Union Sulphur Co. v. Freeport Texas Co., (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 634; Eclipse Mach. Co. v. Harley-Davidson Motor Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 805, 164 C. C. A. 645; General Electric Co. v. Continental Fiber Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 660, 168 C. C. A. 54.

The sale of an "experimental" machine makes the invention public. One sale is a public use of whatever is parted with (Delemater v. Heath, 58 Fed. 414, 7 C. C. A. 279; Covert v. Covert, [C. C.] 106 Fed. 183, affirmed 115 Fed. 493, 53 C. C. A. 225; Toch v. Zibell, etc., Co., 231 Fed. 716, 145 C. C. A. 597), even though what the purchaser got was imperfect, and subsequently greatly improved on (Star, etc., Co. v. Crescent, etc., Co., 179 Fed. at 859, 103 C. C. A. 342); Mayer v. Mutschler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 911, 161 C. C. A. 29.

Burden of proving prior use.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Inflexible Co. v. Megibow, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 251 Fed. 924.

I. Application.

III. Claims.

2. Construction.
3. Essentials and scope.
6. Amendment of claims.
8. Rejection of claim.

I. APPLICATION (p. 146)

Continuation of former application.—An application on which no action was taken for a patent of gears composed of compressed "textile material" has been held to be a continuation of a prior application in which the material was described as "textile fabric." General Electric Co. v. Continental Fibre Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 660, 168 C. C. A. 54.

III. CLAIMS

2. Construction (p. 158)

In general.—"A patent is prima facie valid, and an inventor is presumed by the courts to be claiming a valid patent, rather than to be endeavoring to do wrong by claiming what does not belong to him, under the guise of general language. The inventor is seeking to include all that can legally be covered by that which he describes as his invention, and is limited only by the prior art, within the boundaries of that which can be said to have reasonably been intended, and to have been set forth or disclosed by the words of description which the inventor has chosen.

Thus, devices, not described, but plainly within the concept, in so far as it is patentable and is defined in the claims, infringe the patent, and, for that very reason, if earlier, would have taught the same principle with a similar application, and would thus have constituted an anticipation if properly claimed." F. N. Burt Co. v. Ritchie, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 909.

"The patentee is limited to his claims and the patent is no broader than the claims, and, if the language of claims of the patent is clear and distinct, the patentee is bound by the language he has employed." Wilson, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Union Tool Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 729, 161 C. C. A. 639.

Pioneer patent.—The fact that a patent is a pioneer in the art entitles it to a broad construction, but of course it cannot be broader than the claim. Hildreth v. Mastoras, (D. C. Ore. 1918) 253 Fed. 68.

Liberal construction.—Where an applicant was the first to conceive and work out an idea of distant control for inking fountains in printing presses, marking a distinct and radical advance in the art, it was held that he was entitled to claims as broad as his invention, and should not be restricted to electric means for controlling the fountains, where competitors might, by substitution of other means, effect the same result and thus deprive the real inventor of the fruits of his discovery. In re Bechman, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 446.

An inventor, of course, is entitled to all the benefits of his invention, notwithstanding the fact that he may not have fully appreciated those advantages, especially in the early stages of an extremely difficult art. Kintner v. Atlantic Communication Co., (S. D. N. J. 1917) 249 Fed. 73.

Not limited to exact language.—Where an inventor by the combination of old elements produces a new and useful device, he is not restricted to the exact language employed in the patent claims where he has referred to a specific drawing which in fact exhibits the real functioning element of the mechanism but omits its completeness. Bethlehem Steel Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 348.

Limiting claim.—Where there have been earlier inventions of a similar nature, the patentee should be held to have limited intentionally the scope of his invention by the language of his claim. Wonder Mfg. Co. v. Block, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 748, 161 C. C. A. 658.

"It is unnecessary to do more than refer to the proposition that the claims must be so interpreted as to give them a valid meaning, if possible, and that, if they would be rendered invalid by an interpretation so broad as to cover the defendant's structure, it is to be presumed that the plaintiff, in using the language which he put in the claims and which was allowed by the Patent Office, was describing that which can be held patentable; in other words, that the claims must be limited to the patentable invention, even though reference to the specifications, drawings, and prior art is had, in order to learn the limitations referred to. The courts have settled the proposition that broad claims will not be held invalid, if they are plainly intended to include by reference such specific limitations as would make the invention patentable." F. N. Burt Co. v. Ritchie, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 909.

"Since all claims must, according to the accepted rules of patent interpretation, be given as broad a scope as their language will bear, no court is justified in reading into a claim limitations not set forth to establish the invalidating force of a prior construction. Westinghouse v. Boyden, 170 U. S. 737, 18 S. Ct. 707, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1136; McClain v. Ortmayer, 141 U. S. 419, 12 S. Ct. 76, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 800." Lyon Non-Skid Co. v. Hartford, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 524.

Limitation in one claim omitted from others.—To same effect as original annotation, see Jones v. Sykes Metal Lath, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 91, 165 C. C. A. 501.

Construction with concurrent patents.—In construing a plaintiff's claims under patents, the court is required to consider the claims in view of the time and condition under which the patents were brought out. Where the patents are practically concurrent and co-pending, each one seeking to be contributory in some degree to the advance in the art which it is proposed to bring about, the court is not at liberty to ignore the express reference made in the several patent records to the pendency of the other patents and the general purposes sought to be accomplished by the various patents as a whole. North American Chemical Co. v. Dexter, (E. D. Wis. 1916) 252 Fed. 148.

Reading in unspecified elements.—The rule of construction that an element expressly specified in a claim of a patent should not be read into another claim which does not specify it, rests on the reason that each claim is supposed to have a distinguishing characteristic, and that no construction should be unnecessarily adopted which would cause two claims to be identical. From this reason, it follows that the prohibition is directed, not broadly against importing into one claim a specific limitation expressed in another, but, when stated with precision, is aimed against importing a limitation of that character when, by it alone, the two claims come to be different. Jones v. General Fireproofing Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 254 Fed. 970, 165 C. C. A. 662.

Necessity of explanation of device.—"A patentee is entitled to all the benefits of his invention whether he apprehends and states them or not. He must be given full protection in his claims whether he has explained the theory of the operation of his device correctly, erroneously, or not at all. Against an infringer he must be allowed a range of equivalency that is commensurate with his actual contribution to the art. He is not to be limited to particular formation or location of parts, unless the limitations are embodied in the claims themselves or are necessarily imposed by the prior art." Stromberg Motor Devices Co. v. Zenith Carburetor Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 68, 165 C. C. A. 478.

Construction of claim for combination.—"A combination claim must of course be treated as an integer. Its novelty may consist wholly in bringing together old elements." Stromberg Motor Devices Co. v. Zenith Carburetor Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 68, 165 C. C. A. 478.

Construction of claims for improvements.—To same effect as second paragraph of the original annotation, see Bindley v. Detroit River Tunnel Co., (E. D. Mich. 1918) 253 Fed. 751.

To same effect as last paragraph of original annotation, see Waterbury Farrell Foundry, etc., Co. v. E. J. Manville Mach Co., (D. C. Conn. 1917) 253 Fed. 59, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 59, 165 C. C. A. 658.

"An improvement patent may be relieved, in a measure, from the operation of the rule of limited or strict construction if the merit of the invention is such as to warrant it; . . . but the merit is not ordinarily accepted as sufficient to warrant it when the invention only slightly advances the art, thus carrying the claims only a little into the field of invention." F. W. Rauskolb Co. v. Anthony Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 650, 165 C. C. A. 276.

"Means."—A claim of a device "with means of operating" the same does not extend to all possible means, but only to those specified or their equivalents. "To permit a patentee to burden his claims by the use of indefinite language would lead to supporting him in a monopoly of a principle or result." Henry v. Los Angeles, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 769.

Acquiescence not only assists in finding invention, but justifies breadth of construction of the patent itself. Benjamin Electric Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Electric Equipment Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 288, 163 C. C. A. 444.

Construction by successive judgments.—"But there can be no doubt that whether a claim, as authoritatively construed in successive rulings, seems to contract or expand, the meaning given it by authority attaches instantaneously, and affects all pending matters within the jurisdiction of said authority. This is the more obviously true if the litigations are between the same parties or their privies. Hart, etc., Co. v. Railroad, etc., Co., 244 U. S. 294, 37 Sup. Ct. 506, 61 L. Ed. 1148. If, therefore, there be any difference between the construction of claim announced in our first judgment and that given in the second, the latter must control upon this accounting." Oriental Tissue Co. v. Dejonge, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 627, 162 C. C. A. 643.

3. Essentials and Scope (p. 161)

Claim too broad.—The rule that a claim which is broader than the invention is void does not invalidate a claim for an improvement which is addressed to improving the device along the lines stated in the original claim. Hinman v. Starch Bros. Co., (W. D. Wis. 1917) 247 Fed. 346.

Indefiniteness of claim.—Whoever discovers that a certain useful result will be produced in any article, machine, or manufacture by the use of certain means is entitled to a patent therefor, provided he shall specify the means he so uses to produce the result in a manner so full and exact that any one skilled in the art or science to which it appertains can, by using the means so specified, without any addition thereto or subtraction therefrom, produce precisely the result so described, and if this cannot be done by the means so described the patent is void. Shrauger v. Phillip Bernard Co., (N. D. Ia. 1917) 247 Fed. 547.

Less claimed than invented.—An invention may be patentable, but before an applicant for letters patent can claim the right to their issue, he must not only disclose a patentable invention, but he must claim it, and what he discloses and what he claims must be patentable. If he discloses less or claims less than what he has invented, and which he might have disclosed and claimed, he is limited to that which has thus been disclosed and claimed, notwithstanding the fact that he might have claimed more. Even if he sets forth claims in his application, and these are rejected or voluntarily withdrawn or limited by amendment, he gets by his letters patent only what the letters cover, and his rights under the letters patent are restricted to what has been granted to him, and the grant does not expand to embrace more than is covered by the actual grant, because of the fact that the grant might have been more extensive than was made. All which is disclosed beyond what is granted is given to the public, and the public cannot be denied the use of anything which is not in the grant. Aeolian Co. v. Cunningham Piano Co., (E. D. Pa. 1918) 251 Fed. 301.

Range of equivalents.—"All the patentees did was to suggest a way in which old mechanical means could be assembled for the purpose of doing something that had previously been done through different mechanical means. Under such circumstances, it would seem sufficiently settled that the inventor is only entitled to a range of equivalents commensurate with the scope of his invention." Economy Fuse, etc., Co. v. Chose-Shawmut Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 872, 162 C. C. A. 106.

Any patent, however narrow, has some range of equivalents, unless form is made indispensable, and this rule is especially applicable when an infringer takes the whole gist of the invention, but not all the mechanical details, even where all the combination elements are old. U. S. Slicing Mach. Co. v. Wolf, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 249 Fed. 245.

Part of device.—There is no inherent reason why a claim intended to reach the operation of one-half of a device considered by itself, may not be valid, though other claims deal with the device as a whole. Jones v. General Fireproofing Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 97, 165 C. C. A. 507.

6. Amendment of Claim (p. 173)

Scope of amendment.—The rule that an applicant must not introduce a new invention cannot be applied with dialectical rigidity, or it would forbid any change in claims which introduced any new element, for all elements of a claim are necessary parts of the invention. The case at bar is no different from Hobbs v. Beach, 180 U. S. 383, 395, 21 S. Ct. 409, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 586, where an entire element was omitted in an amended claim, which had been inserted in the original. If the whole disclosure remains unchanged and no intervening rights have arisen we do not cut so fine. It may be that the rule is no more than one of degree; but we know of no cases which forbid the omission of elements, even though they result in expansion, when the disclosure readily suggests the change. We think it no objection that the suggestion may arise from a further knowledge of the art which discloses that broader claims always were possible, so long as there are no intervening rights. In such cases the specifications suggest the change, but the applicant's mistake upon what preceded him has deceived him. This he may correct, at least when the departure is not too wide. Auto Pneumatic Action Co. v. Kindler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 323, 159 C. C. A. 417.

8. Rejection of Claim (p. 175)

Words inserted to meet a rejection based on a prior patent thereby become words of limitation, and if they are clear and definite they must have their full meaning, even though it later appear that the patentee thereby measurably lessened the monopoly to which he was really entitled; but if these limiting words develop ambiguity, they should not be read any more broadly than is reasonably necessary to serve that purpose of differentiation for which they were adopted. Jones v. General Fireproofing Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 97, 165 C. C. A. 507.

Claims substituted after rejection will not be given a construction which makes them the equivalent of the rejected claims. Rund Mfg. Co. v. Long-Landreth-Schneider Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 860, 163 C. C. A. 174; Spaulding v. Wannamaker, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 530.

Acquiescence in rejection of claim.—Beyond question the owner of a patent has no standing to sue upon canceled claim 1 or to seek a construction of an allowed claim that would have the effect of reviving the canceled claim. But that, in our judgment, is the extent of the estoppel. The solicitor's subsequent election not to appeal from the rejection of claim 1 can be given no retro-active effect upon the negotiations leading up to the allowance of the claims in the patent so as to narrow those claims to less than they were entitled to at the time of their allowance. In those negotiations the solicitor always and consistently declared that claim 1 of the patent, for example, produced a new result, through a new mode of operation, by means of a new mechanical combination, and never for a moment conceded that the inventive concept in that claim amounted to nothing but adding to abandoned claim 1 (not then in existence or abandoned) means for controlling the communication between the reservoir and the auxiliary well. On his side the examiner receded from his original position, and allowed the claims in the patent without stating or demanding any limitation or condition not inherent in the claims themselves, or furnishing any contemporaneous glossary for their interpretation. In electing not to appeal from the rejection of claim 1 the solicitor did not agree that the examiner's action was correct; much less that an infringer should take abandoned claim 1, and not the prior art itself, as the measure of invention involved in the patent. Stromberg Motor Devices Co. v. Zenith Carburetor Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 68, 165 C. C. A. 478.

Vol. VII, p. 178, sec. 4892. [First ed., vol. X, p. 251.]

Omission of oath.—What is disclosed and what is claimed must have the support of the required oath of the applicant, and no letters patent covering an invention which lacks this supporting oath are valid. Aeolian Co. v. Cunningham Piano Co., (E. D. Pa. 1918) 251 Fed. 301.

No new oath is needed to support an amendment made to meet an objection of the Patent Office. Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Cahuff Supply Co., (E. D. Pa. 1918) 248 Fed. 724.

Where the amended application does not present a conception materially different from or enlarged over that shown by the application as filed, a new oath is not necessary. Camp v. Portable Wagon Dump, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 603, 163 C. C. A. 597.

Insertion of new claim within invention.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Solva Waterproof Glue Co. v. Perkins Glue Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 64, 163 C. C. A. 314.

Effect of granting patent.—To same effect as second paragraph of original annotation, see Wonder Mfg. Co. v. Block, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 748, 161 C. C. A. 658; Willamette Iron Wks. v. Columbia Engineering Works, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 594.

Vol. VII, p. 181, sec. 4894. [First ed., vol. V, p. 488.]

Disregard of delay by commission.—Failure to prosecute an application within the period fixed by the statute does not work an abandonment and the commissioner has power to act on the application after the expiration of that period. Schram Glass Mfg. Co. v. Homer Brooke Glass Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 228, 161 C. C. A. 264.

Scope of amendments.—Amendments will only be permitted to relate back to the date of filing of the original application, where they can be clearly sustained on the claims and specification as originally made. An enlargement of the original specifications will not be permitted which will interfere with other inventors who have acquired intervening rights. Ficklen v. Baker, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 487.

Amendment for explanation.—The rule is that insertions by way of amendment in the description or drawing, or both, do not hurt the patent, if the insertions are only in amplification and explanation of what was already reasonably indicated to be within the invention for which protection was sought—"something that might be fairly deduced from the original application." Hobbs v. Beach, 180 U. S. 383, 395, 21 S. Ct. 409, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 586; Cleveland Foundry Co. v. Detroit Vapor Stove Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 131 Fed. 853, 857, 68 C. C. A. 233; Proudfit Loose Leaf Co. v. Kalamazoo Loose Leaf Binder Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 230 Fed. 120, 123, 144 C. C. A. 418; Cosper v. Gold, (1911) 36 App. Cas. (D. C.) 302. When we seek to apply this rule in this case, we first observe that the alleged new matter was not only permitted by the Patent Office, but was required, because an element claimed was not shown or sufficiently described. The Patent Office has a strict rule on this subject. It fully recognizes that new matter must not be permitted, and it is constantly engaged in defining what is and what is not new matter. The application of the rule must, of necessity, be more or less arbitrary, and the presumption of correctness which attends Patent Office rulings must apply with especial force to this class of ruling; and most peculiarly is that true when the applicant has only complied with the demands which the Patent Office made. General Electric Co. v. Cooper Hewitt Electric Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 61, 161 C. C. A. 121.

Diligence of applicants.—While work on an independent device does not constitute diligence, it does not necessarily follow that because one applicant has completed his invention within a given time the other will be charged with a lack of diligence if he exceeded that time in perfecting his embodiment of the invention, especially where his embodiment is more complicated than that of the other party. Cragg v. Strickland, (1918) 47 App. Cas. 433.

Reduction to practice.—In an interference the uncorroborated testimony of the junior party of a reduction to practice of the invention of the issue is insufficient to overcome the prior filing date of his adversary. Malcom v. Richards, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 582.

Where an interference involves an improvement in a well-developed art, and it is convincingly established that one of the parties is the prior inventor for the broad subject-matter of the improvement, the more specific counts of the issue should be interpreted in the light of the general disclosure. Burt v. Coats, (1917) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 185.

Sole issue in interference.—To same effect as original annotation, see Wintroath v. Chapman, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 428. Regarding the meaning of "priority," the court said: "Appellees assert that, however this may be, we have no right to consider laches in an interference proceeding; and they cite a number of decisions of this court to the effect that our jurisdiction in such proceedings 'is confined to a determination of the question of priority.' Undoubtedly that is the law. But what is meant by priority? Does it mean priority of conception or of reduction to practice with diligence, or reduction to practice without diligence, or all of these things and more? In determining the question of priority we have considered which party procured from the other the idea of the invention (Milton v. Kingsley, 7 App. D. C. 531); whether there had been a reduction to practice (Stevens v. Seher, 11 App. D. C. 245); lack of reasonable diligence (Paul v. Johnson, 23 App. D. C. 187; Wickers v. McKee, 29 App. D. C. 4); concealment (Methhes v. Burt, 24 App. D. C. 265); existence of reasonable diligence (Yates v. Huson, 8 App. D. C. 93); the effect of constructive reduction to practice (Sherwood v. Drewson, 29 App. D. C. 161); that one party was the agent of another (Milton v. Kingsley, 7 App. D. C. 531; Huebel v. Bernard, 15 App. D. C. 510); and the right of a party to make the claims of the issue (Podlesak v. McInnerney, 26 App. D. C. 399; Wickers v. McKee, 29 App. D. C. 4). Priority in an interference proceeding is the ultimate question for determination; but before it can be reached it may be, and usually is, necessary to decide one or more incidental or ancillary questions, as is shown by the decisions just referred to and others which might be cited."

Burden of proof.—To same effect as original annotation, see McAfee v. Gray, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 237.

Where the applications of the parties to an interference are copending, the junior applicant ordinarily has only the burden of establishing his case by a preponderance of the evidence, and not beyond a reasonable doubt. Luckett v. Staub, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 379.

Adjudication of priority in adverse party.—In an interference proceeding under this section, the adverse party may be adjudged to have the priority of invention and therefore to be entitled to a patent. Bird v. Elaborated Roofing Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 366.

Res judicata.—Where the parties to an interference took no testimony and stipulated that the testimony in a prior case adjudicated between them comprehending the same subject should be used, it was held that the questions of law and fact presented were res judicata. Thompson v. Storrie, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 383.

Effect of dissolution of interference.—An order sustaining a motion to dissolve an interference disposes of the interference, and leaves nothing on which to base a judgment of priority. Field v. Colman, (1917) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 189.

Mandamus to compel vacation of interference order.—Mandamus to compel the commissioner of patents to vacate an order declaring an interference, contrary to the general rule that his discretion in such cases cannot be controlled by mandamus, cannot be granted on the ground that the discontinuance of a prior interference is res judicata as to the present interference; but that defense can be raised and preserved at all stages of the interference proceeding. U. S. v. Newton, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 449.

Nature of proceeding.—To same effect as original annotation, see Central Ry. Signal Co. v. Jackson, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 254 Fed. 103.

Testimony in Patent Office admissible.—According to the decisions in the case of Dover v. Greenwood, reported in 154 Fed. 854 (C. C.), and in 177 Fed. 946 (C. C.), and in Greenwood v. Dover, 194 Fed. 91, 114 C. C. A. 169, the rule in this circuit is (1) that a proceeding in equity under section 4915 is not an appeal, but an original independent proceeding; (2) that testimony taken in an interference proceeding in the Patent Office, and out of which the subject-matter of a bill in equity, brought under section 4915, arises, is not competent as evidence in the equity proceeding, in the absence of proof establishing the right to introduce secondary evidence; (3) that the record of the proceedings in the Patent Office is likewise not competent evidence, except that admissions of parties made in such proceedings may be received, and statements of witnesses made therein may be used for purposes of cross-examination; (4) that a plaintiff may show by the Patent Office proceedings that a judgment of priority has been entered against him for the purpose of showing his right to maintain a bill under section 4915; and (5) that to overcome the presumption that is to be given that judgment the proof must be clear and convincing. Sutton v. Wentworth, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 493, 160 C. C. A. 3.

Necessity of introduction of new evidence.—"In respect of actions like this, solely against the commissioner, the jurisdiction still existing under R. S. § 4915 is, to say the least, a singularity in law making. While the statute exists, jurisdiction must be exercised; but we entirely concur with the court below that, in order to advise or direct the commissioner to issue a patent which he has refused and had his refusal approved by the District Court of Appeals, there must be introduced substantially new and persuasive testimony, not adduced before the tribunals with which we are invited to differ. Here we have nothing but an argument, persuasive to a majority only of this court, and even that argument seems to have been the same throughout this long and tangled litigation. Further, a court appealed to under § 4915 must by the evidence shown it, whether new or old, be very fully and amply persuaded of plaintiff's merits before granting relief." Gold v. Newton, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 824, 166 C. C. A. 270.

Effect of disclaimer.—Where the claimant of a generic invention disclaims as against a patentee of a new form he does not lose his right to claim the genus. Standard Scale, etc., Co. v. Cropp Concrete Machinery Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 666, 168 C. C. A. 60.

Subsequent suit for infringement of valid claims.—A disclaimer with respect to those claims of a patent that have been held invalid by the Supreme Court cannot be said to be so delayed and so evasive in form as to prevent, under this section, a subsequent suit for the infringement of the valid claims, where the Supreme Court decision was rendered on December 11, 1916, and the disclaimer was recorded March 28, 1917, the owners residing in a foreign country, and war-time conditions of communication then prevailing, and where the wording of the disclaimer, though bordering on finesse, cannot be interpreted as giving any rights under the patent greater than may be legitimately obtained under the claims held valid. Minerals Separation v. Butte, etc., Min. Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 336, 39 S. Ct. 496, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 241, 162 C. C. A. 377.

Costs in pending suits.—To same effect as original annotation, see Liquid Carbonic Co. v. Gilchrist Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 54, 165 C. C. A. 652.

Vol. VII, p. 242, sec. 9. [First ed., vol. V, p. 502.]

Jurisdiction of appellate court.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see In re Carvalho, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 584, also holding that the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia is without jurisdiction to review the decision of the commissioner of patents refusing to reinstate an abandoned application for a patent.

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals is without jurisdiction to entertain an appeal in an interference case except from a judgment of priority. Field v. Colman, (1917) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 189.

Scope of appeal.—In an interference, the question whether a prior application of one of the parties constituted an anticipation of the invention of the issue cannot be raised. Lautenschlager v. Glass, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 444.

Conclusiveness of decision of Patent Office.—To same effect as original annotation, see Creveling v. Jepson, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 597; Malcom v. Richards, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 582.

The question of priority in an interference case is one of fact, and where the Patent Office tribunals all agree upon it, their decision will not be disturbed on appeal except for the most persuasive reasons. Jobaki v. Johnson, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 230. To same effect, see Lautenschlager v. Glass, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 443.

Where a patentable novelty has been denied by all of the tribunals of the Patent Office, it is incumbent upon one appealing therefrom to make out a clear case of error to obtain a reversal. In re Kohler, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 373.

5. Nature and Effect (p. 264)

Right to future improvements.—An agreement that an assignment shall cover future improvements does not include an invention of another and different machine accomplishing the same result as that for which the patent was assigned. American Cone, etc., Co. v. Consolidated Wafer Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 335, 159 C. C. A. 429, wherein the court said: "That some of the features are the same is not we think enough; it must appear that the old machine remains enough the same to preserve its identity. Under just what changes that identity would be lost, we cannot say and we need not. Any decision must appear arbitrary, where the test is the vague language of business, and not the precise terminology of logic. We must try rather to assume the posture of the parties at the time, and consider what most men would have thought such language covered. Their test would in some measure have certainly depended upon the extent of the change; they would have recognized that to recast the details of the whole machine might make it a different one, though some features remained in common. Perhaps we can do no more than to say that the extent of these changes in our judgment passes beyond the standard of identity which we think they would have accepted."

Estoppel of assignor.—The assignor is estopped from setting up the invalidity of the patent as to claims made in the original disclosure but not in the application. Foltz Smokeless Furnace Co. v. Eureka Smokeless Furnace Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 847, 168 C. C. A. 193, wherein it was said: "The general rule of estoppel upon the assignor of a patent to deny its validity as against his assignee is too well established to require more than its statement. We see no reason for relaxation of the rule where the subject-matter of the assignment is a duly filed application, which eventuates in a patent. The rejection by the Patent Office of all the claims occurred in April, 1915, and up to the time of the assignment, nearly a year later, the file wrapper does not show any further proceedings. The application is of value only as it may form the basis for a patent grant thereon. Surely it was contemplated that something was here assigned, and plainly it must have been the right to present further claims under the application; for without claims there would be no patent. The salutary rule of estoppel by deed would be much impaired, if, as applied to assignments of applications for patents, it were held to be inoperative as against claims within the scope of the original disclosure, though not made in the application as filed."

Assignment of reserved rights.—Where a patentee gives to a licensee the sole right to enforce the patent and to grant licenses, reserving merely a personal right to make and sell, an assignment of the patent does not carry the reserved right. The only way to harmonize all the contract provisions is to regard the right of the patentees to assign as limited to the bare legal patent title and the right to royalties, accounting, and inspection, and that the words "to themselves" should read "to themselves only." Webster Electric Co. v. Podlesak, (N. D. Ill. 1919) 255 Fed. 907.

IV. LICENSES

5. Operation and Effect (p. 279)

Estoppel of licensee.—To same effect as original annotation, see Martin v. New Trinidad Lake Asphalt Co., (D. C. N. J. 1919) 255 Fed. 93.

Immunity from injunction suits.—"A licensee by the license obtains only immunity from injunction suits brought against him by the patentee or owner." Webster Electric Co. v. Podlesak, (N. D. Ill. 1919) 255 Fed. 907.

Limitation of right to purchase from another.—A railroad company licensed to manufacture and use upon its road patented cars is not liable to pay the royalty for cars purchased from another company having a license to manufacture and sell cars without restriction. The separate contract does not segregate the railroad company from the rest of the world with respect to the right to purchase. Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 316.

II. Who liable for infringement.

V. Recovery.

II. WHO LIABLE FOR INFRINGEMENT (p. 206)

Contributory infringement.—One who makes and sells one element of a patented combination with the intention and for the purpose of bringing about its use in such a combination is guilty of contributory infringement, and is equally liable with him who organizes the complete combination. Salva Waterproof Glue Co. v. Perkins Glue Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 64, 163 C. C. A. 314.

In a suit for infringement of a patent for a fountain pen it appeared that one of the defendants delivered to the other defendant, the day after the patent was granted, and with knowledge that it was expected, several incomplete penholders which were made into the infringing pens. He also expressed an intention to deliver other holders under his contract with the other defendant. It was held that the defendant was guilty of contributory infringement. Barrett v. Sheaffer, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 74, 163 C. C. A. 324.

Corporations with interlocking directors and stockholders.—Community as to officers, directors and stock of two companies would not of itself be sufficient to render one company liable for acts of infringement committed on the premises occupied by another company, but where the evidence, direct and circumstantial, conclusively shows knowledge on the part of the defendant of the infringing acts committed on the premises in question without any repudiation of them by the defendant, and also active procurement by it of and participation by it in such infringing acts, the defendant is liable for infringement. Union Sulphur Co. v. Freeport Tex. Co., (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 634.

Liability of officer of corporation.—"A director of a corporation, who as director by vote or otherwise specifically commands the subordinate of the corporation to engage in the manufacture and sale of an infringing article, is liable individually in an action at law for damages brought by the owner of the patent so infringed. As with other infringers, it is immaterial whether the director knew or was ignorant that the articles manufactured and sold did infringe a patent." Eddy v. Kramer, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 247 Fed. 962.

The doctrine of agency applies to patent infringements, and also the principle that one doing an act which naturally causes another to commit an infringement is responsible for it; and further, that where several persons co-operate in acts of infringement they are joint tortfeasors and as such jointly and severally liable in solido. Union Sulphur Co. v. Freeport Tex. Co., (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 634.

V. RECOVERY (p. 302)

Counterclaim.—In a suit for infringement the defendant by way of counterclaim asked to be relieved from its contract with the plaintiff, for the lease of the patented article, on the ground that such contract was obtained through misrepresentation, and that plaintiff account to defendant for rental paid in consideration thereof. The court said: "Whether the defendant's assent to the contract for the leasing of the forms was obtained through misrepresentation need not be here decided, it being conceded that defendant has used these forms and is continuing to do so to this time; and that he has not surrendered or restored them to the plaintiff, nor offered to do so. By the weight of authority such return or tender is a condition precedent to the filing of a bill in equity for rescission, or its equivalent, the filing of a counterclaim, as in this case." Paramount Hosiery Form Drying Co. v. Moorhead Knitting Co., (M. D. Pa. 1918) 251 Fed. 897.

Measure of damages.—To same effect as original annotation, see Jones v. Sykes Metal Lath, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 91, 165 C. C. A. 501.

I. PLEADING AND PROOF IN GENERAL (p. 310)

No presumption of noninfringement arises from the issue of a patent for the infringing device. Simplex Window Co. v. Hauser Reversible Window Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 919, 161 C. C. A. 37.

Agreement not to contest validity.—An agreement not to contest the validity of a patent does not preclude a party from contending that he does not infringe it, and for that purpose he may refer to the prior act and the file wrappers. Smith v. Southington Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 342, 159 C. C. A. 436.

Estoppel to deny validity.—If the assignor of a patent, estopped to deny its validity, agrees with a third person to furnish money to make and sell a device designed to accomplish the same purpose as, and which is an infringement of, the patented device, such third person thereby becomes bound by the estoppel; and a corporation organized for the purpose of bringing out the new device and putting it on the market, and to which a patent thereon was assigned, is likewise estopped to deny the validity of the patent. All the parties are likewise bound by the rule in the seventh circuit, by the prima facie scope of the patent claims, and the prior art is not admissible in evidence in a suit involving infringement, unless there is ambiguity or uncertainty in the language of the description and claims, and then only so far as necessary to explain such ambiguity. The introduction by the plaintiff of evidence of certain patents earlier and later than the patent in suit, in order to throw some light on the question whether the defendant's invention is the equivalent of the plaintiff's, with the express disclaimer not to waive the estoppel relied upon, is not a waiver of the estoppel. Martin Gauge Co. v. Pollock, (W. D. Ill. 1918) 251 Fed. 295.

In a suit for infringement the plaintiff objected to the consideration of the validity of the patents upon the ground that the defendant, by his contract with the plaintiff, was estopped to deny their validity. It appeared that the defendant rented from the plaintiff a number of the patented articles under a writing, agreeing to pay for the use thereof a rental, or so-styled royalty. The contract also provided: "In any suit or suits which the lessor may institute against the lessee, the said lessee shall be stopped from infringing or attacking the validity of said patents, or any of them." It was held that there was no estoppel. Paramount Hosiery Form Drying Co. v. Moorhead Knitting Co., (M. D. Pa. 1918) 251 Fed. 897, wherein the court said: "This estoppel provision, considered in connection with the preceding portion of the paragraph, must be restricted and limited to the condition therein covered as to payment of royalty or rental, etc. Then, also, it will be noted that the provision applies to the parties in their relation as lessor and lessee, or, in other words, in a suit between them upon the contract. In the case here presented, and now under consideration, the plaintiff elected to treat the defendant as an infringer, not by reason of anything growing out of their relations under the agreement between them, but on account of purchasing and using the Walter Snyder forms which are regarded by plaintiff as an infringement of its monopoly. The action here is one in tort, and not upon the contract, and is therefore not embarrassed by the estoppel here advanced."

Judicial notice.—Courts will take judicial notice of the following, among other matters: (1) All matters of general scientific knowledge; (2) all matters in common use and all matters of common knowledge; (3) such mechanical devices as are of common knowledge among all; (4) the nature of a patented invention. Luten v. Allen, (D. C. Kan. 1918) 254 Fed. 587.

Burden of proof.—Persons suing for infringement are required to substantiate the allegations set forth in their bill, the first and material one of which was that they "were the first, original, and sole inventor of a certain new and useful improvement in the method of ornamenting and preparing roofing," described in the patent, and, having failed to sustain this material allegation, the suit must be dismissed. The date of the patent will not meet this burden where a suit is pending to invalidate the patent. West Coast Roofing, etc., Co. v. Elaborated Ready Roofing Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 249 Fed. 221, 161 C. C. A. 257.

The rule of burden of proof in such cases is so well established and was so fully discussed by the learned trial judge, that elaboration is not necessary. Stated very briefly, it is this: In an attack upon a patent, the patentee may stand on the grant of letters patent, which is prima facie evidence of the patent's validity. In the beginning, no further burden is imposed upon him. The burden of overcoming this evidence of validity by proof of the patent's invalidity because of prior public use and sale, devolves upon the one attacking the patent. This he must sustain by evidence so clear that it leaves no room for doubt. Coffin v. Ogden, 85 U. S. 120, 124, 21 L. ed. 821; Miller v. Handley, (C. C.) 61 Fed. 101; Interurban Co. v. Westinghouse Co., 186 Fed. 166, 108 C. C. A. 298; Morgan v. Daniels, 153 U. S. 120, 14 Sup. Ct. 772, 38 L. ed. 657. If he proves sale of the patented device and use by the public more than two years before the application, by evidence of this character, the statute relieves him from proving the inventor's intention thereby to abandon his invention to the public, and establishes an inference of abandonment of the invention before the grant of the patent, which, unless successfully controverted by the patentee, invalidates the patent subsequently granted. But this inference may be controverted by the patentee, upon whom is then thrown the burden of establishing by full, unequivocal, and convincing proof that such use and sale was not of the completed and commercially operative device subsequently patented, and also that such use and sale was not absolute and unconditional, but was principally and primarily for the purpose of perfecting the incomplete invention by tests and experiments. Wendell v. American Laundry Machinery Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 698, 160 C. C. A. 598.

That the patentee was not the inventor, is an affirmative defense and must be sustained by a fair preponderance of credible evidence. Procter, etc., Co. v. Berlin Mills Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 23.

Oral testimony tending to show prior invention as against existing letters patent is, in the absence of models, drawings, or kindred evidence, open to grave suspicion; particularly if the testimony be taken after the lapse of years from the time of the alleged invention. T. H. Symington Co. v. National Malleable Castings Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 383, 39 S. Ct. 542, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Expert testimony.—In Union Sulphur Co. v. Freeport Tex. Co., (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 634, the court said: "If the evidence be of such a character that the court feels that it is able to render an intelligent and just decision without the assistance of patent experts I know of no principle of law or of common sense restraining the court from discharging its proper functions without requiring what it deems unnecessary. There may be exceptional cases involving such scientific or abstruse problems as to require a court for an enlightened exercise of its functions to have the benefit of witnesses technically known as patent experts, but the law regards substance and not shadow; and where witnesses from their experience and observation are competent to give an intelligent and adequate opinion and explanation of patented process or apparatus their testimony is not to be rejected because they are not labeled experts or hold degrees from institutions of learning."

II. Joinder of causes of action.

IV. Injunctions.

V. Decree and award.

VI. Costs.

VII. Limitation and laches.

II. JOINDER OF CAUSES OF ACTION (p. 332)

An exclusive licensee may join with the owner of the patent in suing an infringer. Davey Tree Expert Co. v. Van Billiard, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 248 Fed. 718.

Persons contracting with infringer.—A municipality which contracts for paving by an infringing process and a surety company which gives bond to indemnify the municipality from liability for infringement are liable with the infringing contractor. Reliance Constr. Co. v. Hassam Pav. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 701, 160 C. C. A. 601.

Patents not owned by all plaintiffs.—In Low v. McMasters, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 255 Fed. 235, the court stated the question and its conclusion as follows: "The real question involved is embraced in the following formulation of the facts and the question arising out of them: Three letters patent have issued, and the defendant has infringed the property rights granted by each patent. One of the patents belongs to A, B, and C. The others belong to A and B. Can A, B, and C maintain a bill based upon the complaint of these three several infringements? . . . Our view is that all the causes of action joined in this bill are joint within the meaning of rule 26, and we are influenced to take this view because the bringing of the bill as it has been brought is in accord with the practice recognized before the promulgation of the present equity rules, and there is nothing in rule 26 which conflicts with the former practice in this respect. Huber v. Myers, (C. C.) 34 Fed. 752. Judge Ray's interpretation of the ruling there made confirms us in the view taken. Kaiser v. Bortel, (C. C.) 162 Fed. 902."

IV. INJUNCTIONS (p. 340)

Discretion of court as to preliminary injunction.—To same effect as original annotation, see Vulcan Soot Cleaner Co. v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 88, 166 C. C. A. 416.

Dissolution of corporate defendant.—A preliminary injunction against a corporate defendant in an infringement suit will not be denied because it has discontinued business, where it still remains in existence for liquidating its business. The injunction will not prejudice the defendant and may serve to guard the interests of the plaintiff. Manton-Gaulin Mfg. Co. v. American Bottle Cap Co., (D. C. Del. 1918) 250 Fed. 865.

Binding power of decree on third person.—A person who is not a party in form to an infringement suit and is not shown to be technically a privy to it, although allied in interest with the defendant therein is not concluded by the decision therein. Taigman v. Desure, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 364, 165 C. C. A. 146; T. L. Smith Co. v. Cement Title Machinery Co., (N. D. Ia. 1918) 249 Fed. 481; Mecanno v. John Wanamaker, New York, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 250, 162 C. C. A. 520.

Supplementary injunction.—A supplementary injunction to meet modifications in the infringing device may in the discretion of the court be issued. Charles Green Co. v. Henry P. Adams Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 485, 159 C. C. A. 539.

Cessation of infringement.—"As to the alleged infringing devices heretofore manufactured by defendants and designated as plaintiff's exhibits A, B, and C, defendants disclaim they were making the same at the date this suit was instituted; hence said structures need not here be further considered, except it may be said such disclaimer, it is thought, will prevent neither the granting of the injunctive relief prayed by plaintiff nor the recovery on an accounting against defendants if one be ordered. Deere & Webber Co. v. Dowagiac Mfg. Co., 153 Fed. 177, 82 C. C. A. 351, and cases cited." Van Kannel Re- volving Door Co. v. Uhrich, (D. C. Kan. 1916) 247 Fed. 344.

Equity will not take jurisdiction where the infringement was slight and ceased before suit and there is no showing of probability of its being recommenced. Munger Laundry Co. v. National Marking Mach. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 144, 164 C. C. A. 256.

Colorable change.—Where the change is only colorable the court may proceed by contempt or issue a supplementary injunction. Gordon v. Turco-Halvah Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 487, 159 C. C. A. 541; Wire Rope Appliance Co. v. Eureka Tool Co., (D. C. Kan. 1919) 256 Fed. 677.

Bond from defendant.—"The plaintiff has also moved that the American Bottle Cap Company 'be ordered to file a bond, with sufficient surety to be approved by the clerk, in a sum not less than ten thousand dollars ($10,000) to secure the payment to the plaintiff company of any execution which may be levied upon the defendant in this suit.' This motion also must be denied. This is a patent cause in which the relief prayed, aside from the recovery of profits and damages, is an injunction against acts of infringement. On the showing which has been made the plaintiff is entitled to a preliminary injunction, but not to an order against the American Bottle Cap Company in invitum for the giving of bond as moved for. After the awarding of a preliminary injunction, if the parties agree upon the giving of bond by the defendant in a given amount, to the end that it may be relieved from the possible hardship of an injunction, the court would not interpose any objection to the carrying into effect of such an arrangement. But such procedure is totally unlike that now proposed by the plaintiff." Manton-Gaulin Mfg. Co. v. American Bottle Cap Co., (D. C. Del. 1918) 250 Fed. 865.

Questions on appeal.—"This court can consider only the question whether the court below erred in finding that there was infringement, and on the appeal from an interlocutory injunction in a patent case an appellate court will go no further than to ascertain whether or not the court below abused discretion in granting the injunction." Wonder Mfg. Co. v. Block, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 748, 161 C. C. A. 658.

V. DECREE AND AWARD (p. 355)

Deduction for losses.—As the infringing sales were of two classes, those creating profits and those carrying losses, the master's inquiry was directed to the amount of profits on the former, and the measure of damages on the latter, or on both. Against the defendants' contention that the complainant was entitled only to net profits on all sales after deducting losses on some from profits on others, the master held, we think correctly, that, as the complainant was not a quasi partner of the infringers, losses incurred by the defendants through their wrongful invasion of the complainant's patent were not chargeable to the complainant. McKee Glass Co. v. H. C. Fry Glass Co., (C. C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 125, 160 C. C. A. 265.

Depreciation of machinery.—An infringer is entitled to credit, in calculating profits, for depreciation in value of machinery used in manufacturing the infringing device. Gordon v. Turco-Halvah Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 487, 159 C. C. A. 541, holding, however, that the evidence was insufficient to establish the amount of the credit claimed on this account.

Commissions paid to salesmen.—Commissions paid to salesmen for selling the infringing article, in addition to salary, are not to be deducted as expense in estimating profits. Lee v. Malleable Iron Co., (E. D. Wis. 1918) 247 Fed. 795. The court said: "The master conceived the situation to present, not a payment of salaries, but in reality a division of profits. The large amount, the terms of corporate resolutions for their contingent award, their progressive increase with increased profits, and their treatment as such dividends or division upon the books, are alone sufficient to support the master's view. The resolutions, if lawful, while authority for their ultimate payment, nevertheless placed no obligation upon the beneficiaries not already comprehended within their contracts for service at stipulated salaries. In my judgment, a good way to test out the status of these payments in respect of cost or profits is to consider whether defendant, as a manufacturer, in endeavoring to make up a yearly budget upon any assumed volume of business, in any aspect of the matter, would have included these payments, or any estimate thereof, as an item of cost of manufacture. Obviously not. The arrangement or plan was but the introduction of the common co-operative idea between the employer and employee, in which the former agreed to give and did give to the latter a percentage of profits, if and when earned. The exceptions to the master's ruling upon this item are overruled."

Expense of branch offices.—The infringer is entitled in computing profits to a deduction of expenses in the guaranty of contracts through branch offices in marketing the infringing article. Expanded Metal Co. v. General Fireproofing Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 247 Fed. 899, wherein it was said: "It may be true, as is now contended, that defendant's business methods were unwise; that, being an Ohio corporation, it had no right to guarantee construction contracts made by a branch office in which its own capital was not invested, or that its expenditures and losses on account thereof were unreasonable and unnecessarily large. The fact remains that such expenditures were made and such losses were incurred, and it is immaterial whether they were made or incurred under a contract to bear the losses, or whether the money was expended or advanced to these branch offices and thereby lost. Defendant is required to account only for the profits actually made by its use of the infringing process. Complainant is not entitled to recover profits which the infringer might or should have made, had it conducted its business in a different manner. Criticism of this item reduces itself to an assertion that defendant's action was illegal; that it was unwise and unnecessary; that, had it acted otherwise, its profits would have been larger, and its losses would have been less; but this does not show that defendant made greater profits than the master has found, or that defendant did not make or sustain these expenditures or losses in a good-faith effort to promote and develop the use and sale of the infringing product in building construction."

Advertising expenses.—An infringer is entitled to credit, in calculating profits, for his expenditures in advertising the infringing device. Gordon v. Turco-Halvah Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 487, 159 C. C. A. 541.

Taxes and insurance are proper credits to the defendant. Oehring v. Fox Typewriter Co. (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 584, 163 C. C. A. 578.

Where it is possible to estimate accurately the portion of the infringer's plant which is devoted to the manufacture of the infringing device, that proportion of the taxes and cost of insurance on the business should be credited in calculating profits. Gordon v. Turco-Halvah Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 487, 159 C. C. A. 541.

Interest.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Oehring v. Fox Typewriter Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 584, 163 C. C. A. 578.

An infringer is not entitled to credit, in the computation of profits, for interest on the capital invested in his business. Expanded Metal Co. v. General Fireproofing Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 247 Fed. 899.

When the amount of capital used by an infringer for the manufacture of the infringing devices is once ascertained, interest is a proper credit. Oehring v. Fox Typewriter Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 584, 163 C. C. A. 578, wherein the court said: "Certainly a merchant cannot correctly determine what his profit is until he knows the amount of his investment together with interest thereon, whether the investment is made out of his own funds or borrowed capital."

"It is now recognized that, where profits are awarded, interest is not allowed until the amount has been judicially determined. On the other hand, interest is allowed from the date when infringer would have paid royalty, if licensed, where the damages are measured by established royalty. It is asserted, however, that the rule respecting interest is not well established in that class of cases where damages are based upon 'reasonable royalty.' We see no valid reason for withholding interest where the damages are based upon a reasonable royalty. In fact, precedent, and not the logic of the situation (Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 8 Sup. Ct. 894, 31 L. ed. 664), is all that prevents the allowance of interest in case of damages based on the infringer's profits. The allowance of interest, and the reasons for such allowance or rejection, have been announced in innumerable decisions where questions analogous in character to patent infringement suits have been under consideration. Such decisions are instructive and in the absence of other authorities may well be accepted as conclusive on the question. In this case the reasonable royalty is fixed, not for a single year, but for a period of ten years, and represents the average royalty for that entire period. It is therefore impossible to determine upon what sum appellant should have paid interest on this basis during any one year. We conclude, however, that interest should run on the amount thus found due from the end of the period." B. F. Goodrich Co. v. Consolidated Rubber Tire Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 617, 163 C. C. A. 611.

Profit on manufacture.—Where an infringer both manufactures and sells the infringing article he is not entitled to a deduction for manufacturing profits. Lee v. Malleable Iron Range Co., (E. D. Wis. 1918) 247 Fed. 795, wherein it was said: "If one who makes is entitled to a gain which shall be figured as an item of cost, why should not a seller likewise insist upon a preliminary seller's profit to be figured at cost? If the defendant can say to the patentee that the real gain never arose until the article was sold, wherefore the patentee should pay this so-called manufacturer's profit, why should not the defendant as seller likewise claim that the infringed articles, if the plaintiff himself had made them, would have to be sold by somebody, therefore a customary seller's profit should be charged to the patentee to reimburse the defendant as an item of selling cost, although it was really a gain?"

Profit not attributable to infringement.—The amount of profits derived from the sale of a device embodying the patent may be allowed, and no deduction is to be made from a comparison with the profits which might have been made by the use of something which would not have infringed. Lee v. Malleable Iron Range Co., (E. D. Wis. 1918) 247 Fed. 795.

Profits exceeding damages.—It is only where the damages exceed the profits made by the infringer that damages can be added to profits. Expanded Metal Co. v. General Fireproofing Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 247 Fed. 899.

Comparison with profits from other devices. An infringer is liable for the entire profit realized from the infringing device and not merely for the difference between those profits and the profits which might have been made by the sale of the device previously used by him. Expanded Metal Co. v. General Fireproofing Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 247 Fed. 899.

Profit resulting from improvement by infringer.—A saving effected by an infringer by the substitution of materials in making the infringing device is not to be deducted from the profits for which it is liable to account. Lee v. Malleable Iron Range Co., (E. D. Wis. 1918) 247 Fed. 795.

Apportionment of profits.—Where but a part of a device is an infringement, the profits due to the incorporation of the patented feature should be apportioned if possible. Clark v. Schieble Toy, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 248 Fed. 276, 160 C. C. A. 354.

Where an invention represented an entire revision of the entire machine and the creation of a new device in which all the operative parts contributed to produce the new result, it was held that there was no case for apportionment, as it was incumbent on the defendant, in any event, to prove what old element, if any, contributed to the profits, which, of course, it was unable to do. Oehring v. Fox Typewriter Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 584, 163 C. C. A. 578.

Royalty as criterion of damages.—The royalty charged by the owner of the patent to persons exploiting the patented device in new territory under license is not conclusive as to the measure of damages for infringement. Reliance Constr. Co. v. Hassam Pav. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 701, 160 C. C. A. 601.

Established royalty.—In Expanded Metal Co. v. General Fireproofing Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 247 Fed. 899, it was held that the evidence showed that a royalty had been established by licenses granted by the complainant and that this royalty was the fair measure of the complainant's damage.

In B. F. Goodrich Co. v. Consolidated Rubber Tire Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 617, 163 C. C. A. 611, it was held that there was evidence in the case to justify the court in its determination to measure appellee's damages on the basis of a reasonable royalty. The court said: "We do not hesitate to say that the findings of the District Court, affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, as to a reasonable royalty in a suit involving the same identical patent, covering practically the same period of time, is entitled to much weight and consideration by this court. Difficulty in determining the reasonable royalty does not alone bar the court from adopting this rule. Dowagiac Mfg. Co. v. Minnesota Plow Co., [235 U. S. 641, 35 S. Ct. 221, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 398]. Such a method of measuring damages doubtless widens the field of investigation, and makes possible a longer hearing; but if the fact determinative of the question here in issue is thereby more certainly established, and more satisfactorily reached, good reason exists for applying the rule."

Royalty as affected by profits.—"Now, if the idea of a reasonable royalty as a measure of damage to a patentee is at all analogous to other situations where the law imports 'reasonableness' as an element, then the degree to which the act of the wrongdoer has been profitable or unprofitable to himself cannot be a controlling test. Wherefore the fact that defendant is shown to have made $47,000 'profits,' apportioned as 'legally attributable' to the embodiment of the invention in the combination structures made by it, cannot limit the proofs in their legitimate tendency—as it may develop—to either a larger or smaller amount as reasonable royalty damage. True, profits actually made may be considered; but that their amount must be taken as the test of reasonableness, or that profitless infringing must negative damage by defeating the exaction of a reasonable royalty by a patentee, is no more possible in measuring damages in respect of infringement, than would be the attempt of a lessee at will or sufferance to limit or defeat reasonable recovery by proving his occupation of the tenement to have resulted in little or no profit to him." Lee v. Malleable Iron Range Co., (E. D. Wis. 1918) 247 Fed. 795.

Willfulness of infringement as increasing damages.—The court is justified in increasing the damages where the infringement was deliberate and intentional and was stubbornly persisted in. Lee v. Malleable Iron Range Co., (E. D. Wis. 1918) 247 Fed. 795 (allowing 20 per cent. increase of damages).

Infringement under advice of counsel.—Where the infringer acted under advice of counsel and there were conflicting decisions as to the validity of the patent the damages should not be trebled. Expanded Metal Co. v. General Fireproofing Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 247 Fed. 899.

VI. COSTS (p. 368)

The allowance of costs on an accounting for infringement rests in the discretion of the court, and while in some instances the courts have considered it proper to require unsuccessful plaintiffs to pay the costs, yet each case must be disposed of upon its own merits. Individual Drinking Cup Co. v. Public Service Cup Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 620, 162 C. C. A. 636.

Cost of minutes of contempt proceeding.—The complainant is entitled to have the cost of the stenographer's minutes of evidence assessed against the defendant in a proceeding to punish the violation of an injunction against infringement. Gordon v. Turco-Halvah Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 487, 159 C. C. A. 541.

VII. LIMITATION AND LACHES (p. 370)

Delay after notice to infringer.—"Another defense is laches. The argument is that plaintiff knew as early as 1905 that defendant was making machines containing removable plates in the form of the Peerless slicer, and offering them for sale as early as 1906. The trouble with this defense is that it does not appear that the Peerless had vertical guides, so as to admit of the plate being vertically lifted from the table. The witness Modjeska admits that the Peerless guides were V-shaped, and the circulars G 1 and G 4 show them to be so. While some of the testimony tends to show that machines like the patents might possibly have been made by defendant about the time the first patent issued, it is not sufficient to prove the fact. It also appears that in 1909 an officer of the plaintiff told Mr. Sayer that he was infringing its patents on certain improvements, including the sharpener, and threatened an infringement suit if Sayer should copy any of plaintiff's improvements. Whether these improvements are covered by the patents in suit is not clear. On the whole, it is not shown that defendant, to its damage, relied on plaintiff's failure to sue, or that it was actually infringing a sufficient length of time before this suit was brought to constitute laches; no outlay or reliance on any act of the plaintiff; no encouraging a sense of security. There is simply a suggestion of facts showing laches; no real proof." U. S. Slicing Mach. Co. v. Wolf, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 249 Fed. 245.

Refusal to file disclaimer.—Where in an infringement suit, several of the plaintiff's claims are held valid and infringed, but a broad generic claim is held invalid and the plaintiffs refuse to file a disclaimer as to it, the court is not authorized under this section to dismiss the bill. Davy Tree Expert Co. v. Van Billiard, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 781, wherein the court, in discussing the plaintiff's liability for such refusal, said: "After due consideration had, we are of opinion the penalty imposed by the court below upon the plaintiff for not filing a disclaimer cannot be justified. Congress, by R. S. sec. 4922, has provided a statutory penalty on a patentee for failure to enter a disclaimer, namely, that unless he does so before he brings suit he cannot recover costs. But Congress has nowhere enacted that a refusal to enter a disclaimer should be punished by a dismissal of a patentee's bill. Of the plaintiff's right to review in this court the decree of a District Court adjudging a claim of his patent invalid, there can be no question. But if the order of the court forcing the plaintiff to file a disclaimer had been followed, it would have resulted in the extinction of the claim, and consequently of the right of the plaintiff to review in this court the question of the validity of such claim which he had been thus forced to disclaim, for it is quite evident that if the plaintiff once filed his disclaimer, that was the end of his claim, and he never could raise the question of its validity in the court below, in this court on appeal, or in any other jurisdiction. The claim simply would not exist. Moreover, the practical effect of the decree below was that, while the opinion of the court held certain claims of the patent valid, dismissal of the bill prevented the defendant contesting the correctness of that conclusion."

Vol. VII, p. 375. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 286.]

Effect on prior jurisdiction.—The act granting jurisdiction to the Court of Claims in the matter of claims for infringement of patents subsequent to its passage did not disturb the prior jurisdiction of cases involving patents where the claim was based upon contract, nor did said act obliterate the distinction between actions based upon contract and actions for infringement. E. W. Bliss Co. v. U. S., (1917) 53 Ct. Cl. 47.

Right of licensee to sue.—The act authorized suit by the owner, and a mere licensee who is not an assignee cannot maintain an action thereunder for infringement. E. W. Bliss Co. v. U. S., (1917) 53 Ct. Cl. 47.

Presumption from experiments by government.—Where the government conducts experiments with certain regularly patented devices to ascertain their value with a view to the adoption of one of them in the manufacture of ordnance and does not attempt to construct a device of its own, the presumption arises that the government intended to use the property of another and to make payment to the lawful owner for its use. Bethlehem Steel Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 348.

Contract implied from use.—Where the government uses a patented invention with the consent and express permission of the owner and does not repudiate the title of such owner, an implied contract to pay a reasonable compensation for such use arises. Bethlehem Steel Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 348.

No contract implied.—No contract by the United States to pay for the use of a patented device will be implied unless the proof connects the government with the use in such a way as to show a recognition of the title of the patentee and an intention to pay for the use. The mere fact that Congress directs that work shall proceed in accordance with certain plans adopted by the contractor, who had a license to use the patented device, is not sufficient to imply a contract. Haupt v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 591.

Invention by employee.—A suit against the United States for compensation for the use of an invention perfected by the inventor during a period when he was in the government employ, but in hours when he was not actually on duty for the government, is excluded from the jurisdiction conferred upon the Court of Claims by the third proviso that it shall not apply to any device discovered or invented by a government employee "during the time of his employment or service." Moore v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 487, 39 S. Ct. 322, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, af- firming (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 532), wherein the court said: "The appellant was not actually in the employ of the government when he made his claim by bringing suit, but the Court of Claims dismissed his petition for want of jurisdiction on the ground that it showed on its face that the device was discovered during the time he was in the employment or service of the government, and that therefore the case fell within the third proviso of the act. This decision is so obviously right that discussion of it would be superfluous. The act of Congress must be read 'according to the natural and obvious import of the language, without resorting to subtle and forced construction for the purpose of either limiting or extending its operation.' U. S. v. Temple, (1881) 105 U. S. 97, 99 [26 U. S. (L. ed.) 967, 968]. No matter what the appellant may have done prior to May, 1914, it was in that month, he avers, that he completed his invention, and during the whole of that month he was in the employment or service of the Government. To give the effect contended for to the allegation that the appellant confined his work on his invention to the hours when he was not actually on duty, but while he was in the Government employ, would be to amend the statute, not to construe or interpret it."

The test of invention in design patents is precisely like that in mechanical, and the question is whether the design in question was beyond the powers of the ordinary designer to combine existing elements into the design in question. Goudy v. Hansen, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 782; F. I. A. T. v. A. Elliott Ranney Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 973, 162 C. C. A. 171.

Aesthetic value.—A drinking glass with a bulge a short distance from the top was held not to be patentable under this section. Ferd Mesamer Mfg. Co. v. Pick, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 894, 164 C. C. A. 110.

Novelty.—On the question whether a three-leaf clover design for embroidered lace lacked novelty, the court said: "The evidence shows that three-leaf clover designs were used in making laces for a number of years prior to the advent of the plaintiff's design. However, this does not in itself negative novelty in the plaintiff's design. Such earlier clover leaf patterns would have to be substantially identical in appearance to that of the plaintiff's in order to anticipate or forestall it." Inflexible Co. v. Megibow, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 251 Fed. 924.

The design of a font of type was held in Goudy v. Hansen, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 782, 159 C. C. A. 640, not to possess such novelty, beauty or attractiveness as to be the subject of a design patent.

In holding an electric light design to be without invention, the court, in Bayley v. Standard Art Glass Co., (C. C. A. 2nd Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 478, 161 C. C. A. 436, said: "It is urged in support of the decree below that the novelty of a design is to be tested as a whole and that invention is persuasively shown by the commercial success of 'Equalite.' Undoubtedly a design must be viewed in its entirety, its effect is optical, and it can no more be tested piecemeal than can a picture (Dobson v. Dornan, 118 U. S. 10, 6 Sup. Ct. 946, 30 L. Ed. 63); but novelty is not invention, nor can aid be found in the sales of 'Equalite.' That word covers the light and the fitting thereof, all the material as fastened together; and the evidence wholly fails to show whether success is due to the mechanical excellence of the whole article, or the pleasing shape of its 'canopy and bowl,' which (as shown above) has no necessary connection with the mechanics of the contrivance."

Similar designs.—Sameness of appearance to the eye of an ordinary observer, not mere difference of lines or slight variations in configuration, is the test that determines identity of design on the question of infringement. Inflexible Co. v. Megibow, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 251 Fed. 924.

1918 Supp., p. 578.

Purpose and effect of act.—In Foundation Co. v. Underpinning, etc., Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 374, in denying an injunction against the use of a patented device on government work, it was said: "It may fairly be assumed that the amendatory act of July 1, 1918, was enacted to overcome the delays and difficulties which confronted the government in the use of patented articles and which were still possible under the act of 1910, as that act had been construed by the Supreme Court."

Comparing the act with that of 1910 the court said: "These important differences at once appear: (1) 'Used by the United States' is enlarged to (a) used by and for and (b) manufactured by and for; (2) such owner 'may recover reasonable compensation' against the United States, with no limitation upon the right to sue or recover against the infringing contractor, manufacturer, or other persons, is changed to confining 'such owner's remedy' to a suit against the United States for the recovery, not only of reasonable compensation, but of his 'entire compensation.'"

"In the case at bar, which is quite typical, one provision of the original proposals and specifications, 'because of the urgent need for the early completion of the building,' makes time an element in the consideration and determination of the award of the contract, and probably one of the reasons for the enactment of the act of July 1, 1918, was to obviate delays which injunctive relief would occasion.

"The sovereign power, therefore, which cannot be sued without its consent, has decided to protect itself by treating such a situation as that at bar as a claim, in effect, against itself for full money compensation, and has thus created, not only a cause of action against itself for reasonable compensation, but for whatever may be 'entire' compensation.

"Whether plaintiff has a cause of action against defendant is, however, not here for decision at the moment. It is, however, clear that the act of July 1, 1918, was intended to supply the inadequacies of the previous act, and gives complete remedy against the United States, in order to prevent delays injurious to the government which necessarily follow the restraining of any person from carrying out a contract to furnish patented articles, devices, et al., manufactured for or to be used by or for the United States."

PENAL LAWS

Vol. VII, p. 396, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 405.]

IV. ADHERING TO ENEMY; GIVING AID AND COMFORT (p. 412).

Concurrence of intent and act.—In addition to obviously necessary elements, treason embraces the existence both of a state of mind and the commission of overt acts, and prescribes how the latter shall be proven. The latter requirement demands a trial ruling and is not a demurrer question or in any proper sense a question of pleadings. Treason, as we are now concerned with it, assumes, as the proper attitude of all who are subject to this law, that of being well disposed toward the United States and of being its well wisher, and brands as traitor one who adheres to its enemies and who also levies war upon the United States, or who, in adhering to its enemies, gives those enemies aid and comfort. It is conceivable that a defendant may have this condemned attitude of mind or be what is termed "traitor at heart," and yet not expose himself to the charge of legal treason because he has committed no traitorous act. It is also conceivable that one under the domination of folly or of factional feeling or directed by a perverted view of what he is doing, or even a wrong-headed conscience, may do what would otherwise be traitorous acts, and yet not expose himself to that charge because the acts, although carrying all the consequences of traitorous acts, were done without traitorous purpose or intent. Such a man plays the part of a traitor, but is not a traitor at heart. U. S. v. Werner, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 247 Fed. 708.

Overt act.—It is not necessary that the overt act charged should be the accomplishment of the design of the conspiracy. Averment and proof of the conspiracy with any overt act in furtherance of it is sufficient, whether the result of the conspiracy was to accomplish the illegal end or not. Phipps v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 879, 164 C. C. A. 95.

Words as treason.—In U. S. v. Werner, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 247 Fed. 708, it was said by way of dictum: "It is confidently asserted that mere words, no matter how vilely disloyal nor how clearly they evidence 'the black heart of a traitor,' if accompanied by no other overt act than their utterance or publication, cannot be made the basis of a charge of treason. Such seditious utterances are misdemeanors at common law, and, of course, properly made statutory offenses; but the point made is they are not treason. For this the expression of the opinion of Judge Nelson in his charge to a grand jury, as reported in 5 Blatchf. 550, Fed. Cas. No. 18,271, is quoted as authority. The quotation is:

"Words oral, written or printed, however treasonable, seditious or criminal of themselves, do not constitute an overt act of treason, within the definition of the crime."

"We do not feel called upon at this time to announce in advance of trial what a proper trial ruling upon the suggested question would be. This can be made only after the evidence is in, and the whole scope and effect of the overt acts, which are charged in the indictment to be treasonable in intent, purpose, and effect, is known. Judgment can then be pronounced whether treason has been proven, if the facts as disclosed are found by the jury against the defendants. It is, of course, clear that if the law of treason be as thus stated, and (for the purpose of presenting the point upon which this demurrer is ruled) we will assume it is, and if, at the close of the case, the United States has proven against the defendants only the utterance of treasonable sentiments, the law of the case must be so pronounced. To so pronounce it now is to find, not only the law to be as stated, but to find also the charge to involve nothing more than the mere utterances quoted. The evidence might disclose more than this and enough more to justify a finding of the guilt of treason.

"The opinion expressed by Judge Nelson will bear the construction that although words, so long as they are mere words, 'do not constitute an act of overt treason,' yet, when 'printed in relation to an act or acts which if committed with a treasonable design might constitute such overt act,' they may be part of the treasonable act, in addition to being evidence of treasonable intent.

Letters written, or oral messages sent, to convey information of value to an enemy, could not be deemed otherwise than as treasonable, whether the former were sent by post or telegraph, and the latter by a messenger or a shout. If sent by the wireless operation of a publication, which would make the facts known through making them notorious, the essential character of the act would be in no wise changed. The ingenuity of the criminal cannot be permitted to hide the criminality of his act."

Sufficiency of indictment.—An indictment is good on demurrer which charges that the defendants "did feloniously, unlawfully, willfully, and maliciously conspire together to seize, take, and possess certain property of the United States, contrary to the authority thereof, which said property consisted of certain arms, ammunitions, and equipment under the control of certain military forces of the United States stationed in Wise county, Virginia, and other places," and that they recruited soldiers "with the intent of engaging in armed hostility against the United States of America by attacking with force and arms the duly enlisted and organized military forces of the said United States." Phipps v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 879, 164 C. C. A. 95.

Evidence—Acts of co-conspirator.—In a prosecution under this section for a conspiracy to prevent, hinder, and delay by force the execution of the Selective Service Act (9 Fed. Stat. Ann. 1136), when a conspiracy has been shown, the act of one conspirator in furtherance of the common purpose is evidence against all, and this is so though the conspirator committing the act is not a defendant in the case being tried. Isenhouer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 842, 168 C. C. A. 188.

Sufficiency.—In Phipps v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 879, 164 C. C. A. 95, the evidence was held sufficient to show that the defendant was guilty of a violation of this section in participating with another person in listing and pledging men under oath for the enterprise of resisting the military authorities by blowing up bridges and seizing arms in the possession of soldiers.

ner to withdraw assets from the firm and conceal them, after his individual bankruptcy, from his trustee. Malvin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 449, 164 C. C. A. 373.

l. Violation of Postal Laws (p. 544)

Bribery of post-office official.—In Kirkwood v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 825, 168 C. C. A. 171, wherein it appeared that a detective bribed a post office official, it was held that the evidence was insufficient to show that the person who employed the detective agency conspired with him.

Use of mails to defraud.—Under a charge of conspiracy to use the mails to defraud it is not necessary to prove that the person defrauded has been, in the formation of the original conspiracy, selected as the victim. Shea v. U. S., (C. C. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 433, 163 C. C. A. 451.

p. Setting on Foot Military Enterprise (new)

Offense by single individual.—A single individual may set on foot a military expedition in violation of section 13 of the Penal Laws, and since the offense itself does not require a plurality of agents persons combining in its commission may be prosecuted under this section for conspiracy to commit such offense. U. S. v. Ram Chandra, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 254 Fed. 635.

q. Attacking Vessel with Intent to Plunder (new)

Jurisdiction of offense.—An indictment may be sustained for conspiracy to attack a vessel with intent to plunder on proof of the placing in the vessel of bombs designed to sink it in midocean, the attack being considered as taking place where the offender performs the last conscious act in whose train in the course of things he expects the loss to follow. Daeche v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 566, 162 C. C. A. 582.

In Wierse v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 435, 164 C. C. A. 359, it was held that the evidence was sufficient to show a conspiracy to sink a German merchant ship interned in the waters of the United States.

r. Violation of Selective Service Act (new)

Conspiracy to aid and abet.—What the count under consideration seeks to charge is plain enough, viz., it is an offense against the United States to evade the requirements of the Selective Service Act, therefore it is another offense under section 37 to conspire so to evade; but everyone who evades being a criminal, everyone who counsels evasion is also a criminal, under section 332, and those who unite for the purpose of so counselling are conspirators, and as such liable to the pains and penalties of section 37, though the wrongdoing is only reached by combining sections 37 and 332 to define the nature of the crime and pointing to the Service Act to discover the offense, which is the object of the criminal conspiracy.

It is said this goes beyond the law, and charges the accused with "conspiring to do something which is not made a crime by" the sixth section of the Service Act. Upon reason, we perceive no ground for the assertion that the offense which is the ultimate object of the conspiracy must be found in a single enactment; all conspiracies, whether to effect directly or by a procurement the most devious the commission of an offense against the nation, are essentially alike, and the very object of section 332 was to make a principal offender out of (inter alios) one who contrived to have another commit a crime which the contriver was not intending himself to run the danger of. If the contrivance takes the form of that mental combination for a common purpose which is conspiracy at common law, and is accompanied by the necessary overt act, it makes (under sections 37 and 332) no difference whether the object is to be attained directly or through others; and to say that the object is not, e. g., to evade the Service Act, but to procure or counsel others so to evade, is no more than juggling with words. Frama v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2nd Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 28, 166 C. C. A. 356.

III. CONSPIRACY TO DEFAUD

1. Not Limited to Property Rights (p. 545)

Fraudulent clearance for vessel.—A conspiracy to obtain a clearance by false manifests and false statement of destination is one to "defraud" the United States. Hamburg American Steam Packet Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2nd Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 747, 163 C. C. A. 79.

The word "port" is used to designate a place where ships are accustomed to load and unload goods, or take on or let off passengers, and where persons and merchandise are allowed to pass into and out of the realm, and does not mean a place on the high seas, where ships are not accustomed to stop. But persons who, in violation of R. S. sections 4197-4201 (see vol. 9, p. 296 et seq.), requiring clearances of vessels to state the destinations of their cargoes, obtain clearances for vessels by statements that their cargoes are destined for certain named ports, whereas they are intended for German warships on the high seas, are guilty under this section of a conspiracy to defraud the United States, whether or not the German warships are to be regarded as ports. Hamburg-American Steam Packet Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 747, 163 C. C. A. 79.

Fraudulently securing approval to application of Chinese person.—It is an offense under this section for two or more persons to conspire to defraud the government by fraudulently securing the approval of the Department of Labor of an application by a Chinese person, who desires to go abroad temporarily, for an investigation in advance of his departure of his status. U. S. v.

Fung Sam Wing, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 254 Fed. 500.

4. Intent (p. 546)

A conspiracy to obtain a clearance by presenting to the collector of customs sworn manifests falsely stating the destination is with "corrupt intent," though the purpose for which the clearance was desired, viz., the avoidance of capture by the vessels of a belligerent, was not of itself unlawful. Hamburg-American Steam Packet Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir 1918) 250 Fed. 747, 163 C. C. A. 79; holding further that it was not necessary that the parties should know of the illegality of their acts and that it was immaterial that the agents who swore to the manifests believed them to be true.

5. Impairing Lawful Function of Governmental Department (p. 547)

Conspiracy to prevent registration under Selective Service Act.—In Firth v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 36, 165 C. C. A. 56, an indictment for conspiracy to obstruct registration, it was said: "Counsel earnestly argued that, since the citizens who were called to register for military service had not commenced any service to the government, exhortation or persuasion to them not to register was not an obstruction of a function of the government. It is too plain for argument that preparation for war by registration for military service is as much a function of the government as the actual waging of war."

This section is applicable only to conspiracies, and therefore does not cover the case of one, acting alone, who induces another, subject to the provisions of the Selective Service Act, to fail to register, etc. U. S. v. Prieth, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 251 Fed. 946.

IV. OVERT ACTS

1. Necessary to Complete Offense (p. 550)

At common law.—To same effect as original annotation, see McGinniss v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 621.

Under the statute.—To same effect as original annotation, see McGinniss v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 621; U. S. v. McHugh, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 253 Fed. 224.

"In the charge of conspiracy at common law, the unlawful combination was said to be the crime, and it was not necessary to aver or to prove an overt act. Section 37 has gone beyond such rigid abstraction and prescribes as necessary to the offense not only the unlawful conspiracy but that one or more of the parties must do an act to effect its object, and provides that, when such act is done, all the parties to such conspiracy become liable. Hyde v. United States, 225 U. S. 347, 32 Sup. Ct. 793, 56 L. Ed. 1114, Ann. Cas. 1914A 614." McGinniss v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 621.

2. Act of One Act of All (p. 551)

The overt act of one conspirator is the act of all.—To same effect as original annotation, see Hamburg-American Steam Packet Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 747, 163 C. C. A. 79.

5. Nature and Quality of Act (p. 552)

Any act designed to effectuate the purpose is sufficient. In Collier v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 328, 166 C. C. A. 498, in construing this portion of the statute, the court said: "To complete the crime denounced by the statute there must be some action in addition to the mental one of jointly agreeing or assenting to participate in the commission of the crime. Nothing in the language of the statute indicates an intention to require that that additional action be calculated or have a tendency to accomplish the object of the conspiracy. It is enough if it is done with the purpose or intention of putting the unlawful agreement into operation, whether it is or is not effective towards that end."

VII. JURISDICTION AND VENUE (p. 556)

Venue of federal prosecution.—To same effect as fourth paragraph of original annotation, see Easterday v. McCarthy, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 651, 168 C. C. A. 45, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 250 Fed. 800.

VIII. INDICTMENT

1. In General

a. Joinder of Offenses (p. 558)

Indictment not double.—An indictment for a conspiracy to aid persons liable to the Selective Draft to evade the duties prescribed is not rendered double by an averment in general terms that the conspiracy was also "to defraud the United States." Sugar v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 79.

c. Requisites and Sufficiency, in General (p. 559)

To same effect as second paragraph of original annotations, see Jelke v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir 1918) 255 Fed. 264, 166 C. C. A. 434.

2. Charging the Conspiracy

a. Sufficiency in General (p. 560)

An indictment attempting to charge conspiracy is sufficient if it follows the language of the statute and contains a sufficient statement of an overt act to effect the object of the conspiracy, excepting where the object of the conspiracy is in itself lawful, and in such case the means must be set forth with such particularity as to disclose their illegality and the intended criminal intent, and except also those cases where the conspiracy is to defraud the government in a manner that would not permit of the defendants being fairly and reasonably informed of the character of the offense without such detailed statement of the means and the time and place being set forth. The antecedent crime, if any, which is the end and object of the conspiracy, need not be described with the same particularity in the conspiracy charge as in an indictment where the crime itself and not the conspiracy to commit it is the offense charged. Jelke v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 264, 166 C. C. A. 434.

d. Names, Dates and Place (p. 562)

Place.—To same effect as original annotation, see Vane v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 28, 165 C. C. A. 438.

3. Charging Overt Acts (p. 563)

In general.—The indictment need not show in what manner the overt act charged would tend to accomplish the object of the conspiracy. De Lacy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 625, 161 C. C. A. 535, L. R. A. 1918E. 1011.

4. For Conspiracy to Commit Offense

c. Description of Offense Contemplated (p. 567)

To same effect as original annotation, see U. S. v. Rosenwasser, (E. D. N. Y. 1919) 225 Fed. 233; Jelke v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 264, 166 C. C. A. 434.

k. Obstructing the Mail (p. 571)

Conspiracy to rob mail.—In Vane v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 28, a conspiracy to rob the custodian of certain mail matter was held to be sufficient though it did not (1) state with technical accuracy the relationship of the named custodian to the mail; (2) specify the nature of the mail matter or its destination; (3) allege that the defendants knew the mail was part of the United States mail; (4) allege intent other than by the general averment of wilfulness, or (5) allege the place of the performance of the conspiracy.

5. For Conspiracy to Defraud

c. Defrauding of Internal Revenue (p. 582)

In Jelke v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918), 255 Fed. 264, 166 C. C. A. 434, it was held that in a prosecution for a conspiracy to defraud the United States of the special tax imposed by section 8 of the Oleomargarine Act (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. 191), the failure of the indictment to negative the exception found in section 16 of the act did not subject it to demurrer. The court said: "The correct rule is laid down in United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 163 Fed. 519, 520, 90 C. C. A. 329, 330, as follows: 'The first of these [objections] is that the plaintiff does not negative the matter of the exception created by the proviso to section 6 of the Act of March 2, 1893, as amended by the Act of April 1, 1896, which gives the right of action for the penalty. This objection must fail, because it is opposed to the settled rule that an exception created by a proviso or other distinct or substantive clause, whether in the same section or elsewhere, is defensive, and need not be negated by one suing under the general clause.'

i. Influencing Official Conduct (p. 591)

An indictment alleging a conspiracy by an army officer and another to defraud the United States was held sufficient in U. S. v. Gouled, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 239, wherein the court, in passing upon the question of the particularity of the allegations of the indictment, said: "The offense charged in this case being conspiracy to defraud the United States government, entered into between an officer in the United States army, the defendant, Felix Gouled, and another, and the allegations of the indictment charging specifically that the conspiracy provided for its accomplishment the procuring of contracts which were to be submitted to and passed upon by Vaughan, the defendant officer, he at the time having a pecuniary interest in the same through the arrangements to be made in pursuance of the conspiracy, and the indictment further charging that the said Vaughan was to receive money 'with the intent of influencing his decision and action, and that of other officers in question, in the consideration and acceptance, the letting and awarding contracts for the manufacture of garments for the United States army,' the criticism to which the indictment is subject is not that of too little, but perhaps of too great, particularity. Certainly it would have been a sufficient indictment, had it merely alleged an agreement that Vaughan was to obtain an interest in garment contracts which it was his duty to pass upon as a representative of the government. The fact that the indictment, in much greater detail than the law requires, sets up the procedure which the conspirators agreed to adopt, and with far greater minutiae than necessary sets out the series of overt acts by which the conspiracy was to be effected, cannot enlarge the rights of the defendant."

IX. EVIDENCE

5. Variance (p. 595)

"The doing by one only of the parties to a previously formed conspiracy of an act to effect its object is as effective to complete the offense as the doing of that act by all of the conspirators. There being no difference in legal effect between the doing by one of the conspirators of the alleged act to effect the object of the conspiracy and the doing of that act by all of the conspirators, such a variance between allegation and proof as the one in question cannot properly be regarded as material." Hardy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 284.

I. Construction and application in general.

2. "Officer of the United States."
4. "Official function."

I. CONSTRUCTION AND APPLICATION IN GENERAL

2. "Officer of the United States" (p. 604)

Member of local draft board.—In U. S. v. Bordonaro, (W. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 477, the court, in holding that a member of a local draft board was "an officer of the United States" within the meaning of this section, said: "The members of local boards appointed for carrying out the provisions of the Selective Draft Act are appointed by the President, and it is entirely immaterial that the appointments are made upon the recommendations of the governors of the various states in which the appointees perform their duties. The act in terms authorizes and empowers the President to designate local boards upon the recommendations of the governors of the states, and, furthermore, to utilize the services of officers and agents of the several states in the execution of the act. Indeed, the act substantially provides that any and all persons designated and appointed under the rules and regulations prescribed by the President, regardless of whether they are appointed by the governor, or any officer of any state, are required to perform their duties as ordered and directed by the President. Under the act, the President was specifically authorized to establish and create exemption boards, such boards to be appointed by him and to consist of three or more members, the boards to have power to determine questions of exemption under the act. Such provisions, in my judgment, support the view of the government that a member of a draft board is an officer of the United States, under article 2, § 2, of the Constitution, and, in any event, under the Selective Draft Act is required to perform an official duty for the United States, and is therefore a person acting in an official function within the meaning of section 39 of the Criminal Code."

4. "Official Function" (p. 604)

A baggage porter employed by a railroad under federal control is acting in an "official function" within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Krichman, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 974. Regarding the construction of the term "official function," Hand, J., said: "It must be conceded that the section would as well cover the case if the words 'official function' were omitted, and that it is something of a strain upon the ordinary use of language to speak of a baggage porter's duties as 'official.' Yet the business of operating a railway is nothing more than that of moving persons and things from one place to another, and a baggage porter actually performs a part of that movement. It is quite impossible to establish any consistent line, based upon the importance of his duties, which will make them any the less 'official.' Nobody, I should think, would say that a traffic manager had no official functions, or indeed a freight dispatcher, or a ticket seller. At least about them I can see no plausible doubt. . . . If we look at the purpose of the section, there seems to me every reason not to draw any line based upon the supposed inaptitude of the words 'official function.' The section is full of verbiage, no doubt, but its very presence shows its desire for comprehension. The draftsmen certainly wished to include all efforts by corruption to impede the success of the United States in any of its enterprises. All such enterprises are official as soon as the United States lawfully undertakes them, and any interference with them, by debauching those on whom any part of their execution is imposed, is a prejudice to the United States, whether the impediment be grave or trivial. This result is the evil against which the statute is clearly aimed, and it seems to be covered by the use of a phrase like 'official function,' without undue violence to common use. Indeed, if the importance of the duty delegated be a test, the custody and correct dispatch of valuable baggage is certainly not a trivial function."

Arrest of deserter.—Where in the year 1918 habeas corpus proceedings were instituted to effect the release from the custody of the sheriff of one charged with being a deserter from the United States army, the court did not err in dismissing the proceedings; it not appearing on the face of the petition that the party alleged to be deprived of his liberty and unlawfully detained in custody was not in fact a deserter. Where one is a deserter from the army of the United States, it is lawful for any sheriff or his deputy, constable, town marshal, and certain other officers to arrest such deserter, hold him in custody, and deliver him to the proper military authorities, and they can summarily effect this arrest. And where the custody of the person alleged to be thus detained is taken in effectuating these provisions of the United States statute, it is not unlawful. Huff v. Watson, (Ga. 1919) 99 S. E. 307.

Sugar requisitioned by the government under the Act of Aug. 10, 1917, ch. 53, sec. 10 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 185), is within this section. Thompson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 616.

Property in transportation by express company under government control under Act

March 21, 1918 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 757), is within this section. U. S. v. Kambeitz, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 247.

Property of Indian.—A person who steals property belonging to an Indian, who is under the guardianship of the United States, is not guilty of a violation of this section. Couture v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 525. Commenting on whether such property might be regarded as "property of the United States" within the meaning of this section, the court said: "It must be conceded, we think, that the horse stolen from the possession of Takes-the-Shield was not the property of the United States within the meaning of section 47 of the Penal Code. Conceding that larceny may be committed from a trustee in possession of personal property, it does not help the case of the prosecution for two reasons. The horse was not in the possession of the United States if they were trustees when it was stolen, and no statute of the United States punishes the stealing of property from the United States when they simply occupy the position of guardian towards the owner thereof. The civil cases cited by the prosecution, where the courts have maintained suits by the United States to protect the property of Indians, have no application, because in those cases the court having jurisdiction has the whole field of law and equity to which it may resort. We are therefore of the opinion that, if the indictment charged the stealing of United States property, the proof failed. If it alleged that the property was held in trust by the United States, then the proof did not show an offense punishable under the laws of the United States."

Clerk of District Court.—Notwithstanding the provisions of section 99, infra, this section is applicable to the embezzlement of court funds by a clerk of a United States District Court. U. S. v. Dodge, (S. D. Fla. 1918) 251 Fed. 737.

Vol. VII, p. 652, sec. 99. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 431.]

Clerk of District Court.—See annotation to section 97, supra, under this heading.

I. HISTORY AND SCOPE (p. 671)

Perjury in bankruptcy proceeding.—False swearing in a proceeding in bankruptcy is punishable under section 29b (2) of the Bankruptcy Act and not under section 125 of the Penal Code. There can only be one prosecution and conviction for one offense, and Congress undoubtedly was of the opinion that false swearing in bankruptcy proceedings is not equal in enormity to the crime of perjury, as the punishment for false swearing in a proceeding in bankruptcy is less severe, and the time within which the prosecution must be instituted two years less than that for the crime of perjury under section 125 of the Penal Code. Rosenthal v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 684, 160 C. C. A. 584.

V. PENDENCY OF CAUSE (p. 690)

Under this statute, if the unlawful act, done with reference to a particular cause pending or contemplated to be brought before a United States court, does not obstruct the administration of justice therein, no offense is committed, although the evil intent of the unlawful act may militate against the administration of justice in some other cause. Shackelford v. Com., (Ky. 1919) 214 S. W. 788.

Aiding fugitive after escape.—When the physical control of officers over a prisoner has been ended by flight beyond immediate active pursuit, the escape is complete. After that aid to the fugitive is not aiding his escape within the meaning of this section. Orth v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 566, 165 C. C. A. 16. To same effect, see (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 569, 165 C. C. A. 19.

Indictment.—An indictment charging the defendants with conspiring to aid and abet the escape of certain persons, arrested and held in custody as enemy aliens pursuant to an order of the President, need not aver that such imprisoned persons are enemy aliens, and where it alleges the sending of several letters as overt acts, it need not set them forth either verbatim or in substance. De Lacy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 625, 161 C. C. A. 535, L. R. A. 1918E. 1011. The court said: "A demurrer was interposed to the indictment, one of the grounds of which was that it was not alleged therein that said Von Schack and Bopp were alien enemies of the United States, and it is now contended that for the omission of that allegation the indictment is fatally defective. The contention cannot be sustained. In charging a conspiracy to accomplish an unlawful rescue, it is not necessary that the charge go further than the language of the statute which defines the offense. Section 141 of the Criminal Code provides for the punishment of anyone who shall rescue or attempt to rescue from the custody of any officer any person arrested upon a warrant or other process issued under the provisions of any law of the United States, or who shall aid, abet, or assist any person so arrested to escape from the custody of such officer. The indictment charges, in the language of this section, that Von Schack and Bopp were arrested and confined by virtue of an order issued by the President under the provisions of Rev. Stats., § 4067 et seq., and that they were arrested as alien enemies. Commonwealth v. Malloy, 119 Mass. 347; Commonwealth v. Lee, 107 Mass. 207; Haupt v. State, 100 Ark. 409, 140 S. W. 294, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 690; People v. Murray, 57 Mich. 396, 24 N. W. 118; State v. Sutton, 170 Ind. 473, 84 N. E. 824; Smith v. State, 76 Ala. 69."

Indictment.—The indictment need not allege that the person threatened was in fact guilty of an offense. Roberts v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 873, 160 C. C. A. 631.

Indictment sufficiently specific.—The offense is charged in the language of the statute, with the added detail that the defendants charged Yarborough with having violated the White Slave Act. The defendants are also charged with having committed fourteen separate and distinct overt acts to effect the object of the conspiracy. We are of opinion that the count sufficiently states the material circumstances of the offense. It clearly charges the illegal act complained of; that is to say, the conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, and the requisite fraudulent intent—states the date and place of the commission of the act charged, and the statutory offense which the defendants charged Yarborough with having committed, and the demand for money under a threat of informing, and as a consideration for not informing, against him. There is no suggestion that there was a want of knowledge of the crime charged against the defendants, or of any surprise concerning the same upon the trial of the case. Nor is there any intimation that any request was made for a bill of particulars concerning the details of the offense charged. We must therefore hold that the count sufficiently charges the crime of which the defendant was convicted. Roberts v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 873, 160 C. C. A. 631.

1. In General (p. 755)

Moral turpitude.—The offense is one involving moral turpitude, so that a conviction thereof warrants the disbarment of an attorney. In re Thompson, (Cal. App. 1918) 174 Pac. 86.

Vol. VII, p. 773, sec. 197. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 458.]

Indictment of abettor as principal.—Under Penal Code, section 332 (7 Fed. Stat. Ann. 984) a person not present at a robbery of the mail, but who aided and abetted the offense, may be convicted under an indictment charging a violation of section 197. Vane v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 32, 165 C. C. A. 442.

Vol. VII, p. 784, sec. 206. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 461.]

Evidence.—On the trial of a postmaster for a violation of this section in making a false account by reporting an excessive amount of postage cancellations, it was proper to permit a post office inspector to testify "That there are no plants or other things being operated there from investigation, as far as he could ascertain, whereby they would send stamps from other places to these local plants," and that "in the ordinary course of business of fourth-class post offices, the sales of postage exceed the cancellation of postage, and that such is the case in about 98 per cent of the fourth-class post offices." Kenney v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 262, 165 C. C. A. 550.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS (p. 790)

"Few would, I suppose, doubt that some prevention of the mailing of lewd publications is desirable, and yet no field of administration requires better judgment or more circumspection to avoid interference with a justifiable freedom of expression and literary development. I have little doubt that numerous really great writings would come under the ban, if tests that are frequently current were applied, and these approved publications doubtless at times escape only because they come within the term "classics," which means, for the purpose of the application of the statute, that they are ordinarily immune from interference, because they have the sanction of age and fame, and usually appeal to a comparatively limited number of readers. It is very easy, by a narrow and prudish construction of the statute, to suppress literature of permanent merit." Anderson v. Patten, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 382.

Inciting to arson, etc.—The clause of the statute relative to "matter of a character tending to incite arson, murder or assassination" is not void for indefiniteness. Magon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 201, 160 C. C. A. 279.

II. MAILING OBSCENE MATTER

1. Elements of Offense (p. 791)

Knowledge or intent.—If a person deposit matter in the mail, knowing its contents, the fact that he does not know or believe it to be nonmailable is immaterial. Magon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 201, 160 C. C. A. 279.

2. Test of Obscenity (p. 791)

The rule by which to determine whether a writing comes within the meaning of the statute is whether its language has a tendency to deprave and corrupt the morals of those whose minds are open to such influences and into whose hands it may fall, by arousing or implanting in such minds obscene, lewd or lascivious thoughts or desires. Griffin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 6, 160 C. C. A. 146.

In Anderson v. Patten, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 382, the court in referring to a story said: "The young girl and the relations of the man with her are described with a degree of detail that does not appear necessary to teach the desired lesson, whatever it may be, or to tell a story which would possess artistic merit or arouse any worthy emotion. On the contrary, it is at least reasonably arguable, I think, that the details of the sex relations are set forth to attract readers to the story because of their salacious character. I am, of course, aware that mere description of irregular things in relation to sex may not fall within the statute. Such was the case when a similar New York statute was discussed by the Court of Appeals of that state in People v. Eastman, 188 N. Y. 478, 81 N. E. 459, 11 Ann. Cas. 302. Here, however, there is ground for holding that portions of the short story in question have a tendency to excite lust, and, if this is so, it falls within the prohibition of the statute."

That the entire contents of the communication be objectionable in character is not essential to the commission of the offense. Griffin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 6, 160 C. C. A. 146.

III. LETTERS (p. 794)

That the entire contents of the communication be objectionable in character is not essential to the commission of the offense. Griffin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 6, 160 C. C. A. 146.

V. INDICTMENT (p. 795)

Knowledge.—If matter is alleged to have been "knowingly, wilfully, unlawfully and feloniously" deposited in the mails, it need not be further alleged that the defendant knew of its nonmailable character. Magon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 201, 160 C. C. A. 279.

Nonmailable character.—It need not be averred in terms that the matter sent was "nonmailable" where it is alleged that it was obscene, etc. Magon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 201, 160 C. C. A. 279.

Name of addressee.—It is sufficient to aver that the mail matter was deposited "to be transmitted by the post office establishment to many and divers persons; the names of which divers persons are unknown to the grand jurors." Magon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 201, 160 C. C. A. 279.

Description of obscene matter.—An indictment for a violation of this section in mailing a magazine containing articles characterized as "obscene, lewd, lascivious and filthy" is not bad because it also adds the nonstatutory term "indecent." Lockhart v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 610, 162 C. C. A. 626.

Setting out in extenso.—Where the indictment sets out the substance of a circular giving information as to abortifacients, the indictment is not lacking in certainty because it fails to set out the exact words. Pilson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 328, 161 C. C. A. 336.

Necessity of innuendo.—"It is also claimed that the objectionable words in the two articles are not indicated with particularity and their harmful meaning defined. This was unnecessary. The articles complained of were set out verbatim in the indictment. So far as the record informs us, the government claimed no hidden meaning nor innuendo making expressions, innocent upon their face, vile when understood in the setting surrounding their use. Such concealed significance necessarily arises from circumstances outside of the writing or publication, and if the government intends to show such significance through evidence of such circumstances, it must apprise the accused so that he may be informed and given an opportunity to combat such proof. Clearly no such necessity exists where the accusation, as here, is based upon only such meaning and inferences as the writing or publication would itself carry to any one reading it." Lockhart v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 610, 162 C. C. A. 626.

VIII. TRIAL

2. Question for Jury (p. 802)

Obscenity of letter.—In Parish v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 40, 159 C. C. A. 258, it was held to be a question for the jury whether the act was violated by the mailing of a letter to a female school teacher stating that the writer had seen her in a position indicative of immoral relations with a certain man, and that he would inform the school authorities unless she accorded him a private interview, advising her not to consult with the man in question and assuring her that not even the wife of the writer would know anything about the matter. The court said: "We are of opinion that the question as to whether this letter was susceptible of the interpretation that the defendant had conceived a scheme to have a private interview with the young lady, for the purpose of using the knowledge which he claimed to possess to coerce her to accede to his immoral demands, was properly submitted to the jury. Such being the case, the action of the lower court in permitting the jury to determine the character of the letter was eminently proper, and in expressing this view we are not in conflict with the law as announced in the cases of United States v. Journal Co., Inc., (D. C.) 197 Fed. 415, and Knowles v. United States, 170 Fed. 409, 95 C. C. A. 579."

Matter inciting arson, etc.—Whether matter sent through the mails tends to incite arson, murder or assassination is a question for the jury. Magon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 201, 160 C. C. A. 279.

Postal card.—A postal card containing communications and pictures in connection therewith, calculated to reflect injuriously upon the character and conduct of the person to whom addressed and containing language of a scurrilous and defamatory character, is within the provision of this section. Griffin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 6, 160 C. C. A. 146.

Vol. VII, p. 812, sec. 215. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 464.]

III. ESSENTIALS

1. In General (p. 815)

Intent.—It is not necessary that when the scheme was formed the parties intended to execute it by the use of the mails, if it was in fact thus executed. Depew v. U. S., (C.

C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 539, 160 C. C. A. 607.

3. Scheme or Artifice to Defraud

a. What Constitutes (p. 816)

To use the mails in order to carry out a scheme for getting money by the making of promises or agreements which, whether known to be impossible of performance or not, there is no intention to perform, is a forbidden use of the facilities of the post office department. U. S. v. Comyns, (1919) 248 U. S. 349, 39 S. Ct. 98, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "In brief, the indictment avers that the scheme of defendants was to induce their intended victims to part with their money by representing to them that certain land (not described except generally as being located in the western district of Washington) could be purchased from the United States under the Timber and Stone Act for less than its real value if the victims would employ defendants to secure such land and would pay a part of the proposed fee in advance; the defendants agreeing at the same time that in case of non-success the money thus prepaid would be refunded; whereas in truth, as defendants well knew, for some reason not specified they could not carry out the agreement, and the purpose of making it was to secure the payment of the initial fee by the intended victims, which defendants intended to appropriate to their own use and did not intend to refund in case of a failure to secure title in accordance with the agreement. In our opinion such a scheme is a 'scheme or artifice to defraud . . . by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises' within the meaning of § 215 of the Criminal Code."

In a prosecution for using the mails to defraud, where the victim gave a check in betting at a fake turf exchange, it was held that the court rightly submitted to the jury the question whether the use of the mails in collecting the check was not at least such a natural and probable consequence of the execution of the original scheme (taking into account the original use of the check for betting purposes) as that all the participants would naturally have foreseen the likelihood that such resort to the mails would be had whenever it appeared expedient so to do in aid of the common purpose. Shea v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 440, 163 C. C. A. 458.

c. Person Defrauded (p. 825)

In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see Le More v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 887.

It is not necessary that the government prove that the person defrauded was the victim originally selected by the conspirators. Shea v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 433, 163 C. C. A. 451. See to the same effect Bonfoly v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 802, 164 C. C. A. 642.

4. Use of Mails (p. 825)

Ordering materials for fraud.—The ordering through the mails of chemicals to be sold under a false label is within the Act though the sales are not made through the mails or in interstate commerce. Edwards v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 686, 161 C. C. A. 596.

Causing use by others.—In Shea v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 440, 163 C. C. A. 458, it is held that the testimony would warrant a conclusion that plaintiffs in error consciously participated in bringing about the use of the mails for the purpose of inducing a person who had placed a check as a bet at a fake turf exchange to have the check collected by a bank by the use of the mails, and that such a bringing about of the use of the mails would be a "causing" of such use, even though neither of them personally made the arrangements with the bank.

IV. PROCEDURE

a. In General (p. 828)

Joinder and election.—In Sidebotham v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 417, 165 C. C. A. 159, the court held that the offense created by this section and that of conspiracy to commit it were properly joined and that the refusal to compel an election was not prejudicial, the jury acquitting of the conspiracy charge.

d. Intent (p. 834)

Where the indictment clearly shows an intent to defraud, the failure to allege that the acts of the defendant were "willfully" done is not fatal. Holsman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 193, 160 C. C. A. 271.

h. Consolidation of Indictments (p. 837)

To same effect as original annotation, see Sidebotham v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 417, 165 C. C. A. 159.

4. Trial

b. Evidence and Instructions (p. 838)

Use of false labels on drugs.—Where, in a prosecution under this section, it appears that the defendant sold a common drug under a label indicating that it was a rare drug made in a foreign country, the jury may consider the labels in determining the defendant's intent, for if he intended "to bring about a sale by misrepresenting the quality or identity of the article in particulars which would be likely to have a persuasive effect upon the purchaser's mind, this may be a sufficient defrauding." And where it further appears that the drug was sold without stating its nature on the label, as required by the Pure Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, § 8 (see vol. 3, p. 379), an instruction permitting the jury to take that fact into consideration is proper on the question of the defendant's fraudulent intent, although all the sales were intrastate and the Act did not apply, since he must have known that the absence of the statement would mislead the ultimate consumer. Edwards v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 686, 161 C. C. A. 596.

Decoy letters.—Answers to decoy letters are admissible, but the conspiracy to defraud must have existed prior to the answering of those letters and cannot be based entirely on those answers. Holsman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 193, 160 C. C. A. 271.

The act of one of several persons associated in the transaction of a common enterprise, and done in furtherance of the common object, is generally admissible as evidence against the others. This principle is applicable generally to existing schemes to defraud under this section. Shea v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 440, 163 C. C. A. 458.

Gambling paraphernalia in office of co-conspirator.—In a prosecution for using the mails to defraud, where the fraudulent transaction was completed by the use of fictitious "turf exchanges," it was held proper to admit in evidence against one conspirator paraphernalia found in the office of another conspirator, although the person against whom it was offered was not present when the paraphernalia was found, there being evidence to show his connection with the general scheme to defraud by fake betting. Shea v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 440, 163 C. C. A. 458.

Res gestæ.—A telegram sent by one of the conspirators to another victim the day after he lost his money was held admissible as part of the res gestæ, the general fraudulent scheme not having been abandoned at the time. Shea v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 440, 163 C. C. A. 458.

Similar offenses.—Proof of similar offenses, accomplished or attempted, which were the outgrowth of the same general fraudulent scheme, with which the evidence tended to connect the defendants, is admissible. Shea v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 440, 163 C. C. A. 458.

Indictment.—The indictment need not allege to whom the mail matter in question was addressed or to what post office. Murray v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 874, 160 C. C. A. 96.

Duplicity of charge.—An indictment charging that the accused "deposited and caused to be deposited" in the post office a letter within the statute is not double. Murray v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 874, 160 C. C. A. 96.

Evidence sufficient.—In Murray v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 874, 160

C. C. A. 96, the evidence was held to be sufficient to show that the poison exhibited at the trial was the identical substance sent through the mail.

Vol. VII, p. 847, sec. 218. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 466.]

Sentence.—A defendant who pleads guilty to eight counts charging separate forgeries may be sentenced to ten years' imprisonment "to run concurrently on all counts of the indictment" though the penalty for such a single offense is but five years. Brenkman v. Morgan, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 553, 185 C. C. A. 223, wherein it was said: "We can conceive of no sound legal objection to a single sentence for several offenses charged in one indictment, if it does not exceed the statutory maximum for all. We have held such a sentence valid. Myers v. Morgan, 139 C. C. A. 641, 224 Fed. 413. It is true that the word 'concurrently' is generally used when terms of imprisonment are imposed separately for each of two or more offenses charged in the same indictment, and to indicate that while the convicted prisoner is serving one he is serving all. When so used, the sentence is the opposite of cumulative. But that use is not exclusive. Concurrently is also defined as 'in combination or unity.' When found in a sentence like that before us, the reasonable construction is that the years of imprisonment specified run as a unit upon all the counts in the indictment; that is to say, not upon each of the counts severally, but all of them in the aggregate."

What constitutes shortage.—Proof that a postmaster had issued money orders to himself to pay for whisky, without paying for them, was competent. Under the counts under which he was convicted, proof of an amount due the government in that way, and not accounted for by him, would be a shortage, on which the statutory embezzlement could be predicated. It was not essential for the government to show under those counts that he had actually received the money he failed to account for. Foster v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 207. In that case it was further said: "The defendant also contends that the money received by him on C. O. D. parcel post packages, to be remitted to the sender, did not constitute money order funds, and could not be considered by the jury in determining the shortage. The evidence showed that the post office regulations provided that the C. O. D. tags should be treated as applications for money orders, and that the delivering postmaster should fill out a money order on the sending post office to remit the amount collected from the addressee. The department treated such moneys as money order funds, and they clearly might be properly so treated, and this fixed their character as such. Again, the funds of this character were but a small part of the conceded balance due from defendant to the government, and not explained by him, and the ruling could have made no difference to the defendant on whom no fine was imposed."

Indictment—Intent.—No specific intent being required by the statute, an averment that a postmaster "wilfully" failed to turn over funds is sufficient. Foster v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 207.

Authority of depository or officer.—In an indictment for failure to turn over funds averments that Shreveport "was then and there the designated depository of the said post office at Shongaloo, La.," and of the fourth count, that the defendant failed to turn over to the post office inspector "upon demand and order of the Postmaster General, made through the said A. C. Caldwell, post office inspector, the said A. C. Caldwell, post office inspector, being then and there a duly authorized officer and agent of the Postmaster General," are good against the objection made to them that they do not say by what means the depository was designated and the post office inspector made the authorized agent of the department. "The manner in which or the means by which these things were done are matters of evidence rather than of averment. The defendant could have obtained a more particular description by demanding a bill of particulars. No prejudice could have resulted to the defendant from the alleged imperfect averment, and, if imperfect, it was cured by section 1025 of Revised Statutes, especially when, as in this case, objection was first interposed upon the trial of the cause. Benson v. U. S., 240 Fed. 413, 153 C. C. A. 339; Evans v. U. S., 153 U. S. 590, 14 S. Ct. 934, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 830." Foster v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 207.

Evidence—Authority of depository.—The oral testimony of the inspector that the Shreveport post office was the designated depository for money order funds for another post office, together with the fact that the defendant himself had in habitually made remittances of money order funds to Shreveport during his incumbency, was evidence sufficient for the submission of that issue to the jury in a prosecution of a postmaster of the latter office for failure to turn over funds. Foster v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 207.

Judicial notice of officer's authority.—"The post office inspector's authority to demand and receive money order funds is a matter of post office departmental rules and regulations, of which the courts take judicial notice. Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 14 Sup. Ct. 513, 38 L. Ed. 415." Foster v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 207.

Necessity of delivery to accused.—In McKnight v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 687, 164 C. C. A. 527, wherein it appeared that the accused, one Herskowitz and certain employees of an express company conspired to violate this section, it was said: "It is claimed by counsel for defendant that the offense described in section 238 requires that some person shall receive the intoxicating liquor in order to complete the offense committed by the officer, agent or employé of the common carrier, as the officer, agent or employé may not knowingly deliver or cause to be delivered to any person other than the person to whom it has been consigned, without that other person aiding and abetting the officer, agent or employé in the commission of the offense, and, as the law makes an aider or abettor guilty as a principal, the offense denounced by the statute requires the participation of two persons and concert of action between them, and if the evidence shows that the offense denounced by the statute has been completed, then an indictment for a conspiracy to commit the offense will not lie, nor will a conviction be upheld if the evidence shows such a state of facts. There is very respectable authority supporting the contention of counsel for defendant in error. U. S. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. Ry. Co. et al. (C. C.) 146 Fed. 298; U. S. v. Dietrich & Fisher (C. C.) 126 Fed. 664; Chadwick v. U. S., 141 Fed. 225, 72 C. C. A. 343; U. S. v. Burke (D. C.) 221 Fed. 1014; Miles v. State, 58 Ala. 390; Shannon v. Commonwealth, 14 Pa. 226; Whart. Crim. L., § 1339. An examination of the record has convinced us, however, that the evidence does not show that McKnight received any of the intoxicating liquor; on the contrary, it shows that it was all received by Herskowitz. If McKnight took no part in the actual commission of the offense, he still could be indicted and convicted for a conspiracy to commit the offense, and he would not be within the rule contended for by his counsel, if he did not participate in the commission of the offense itself, and we do not think the doctrine of agency can be relied upon to show such participation." See to same effect Grant v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 692, 164 C. C. A. 532.

Purpose of statute.—"Without question the practice of collecting the purchase price at the point of destination as a condition to delivery was the thing at which this section was aimed." Danciger v. Cooley, (1919) 248 U. S. 319, 39 S. Ct. 119, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 98 Kan. 38, 484, 157 Pac. 453, 158 Pac. 1119.

"Any other person" means that this section is not confined to carriers and their agents. Danciger v. Cooley, (1919) 248 U. S. 319, 39 S. Ct. 119, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 98 Kan. 38, 157 Pac. 453, 484, 158 Pac. 1119, wherein the case as stated by the court was as follows: "Danciger Brothers, who conducted a mail-order liquor business in Kansas City, Missouri, brought this suit in a Kansas court to recover from Cooley certain moneys collected by him, under an arrangement with them, as the purchase price of intoxicating liquors sold by them in interstate commerce, and also to enforce a similar claim assigned to them by another liquor dealer. After issue and trial Cooley prevailed and the judgment was affirmed; the appellate court holding that the arrangement under which the moneys were collected involved a violation of § 239 of the Criminal Code of the United States, c. 321, 35 Stat. 1136, and that, applying the settled rule of the Kansas courts, a principal who employs an agent to make collections in violation of a criminal law cannot compel the agent to account for what he collects. 98 Kansas, 38 and 484. The case is here on writ of error sued out prior to the Act of September 6, 1916, c. 448, 39 Stat. 726.

"These are the facts: During the year 1910 Danciger Brothers received through the mails several orders for whisky from customers in Topeka, Kansas, and in each instance shipped the liquor from Kansas City, Missouri, to Topeka, as freight. Each package was consigned to the shipper's order and was to be delivered by the carrier only on the surrender of the bill of lading properly endorsed. A sight draft was drawn on the customer for the purchase price and this with the bill of lading attached was sent to Cooley under an arrangement whereby he was to collect the draft, was then to hand the bill of lading suitably endorsed to the customer to enable the latter to get the package from the carrier, and ultimately was to remit to Danciger Brothers the amount collected less a commission for the service rendered. Before this arrangement was made the banks had refused to make such collections. The assigned claim need not be separately described, for it was essentially like the other. As the transactions occurred before the passage of the Webb-Kenyon Act, c. 90, 37 Stat. 699, we are not concerned with it, but only with the situation theretofore existing. Whether § 239 of the Criminal Code reaches and embraces acts done by an agent such as Cooley was in this instance, or is confined to acts of common carriers and their agents, is a question about which there has been some contrariety of opinion, and it is now before this court for the first time. Of course, the chief factor in its solution must be the words of the statute. . . .

"The words 'any railroad company, express company, or other common carrier,' comprehend all public carriers; and the words 'or any other person' are equally broad.

When combined they perfectly express a purpose to include all common carriers and all persons; and it does not detract from this view that the inclusion of railroad companies and express companies is emphasized by specially naming them. To hold that the words 'or any other person' have the same meaning as if they were 'or any agent of a common carrier,' would be not merely to depart from the primary rule that words are to be taken in their ordinary sense, but to narrow the operation of the statute to an extent that would seriously imperil the accomplishment of its purpose. The rule that where particular words of description are followed by general terms the latter will be regarded as applicable only to persons or things of a like class is invoked in this connection, but it is far from being of universal application, and never is applied when to do so will give to a statute an operation different from that intended by the body enacting it. Its proper office is to give effect to the true intention of that body, not to defeat it. United States v. Mescall, 215 U. S. 26.

"Without question the practice of collecting the purchase price at the point of destination as a condition to delivery is the thing at which the statute is aimed. Through that practice the sale of liquor in interstate commerce was rapidly increasing. But, as before shown, such collections were not confined to carriers and their agents, but often were made by others. In principle and result there was no difference; the evil was the same in either event. Besides, if the statute were made applicable only to carriers and their agents, it could be evaded so readily by having other collectors that it would accomplish nothing. The volume of the business and the attending mischief would be unaffected. Doubtless all this was in mind when the statute was drafted and accounts for its comprehensive terms. That the words 'or any other person' are intended to include all persons committing the acts described is, as we think, quite plain."

"In connection with the transportation" of liquor.—To be within this section it is essential that the act of collecting the purchase price be done "in connection with the transportation of" the liquor. The statute does not say "in the transportation," but "in connection with" it. Transportation is not completed until the shipment arrives at the point of destination and is there delivered, and a person who is at the point of destination of liquor and holds a bill of lading which carries with it control over delivery, and conforming to his principal's instructions requires the purchase price to be paid before passing to the vendee, such bill occupies the position of being closely connected with the transportation of the liquor and violates this section. Danciger v. Cooley, (1919) 248 U. S. 319, 39 S. Ct. 119, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 98 Kan. 38, 484, 157 Pac. 453, 158 Pac. 1119.

Recovery of money collected.—Where in an action in a state court for the recovery by liquor dealers of moneys collected by an agent as the purchase price of liquor, the agent sets up this section as a defense in that the transaction violated it, and the state court applying the settled rule of that state sustains the defense, holding that a principal who employs an agent to make collections in violation of a criminal law cannot compel the agent to account for what he collects, the Supreme Court of the United States will refuse to re-examine the ruling as it turns on a question of local law. Danciger v. Cooley, (1919) 248 U. S. 319, 39 S. Ct. 119, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 98 Kan. 38, 484, 157 Pac. 453, 158 Pac. 1119.

Marking packages—Sufficiency.—In Jacob Schmidt Brewing Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 696, 166 C. C. A. 193, it was contended that the marking of an interstate shipment of beer with the name of the brewing company, the trade-name of the beer "Select," and a serial number, was a sufficient compliance with the provisions of this section. Answering this contention and holding that the marking was insufficient, the court said: "What defendant did was this: It shipped certain packages containing beer from St. Paul, Minn., to customers in Minot, N. D., on which the only external marks indicating the nature of the contents were, 'Return to Jacob Schmidt Brewing Co.,' with street address in St. Paul; the trade-name 'Select'; and 'Serial No. 33.' The name of defendant and the trade-name it adopted for its product may be put aside. An inference might, perhaps, be drawn from them by some persons that the packages contained beer, instead of a nonintoxicating beverage, but the Act of Congress has not left the matter to such inconclusive inferences. Nor is defendant in any better position with its expression, 'Serial No. 33.' It appears that defendant's 'Select' beer, so called, was registered with officials of North Dakota under a pure food law of that state, and that the designation 'Serial No. 33' was assigned to it. But that was done merely for the local purposes of the state law. It was not designed to give a new or additional name to a well-known article, when outside the purview of that law or in relations with which that law has no concern."

"Defendant invokes the rule that that is certain which can be made certain. The rule does not apply to a case like this. The Act of Congress says that the nature of the contents of the package shall be plainly shown and shown on the outside cover. The requirement is a definite one, very easily complied with. It means that the marks must be of manifest, self-evident import, and must appear at the place indicated. It clearly excludes the idea of reference elsewhere for information, or of a general knowledge of the trade-names or brands adopted by particular merchants for their business, which have not gained a place in the common vocabulary of the country. What has been said also precludes resort to bills of lading issued by the carrier."

Costs and expenses of seizure.—"Looking to the pleadings, we find that the plaintiffs in error were the original violators of the law, rendering the seizure proper and necessary, and through their intervention the proceedings were delayed nearly 10 months, thereby largely increasing all the costs and expenses incurred for the preservation of the property pending the final judgment of the court, and we conclude that the plaintiffs in error were properly held responsible for all the costs and expenses incurred from the beginning of the suit. See Clara O. Burns, Adm'x, et al. v. Julius W. Rosenstein et al., 135 U. S. 449, 10 Sup. Ct. 817, 34 L. Ed. 193." Williams v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 48, 165 C. C. A. 458.

Scope of section.—The provisions of this section and sections 269-271, infra, are expressly limited to the constitutional authority of Congress to legislate against slavery, involuntary servitude, and peonage under the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution. This amounts to a legislative declaration that kidnapping, not so limited, was left to be dealt with by the states under their police power. U. S. v. Wheeler, (D. C. Ariz. 1918) 254 Fed. 611.

Peonage defined.—"Peonage has been defined by the Supreme Court of the United States as a status or condition of compulsory service, based upon the indebtedness of the peon to the master. The basal fact is indebtedness, and indebtedness is the cord by which the victim is bound to the master's service. It matters not that the service was begun voluntarily by contract, for, if it is enforceable by criminal prosecution instead of a civil action for damages, it is nevertheless peonage. See Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U. S. 219, 31 Sup. Ct. 145, 55 L. Ed. 191, and the authorities therein cited." State v. Oliva, (1918) 144 La. 51, 80 So. 195.

State laws punishing breach of labor contracts.—A state law making it an offense to entice away a laborer under contract is valid. Johns v. Patterson, (Ark. 1919) 211 S. W. 387, wherein it was said: "Peonage is based upon a condition of compulsory service by the debtor for the payment of his debt.

The state statute under consideration has no such purpose but was enacted for the purpose of fixing the criminal and civil liability of a third party for the violation of contracts of service."

A state punishing "whoever shall willfully violate a hire . . . contract, conditioned on the cultivation of land in this state, upon the faith of which contract money or goods have been advanced, by leaving the employ of the person . . . without first tendering to the person by whom said money or goods was advanced, the amount of money, or the value of goods obtained," is invalid because in conflict with the federal statute. State v. Oliva, (1918) 144 La. 51, 80 So. 195, wherein the court said: "An analysis of the law as hereinabove quoted and under which the defendant is being prosecuted shows at a glance that it comes within the inhibition of the Thirteenth Amendment and the legislation adopted by Congress in pursuance thereof, as interpreted by the United States Supreme Court. It does not pretend to enforce a contract of hire except where money or goods have been advanced on the faith of the contract, and then only in the instance where the laborer leaves without first tendering the return of the money or the value of the goods. This indebtedness becomes the cord by which the laborer is bound to the master's service, and the service is enforceable by most potent means, the instrumentalities created by the state to punish lawlessness and crime."

III. THIRD PARAGRAPH

1. Lands Reserved or Acquired

a. In General (p. 896)

Public land acquired as a homestead by an Indian under the Act of July 4, 1884, ch. 180 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. 820) is not within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Lewis, (S. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 469. The court said: "It seems to me perfectly plain that the land upon which this murder was committed was not reserved for the exclusive use of the United States, simply by reason of the fact that there is a trust provision in the patent. The United States held it in trust for the use of the Indian, and not for the use of the United States. The mere fact that the Indian is a ward of the government does not change the reasoning in the slightest."

Vol. VII, p. 905, sec. 273. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 481.]

IV. PROSECUTION FOR OFFENSE

4. Indictment

b. Jurisdictional Averments (p. 913)

The word "feloniously" need not be used in an indictment for murder. Myres v. U. S.

(C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 779, 168 C. C. A. 125.

Necessity of specific intent.—In Doeche v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 566, 162 C. C. A. 582, wherein a conspiracy by Germans to destroy munition ships was shown, the court said: "We think that there was no case made out under the indictment for conspiracy to injure underwriters. Section 296 of the Criminal Code. The proof was of a purpose to raise the rates of insurance, a purpose not involving the existence of any insurance upon the vessels injured, and as well fulfilled if the increased dangers were made manifest upon those uninsured as upon those insured. Where the crime involves, as here, a specific intent, the existence of the intent must be proved as an independent fact, the state of mind prescribed in the statute. That state of mind is not proved by showing that the defendants had reason to suppose that the ships attacked might well be insured. Such knowledge would, it is true, be enough to charge them with the consequences of their acts, though the definition of the crime included those consequences, but it is not the equivalent of an intent to produce those consequences. Such an intent involves the belief that the consequences will in fact follow upon the acts. This the government made no attempt to prove."

Conspiracy to attack vessel, see Penal Laws, § 37, supra.

"Despoil" as here used includes "fruitless injury" and covers as well what would be malicious mischief in law as what would be larceny. Doeche v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 566, 162 C. C. A. 582, holding that placing bombs in merchant ships with intent to sink them at sea was within the section.

Misdelivery of liquor.—In Billingsley v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 331, 161 C. C. A. 339, an indictment for conspiracy to deliver liquor to persons other than the conspirers in violation of section 238 of the Penal Law, supra, it was said: "William H. Pielow and William Frazier are charged along with the Billingsleys as co-conspirators. Pielow was an officer, agent, and employé of a transfer company, or common carrier, and Frazier was also an employé of a transfer company, which companies had a part in the transportation of intoxicating liquors unlawfully brought into the state of Washington from the state of California. So it may be seen that the Billingsleys were at least aiding and abetting in the unlawful transportation of intoxicants into the state of Washington. While the Billingsleys were not officers or employes of a common carrier, they conspired with such officers to commit the offense denounced by the Penal Code."

PORTO RICO

Vol. VII, p. 1271, sec. 31. [First ed., vol. V, p. 771.]

Congressional approval of laws.—Where the legislative assembly of Porto Rico enacts that the secretary of the island should promulgate all laws enacted by the legislative body, it is to be presumed, in the absence of proofs or suggestion to the contrary, that the local Porto Rican legislation was reported to Congress, or, at least, that Congress was cognizant of such legislation, and in the absence of affirmative action by that body, that there was congressional acquiescence. Porto Rico v. American R. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 369, 165 C. C. A. 589.

Railroad rates.—Under this section the power to control local rates of railroads operating on the island of Porto Rico is in the legislative assembly rather than in the Interstate Commerce Commission. Porto Rico v. American R. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 369, 165 C. C. A. 589, wherein it was said regarding this Act: "Under the circumstances, and considering the Organic Act as a whole, we think the intended and comprehensive congressional delegation of legislative power in respect to local conditions would include subject-matter like that of local railway rates, and would control as against the contention that the Interstate Commerce Commission was clothed with exclusive jurisdiction through the force of the general terms of the same act, which are without any suggestion of a particular intent to carry such jurisdiction to the railroad affairs of the insular situation.

"Indeed, the original idea of federal control and federal regulation was based upon physical interstate and interterritorial relations and upon connecting lines, conditions under which local interruptions impair the efficiency of the paramount federal right to regulate commerce between the states and territories. There is no such federal right or federal responsibility as between the people of the island of Porto Rico and their local railroads, and upon this general view, in respect to the question of the intention of Congress under the Organic Act, and after misunderstandings and discussion had arisen as to its scope, and as to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, it is quite significant and something that must be considered that, through subsequent legislation, Congress declared, through the Act of March 2, 1917, c. 145 (39 Stat. p. 1, p. 964), § 38, that the Interstate Commerce Act shall not apply to Porto Rico."

1918 Supp., p. 620, sec. 34.

Subject and title of bill.—In Benedicto v. Porto Rican Am. Tobacco Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 256 Fed. 422, the title of the Act there under consideration was as follows: "An act to amend an act entitled an act to protect Porto Rican cigars from fraudulent misrepresentation, by providing for adequate expert inspection, and the issue of stamps of guarantee covering the origin of tobacco used in the manufacture of such cigars, intended for exportation and for other purposes," approved March 11, 1915." It was held that this title did not cover the following provision: "The denomination of each guarantee stamp for original boxes or packages containing cigars for export or consumption in Porto Rico shall be one cent each, and twenty-five cents each for packages containing leaf tobacco, scraps or stripped tobacco for export."

1918 Supp., p. 624, sec. 38.

Application of Interstate Commerce Act.—The provision of this section that the Interstate Commerce Act and its amendments shall not apply to Porto Rico, does not apply to cable lines. Benedicto v. West India, etc., Tel. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 417. The court said: "The conclusion is that, while Congress, under its plenary power, had the unquestionable right to do so, it never has delegated to the legislative assembly of Porto Rico authority to regulate interpossessional, interterritorial, interstate, or foreign cable rates, and that the local legislative body, therefore, was without authority to create a commission for that purpose, and that, while the Interstate Commerce Commission may not exercise jurisdiction in respect to Porto Rican intra-island rates, that it has jurisdiction over her interpossessional and foreign instruments of commerce. We think, therefore, that the District Court of the island was right in holding that the assembly was without authority over the subject-matter of cable rates."

1918 Supp., p. 626, sec. 41.

Injunction of actions.—The grant to the District Court for Porto Rico of "jurisdiction of all cases cognizable in the District Courts of the United States," is not limited by Judicial Code, section 206, relating to injunction against the prosecution of actions brought under the laws of the states. Benedicto v. West India, etc., Tel. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 417.

POSTAL SERVICE

Vol. VIII, p. 21, sec. 398. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 7.]

Nature of postal convention.—The postal conventions cannot be deemed treaties, because they are not adopted by the Senate, and they cannot be deemed statutes, because Congress alone has power to adopt statutes, and that power cannot be delegated. They cannot be considered treaties, because the treaty-making power is confined in the President and the Senate by the Constitution. They are but provisions which determine what merchandise may be received in the mail. U. S. v. Four Packages of Cat Diamonds, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 354, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 314, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 305.

Vol. VIII, p. 68, sec. 3. [First ed., vol. V, p. 796.]

Interpleader by injured person.—The owner of money stolen from the mails by a postal employee is not entitled to interplead in a suit by the government on the employee's bond, his remedy being by application to the Postmaster General under section 143 of the Postal Laws and Regulations of 1913. U. S. v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 16, 159 C. C. A. 234.

Amount of recovery.—Where a postal clerk steals registered mail the liability on his bond is not limited to the sum which the government has paid to injured persons but extends to the full penalty of the bond, limited only by the amount of the actual injury suffered, not merely by the government itself, but by its patrons, and the government holds the amount recovered, above the amount it has paid, upon a trust for the benefit of its injured patron. This right of recovery is rested, not only on the legal right of an ordinary bailee for hire to recover the full value of the subject of the bailment from one who has wrongfully converted it, but upon the right of the United States, as parens patrie, and upon principles of public policy, in the performance of its moral duty to protect the patrons of its post office establishment against theft by its unfaithful employees. U. S. v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 16, 159 C. C. A. 234.

Vol. VIII, p. 108, sec. 2. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 315.]

Statement of paid circulation.—The statement of daily newspapers required to be filed by this section should cover the whole bona fide paid circulation, however attained, whether sold over the counter, distributed through news agencies and news routes, or disposed of in any other way. (1914) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 244.

Vol. VIII, p. 109, sec. 8. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 319.]

The executive departments and the officers of the government are entitled to the benefit of this section, and penalty envelopes or labels may be used in sending by parcel-post fourth-class matter not exceeding eleven pounds in weight. (1913) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 112.

Vol. VIII, p. 163, sec. 3962. [First ed., vol. V, p. 893.]

Reduction of compensation for delay.—Sections 3962 and 4002 Revised Statutes, and the Act of June 26, 1906, 34 Stat. 467, contemplate the transportation of the mails with due frequency and speed with especial reference to the published time tables, and the Post Office Department in entering into contracts for the carrying of the mails is not precluded from asserting its right to have the mails transported accordingly and to make deductions from the pay of contractors for failure to perform service according to contract and impose fines upon them for their delinquency. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 238.

Vol. VIII, p. 188. [Public roads as highways.] [First ed., vol. V, p. 901.]

Violation of street regulation by mail carriers.—The fact that certain streets are post routes does not prevent a mail carrier from being liable for the violation of reasonable street regulation. Com. v. Classon, (1918) 229 Mass. 329, 118 N. E. 653, L. R. A. 1918C 939.

Vol. VIII, p. 188, sec. 3997. [First ed., vol. V, p. 915.]

Section not repealed.—The Act of March 3, 1873, did not repeal sections 210 and 212 of the Act of June 8, 1872 (R. S. secs. 3997, 3999). Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 258,

Powers of Postmaster General.—The Acts of June 8, 1872, 17 Stat. 283, and March 3, 1873, 17 Stat. 558, and the several Acts amendatory thereof charge the Postmaster General with the duty of engaging in contracts with railroads carrying the mails within specified maximum rates and clothe that official with full discretionary powers to determine the character of service to be performed and the compensation to be made therefor, "so that each railway company shall receive, as far as practicable, a proportionate and just rate of compensation, according to the service performed." Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 258.

Other railroads participating in haul; deduction.—Where a contract is entered into by a railroad with the United States for transportation and the contract is fulfilled in accordance with the contract provisions, the railroad is entitled to the full amount specified in the contract without deductions by reason of any claim by another railroad participating in the haul, and without regard to any amount the United States may have paid the other railroad for so participating. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 53 Ct. Cl. 25.

Previous Acts not repealed.—The Act of March 3, 1873, did not repeal sections 210 and 212 of the Act of June 8, 1872 (R. S. secs. 3997, 3999). Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 258.

Effect of subsequent Acts.—Neither the Act of March 3, 1905, 33 Stat. 1088, nor the Act of March 2, 1907, 34 Stat. 1212, affected the powers and duties of the Postmaster General in any regard, whether such powers were statutory or discretionary, mandatory or directory, except to require weighings for not less than ninety successive working days. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 258.

Act as directory only.—The Act, in providing for an average weight of mail, according to which compensation was to be readjusted and under which contracts for transportation should be made, was directory merely, in that it gave the Postmaster General directions which ought to be followed, but not such as limited the power with respect to which the directions were given that it could not effectually be exercised without observing them. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 258.

Discretion of Postmaster General.—The Act lodges in the Postmaster General the discretion of determining the details to be followed in the weighing of the mails "not less than once in every four years," and he alone was to determine the average weight of the mails carried and how such average should be obtained. New York, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 222.

Alteration of departmental practice.—Since the Act may be treated as directory merely and as clothing the office of the Postmaster General and not the incumbent with the powers and duties therein found, usage alone could not make it mandatory, and an alteration of a long-continued departmental practice thereunder cannot be prevented by parties whose claims arise after full notice of the change. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 258.

Insufficient rate not taking of property without compensation.—No claim for the taking of private property under the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution can be predicated upon a contract to carry the mails, even though it appear that the compensation received was unreasonable and to that extent confiscatory, when the contract was entered into voluntarily and the railroad was under no duress to continue the service. New York, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 222.

Reductions in compensation for delay.—Sections 3962 and 4002 Revised Statutes, and the Act of June 26, 1906, 34 Stat. 467, contemplate the transportation of the mails with due frequency and speed with especial reference to the published time tables, and the Post Office Department in entering into contracts for the carrying of the mails is not precluded from asserting its right to have the mails transported accordingly and to make deductions from the pay of contractors for failure to perform service according to contract and impose fines upon them for their delinquency. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 238.

Carrying mail after declaration of terms as contract.—Where a railroad executes a distance circular and contemporaneously refuses to accept the amount there stated as full compensation and the Postmaster General then informs the railroad that said compensation is all that will be paid, and the railroad continues to carry the mails, there was a "meeting of the minds" and said road is bound by the terms offered for such service. New York, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 222.

Vol. VIII, p. 204, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. X, p. 336.]

Effect on previous Acts.—The Act did not affect the powers and duties of the Postmaster General in any respect except to require weighings for ninety successive working days. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 258.

Vol. VIII, p. 205. [Readjustment of rates, etc.] [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 523.]

Effect on earlier Acts.—The Act of March 2, 1907, did not in any manner affect the powers and duties of the Postmaster General under earlier Acts. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 258.

Reweighing is not a prerequisite to putting this Act into effect. "The references to average weights are not enough to require reweighing." Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 385, 39 S. Ct. 348, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 426.

A reduction in the rates for carrying the mails could be made by the Postmaster General in pursuance of this Act, where the government had originally fixed the compensation "subject to future orders," although the Postmaster General may have had no power to change the rates when the original contract was made. Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 385, 39 S. Ct. 348, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 426.

Vol. VIII, p. 206. [Weighing of mails, etc.]

Withdrawal of empty mail bags.—Congress by the Act of May 27, 1908, 35 Stat. 412, empowered the Postmaster General to withdraw from the mails empty mail bags and to transmit the same by freight, and by their withdrawal said bags ceased to be a part of the mails for any purpose of weighing, and thereafter plaintiff was not entitled to have their weight added to the average weight of the mails, and the Act in no wise impaired the obligation of the contract theretofore made. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 53 Ct. Cl. 45.

Vol. VIII, p. 208, sec. 1. [Steel cars required.] [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 313.]

Cars with steel underframes.—Congress, in providing that no pay shall be allowed for the use of "wooden full railway post office cars run in any train between adjoining steel cars" did not intend that the term "steel cars" should include cars with steel underframes. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 53 Ct. Cl. 12.

Vol. VIII, p. 212. [Compensation for increased weight of mails, etc.]

Duty of Postmaster General to increase compensation.—It is discretionary with the Postmaster General whether he will act under this statute. U. S. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 451, 39 S. Ct. 325, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (reversing (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 338), wherein the court said: "Considering history of the legislation and intent of Congress supposed to be indicated thereby the Court of Claims held that the act 'required the Postmaster General to add 5 per cent. to the compensation being paid on all of said routes, and he having failed to do so that the plaintiff is entitled to recover the difference sued for.' (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 338, 361.

"We are unable to agree with this conclusion. The language of the enactment is clear and we think it vested in the Postmaster General a discretion which, so far as shown by the record, has not been abused. We are not unmindful of the burden imposed upon appellee nor of the circumstances which lend color to a different conclusion; but these are not sufficient to justify a disregard of the plain import of the words which Congress deliberately adopted."

Compensation for increased weights caused by parcel post.—Plaintiff having continued to carry the mails with the increased weights occasioned by the institution of the parcel post service under the Act of August 24, 1912, 37 Stat. 539, 557, and by its failure to avail itself of the privilege of refusing to perform its contract and the acceptance of compensation under the Act of March 4, 1913, thus further reaffirmed its contract and cannot now claim an additional allowance for such service. New York, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 222.

Emergency credit.—The practice of excluding the emergency credit from the regular quota of funds assigned to a postal savings bank depository, is not in conflict with the requirement of this section that such funds shall be deposited substantially in proportion to the capital and surplus of each bank. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 162.

Person indemnifying owner.—Priorities as between persons indemnifying the sender of registered mail which is stolen to the benefit of a recovery on the bond of the guilty postal employee are to be determined by the Postmaster General under section 143 of the Postal Laws and Regulations of 1913. U. S. v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 16, 159 C. C. A. 234.

Interpleader to recover stolen money.—In U. S. v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 16, 159 C. C. A. 234, the court stated that section 143 of the Postal Laws and Regulations of 1913, based on Revised Statutes § 4058, requires the immediate forwarding to the chief inspector not only of all moneys received from mail robbers or other offenders against the postal laws, but also "moneys recovered by suit, or otherwise, on account of moneys taken from the mail or losses therein," and for the daily deposit of such moneys with the superintendent division of finance, office of the third assistant postmaster general, and that the "chief inspector shall determine, upon satisfactory evidence, the proper persons or owners to whom the moneys shall be restored," and requires the superintendent division of finance above mentioned to make payments in accordance with the schedules furnished and approved by such chief inspector under the authorization of the Postmaster General. The remedy thus provided is held to be exclusive and to preclude interpleader by the owner of the stolen money in a suit by the government on the bond of a postal employee.

1918 Supp., p. 648, sec. 5.

Situation prior to statute.—It is settled that the railroad companies were, until the Act of July 28, 1916, 39 Stat. 425, free agents in contracting with the Postmaster General in the transportation of the mails. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 258.

PRESIDENT

1918 Supp., p. 667. [Threats against President—punishment.]

What constitutes threat.—In U. S. v. Stobo, (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 689, the words alleged to have been spoken were as follows: "The President ought to be shot and I would like to be the one to do it." Upon consideration of a demurrer to the indictment, the court said: "The act denounces a threat, and does not distinguish between an absolute threat and one which is conditional. A threat is a threat whether conditional or absolute, and may have an equally sinister effect upon the minds of those hearing it. Further, the circumstances under which the words were uttered, the manner and tone of the utterance, what else was said on the occasion, and, in short, the res gestæ, may or may not be determinative of the question whether they were intended to operate or operated as a threat. In the absence of any other and sufficient ground of demurrer the words should be submitted to a jury with proper instructions from the court. I am not prepared and think it would be improper at this time to hold the uttered words did not constitute a threat against the life or limb of the President." See to the same effect U. S. v. Jasick, (E. D. Mich. 1919) 252 Fed. 931, wherein the accused was charged with saying "if he could get to President Wilson he would shoot the blinded eye" and "if he got a chance he would shoot President Wilson." See also U. S. v. Metzdorf, (D. C. Mont. 1918) 252 Fed. 933, where the language was "if I got hold of President Wilson I would shoot him."

Oral threat.—The statute is broad enough to include oral threat. U. S. v. Stobo, (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 689, wherein the court said: "It is contended that the words 'otherwise makes any such threat' in the latter part of the act refer to a written or printed threat, and not to an oral one. This position I regard as clearly untenable. The word 'such' has no reference to print or writing, but to 'any threat to take the life of or to inflict bodily harm upon the President of the United States.' The context leaves no reasonable doubt on this point. The word 'otherwise' as used in the latter part of the section is broad enough to include not only a written or printed threat other than one deposited or caused to be deposited for conveyance in the mail or for delivery from a post office or by letter carrier, but also an oral threat. I perceive no grounds on which the meaning of 'otherwise' can legitimately be so restricted as to exclude an oral threat against the President of the United States. To so limit the term would not only violate the language of the act but largely defeat its broad policy."

But the oral threat must have been made in the hearing of some person. United States v. Stobo, supra, wherein the court said: "In an oral threat contemplated by the statute there are two essential elements: first, the utterance of the words, and, secondly, the hearing of the words by some person or persons other than the utterer. The use of the threatening words in an unheard soliloquy, whatever may be the intent or purpose with which they are uttered, is not an offense punishable under the act. Its manifest purpose was to punish the use by one of threatening words calculated to inflame or have a sinister influence upon the minds of others, and in the case of an oral threat the offense is not complete unless the words are uttered in the hearing of some other person or persons." See to the same effect U. S. v. Metzdorf, (D. C. Mont. 1918) 252 Fed. 933.

Communication of threats to President.—It is not necessary that a threat to kill or do bodily harm to the President, in order to be punishable, must be communicated or intended to be communicated to him. U. S. v. Stobo, (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 689, wherein the court said: "It is argued that a threat, punishable under the act, must be a menace of such a character as to be calculated to 'unsettle the mind of the person on whom it operates, and to take away from his acts that free, voluntary action which alone constitutes consent'; and that the language imputed to the defendant could not have 'any of the effects or influences upon the mind of the person threatened which are necessary ingredients of a threat.' The counsel for the defendant fails to distinguish between threats made for the purpose of inducing action or non-action on the part of the person against whom they are directed, and threats not made for that purpose, but calculated to breed disloyalty or hostility in the community to the constituted authorities and incite a spirit of unrest and sedition. A large number of authorities have been cited to show that in the case of threats of the former class it is necessary that they should be communicated or intended to be communicated to the person against whom they are directed. But these authorities are wholly inapplicable to the case of threats denounced by the act in question. Whatever prior to the passage of the act may have been the essential nature of a criminally punishable threat or its technical significance or description, that act recognizes as punishable an oral as well as a written threat, though not communicated or intended to be communicated to the President. The question whether the threat has a tendency to cause action or non-action on his part is wholly foreign to any proper consideration of a given case. The vital inquiry under the act is whether the threat is of such a nature as to create or tend to create sedition or disloyalty, or to stir up violence toward or resistance to the lawful authority of the President, as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, or as chief executive of the nation." See to the same effect, U. S. v. Jasick, (E. D. Mich. 1918) 252 Fed. 931; U. S. v. Metzdorf, (D. C. Mont. 1918) 252 Fed. 933.

Necessity for communication of threats to particular person.—It is not a sufficient ground for a demurrer to an indictment under this Act that the language imputed to the defendant is not averred to have been addressed or spoken to any particular person. U. S. v. Stobo, (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 689, wherein the court said: "It is unnecessary that the oral threat should be addressed or spoken to any person. If spoken in the hearing of any person or persons it is denounced by the act. It is not solely the effect which the spoken threat may have upon the mind of the person to whom the threat is uttered, but the effect which it may have upon the mind of any one who hears it. The purpose and policy of the act are to guard and shield from improper and dangerous influences not only the minds of those to whom the threat is uttered but equally the minds of all who may hear the words as and when uttered."

Intent.—It is not necessary that the person making the threat actually intends to execute his threat. U. S. v. Stobo, (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 689, wherein the court said: "If one willfully in the hearing of others makes a threat against the life or bodily welfare of the President he is punishable under the act whether he uses the words lightly or with a set purpose to kill or maim. The effect upon the minds of the hearers, who cannot read his inward thoughts, is precisely the same and equally within the scope and obnoxious to the provisions of the act in either case. In view of the policy and broad scope of the act no one who willfully utters in the hearing of others a threat against the life or limb of the President and thereby inflames or seeks to inflame other minds against constituted authority can shield himself by the plea that the words were uttered lightly or without intent to do bodily harm. If he willfully utters a threat in the hearing of others he must be held to intend its necessary or probable effect upon other minds."

"Knowingly and willfully."—A threat is knowingly made, if the maker of it comprehends the meaning of the words uttered by him; a foreigner, ignorant of the English language, repeating these same words without knowledge of their meaning, may not knowingly have made a threat. And a threat is willfully made, if in addition to comprehending the meaning of his words, the maker voluntarily and intentionally utters them as the declaration of an apparent determination to carry them into execution. Ragansky v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 643, 165 C. C. A. 269. Construing further the meaning of "willfully" as here used, the court said: "While under some circumstances the word 'willfully' in penal statutes means not merely voluntarily, but with a bad purpose, . . . nothing in the text, context, or history of this legislation indicates the materiality of the hidden intent or purpose of one who, in the presence of others, voluntarily uses language known by him to be in form such a threat, and who thus to some extent endangers the President's life."

Sufficiency of indictment.—In U. S. v. Jasick, (E. D. Mich. 1918) 252 Fed. 931, the indictment charged that the defendant, at a time and place specified, "willfully, feloniously, and knowingly did make certain threats to take the life of the President of the United States and against the life of said President, and certain threats to inflict great bodily harm upon the said President of the United States, to wit, the Honorable Woodrow Wilson, in the verbal use of certain threatening language." The language alleged to have been used was set out. The court said: "The indictment follows the language of the statute in alleging the crime charged, and clearly and fully informs the defendant of the nature thereof, even setting forth the exact language of defendant which it is charged constituted such crime. The objection that the indictment lacks the necessary definiteness is plainly without merit and must be overruled."

This Act applies only to threats against the President in his public character and capacity, that being the limit of the congressional power. Hence an indictment which merely alleges a threat against "the President of the United States" is insufficient. U. S. v. Metzendorf, (D. C. Mont. 1918) 252 Fed. 933, wherein it was said: "In the matter of the defense's second contention, the indictment, merely alleging the threat was against 'the President of the United States,' is open to the construction that the threat was against the President on account of his private character and capacity, and so does not charge an offense. Statutory language is not sufficient in cases where, as here, it may apply to innocent as well as to guilty acts. The indictment must add to the statutory words enough to directly and positively charge the offense denounced by the statute, so that, if all be proven, the defendant cannot be innocent. Otherwise, the presumption of innocence requires construction favorable to the accused. In this respect the indictment is fatally defective. That accused used the word 'President' does not demonstrate the threat was on account of the office. The title is commonly used in references to the President in private as well as public character and capacity."

Similarly an indictment under this Act which alleges that the defendant stated: "If I got hold of President Wilson, I would shoot him," is insufficient in that "it is as open to the construction that it relates to a situation past, and so is not an avowed determination to injure presently or in the future, as it is to the construction that it relates to a future situation, and so is an avowed determination to injure in the future. U. S. v. Metzendorf, (D. C. Mont. 1918) 252 Fed. 933.

Defenses.—It is no defense that the defendant made the remarks as a joke, where it is not shown that those present understood that he was joking. The mere fact that the defendant did not intend to carry out his threat is immaterial. Ragansky v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 643, 165 C. C. A. 269.

PRISONS AND PRISONERS

Authority of Attorney-General.—To the same effect as original annotation, see Kelher v. Mitchell, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 250 Fed. 904, wherein it was further said: "The authority to transfer under this statute is explicitly limited to cases where 'at any time during the term of imprisonment there may be no penitentiary or jail suitable for the confinement of convicts or available therefor' in the district in question. This restriction seems not to have arisen from mistaken language or inaccuracy of expression. It was in the statute when first passed many years ago, and has been consistently retained through all the subsequent amendments. It is expressly repeated in that part of the section which provides for the expense of transportation, and in that connection has been given its literal meaning by the Supreme Court. U. S. v. McMahon, 164 U. S. 81 at 86, 17 Sup. Ct. 28, 41 L. ed. 357. . . The limitation under discussion on the right of transfer is not of a merely directory or technical character, in which case it might perhaps be disregarded, but is substantial, and was intended by Congress to protect prisoners against unnecessary transfers to prisons remote from the place of sentence. The legislation in connection with the establishment of the federal prisons did not, apparently, enlarge the Attorney General's power to make transfers, but only increased the number of places to which transfers might, in authorized cases, be ordered. The further question whether there is any statutory authority to transfer to another prison within the district is not involved in the present case."

Persons convicted by United States court in China—Place of confinement.—The Philippine Islands are a territory within the meaning of this section, and as there is no suitable prison at Shanghai, China, for the confinement of convicts sentenced to imprisonment for long terms, the Bilibid Prison at Manila will therefore be designated as the place of confinement for United States prisoners who have been or may be in future convicted and sentenced by the United States Court for China, at Shanghai, to terms of imprisonment exceeding three years. ### VI. ACCEPTANCE (p. 343)

Effect of acceptance.—A proposal to furnish stamped envelopes and newspaper wrappers in accordance with an advertisement by the Post Office Department for bids, followed by the acceptance by the department of such proposal and the entry of a formal order to that effect, the bidder being the lowest, and having been found upon investigation to be financially responsible, creates a contract of the same force and effect as though such contract were formally signed and the bond formally approved. U. S. v. Purcell Envelope Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 313, 39 S. Ct. 300, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 211, and following Garfield v. U. S., (1876) 93 U. S. 242, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 779.

I. CONSTRUCTION

1. In General

Liberal construction.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Robinson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 461, 163 C. C. A. 637; U. S. v. Lowrance, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 122, 164 C. C. A. 234.

"Completion."—"The word 'completion' in view of the purposes of the statute, and the attitude of the courts in giving those purposes effect, must be construed as meaning that the contract was completed in the sense that the United States was satisfied that enough had been done to discharge the surety as to the United States. Any other construction would inevitably lead to the defeat of some of the essential purposes for which the statute was enacted. A subcontractor who had performed his work would be compelled to wait for some indefinite period because some other subcontractor, or the main contractor himself by reason of some default or dispute made necessary the reservation of a certain sum to make good that default or dispose of that dispute. It can readily be seen that in a contract involving, as did the contract at bar, over a million dollars, a subcontractor could be kept out of his money because of a dispute over a comparatively small sum, notwithstanding the fact that the government was satisfied to the point where it no longer looked to the surety bonds. Remembering that the purpose of the statute in this regard was to protect the United States, it follows that there is no merit in the contention that the subcontractor must wait to begin his action until disputes as to completion are finally settled, notwithstanding that the government on its part is entirely satisfied and approves the final settlement of the contract." Robinson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 461, 163 C. C. A. 637.

2. Persons Included (p. 377)

Person injured by work.—The United States is not entitled to sue on the bond for the benefit of an adjacent proprietor whose property is injured by blasting incident to the work contracted for. U. S. v. C. A. Rifle Co., (W. D. Pa. 1917) 247 Fed. 374, wherein it was said: "I think these propositions may be safely asserted:

"First. The right to recover in this action stands as if the above-recited acts of Congress had never been passed.

"Second. The United States is not liable to the Institute for the damages occasioned by its contractor in the negligent execution of the work which the latter contracted to perform.

"Third. For such negligence, resulting in injury, the Institute could maintain an action against the contractor.

"Fourth. The provisions in the contract between the United States and the Rifle Company were intended for the benefit of the United States and no other person. If the action were on the contract, and not on the bond, the Institute, not being a party to that contract, would have no standing.

"Fifth. The action being brought upon the bond securing the faithful performance of the conditions of the contract gives the Institute no other or higher rights. There is no covenant or promise in that instrument, made by the United States, to pay third parties any damages suffered, if the contractor fails to pay. It follows that, not being a party to the obligation, the Institute could maintain no action on the bond in its own name, and making itself use plaintiff did not change its status. These principles are sustained in First M. E. Church v. Isenberg, 246 Pa. 221, 92 Atl. 141; Foundry Co. v. National Surety Co., 92 Fed. 549, 34 C. C. A. 526; Eberhart v. United States, 204 Fed. 884, 123 C. C. A. 180.

"Sixth. The United States, having sustained no damage, could maintain no action in its own name, and this action, being for the benefit of the Carnegie Institute of Technology on a contract to which the latter was not a party, and in which it has no legal interest, cannot be maintained."

4. Labor and Materials Included (p. 379)

Board for workmen.—Where the contract is to be performed at a place far from human habitation the cost of lodging and food for the workmen is included in a bond to pay for "labor and materials in the prosecution of the work." McPhee v. U. S., (Colo. 1918) 174 Pac. 808.

Teams used by a subcontractor and feed for them are materials within the meaning of the statute. U. S. v. Lowrance, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 122, 164 C. C. A. 234, reversing (E. D. Ark. 1916) 236 Fed. 1006, in original annotation. The court said: "In the case at bar the contractors undertook, not only to complete an embankment or levee according to specifications, but also to furnish the necessary 'plant' to the satisfaction of a government official; and power was reserved to the latter to employ additional plant, if progress under the contract was not satisfactory. Although the complaint does not set forth the actual situation at the levee, it may be reasonably inferred on a motion to dismiss that the plant to be assembled for the work included teams as well as wagons, scrapers, axes, stump pullers, and the like. Teams brought together for such work are more naturally classified with implements than with workmen, and feed for the teams so employed with fuel for power than with the board of men whom the circumstances of employment leave free to exercise an independent choice. It is said that it would have been necessary to feed the teams, whether they were working or not. But that is not the test, as is shown by Brogan v. National Surety Co. In that case the location of the work made it necessary for the contractor to provide board and lodging for the men on the ground. He did so under an arrangement by which he was to deduct a stated amount monthly from their wages. Protection under the statutory bond was given one who furnished him with groceries and provisions. It was held that the supplies had a proximate relation to performance of the contract work. Though the circumstances of the case before us are not fully stated, we do not think it can be said from the face of the complaint that the furnishing of the feed for the teams was a casual transaction, but indirectly related to the performance of the levee contract. It is averred that the feed was "used and consumed . . . in the prosecution and execution of the earth-work."

IV. ASSIGNABILITY OF CLAIM (p. 382)

Assignment of claims.—To same effect as original annotation, see Bartlett v. Dings, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 322, 161 C. C. A. 330.

V. JURISDICTION (p. 383)

Federal courts.—An action will not lie in a state court against a state receiver of an indemnity company on a claim against it as surety on a public contractor's bond. The federal courts alone have jurisdiction. MacDonald v. Aetna Indemnity Co., (Conn. 1919) 105 Atl. 470.

VI. ACTION ON BOND (p. 384)

General scope of action.—A creditor who fails to present his claim cannot sue thereafter on the contractor's bond. U. S. v. Welles, (M. D. Pa. 1919) 256 Fed. 545, wherein it was said: "The statute in its general scope contemplates one trial or submission for adjudication of all the intervening claims, in order that its provisions may be harmoniously carried into effect. The action provided is on the bond for the recovery of the penalty which stands primarily for the protection of the government, and then for distribution among the creditors of the remaining part of the penalty after the satisfaction of the government's demand. If the full amount of the liability of the surety on said bond is insufficient to pay the full amount of said claims and demands, then, after paying the full amount due to the United States, the remainder shall be distributed pro rata among said interveners. It is quite clear that it was intended that the rights of all parties intervening should be determined and adjudicated in one trial and by one judgment; otherwise the rights of the several plaintiffs and defendants could not be determined and adjudicated as provided."

Who may sue.—The limitation of time in the statute was intended for the benefit of the United States, and as soon as the rights of the United States on the bond are out of the way the subcontractors have the right to sue, assuming, of course, that their own contracts give them rights against the main contractor. In other words, when it appears that the United States, through its proper officials, has indicated a determination not to sue on the bond by final settlement, and six months have elapsed, then the security becomes open to those who have trusted to the credit of the main contractor. Robinson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 461, 163 C. C. A. 637.

Time of bringing suit on bond.—Under this Act the time limit for an intervening creditor is the same as in the case of an original party complainant. Pederson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 622, 165 C. C. A. 248.

"The one-year statute of limitation begins to run from the time of settlement by the government with the contractors." Bartlett v. Dings, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 322, 161 C. C. A. 330.

Final settlement of the contract.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see U. S. v. Title Guaranty, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 958, 166 C. C. A. 320, wherein it was further said: "In the present case the building had been completed and the government had accepted the work and occupied the building prior to the date the final voucher was made out. The voucher was prepared by the public works officer who represented the government in the construction of the building. He termed his statement a 'final voucher.' Before sending it to the government he secured from the contractor a certificate of its correctness. It was then examined and approved by the acting chief of the bureau in charge of the construction.

"Made under these circumstances, when the building was fully completed, accepted, and occupied by the government, at a time when the parties were concerned only in a final settlement of the contract, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that the date of the approval of this voucher constituted the date from which the six months period ran."

Complete payment.—Where a subcontractor's contract provided that the final payment on his contract was to be made within ten days after the "final approval and complete payment" of the work by the government it was held that the "complete payment" mentioned in the subcontracts is the final payment to be made by the United States in accordance with its final settlement, whereby is meant the final amount acknowledged by the United States to be due. Robinson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 461, 163 C. C. A. 637, wherein the court said: "As between the United States and Robinson, the latter may not be satisfied, and may contest the position of the United States, as he is now doing in the Court of Claims; but such controversy on the facts in this case, the construction of the statute, the main contract, and the subcontracts, does not in any manner affect the rights of the subcontractors as against Robinson. So to hold is not to rewrite the contracts as between Robinson and the subcontractors, as counsel earnestly contend, but is merely to give the language of the parties the meaning which they intended it should have, for they were referring directly to the contract with the United States, with its necessary security, and it is clear that the language thus used in the subcontracts could never have been intended, in effect, to require the subcontractors to waive their rights upon the bond, or to be postponed indefinitely after the United States had so acted as to discharge all liability on the bond against it, and after the necessary six months had elapsed."

Contract or notice exempting contractor is unavailing.—"The claim that by reason of the contract between appellant and Gunder & Co., the subcontractors, the appellant is not liable, is untenable, and cannot affect the materialmen and laborers. The act of Congress creates a direct liability on the surety to these persons. The posting of notices by Bartlett & Kling that it would not be responsible to the employees for its subcontractors does not release it from liability. If that were permitted, the law would be a snare and a delusion, because every contractor would avail himself of it, and deprive the materialmen and laborers of the benefits of the act." Bartlett v. Dings, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918), 249 Fed. 322, 161 C. C. A. 330.

Suit on defective bond.—Where a bond of a contractor for public work is defective in that it does not impose "the additional obligation" to make payments to all persons supplying labor and material, a suit on it cannot be maintained under this Act for the benefit of such persons. U. S. v. Montgomery Heating, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919), 255 Fed. 683, 167 C. C. A. 59. The court said: "All of the cases construing the original act and the amendment (the provision with reference to materialmen and laborers being substantially the same) assume that the specific provision gives to the bond an effect which would not result from the provision of an ordinary penal bond. Whether this be true or not, Congress had the right to determine what should be the provisions of a bond, the execution of which would confer jurisdiction upon the federal courts which they might not otherwise have. The exact point involved was decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in Babcock & Wilcox v. American Surety Co., 236 Fed. 340, 149 C. C. A. 472, and is in accordance with the opinion which has been reached upon a consideration of the statute itself, and of the opinions of the Supreme Court, to the effect that the statutory bond not having been executed, and the court not otherwise having jurisdiction, the case was properly dismissed."

Interest.—A materialman recovering on the contractor's bond is entitled to interest from the time his demand accrued. Pederson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 622, 165 C. C. A. 248.

An assignee intervening to prosecute labor claims is entitled to interest from the date of his intervention. Bartlett v. Dings, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 322, 161 C. C. A. 330.

PUBLIC LANDS

Jurisdiction of courts pending decision by Land Office.—"Nothing in our public land laws is more firmly settled than that the sale and disposal of the public lands has been placed by statute under the control of the Land Department, at the head of which is the Secretary of the Interior, and which includes a bureau headed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to whom, as a special tribunal with quasi judicial powers, Congress has confided the execution of the laws which it has enacted for the sale and disposal of the various kinds of public lands. As was said in Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Grey Eagle Oil Co., (C. C.) 104 Fed. 20, no court can lawfully anticipate what the decision of that department may be in respect to any contest arising before it, nor direct in advance what its decision should be, even in matters of law, much less in respect to matters of fact. After, however, the proceedings in the Land Department have come to an end by the issuing of the government title, that the courts are open for the control of such title, either by the government, in the event that its title has been procured either by fraud or in any other illegal way, or at the suit of any private party equitably entitled thereto, is established by almost innumerable decisions." Devil's Den Consol. Oil Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 548, 163 C. C. A. 542.

Notice from record.—The record of a patent in the General Land Office is notice to the taxing officers of the county where the land is situated. Bell v. George, (1918) 275 Mo. 17, 204 S. W. 516.

Jurisdiction.—The Court of Claims has jurisdiction of a claim arising under this section. U. S. v. Laughlin, (1919) 249 U. S. 440, 39 S. Ct. 340, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 292.

II. Who may enter homestead.
IV. Requisites to valid entry.

II. WHO MAY ENTER HOMESTEAD (p. 545)

Head of the family.—An application while disclosing that the applicant was a minor and unmarried asserted in a general way that he was the head of a family and therefore a qualified applicant by reason of having adopted a minor child is insufficient to show that applicant was head of a family, as there was no statement respecting the time, place or mode of adoption or the identity of the child. Fisher v. Rule, (1919) 248 U. S. 314, 36 S. Ct. 122, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 314, 147 C. C. A. 55.

Ownership of other land.—A person disqualified to take a homestead because of the ownership of more than 160 acres of land may qualify himself by transferring such land provided the transfer is made on good faith and conveys the legal title. Brown v. Almasie, (1919) 91 Ore. 928, 178 Pac. 928; holding pretended transfer to be fraudulent.

IV. REQUISITES TO VALID ENTRY (p. 550)

In U. S. v. Howard, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 455, 159 C. C. A. 509, entry and occupation were held to be insufficient, the facts being stated as follows: "The defendant was a single man when he applied for this homestead, but was married about two years before he made final proofs. The undisputed proof shows that during the five-year period his true residence was five miles distant from this land, on other land which he rented and cultivated, where he kept his horses and farm implements, his household furniture and supplies. He prepared a rude dugout on the land claimed as a homestead, in which he placed a bed, a stove, and a table; but his attempts at occupation of this as a dwelling were limited to occasional visits for one night at a time, and these visits were made not oftener than three or four times in any six months period during this five years. On these occasional visits he would take from his home on the rented land enough provisions for one or two meals on the homestead. No crops were raised on the land, nor did the claimant ever attempt to cultivate the land. The only other improvement than the dugout was some wire fencing."

I. Alienation.
VI. Patent.
VII. Decease of entryman.

I. ALIENATION (p. 559)

Agreement to sell.—To the same effect as the second paragraph of the original annotation see Hale v. McGraw, (Ala. 1918) 73 So. 214, wherein the court said: "It is insisted by counsel for appellees that, as this was a homestead entry, under these circumstances, any conveyance by McGraw, although by deed with covenants of warranty, would be absolutely void as against public policy—citing Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 10 Sup. Ct. 905, 34 L. Ed. 272; Millikin v. Carmichael, 134 Ala. 623, 33 South. 9, 92 Am. St. Rep. 45; Mulloy v. Cook, 101 Ala. 178, 10 South. 349, 17 South. 89; Woodstock T. Co. v. Strickland et al., 121 Ala. 616, 25 South. 818; to which may be added Hartman v. Butterfield Lbr. Co., 199 U. S. 335, 26 Sup. Ct. 63, 50 L. Ed. 217; Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 13 Sup. Ct. 950, 37 L. Ed. 819; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 24 Sup. Ct. 512, 48 L. Ed. 769; K. C. Lbr. Co. v. Moores, 212 Fed. 153, 129 C. C. A. 1; McCollum v. Edmonds, 109 Ala. 322, 19 South. 501.

"Counsel for appellants rely upon the well-recognized rule that when a patent is issued it inures at once to the grantee of the patentee under the deed containing covenants of warranty of title, and relates back to the date of entry—citing Croft v. Thornton, 125 Ala. 391, 28 South. 84; Birmingham Coal & I. Co. v. Arnett, 181 Ala. 621, 62 South. 26; Smart v. Kennedy, 123 Ala. 627, 26 South. 198; Veitch v. Hard, 75 75 South. 405, among other authorities. This doctrine is of course not controverted in the present case, and was recognized by this court in its earliest history in Kennedy v. McCartney, 4 Port. 141. That case, however, recognized as an exception to the rule those instances where the grantor was prohibited from selling either by the letter, spirit, or policy of a legislative act using the following language: 'Where one sells land to which he has no right, with warranty of title, and he afterwards acquires a good title, it passes instantly to his vendee, and he is estopped from denying that he had no right at the time of his sale. This rule only applies where the vendor had no valid title at the time of executing the deed, and not where he is inhibited from selling, by the letter, spirit or policy of a legislative act.'

"The insistence here is that, as the land in question was acquired by homestead entry, any conveyance or contract to convey made by the entryman before perfecting his rights to a patent was violative of the policy of the homestead statute, and was therefore invalid and incapable of enforcement. This contention is upheld in the case of Anderson v. Carkins, supra, which seems to be the leading authority upon that question, and which has not been disturbed by any subsequent decisions of the United States Supreme Court. The opinion fully discusses sections 2290 and 2291 of the United States Revised Statutes relating to homestead claims, and the legislative policy in regard thereto. In the more recent case of Adams v. Church, supra, the court makes reference to the Anderson Case, using the following language: 'In this state of the law, this court, in the Anderson Case, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Brewer, sustained the contention in behalf of Anderson that the homestead is a gift from the government to the homesteader, conditioned upon his occupation for five years, and upon his making no disposition or alienation during such term; that the affidavit of nonalienation is as clear an expression of legislative intent as a direct prohibition; that the whole policy of government in this respect would be thwarted if the homesteader were permitted to alienate prior to the expiration of the five years; that a successful alienation could be accomplished only by perjury, and an attempted alienation would only offer a constant inducement to the homesteader to abandon his occupation, and thus deprive the purchaser of any possibility of acquiring title to the land; that a contract whose consummation necessarily rests on perjury is illegal; and that courts of equity would not enforce the performance of such contracts "founded upon perjury and entered into in defiance of a clearly expressed will of the government."' The case was again brought into view in Hartman v. Butterfield Lbr. Co., 199 U. S. 335, 26 Sup. Ct. 63, 50 L. Ed. 217, and in the very recent case of K. C. Lbr. Co. v. Moores, 212 Fed. 153, 129 C. C. A. 1 (a case here directly in point), the court relies upon the Anderson Case as sustaining the conclusion there reached. In Shorman v. Eakin, 47 Ark. 351, 1 S. W. 559, cited by this court in Carroll v. Draughon, 173 Ala. 327, 56 South. 207, there is found a very interesting discussion on this question. This court in Millikin v. Carmichael, supra, following the lead of the Anderson Case, also declared such contracts void as against public policy, and what was there said may be considered decisive of the question here involved."

Mortgage as alienation.—The question whether a mortgage upon land made before the issuance of a receiver's certificate constitutes an alienation prohibited by this section does not need to be answered where it appears that the mortgage has long since been foreclosed. Quinn v. Tennessee Coal, etc., R. Co., (Ala. 1917), 77 So. 340, wherein the court said: "The great weight of authority seems to be that a mortgage upon the land, even before the issuance of the receiver's certificate, is binding and is not such an alienation as is prohibited by the federal statute. See Stark v. Morgan, (1906) 73 Kan. 453, 85 Pac. 567, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 934, and note, 9 Ann. Cas. 930, for a full discussion of this subject. It is true that in those jurisdictions so holding, a mortgage is regarded as merely a security for a debt, while with us it has a dual capacity, 'a conveyance of an estate in lands and a security for a debt, bearing one character in a court of law and another in a court of equity.' Welsh v. Phillips, (1875) 54 Ala. 309, 25 Am. Rep. 679. We are relieved, however, from having to decide whether or not this would make said cases applicable to this jurisdiction when the mortgage was executory, as the facts in this case show that the mortgage has long since been foreclosed, and has become fully executed, and this being the case this point was not available to these appellants. Gamble v. Caldwell, (1893) 98 Ala. 577, 12 So. 424; Farrior v. New Eng. Mortg. Security Co., (1889) 88 Ala. 275, 7 So. 200; Cranor Co. v. Miller, (1906) 147 Ala. 268, 41 So. 678. It was expressly held in the case of Hartman v. Butterfield Lumber Co., (1905) 199 U. S. 335, 26 S. Ct. 63, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 217, that this defense was not available against an executed contract, wherein the case of Anderson v. Carkins, supra, was explained and differentiated and the cases of Madden v. Floyd, (1881) 69 Ala. 221, and Gordon v. Tweedy, (1881) 71 Ala. 202, are cited in support of the holding. The case of Anderson v. Carkins, supra, dealt with a bill to specifically perform a contract violative of public policy and the federal statutes, but not with a mortgage after it had been foreclosed and had become fully executed. The case of Smart v. Kennedy, (1898) 123 Ala. 629, 26 So. 198, deal with a mortgage after the issuance of the receiver's certificate and upheld same, and did not deal with the effect that the federal statute would have upon a mortgage after it was foreclosed, although made before the issuance of the certificate. As the defendant's evidence showed that the mortgage had been foreclosed the trial court did not commit reversible error in not sustaining plaintiff's objection to same upon the ground that it was prior in date to the final certificate."

VI. PATENT (p. 566)

Cancellation.—In order to obtain a patent, the entryman was required by section 2291 of the Revised Statutes to present final proofs after the expiration of five years, and before the expiration of seven years, from the date of entry, showing that the entryman had resided upon and cultivated the land for a term of five years immediately succeeding the initiation of the homestead entry. To earn the grant of a patent under this section of the statute, the entryman must maintain his residence upon and must cultivate the land for the next five years after he makes his initial entry. As the defendant did not comply with this statute, but obtained a patent by fraudulent representations that he had followed its provisions, he may not avoid a cancellation of the patent by showing that he resided upon the land for three years after his patent was obtained, and has made some improvements and cultivated a portion of the land. U. S. v. Howard, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 455, 159 C. C. A. 509.

Return of value of improvements.—On the cancellation of a patent the government is not bound to place the entryman in statu quo. U. S. v. Howard, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 455, 159 C. C. A. 509, following Causey v. U. S. (1916) 240 U. S. 399.

Fastening trust on patent.—In a suit to have a person holding a patent to land declared a trustee for the plaintiff of the title to the land, the plaintiff to succeed must show a better right to the land than the patentee. It is not sufficient to show that the patentee ought not to have received the patent. Fisher v. Rule, (1919) 248 U. S. 314, 36 S. Ct. 122, 63 U. S. (L. ed.)—, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 861, 147 C. C. A. 55.

VII. DECEASE OF ENTRYMAN (p. 568)

Alien heirs.—An infant heir born in the United States is a citizen within the meaning of this section and it is immaterial that the parents were foreign born and unnaturalized. Nyman v. Erickson, (1918) 100 Wash. 149, 170 Pac. 546.

If after final proof and final certificate issued to "the heirs of Erick Nyman, deceased," the final proof is suspended for the benefit of all the heirs of the deceased entryman, alien heirs who become citizens pending such suspension and prior to the ordering of a patent to issue to the "heirs of decedent" are within the terms of the patent. Nyman v. Erickson, (1918) 100 Wash. 149, 170 Pac. 546, wherein the court said: "It is true that, under the statutes and decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, the heirs succeeded to such rights, not by inheritance, but by virtue of the law, which merely grants to them preference rights. Towner v. Rodegeb, (1903) 33 Wash. 153, 74 Pac. 50, [99 A. S. R. 936]. But the preference rights so granted are to the lawful heirs of the deceased entryman.

Those rights are governed generally as of the time when the title passed from the United States, and it is generally held that title passes from the United States when the final certificate issues from the land office to the person or persons who made final proof on the entry. But here that final proof and final certificate were suspended for the benefit of all the heirs of the deceased entryman. Upon finally ordering patent to issue to the 'heirs of decedent,' it was not necessary to order a new final certificate to issue, as the original one was issued to 'the heirs of Erick Nyman, deceased.' Although that order required that patent issue in accordance with the final certificate, and the final certificate was dated July 1, 1909, that final certificate had been suspended and ineffectual from July 1, 1909, until the order for the patent issued. At that time, as heretofore stated, the two children of the deceased entryman and the grandchildren were qualified under the homestead law to acquire the preference rights, and at that time under the laws of the state of Washington they were heirs, and the only heirs, of the deceased entryman who were entitled to take title."

Succession of widow to inchoate homestead right.—Under this section and section 2292 no rights accrue to the entryman who dies before the entry is perfected, and nothing passes under the inheritance law of a state. But where the wife survives the entryman and becomes his widow she acquired a right to the land, whether the entry was made before or after her marriage to the entryman. And where the widow complies with the provisions of the homestead law and submits proof thereof at the local office, she acquires a vested interest in the land, to the exclusion of the heirs of the entryman. Ford v. Edenborn, (1918) 142 La. 927, 77 So. 851.

Construction and purpose of section.—To the same effect as the original annotation see Nyman v. Erickson, (1918) 100 Wash. 149, 170 Pac. 546.

Vol. VIII, p. 575, sec. 2296. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 307.]

Constitutionality of exemption.—In Ruddy v. Rossi, (1918) 248 U. S. 104, 39 S. Ct. 46, 63 U. S. (L. ed.)— (reversing on other grounds (1916) 28 Idaho 376, 154 Pac. 977), the court said: "Did Congress have power to restrict alienation of homestead lands after conveyance by the United States in fee simple? This question undoubtedly presents difficulties which we are not disposed to minimize. In Wright v. Morgan, 191 U. S. 55, 58, a similar point was suggested but not decided. The Constitution declares 'The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States'; and it is settled that Congress has plenary power to dispose of public lands. United States v. Gratiot, 14 Pet. 526, 537. They may be leased, sold or given away upon such terms and conditions as the public interests require. Instead of granting fee simple titles with exemption from certain debts, long leases might have been made or conditional titles bestowed in such fashion as practically to protect homesteads from all indebtedness.

"The sound construction of the Constitution must allow to the national legislature that discretion, with respect to the means by which the powers it confers are to be carried into execution, which will enable that body to perform the high duties assigned it, in the manner most beneficial to the people. Let the end be legitimate, let it be within the scope of the Constitution, and all means which are appropriate, which are plainly adapted to that end, which are not prohibited, but consist with the letter and spirit of the Constitution, are constitutional." McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 421.

"Acting within its discretion, Congress determined that in order promptly to dispose of public lands and bring about their permanent occupation and development it was proper to create the designated exemption; and we are unable to say that the conclusion was ill-founded or that the means were either prohibited or not appropriate to the adequate performance of the high duties which the legislature owed to the public."

Mechanic's lien.—Under this section, which provides that no lands acquired under the homestead laws of the United States shall in any event become liable to the satisfaction of any debt contracted prior to the issuing of the patent therefor, a mechanic's lien which arises by operation of law upon the filing of a lien statement for building materials furnished does not attach to land acquired under the homestead laws, where the debt was contracted and the materials furnished before the patent was issued. Bovey-Shute Lumber Co. v. Erickson, (N. D. 1918) 170 N. W. 628, wherein the court said: "While the courts are all agreed as to the validity of the section, and the duty of the courts to enforce it, they have differed as to the construction to be placed upon it. Some courts have held that 'the issuing of the patent refers to the time when the patent ought to issue, and not to the mere clerical work of issuing it, and hence that the homestead is liable for debts contracted after the right to a patent became complete, although before it was actually issued.' But other courts have held 'that the date of the actual issuance of the patent fixes the time when the liability of the land begins, and it is not liable for debts contracted before that time, although after the right to the patent was complete.' . . . With all due respect for the authorities to the contrary, we are of the opinion that section 2296, supra, means what it says. Its language is plain and unequivocal. It says that lands acquired under the provisions of the homestead laws shall in no event 'become liable to the satisfaction of any debt contracted prior to the issuance of the patent therefor.' If Congress had intended that the exemption should apply only to debts contracted prior to the issuance of the receiver's final certificate, it would doubtless have said so. In order to ascertain the legislative intention, the primary rule is that a statute is to receive that meaning which the ordinary reading of its language warrants, and, if the language is clear and admits of but one meaning, the lawmaking body should be deemed to have meant what it has plainly expressed, and in such case there is no room for construction."

An indebtedness which accrued after a final entry and before the issuance of a patent is affected by this section as well as an indebtedness which accrued before the final entry. Ruddy v. Rossi, (1918) 248 U. S. 104, 39 S. Ct. 46, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1916) 28 Idaho 376, 154 Pac. 977.

Enlarged homesteads are "lands acquired under the provisions of this chapter." In re Auge, (D. C. Mont. 1916) 238 Fed. 621.

Collateral attack on sale.—The confirmation of a sheriff's sale on execution is not such an adjudication that the sale is lawful as to bar an action for damages for selling a homestead for a debt contracted prior to the issuance of the patent. Brewer v. Warner, (1919) 105 Kan. 168, 182 Pac. 411. As to the effect of an adjudication the court said obiter: "The federal statute is open to interpretation. Under certain circumstances a government homestead may be sold to satisfy debts contracted before patent, notwithstanding the declaration that 'no lands . . . shall in any event become liable,' etc. In applying the statute questions of fact arise: When was the debt created, and when was the patent issued? There is abundant room, therefore, for exercise of the judicial function, and if, in exercise of that function, it has been adjudicated that homestead land was subject to sale on execution, it is of no consequence that the court erred. The adjudication cannot be attacked except by direct proceeding in the same court or by appeal."

Annulment of patent on mineral land.— "To justify the annulment of a homestead patent as wrongfully covering mineral land, it must appear that at the time of the proceedings which resulted in the patent 'the land was known to be valuable for mineral;' that is to say, it must appear that the known conditions at the time of those proceedings were plainly such as to engender the belief that the land contained mineral deposits of such quality and in such quantity as would render their extraction profitable and justify expenditures to that end. If at that time the land was not thus known to be valuable for mineral, subsequent discoveries will not affect the patent. The inquiry must be directed to the situation at that time, as were the applicant's proofs and the finding of the land officers. If the proofs were not false then, they cannot be condemned, nor the good faith of the applicant impugned, by reason of any subsequent change in the conditions." U. S. v. Porter Fuel Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 769, 159 C. C. A. 627, holding evidence to be insufficient to warrant annulment.

Land grant to Northern Pacific Railroad Company.—In the absence of special provision the minimum price for lands in the odd-numbered sections within the primary limits of the land grant made to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company by the Act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217), was fixed by this section at $1.25 per acre, and under section 2259 a qualified pre-emptor was entitled to purchase at the minimum price. U. S. v. Laughlin, (1919) 249 U. S. 440, 39 S. Ct. 340, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 292.

II. NATURE OF TRUST AND TITLE AND AUTHORITY OF TRUSTEE (p. 642)

Conflict with railroad land grant.—By Act of July 22, 1854 (Act of Congress, July 22, 1854, ch. 103, 10 Stat. 308), sections 16 and 36 of each township in the territory of New Mexico were reserved for the purpose of being applied to schools in said territory. By Act of July 27, 1866 (Act of Congress July 27, 1866, ch. 278, 14 Stat. 292), Congress provided for the incorporation of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, which said corporation proposed to build a railroad through the then territory of New Mexico. Section 2 of the Act gave the said railroad company a right of way through the public lands of the United States, "including all necessary grounds for station buildings, workshops, depots, . . . switches," etc. On January 15, 1891 (Act of Congress Jan. 15, 1891, ch. 73, 26 Stat. 718), an Act was passed for the relief of the inhabitants of Gallup, N. M., which said Act authorized the probate judge of Bernalillo county to enter in trust for the occupants and inhabitants of said town, for town-site purposes, the southeast quarter of section 16, township 15 north, range 18 west, subject to the provisions of sections 2387, 2388, and 2389 of chapter 8 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. Pursuant to this Act the probate judge of Bernalillo county, on June 17, 1891, applied to enter said land. Application was made for the full quarter section. The receiver issued to said probate judge a final receipt, which had noted thereon that it was "subject to the station grounds and right of way of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, containing 27.72 acres of land, as shown by survey map on file in this office." The patent excepted such station grounds, containing 27.72 acres, from the operation thereof. In 1884 the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company filed with the Secretary of the Interior a map showing its claim to said station grounds. It was held (a) that the relief Act of January 15, 1891, did not grant to the probate judge of Bernalillo county such quarter section of land, but simply authorized him to enter the same in trust for the occupants and inhabitants of the town of Gallup for town-site purposes; that such entry was subject to the provisions of the general town-site law; that, until such entry was made pursuant to the provisions of such law, the probate judge of such county took no title to the land. (b) Under the provisions of R. S. sec. 2388, the probate judge was only authorized to enter land the title to which was in the United States at the date of the application; that it was incumbent upon the proper officers of the land department of the United States, upon application being made to enter lands for town-site purposes, to determine whether or not such lands were subject to entry, and that such determination on the part of said officers was judicial in character. (c) When the application was made herein the officers of the land department at Santa Fé determined that the title to the right of way and station grounds of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company had vested in such company, consequently had passed from the United States, and the action of such officers in so determining is not subject to collateral attack. Dugan v. Montoya, (1918) 24 N. M. 102, 173 Pac. 118.

Injunction against drilling on disputed claims.—Where lands are withdrawn under this section and the occupant protests on the ground that he is diligently prosecuting oil discovery work, an injunction may be granted on the suit of the government against further drilling pending the decision of the question raised by the protest, and a receiver appointed, "but the receiver will in no way interfere with the present management of the property" by the occupant. *U. Second subdivision—monument as best evidence.—"It is elementary that courses, distances, and quantities yield to monuments set in the original survey, and that when such monuments are found they establish the boundaries of the survey; this for the reason that they are better evidence of what the surveyor did than are plats or field notes. . . . This rule applies, however, only in the location of lines run and marked, and affords no aid in determining the question of what section is included in such boundaries." *Morse v. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 178, 165 C. C. A. 78, wherein it was said: "By the statutes of Montana it is only property which has a taxable status on 12 o'clock noon on the first Monday in March of each year that may be taxed for that year. It was shown in the pleadings that for all the lands involved the field work for surveying was done prior to the first Monday in March, 1914, but that the plats were not approved by the surveyor-general of Montana until June 12, 1915, and that none of the plats of the surveys was approved by the Commissioner of the General Land Office until December 17, 1915, and that the approved plats were not filed in the local land office until March 8 and March 15, 1916. It follows that at the time of the assessments for the years 1914 and 1915 the survey of the lands involved had not been completed, and therefore the lands had not then been identified, so as to be rendered subject to taxation."

Application of Act.—This Act applies only to railroad and wagon grants, and has no application to swamp land or other grants. (1916) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 572.

Patent obtained by fraud.—This section is not applicable in a suit to cancel a patent for fraud, "for it has to do, not with cases of patents issued as a result of fraud, but with those involving rights of purchasers in good faith where patents have been erroneously issued." Fricks v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 612, 166 C. C. A. 646.

Effect of release of base lands.—The right to lieu lands is complete when the reselection is made, and the subsequent release of the base lands from the reserve does not impair the right. *Walker v. Vol. VIII, p. 779, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 374.]

When title passes to state.—The Act as extended to the state of New Mexico by the enabling act operates as a present grant to the state of school sections, subject only to identification by survey, whereupon title vested in the state as of the date of the enabling act. Under the terms of the enabling act, as soon as such lands are surveyed in the field, the state acquires such an interest therein as entitles it to take possession thereof or to lease the same to private persons. Dallas v. Swigart, (1918) 24 N. M. 1, 172 Pac. 416.

Lands reserved for school purposes.—An enabling act reserving certain sections in every township for school purposes "when the land in the said territory shall be surveyed" does not invalidate the establishment of a highway where the highway was constructed before the survey was made. Greiner v. Park County, (Colo. 1918) 173 Pac. 719.

Land subject to grant.—"Public land."—The words "public lands" are not always used in the same sense. Their true meaning and effect are to be determined by the context in which they are used, and it is the duty of the court not to give such a meaning to the words as would destroy the object and purpose of the law or lead to absurd results. Jackman v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1918) 24 N. M. 278, 170 Pac. 1036.

Land subject to grant—Land reserved from entry and sale.—If at the time the railroad company seeks to appropriate land which is a part of the public lands of the United States, such land is subject to entry and sale, it is entitled to the benefits of the Act, notwithstanding that such land may have been reserved from entry and sale at the date of the passage of this Act. The status of the land at the date the appropriation is sought controls the right of the railroad company; not its status at the date of such Act. Jackman v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1918) 24 N. M. 278, 170 Pac. 1036.

Two methods of acquiring ground.—This Act provides two methods by which a railroad company can acquire ground for its right of way and station grounds. Under the first section of the Act the right of way may become definitely located, and title acquired by the actual construction of the railroad over the public domain. Under the fourth section the right of way and station grounds may be acquired by (1) location of the road; (2) filing a profile of it in the local land office; and (3) the approval thereof by the Secretary of the Interior, to be noted upon the plats in the local land office. Jackman v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1918) 24 N. M. 278, 170 Pac. 1036.

Enlargement of grant by chief of Field Division.—The Chief of the Field Division of the General Land Office may not enlarge the grant to certain railway companies made by this Act of the right to take from the public lands adjacent to their lines the timber necessary for railroad construction, nor give rights in the public lands not conferred by the Act. Caldwell v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 14, 39 S. Ct. 397, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 53 Ct. Cl. 33.

Who may object to claim of railroad company.—One claiming under a homestead entry upon public land which a railway company claims under this Act has no standing to challenge the power of the railway company under its charter to build a line over such land. Van Dyke v. Arizona Eastern R. Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 49, 39 S. Ct. 29, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 18 Ariz. 220, 157 Pac. 1019.

Disposal of timber for profit.—The grant to certain railway companies made by this section of the right to take from public lands adjacent to their lines timber necessary for railway construction, did not include the right to dispose of, for profit, the "tie slash," i. e., the tops of trees the bodies of which were cut down to make railway ties, nor to make such tie slash an element of compensation to the agents employed by the railway companies to cut the timber. Caldwell v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 14, 39 S. Ct. 397, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 53 Ct. Cl. 33.

Persons appointed by a railway company as its timber agents to exercise its right under this Act to cut timber from public lands for railway construction purposes were given no right to vend for profit the "tie slash," i. e., the tops of trees the bodies of which were cut down by them for railway ties, by virtue of the provision of the Act of March 3, 1891, section 8 (see vol. 9, p. 629) that in criminal prosecutions for trespass on public timber lands, or in suits to recover timber or lumber cut, it shall be a defense if defendant shall show that the timber was cut or removed from the lands for use in the state by a resident thereof for agricultural, mining, manufacturing, or domestic purposes under the rules of the Interior Department, and has not been transported out of the state, since this Act expressly forbids its operation to enlarge the rights of any railway company to cut timber on the public domain. Caldwell v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 14, 39 S. Ct. 397, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 53 Ct. Cl. 33.

Filing of profile as directory.—The provision of this section which requires a railroad company, desiring to avail itself of the benefits of this Act, to file a profile of its road, within twelve months after the location of any section of twenty miles of its road, is directory, and a railroad company may file such map, and secure the benefits of the Act after such period of time has elapsed, if it so elects, and the fact that it has completed its railroad does not prevent it from obtaining station grounds under such Act, if the land is public land, subject to entry and sale, at the time it applies therefor. Jackman v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1918) 24 N. M. 278, 170 Pac. 1036.

A definite location of a right of way is made by the actual construction of the road, where the railway company changed its route as located by its original and approved map, and did not file its amended map and profile until after the road was completed. Van Dyke v. Arizona Eastern R. Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 49, 39 S. Ct. 29, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 18 Ariz. 220, 157 Pac. 1019.

Approval of profile.—The approval by the Secretary of the Interior of the profile of a railroad company, filed under the provisions of this Act, showing its claim to lands for station grounds, is conclusive against collateral attack, if such land was, at the time of such approval, public land of the United States, and subject to entry and sale. Jackman v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1918) 24 N. M. 278, 170 Pac. 1036.

Effect of approval.—Where a railroad company has complied with the provisions of this Act, and the Secretary of the Interior has approved its profile map, showing its right of way and station grounds, and such approval has been noted on the plats in the local land office, the omission of the reservation from the patent or final receipt of an entryman, who settled upon the land after the rights of the railroad company accrued, would not operate to give the patentee title to land which had been theretofore vested in the railroad company. Jackman v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1918) 24 N. M. 278, 170 Pac. 1036.

"Especially reserved from sale."—Lands in a forest reserve are specially reserved from sale. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 244 U. S. 351, 37 S. Ct. 625, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1184, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 288, 134 C. C. A. 84, which affirmed (D. C. Idaho 1913) 207 Fed. 164.

Approval of Secretary of Interior.—The actual construction of a railroad through a forest reserve must be deemed to have received the approval of the Secretary of the Interior conformably to this section where the railway company having secured a permit to enter the reserve for that purpose, and having obtained the secretary's approval of its map and profile, built the road through such reserve, but upon another line than the one shown by such map and profile. Van Dyke v. Arizona Eastern R. Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 49, 39 S. Ct. 29, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 18 Ariz. 220, 157 Pac. 1019.

This section commits to the Secretary of the Interior the question of determining whether the public will be injuriously affected by the grant of a right of way to a railroad through a forest reserve and authorizes him to file and approve surveys and plats of the right of way. The measure of his discretion is large and only through his approval can a right of way be acquired. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 244 U. S. 351, 37 S. Ct. 625, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1184, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 288, 134 C. C. A. 84, which affirmed (D. C. Idaho 1913) 207 Fed. 164.

Rights of way for development of electrical power.—Revocable permits under this Act or easements under the Act of March 4, 1911, ch. 238, section 1 (see vol. 8, p. 816) may be granted for the development and transmission of electric power upon public lands situate in Alaska. Color of title.—A holder of color of title to a small tract of government land embraced within the limits of the original survey of a Mexican land grant, which was without the limits of such grant as finally confirmed by the Court of Private Land Claims, who had, or whose predecessors in title had, expended large sums in improving the land, and where the original allotment of said land and the settlement and improvements thereon had been made in good faith, has "claim or color of title made or acquired in good faith," within the spirit of this section. Hence a contract for the sale of said land is not an illegal contract, and the fact that such grantor received his confirmatory deed from the corporation, created by the legislature to carry out the purpose of the grant, after it was definitely known that the land thereby granted and confirmed by such deed was without the limits of the confirmed portions of the grant, does not change or alter his status. Robinson v. Sawyer, (1918) 23 N. M. 688, 170 Pac. 881, following Sandusky Third Nat. Exch. Bank v. Smith, (1915) 20 N. M. 264, 148 Pac. 512.

Preventing access by injunction.—Where a party is the owner of the odd-numbered sections of land, the odd-numbered sections having been granted by the government to aid in the building of the railroad, and the even-numbered sections are largely owned by the government, the remainder of the even-numbered sections being either school sections or held in private ownership, a court of equity will not, at the instance of the owner of the odd-numbered sections, enjoin an owner of live stock from grazing his sheep or cattle on the odd-numbered sections, in the absence of a legal fence maintained by such owner, or compliance by such owner with the provisions of section 39, Code 1915, as such an injunction would have the effect of giving to the owner of the odd-numbered sections absolute control and dominion over the government lands, included in the townships embracing such privately owned odd-numbered sections. Jastro v. Francis, (1918) 24 N. M. 127, 172 Pac. 1139, wherein the court said: "If the owner of the odd-numbered sections in a township, the even-numbered being government domain, and none of the land being fenced, can procure the aid of the court of equity to restrain others from pasturing their animals upon said even-numbered sections, or driving their stock across any portion of such odd-numbered sections, he would be able to accomplish indirectly, and by the aid of a court of equity, that which he could not do directly, viz., maintain the exclusive use and occupancy of that part of the public domain so situated. That appellees expect to pasture, not only the odd-numbered sections in the two townships which they own, but the government lands, is apparent, for it would be physically impossible for them to utilize their own lands. The injunction, if sustainable, in its practical effect is every whit as effective as a fence surrounding the entire tract would be, in excluding appellants from using the government land in the townships, and the same nostrum could be readily applied to all others who might seek to graze their animals upon such government land. In other words, the court fences the land for appellees by its writ of injunction, and incloses for them a large area of government domain, and does it much more effectively than the parties did in the Camfield Case."

The jurisdiction of the Interior Department over excepted mineral land can be exercised after the lapse of the limitation period prescribed by this section. (1915) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 485.

Recovery for fraud.—"The Act of Congress declares that suits by the United States to vacate patents for fraud shall not be brought subsequent to six years after the date of the patents. When the six years have expired such units are therefore presumed to be barred. And when the injured party invokes the aid of a court of equity to release him from that bar, the burden unavoidably falls upon the plaintiff to plead and prove (1) that it exercised reasonable care and diligence to discover the fraud before the statute of limitations ran; (2) that it had no knowledge or notice of any action which would have excited the attention of and would have incited a person of ordinary prudence and ability in the plaintiff's situation to an inquiry which would have led to a discovery of the fraud; and (3) that the defendant concealed the fraud by trick or artifice, or so committed it that it concealed itself." U. S. v. Diamond, etc., Coal Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 266, 165 C. C. A. 554, holding that a bill by the government did not contain allegations sufficient to meet the burden thus imposed.

Alleging fraud.—To same effect as original annotation, see U. S. v. Diamond Coal, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 266, 165 C. C. A. 554.

Limitation provisions as applicable to patents only.—The limitation provisions of this section and section 1 of the Act of March 2, 1896, ch. 39 (see vol. 8, p. 750) relate to patents only, and do not apply to a conveyance effected by an approval and certification by the Land Department of a list of state selections. (1916) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 572.

Action for value of lands.—The limitation attached to a suit to annul a patent does not apply to a suit by the government to recover the value of lands fraudulently patented. Union Coal, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 106, 159 C. C. A. 324.

PUBLIC MONEYS

Vol. VIII, p. 881, sec. 3614. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 546.]

Designation of disbursing clerk to act for two departments.—The Secretary of Labor may, with the concurrence of the Secretary of Commerce, if the public exigencies require it, designate the disbursing clerk of the Department of Commerce to disburse the moneys appropriated for the various bureaus and services of the Department of Labor until a regular disbursing clerk can be appointed, provided he is able and willing to give bond as required by this section. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 129.

Indemnity bonds on issuance of duplicate checks.—Where an original check issued by a United States disbursing officer is lost, the Secretary of the Treasury has no authority, under the provisions of this section, to dispense with the giving of a bond as a condition to the issuance of a duplicate check. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 66.

PUBLIC OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

Vol. VIII, p. 936, sec. 1765. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 595.]

Shipping commissioners.—A shipping commission is not entitled to receive a fee from the estate of a deceased seaman but must pay the same into the registry of the District Court. In re MacDonald, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 248 Fed. 983, following Lewis v. U. S., (1917) 244 U. S. 134, 37 S. Ct. 570, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1039, and overruling In re Johnson, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 251 Fed. 319.

Vol. VIII, p. 955. [Government employees, etc.] [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 79.]

Clerks of District Courts.—A clerk of a federal District Court is properly indicted under this Act for making false entries in books which he is required to keep by Act of June 30, 1906, 34 Stat. L. 754, ch. 3914, § 1, 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. 736. U. S. v. Dodge, (S. D. Fla. 1918) 251 Fed. 737.

Removal from office.—A person in the classified civil service cannot be deprived of his status in the service except by removal as provided in this section, and it is for the head of a department, and not the Civil Service Commission, to determine when there exists proper cause for the removal. Thus, the Civil Service Commission has no authority to cancel the classification of an employee brought within the classified civil service under the Executive order of March 1, 1904, which classified certain positions in the civil service of the War Department in the Philippines. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 79.

Salary subsequent to removal.—Where an employee of the United States in the classified civil service is discharged from the service and claims the pay of the office subsequent to his removal, it must appear affirmatively that he was willing and able to discharge the duties of the office during said period. Nicholas v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 463.

Review of removal.—Where an employee in the classified civil service is regularly removed from office under charges, and the officers removing him were empowered by law so to do, the question as to whether there was just cause for such removal is one for the executive authorities, and the courts deal only with any departure from the law itself. Eberlein v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 466.

Reinstatement after improper removal.—Where after removal it is discovered that the charges upon which the removal was based were without merit, and the employee is "reinstated" in his former position by proclamation of the President, such reinstatement was not intended to convert the removal into a suspension from duty but to render the employee again eligible for the same position. Eberlein v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 466.

Excepted positions.—This section does not apply to those occupying excepted positions. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 181.

PUBLIC PARKS

Vol. VIII, p. 965. [Arrests for violations, etc.] [First ed., vol. X, p. 407.]

Arrests by employees of Gettysburg National Park.—Under this Act, employees of Gettysburg National Park are authorized to make arrests for the violation of the laws and regulations relating to such park. (1915) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 465.

PUBLIC PRINTING

Vol. VIII, p. 1026, sec. 3. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 644.]

Paper for postal cards.—The Postmaster General is authorized to contract for, purchase, and inspect paper for the printing of postal cards. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 241.

Paper furnished on requisitions by executive departments.—All paper furnished by the public printer on requisitions for the ordinary use of the executive departments and chargeable to their appropriations must be purchased in accordance with the provisions of this Act. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 241.

Vol. VIII, p. 1027, sec. 5. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 645.]

Rejection of bids — Review by mandamus.—Under the provision of this section that the joint committee on printing created by this Act shall award contracts "to the lowest and best bidder for the interest of the government," the joint committee has the power to reserve the right, in its advertisements for bids, to reject any and all bids in its discretion; and its action in rejecting a bid, although it is the lowest, cannot be reviewed in a mandamus proceeding instituted by such bidder. Champion Coated Paper Co. v. Joint Committee on Printing of Congress, (1917) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 141.

Vol. VIII, p. 1027, sec. 6. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 645.]

Validity of contract made by joint committee.—It was within the power of the joint committee on printing to make a contract for supplying the government with so much paper as might be required for the public printing and binding for the period of six months from March 1, 1916, and such contract obligated the contractor to furnish such paper to the limit of the government's needs during the life of the contract. In such case the government has no right to enter into a new contract for any part of the supply covered by the old contract, save as provided in such contract itself, nor can it be compelled to take more than it needs, though that need is less than the amount specified in the schedule or estimates. (1916) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 541.

RAILROADS

Character of grant of public lands obtained by Union Pacific Railroad.—The Union Pacific Railroad Company by the grant to its predecessors in interest under the Act of Congress of July 1, 1862, ch. 120 (12 Stat. 489, ch. 120), and the amendatory Act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. 356, ch. 216), became the owner in fee of a right of way 200 feet from the center of the track, which right is superior to claims initiated after the Act of 1864, and is not defeated by adverse possession. The grant is of the land itself, and not a mere right of passage over it. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Davenport, (1918) 102 Kan. 513, 170 Pac. 993.

Vol. VIII, p. 1151, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 745.]

Troops of the United States.—Discharged military prisoners, discharged or retired enlisted men in the United States Army, enlisted men on furlough, and rejected applicants for enlistment, traveling as individuals, are not troops of the United States within the provisions of the railroad Land-Grant Acts governing payment for transportation of any property or troops of the United States. So applicants for enlistment in the United States Army, who have been examined at general recruiting stations, found mentally, morally, and physically fit for service, and are en route as individuals to recruiting depots for final examination and enlistment, are not troops of the United States. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 354, 39 S. Ct. 294, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 226, wherein the court said: "In defining the transportation rights secured to the United States, these land-grant acts draw a broad distinction between freight and passengers. All 'property' of the Government, whatever its character and intended use, is to be carried 'free of toll or other charge'; but of the many persons in its service, only 'troops.' The history of the legislation shows that both the broad term, 'any property,' and the narrower one, 'troops,' were adopted deliberately. The earliest land-grant act in which the provision appears is that of September 20, 1850, c. 61, § 4, 9 Stat. 466, 467, under which the Illinois Central was constructed. The bill as introduced provided for the free transportation of 'troops and munitions of war.' It was amended so as to read 'any property or troops.' There had been an earlier act granting land to the State of Illinois for the construction of a canal (Act of March 30, 1822, c. 14, 3 Stat. 659) which was amended (Act of March 2, 1833, c. 87, 4 Stat. 662) so as to permit, on the same terms, the use and disposition of the land for railroads. That act provided for the free transportation of 'any property of the United States, or persons in their service.' In 1850 the word 'troops' had (and it has ever since had) an established meaning:—namely, 'soldiers collectively,—a body of soldiers.' Thus the Army Appropriation Act of that year (Act of September 28, 1850, c. 78, § 1, 9 Stat. 504, 506) provides for the 'transportation of the army, including the baggage of the troops when moving either by land or water' and for 'mileage, or the allowance made to officers for the transportation of themselves and baggage when travelling on duty without troops.' The contemporary legislation draws a clear distinction also between troops, that is, those then having the status of soldiers, and those who once had been in, or were seeking to enter, the military service. Thus the Army Appropriation Act of March 2, 1847, c. 35, 9 Stat. 149, 151 (which provides in substantially the same terms as that of 1850 for the transportation of troops) makes specific provision for 'forwarding destitute soldiers to their homes,' for the 'comfort of discharged soldiers,' and for 'expenses of recruiting,' which include the cost of transportation. See Army Regulations, 1857, § 1321. And the Resolution of March 3, 1847, No. 7, 9 Stat. 206, authorizes the refund of moneys expended by the states and individuals 'in organizing, subsisting, and transporting volunteers previous to their being mustered and received into the service of the United States for the present war, and for subsisting troops in the service of the United States.' In view of the established meaning of the term 'troops' as used by Congress the duty of the court is merely to apply the provisions of the act to the several classes of persons described above. . . . We have no occasion to consider whether persons not enlisted as soldiers, but forming a part of a moving army or detachment are to be deemed 'troops of the United States' within the provision of the land-grant acts; nor whether a soldier travelling for the purposes of the Government, but not for any purpose connected with war or the preparation for war, falls within the provisions. (1890) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 572."

Transportation of empty mail bags.—The provisions in the Land Grant Acts of Feb. 9, 1853, 10 Stat. 155, and July 28, 1866, 14 Stat. 338, that "all property and troops of the United States" shall be transported at the cost, charge, and expense of the company owning or operating the road, include empty mail bags and cannot be restricted to impedimenta or property appertaining to the military establishment of the government. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 53 Ct. Cl. 45.

Vol. VIII, p. 1153, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 747.]

Contract for specially expedited transportation.—Where the United States contracts with a railroad for specially expedited transportation of equipage and troops, and where the same in all respects conforms to the provisions of the Acts of March 3, 1909, 35 Stat. 745 and March 23, 1910, 36 Stat. 256, no reduction can be made from the contract rates not authorized by a provision in the contract. I. INTRODUCTORY

1. Purpose (p. 1155)

The primary object of the Safety Appliance Act is to protect railroad employees against the perils of the old method of braking. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 650, 161 C. C. A. 560.

3. Rules of Construction (p. 1156)

In general.—The Act as originally passed, being remedial and humanitarian in its purpose, is to be broadly construed. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 805, 162 C. C. A. 39.

"Common carrier."—A system of internal trackage constructed and operated by an industrial corporation to meet the necessities of its business in the processes of manufacture may be regarded as a plant facility and does not make the corporation a common carrier. Where, however, the system is operated by an independent corporation organized as a common carrier, which, in addition to the service rendered in the industrial operation of the plant, also engages in the transportation in commerce of the product of the plant to customers and of the material required by the plant in the conduct of its business from all shippers to the plant, such additional service is that of a common carrier. The fact that under its discretionary power over joint rates the Interstate Commerce Commission may have refused to allow the company to participate in the through rate because such participation would create an unjust discrimination does not establish that the company is not a common carrier within the meaning of the Safety Appliance Act. Kenna v. Cahmet, etc., R. Co., (1918) 284 Ill. 301, 120 N. E. 259.

4. State Laws (p. 1157)

State Workmen's Compensation Act.—The right of a person injured by virtue of a violation of the Safety Appliance Act is not affected by the existence of a state Workmen's Compensation Act. Kenna v. Calumet, etc., R. Co., (1918) 284 Ill. 301, 120 N. E. 259, wherein the court said: "The plaintiff in error filed a special plea alleging that both the plaintiff and the defendant were subject to the Workmen's Compensation Act, and showed that the plaintiff in error had accepted the provisions of the act and that the defendant in error had not declined them. It is insisted that the compensation provided by the Workmen's Compensation Act was the defendant in error's exclusive remedy. On the other hand, it is contended that the federal Safety Appliance Act excludes the application of the Workmen's Compensation Act. It is conceded that the federal Employers' Liability Act excludes the application of the Workmen's Compensation Act in all cases in which the former act is applicable . . . The Safety Appliance Act is equally exclusive. . . . It is argued that the Workmen's Compensation Act does not conflict with or abrogate any of the provisions of the Safety Appliance Act, but only changes the remedy. The Safety Appliance Act by irresistible inference, as held by the Supreme Court of the United States, confers a private right of action for the death or injury of an employé caused by a violation of its terms. This right of action was to recover compensatory damages for the loss suffered. The Workmen's Compensation Act would take away this right of action and confer instead a right to a sum fixed by statute without regard to the damages in the particular cases except by reference to the wages which the employé was then earning in his particular employment. The Workmen's Compensation Act substitutes, not a different remedy for the employé, but a different thing for him to recover."

See to the same effect Southern R. Co. v. Henderson, (Tex. 1919) 208 S. W. 561.

In Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Peck, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 265, 166 C. C. A. 431, a state Compensation Act was held to provide the only remedy for an injury caused by failure to provide efficient handholds. The court said: "The plaintiff's employment and injury both took place in the state of New Jersey. His theory is that for injuries resulting from a violation of this act he may recover damages in a common-law action brought wherever he can serve the defendant. But master and servant together constitute a relation or status which involves many mutual rights and duties not expressed in the specific contract of employment. That contract fixes, among other things, the kind, place, and time of employment, and the compensation. The definition and extent of the relation itself are fixed by the law of the state where it was established, but Congress has written into it, in the case of railroad companies and their employes, this additional feature on which the plaintiff relies. The state of New Jersey has defined the rights and duties of the relation of master and servant by the Workmen's Compensation Act (chapter 95, Laws 1911, as amended by chapter 174, Laws 1913) which we regard as excluding all other jurisdictions. Section II regulates elective compensation without regard to the negligence of the employer, and subsection 9 provides that every contract of hiring shall be presumed to have been made with reference to section II unless there be an express statement in writing as a part of the contract or by either party to the other prior to any accident that it is not intended to apply. So also either party may terminate the application of section II by giving sixty days' notice in writing to the other before any accident. The answer sets up this act as a defense, and alleges that there was no provision in the contract that section II should not apply, and that the plaintiff had given no such notice to the defendant before the accident; wherefore he could not maintain the action. At the trial the defendant offered to prove these allegations, but the court refused to permit it, and the defendant excepted. We think this was error. The New Jersey act creates a system to be enforced by the court of common pleas of the county of New Jersey which would have jurisdiction in a civil case. The employé is required to give notice of the injury to the employer within a fixed time. The compensation to be paid for the loss of a leg or of a hand is a fixed proportion of the employé's daily wages for a fixed number of weeks, and this compensation may be commuted by the court of common pleas into one or more lump sums. That court is also to settle, at the request of either of the parties, any dispute about compensation. For these reasons we are of the opinion that the plaintiff cannot maintain this action in the District Court for the Southern District of New York."

II. "ENGAGED IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE" (p. 1157)

Car not being used in interstate commerce.—If the railroad is engaged in interstate commerce the act applies to a car not at the moment being so used, and not on the main line but on a special or switch track leading to a private plant. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Sprole, (Tex. Civ. App. 1918) 202 S. W. 985.

See to the same effect St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Smith, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 581, 166 C. C. A. 585.

If the railroad is itself a highway of interstate commerce, it is liable to an employee injured by reason of failure to comply with the Act though the employee was not himself engaged in interstate commerce when he was injured. Devin v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 948, 165 C. C. A. 390.

The requirements of the federal Safety Appliance Act, as amended, are mandatory and embrace all cars used on any railroad that is a highway of interstate commerce, whether the particular cars are at the time employed in such commerce or not, and includes employees injured through a failure to comply with its terms, even though engaged in duties unconnected with interstate commerce. Ewing v. Coal, etc., R. Co., (1918) 82 W. Va. 427, 96 S. E. 73.

Intrastate roads.—A Texas railroad company authorized to connect and actually connected at the state line with other railroads so as to constitute with them an interstate system is within the Act. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Smith, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 581, 166 C. C. A. 585.

Employee taking car to be repaired.—The liability of an interstate railway company under the federal Safety Appliance Act to an employee injured through a violation of the commands of those statutes that certain safety appliances be installed upon railway cars used upon a highway of interstate commerce exists, although the employee when injured was engaged in returning the defective car to its owner for repairs. Ewing v. Coal, etc., R. Co., (1918) 82 W. Va. 427, 96 S. W. 73.

IV. TRAIN

2. Switching Operations (p. 1158)

Cars being moved on tracks which are never used by any of the trains running between stations but exclusively for switching purposes to supply the industries along these tracks with loaded cars or "empties" for outgoing freight are not within the act. U. S. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 655.

In U. S. v. Galveston, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 755, it was said: "The engine and cars, the movements of which are in question in the instant case, were assembled and coupled together for runs or trips, each of a distance of several miles. In those trips they crossed main line tracks of several railroads and streets at grade, and moved over stretches of main line track. The movements made were not kept from being runs or trips along the road by the circumstances that the tracks used were part of the network of tracks referred to generally as the Galveston yards and that main line tracks were used in only parts of the runs. There was no material difference between the unit formed by the assembling and coupling together of the engine and cars before each of the movements began and a train made up for a run to another station. It cannot properly be said that the movement throughout consisted of operations whereby the previously formed unit was broken up. Nothing occurred while either of the movements was in progress which was materially different from what might have occurred if the movements had been to points beyond the yard limits. A result of each of the movements was that interstate freight was carried over an interstate railway thoroughfare to a point several miles nearer to its ultimate destination. The fact that there are switching operations before such a movement is completed does not have the effect of making the entire movement one which does not come within the prohibition of the statute. What was done included more than such shifting of cars while not controlled by the engineer by power or train brakes as properly may be regarded as not forbidden by the statute." To same effect, see U. S. v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 758.

3. Transfer Operations (p. 1159)

A transfer of twenty-six freight cars as a unit from one railway terminal to another for delivery without uncoupling or switching out any car, involving a movement for a distance of three-quarters of a mile, and necessitating crossing at grade three city streets once, two streets twice, one street three times, and a main track movement of at least 2,600 feet, with two stops and startings on the main track,—is a train movement, not a mere switching operation, and is governed by the train-brake provisions of the Safety Appliance Act forbidding the operation of trains in which less than the requisite number of cars are controlled by power or train brakes, and providing that the train-brake requirement shall apply to all trains used on any railroad engaged in interstate commerce. Louisville, etc., Bridge Co. v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 534, 39 S. Ct. 355, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "It is argued that coupling of the train brakes was not necessary for the reason that the street crossings used were protected by gates, that a yard master from an elevated tower watched over the main line movements, and that the coupling of the train-brake appliances would involve more danger to the employees than the movement of the cars without their being used and operated. These suggestions serve to emphasize the dangerous character of the movement. But the construction which the act should receive is not to be found in balancing the dangers which would result from obeying the law with those which would result from violating it, nor in considering what other precautions will equal, in the promotion of safety, those prescribed by the act. Such considerations were for Congress when enacting the law and it has repeatedly been held by this court that other provisions of the Safety Appliance Act impose upon the carrier the absolute duty of compliance in cases to which they apply and that failure to comply will not be excused by carelessness to avoid the danger which the appliances prescribed were intended to guard against, nor by the adoption of what might be considered equivalents of the requirements of the act. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Taylor, (1908) 210 U. S. 281, 295 [28 S. Ct. 616, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 1061, 1068]; Great Northern R. Co. v. Otos, (1915) 239 U. S. 349 [36 S. Ct. 124, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 322]; St. Joseph, etc., R. Co. v. Moore, (1917) 243 U. S. 311 [37 S. Ct. 278, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 741]. The case falls within the scope of U. S. v. Erie R. Co., (1915) 237 U. S. 402 [35 S. Ct. 621, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1021], and U. S. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1915) 237 U. S. 410, 413 [35 S. Ct. 634, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1023, 1027], in the latter of which it is said that 'the controlling test of the statute's application lies in the essential nature of the work done.'

VII. PROHIBITION OF USE OF HAND BRAKES (p. 1160)

The use of hand brakes while descending a down grade is not authorized by the fact that it is necessary for a brakeman to go on top of the cars to set the retainer valves of the power brakes in order to handle a train on such a grade. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 650, 161 C. C. A. 560. The court said, with respect to the provision of the Act of 1910 (8 Fed. Stat. Ann., p. 1190) as to hand brakes: "We cannot think this provision was intended to defeat the design of the original act to release brakemen from the danger of going on the tops of trains moving upon the main lines; indeed, there is a plain inconsistency in the provisions themselves, the one exacting the air brake system and the other the hand brakes, which forbids a railroad company, upon its own idea of safe operation along its main line, to displace the air brake system in favor of the hand brake. This inconsistency is both recognized and provided for by section 5 of the Hand Brake Act (30 Stat. pt. 1, p. 299), which enacts among other things that 'nothing in this act shall be held or construed to relieve any common carrier . . . from any of the provisions . . . or requirements' of the original Safety Appliance Act (27 Stat. 531), as amended by the Acts of April 1, 1896 (29 Stat. 85), and March 2, 1903 (32 Stat. pt. 1, p. 943). The effect of this provision is particularly applicable to the instant case by reason of the admitted facts, before alluded to, that defendant's air brake system was 'at the time in good order and repair and in efficient condition and properly connected for use.' 244 Fed. 610. It must result that the requirement to equip all cars with efficient hand brakes was designed for purposes distinct from the use to which they were put in descending Boyne Hill; and it is sufficient here to say that the act concerning hand brake equipment finds abundant reason for its existence and application in places where the use of the air brake system is impracticable, as, for instance, in railroad yards."

VIII. ACTION BY INJURED EMPLOYEE

Employee need not sue in state where injury occurred and the laws of that state are not applicable, where the action is based on a violation of the federal Act. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Sprole, (Tex. Civ. App. 1918) 202 S. W. 985.

Right of action implied.—Though the Act contains no express language conferring a right of action for the death or injury of an employee occasioned by a failure to comply with its requirements, a right of action therefor, nevertheless, is within the contemplation and intentment of the Act. Ewing v. Coal, etc., R. Co., (1918) 82 W. Va. 427, 96 S. E. 73.

VII. AUTOMATIC COUPLING AND UNCOUPLING APPARATUS (p. 1184)

In general.—The framers of the Act only intended to require the railroads to furnish some kind of an appliance that would automatically couple cars and uncouple the same without exposing employees to the risks that were incident to coupling and uncoupling cars before the date of the passage of the Act. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Charlton, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 34, 159 C. C. A. 252.

Coupler not opening automatically.—A coupling device which couples by impact when the knuckles are open and whose knuckles may be opened by a lever on the side of the car sufficiently complies with the Act. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Charlton, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 34, 159 C. C. A. 252, wherein it was said: "The railroads, we think, have fully met this requirement by equipping their cars with an appliance that couples automatically by impact, and so arranged that if the knuckles should, for any reason, become closed that the same could be opened by using the lever at the side of the car, and thereby accomplished the obvious purpose of the statute, viz. to have the railroads so construct their couplers that it would be possible to couple and uncouple cars without going between them."

II. Handholds in ends.

IV. Equivalents.

II. "HANDHOLDS IN ENDS"

This section contemplates the necessity of having a grabiron or handhold upon each side of the car near each end of the car and is not complied with by maintenance of a grabiron or handhold on each side of the car near one end. Ewing v. Coal, etc., R. Co., (1918) 82 W. Va. 427, 96 S. E. 73.

Number of grabirons.—"At each end of the car there was a pin lever operating the automatic coupler. This pin lever came out nearly to the corner. At each side, near to these corners, was a grabiron and a sill, so situated that a man could use them while operating the pin lever. There were also grabirons on each end of the car opposite to where the pin levers were. It appears to us that the language of the section was complied with." Boehmer v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 553, 165 C. C. A. 3. In that case the court said further: "It is clear that the number of grabirons was not specified and it is only by the Act of April 14, 1910 (36 Stat. 296, c. 160) as amended by that of March 4, 1911 (Act March 4, 1911, c. 285, 36 Stat. 1397), that the number of grabirons could be prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Since that time the Interstate Commerce Commission has provided that there shall be grabirons on both ends of each side of the car, with sills under them, and ladders on each side of each end of the car. This, however, is a new provision, and not in effect on November 8, 1915."

IV. EQUIVALENTS (p. 1175)

Side ladder is within Act.—The grabiron Act applies to every rung of the side ladder on a freight car. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Swift, (Tex. 1918) 204 S. W. 135.

Vol. VIII, p. 1182, sec. 8. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 756.]

Contributory negligence is not a defense to an action based on an injury resulting from a defective grabiron nor does it mitigate the damages. Callicotte v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 274 Mo. 689, 204 S. W. 529.

Vol. VIII, p. 1183, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. X, p. 375.]

IV. "TRAINS" (p. 1185)

Wrecking cars.—Two cars with tools and equipment used exclusively for replacing derailed cars on the track, do not, when attached to an engine, constitute a "train" within the Act. Baker v. Grace, (Tex. Civ. App. 1919) 213 S. W. 299.

Vol. VIII, p. 1188, sec. 2. [First ed., vol. X, p. 375.]

Car having power brakes out of repair.—The provision of the Act that all power-braked cars which are associated together "shall have their brakes so used and operated" does not make it unlawful to haul a car on which the power brakes are out of repair, provided the train contains the required percentage of cars having power brakes in condition for use. U. S. v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917)

247 Fed. 49, 159 C. C. A 267, wherein the court said: "Was it the intention of Congress that where a car had once been equipped with a workable air brake, but which became defective, should never be used again in a train made up of cars properly equipped with the required percentage of air brakes? It is conceded by counsel for the government that the cars equipped with old-fashioned hand brakes may be used as the 15 per cent allowed by the requirements of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Inasmuch as 85 per cent. of the train in question was composed of cars equipped with workable air brakes, which is deemed by the Interstate Commerce Commission to be sufficient to insure the safety of employes and passengers, it became immaterial as to whether the remaining cars were equipped with air brakes or the ordinary hand brakes, and we cannot think of any possible reason why there should be any distinction made between the cars equipped with ordinary hand brakes and those with air brakes that had been cut out. It would be unreasonable, we think, for the government to make any such demand, and we do not believe that a fair interpretation of the statute warrants a ruling to that effect. The statute which requires a railroad to equip its cars with proper air brakes was enacted for the sole purpose of having a sufficient number of cars thus equipped in every train so as to insure safety, and we think this, and this only, is the extent to which Congress intended that the law should be applied."

Secure ladder.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Sullivan v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (1918) 167 Wis. 518, 167 N. W. 3M.

Efficient hand brakes.—This provision does not permit the carrier to require the use of hand brakes instead of power brakes at its convenience. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 650.

Employees protected.—Though the immediate occasion for passing the laws requiring grabirons was undoubtedly "for greater security to men in coupling and uncoupling cars," yet these laws are not confined to the protection of employees only when so engaged. Carriers are liable to employees in damages whenever the failure to obey the safety appliance Acts is the proximate cause of injury to them when engaged in the discharge of duty. Ewing v. Coal, etc., R. Co., (1918) 82 W. Va. 427, 96 S. E. 73.

Effect of extension order.—The suspension clause of the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission entered on March 13, 1911, pursuant to authority conferred upon the commission by section 3 of the Act of 1910, did not operate to extend the time for equipping each car with four grabirons on the sides, because the order expressly provides that the extension of time shall not be construed to relieve carriers from complying with the requirements of section 4 of the Act of March 2, 1893. Ewing v. Coal, etc., R. Co., (1918) 82 W. Va. 427, 96 S. E. 73.

I. Introductory.

VI. "Nearest available point."

VII. "If such movement is necessary."

VIII. "Remedial action."

X. In association with cars "commercially used."

I. INTRODUCTORY (p. 1192)

Scope of proviso.—The proviso contained in the amendment of 1910 and ingrafted on the preceding enactment, while intended to relax the rigid rule of the original Act which made no provision for movements for repair, takes no case out of such enactment which does not fall fairly within the proviso's terms; and the defendant, in its reliance on the exception so carved out, was required to bring itself within both its language and reason. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 805, 162 C. C. A. 39.

VI. "NEAREST AVAILABLE POINT" (p. 1196)

"To relax somewhat the rigid rule prescribed by the original act, which did not exempt the necessary movement to a point where repairs could be made, the amendment of April 14, 1910, was enacted. Although the amendment measurably grants relief to and enlarges the right of interstate railroads, it nevertheless is limited by its express terms and manifest intent, and its further extension is unwarranted. It only permits the hauling, without penalty, of a car which becomes defective while the car is in use by the carrier on its line of railroad, to the nearest available point where such car can be repaired (if such movement is necessary to make repairs) after the defect has been discovered. Any other hauling of such a car, and consequently a hauling of it before its bad order condition is discovered, although the carrier be without fault in not making the discovery, is a violation of the statute." Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 805, 162 C. C. A. 39.

In Denver, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 822, 162 C. C. A. 56, it appeared that main line and foreign cars were carried past several intermediate repair points to the terminal at Salt Lake City. The only explanation given was that the company was accustomed to repair main line and foreign cars only at the terminals at Denver and Salt Lake City, points separated by a distance of 745 miles, and to repair only branch line cars at intermediate points. The court said: "The explanation is insufficient to meet the requirements of the law. The great distance between the terminals made intermediate points of repair necessary. The statement of facts shows that a supply of men and materials was kept at the intermediate points adequate to make heavy repairs such as the cars here required. When defective cars are hauled past such a point, 'the nearest available point of repair' clause of the proviso demands something more than the habits or convenience of the carrier to justify the act. It must be shown by affirmative proof that the facilities at the intermediate point are not 'available' and that the movement is 'necessary.' In the absence of such proof the act is 'unlawful' under section 5. We do not lay down any absolute rule which would forbid hauling a defective car past an intermediate repair point. It might be that the congestion of defective cars at that point, or the seriousness of the defect in the car hauled, would be such as to justify the movement. All we say is that, when a car is hauled past the nearest repair point at which a supply of men and materials is kept, adequate for making the repair required, this justifies the holding that the law is violated, unless there is a showing of special reasons for the movement."

VII. "IF SUCH MOVEMENT IS NECESSARY" (p. 1197)

"The movement of a defective car is restricted by this proviso —

"1. To what is 'necessary' for its repair. If it can be repaired where the defect is discovered, it cannot be moved at all in its defective condition. If the defect is such that it must be moved to repair it, the movement is restricted to what is necessary for the repair.

"2. To hauling it from the point where the defect is first discovered to the nearest available point of repair. This and the first restriction, taken together, forbid every hauling or handling of the car for any other purpose than repair. It may not be handled for the purpose of delivering its load to the consignee, even when unloading is necessary for its repair, unless it be affirmatively shown that such delivery involves no more movement or handling of the car than unloading it or transferring its load. That affirmative showing cannot be made by the vague presumption that every one does his duty. It calls for positive proof. The defendant made no such showing. It insists that as the cars had to be unloaded before they could be repaired, every movement for unloading them is justified by the ultimate purpose to repair. That is the capital vice of the defense. The cars were loaded with coal. The coal could have been placed in bins or transferred to other cars. We cannot say without proof that this operation, even when the delivery was on the main line, would involve as much handling of the car as its delivery to the consignee; and it is entirely plain that such would not be the case when the delivery was on a branch line, for that would involve a double switching and a complete diversion of the car from the nearest available point of repair." Denver, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 822, 162 C. C. A. 56.

VIII. "REMEDIAL ACTION" (p. 1197)

To same effect as original annotation, see U. S. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 101, 162 C. C. A. 273.

X. IN ASSOCIATION WITH CARS "COMMERCIALY USED" (p. 1198)

Under the provision of this section that chained cars may not be moved, even for repair, in revenue trains, or in association with cars commercially used, unless they contain live stock or perishable freight, a train is a "revenue train" when it is moved for the purpose of transporting traffic for revenue. Cars are "commercially used" either when they are moving traffic, or when, though empty, they are moving to points for the purpose of receiving traffic. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 822, 162 C. C. A. 56. In that case it was held to be a violation of the Act to operate "hospital trains" described as follows: "They were composed entirely of cars so defective as to make them unfit to be handled in ordinary freight trains until they were repaired. These trains were moved only in the daytime, and were in charge of special crews under special officers to see that they were carefully handled. They had on board a force of repair men for the purpose of making any temporary repairs that should become necessary for their movement in their defective condition. They picked up cars and set out cars at numerous stations along the line. The stations at which cars were set out were of two classes: First, the station for which the cargo was destined; second, when the cargo was destined for a station on a branch line the cars were set out at the terminus of that branch to be later hauled to the station for which they were destined. When the train involved in case 4861 started from Helper, it consisted of a caboose, 10 empties, and 1 loaded car. In the course of its journey it picked up at way stations 93 cars, set out 35 cars, and arrived at Salt Lake City with 58 cars. With the exception of 31 empties, all the cars handled in the train were loaded and proceeding in the direction of their final destination."

Vol. VIII, p. 1198, sec. 5. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 337.]

Use of hand brakes.—Since this section preserves the requirements of the original Act except as they are clearly abrogated, the provision of section 2 of this Act requiring hand brakes does not permit a railroad company to order their use instead of power brakes on occasions when such use is merely convenient, as to avoid the necessity of setting the valve retainers on the power brakes in descending a long grade. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 650, 161 C. C. A. 560.

Violation as negligence.—The operation of a locomotive equipped with a boiler which is in a defective condition is negligence, for which the carrier is liable to an injured employee. Lancaster v. Carroll, (Tex. 1919) 211 S. W. 797.

Failure to condemn is not conclusive and the question in an action for personal injuries is whether due and reasonable care has been exercised by the railroad company. Lancaster v. Allen, (Tex. 1919) 207 S. W. 984, wherein it was said: "When Congress enacted the law which authorized the Interstate Commerce Commission to provide rules and tests, it is not to be assumed that it was intended to lower the standard of caution which has so long prevailed and which is so universally recognized by the courts of this country. The more reasonable inference is that the law was designed to enhance the safety of railway transportation by requiring greater precautions against the retention of defective machinery. The effect of the statute and the appropriate regulations which it authorized was to make the failure to comply with its standards negligence as a matter of law; whereas before this adoption such failure presented an issue of fact to be determined by the jury according to the common-law standard. That, however, did not otherwise alter the legal duty of the railway company to still exercise ordinary care to keep its machinery in a reasonably safe condition."

I. INTRODUCTORY

1. Constitutionality

a. First Employers' Liability Act (p. 1210)

As applied to Alaska and the territories the Act is valid and was not repealed by the Act of 1908. Walsh v. Alaska Steamship Co., (1918) 101 Wash. 295, 172 Pac. 269, holding also that the Act applies to a common carrier by water engaged in commerce between the states and Alaska.

2. Construction and operation

d. Construction Controlled by Federal Decisions (p. 1214)

The opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States.—To the same effect as the original annotation see Southern Pac. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (Cal. 1918) 171 Pac. 1071; Kusturin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1919) 287 Ill. 306, 122 N. E. 512; Nelson v. Ironwood, etc., R., etc., Co., (Mich. 1918) 170 N. W. 45; Matti v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 55 Mont. 280, 176 Pac. 154; Polluck v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (S. D. 1918) 166 N. W. 641.

"If there is a decision from a federal court which is decisive of the question here, and especially if the federal decision is one that is more recent than the one cited from the state court, it is our duty to follow the federal court rather than the state court, since the question involved is one upon which the federal courts have the ultimate right to speak." Kuchenmeister v. Los Angeles, etc., R. Co., (Utah 1918) 172 Pac. 725.

3. "Common Carrier by Railroad"

b. Electric Railway (p. 1215)

Street railways engaged in interstate commerce are within the provisions of this section. Nelson v. Ironwood, etc., R., etc., Co., (Mich. 1918) 170 N. W. 45, wherein the court said: "If any distinction whatever can be drawn between street railways and other railroads in any respect that can fairly be claimed to have a possible bearing on the question of the legislative intent of Congress as to the inclusion or exclusion of the former class of carriers, the difference, we are convinced, will be found to be merely one of degree and not of kind. No substantial reason suggests itself to us why the safe and unimpeded transportation of passengers from one state into another on a local street railway line operating solely over city streets, and the safety of employees of such a railway, should not have been objects of solicitude on the part of Congress as well as the like beneficial results in connection with other forms of interstate railroad transportation. Nothing in the terms and provisions of the Act indicates a design to exclude street railways. Every provision of the Act is as applicable to a purely street railway carrier whose lines extend from one state into another as to an interstate suburban electric railroad of an interstate steam railroad."

f. Express Company (p. 1217)

An express company is "a common carrier by railroad" within the meaning of this Act. Taylor v. Wells, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 109, 161 C. C. A. 161.

4. Paramount to State Laws

a. In General (p. 1217)

State laws superseded.—To the same effect as the original annotation see Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Branson, (1917) 131 Md. 686, 104 Atl. 356; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hesselhoff, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 1161.

A state constitutional provision changing the common law rule as to assumption of risk and contributory negligence is inapplicable to an action under the Federal Employers' Liability Act. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Lenahan, (Okla. 1918) 171 Pac. 455.

Uniform substantive law is insured, in whatever court or state an action under the Act may be brought. Reed v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1918) 182 Ky. 455, 206 S. W. 794.

Waiver.—Where upon trial the parties agree that if the deceased was an employee at the time of the accident the action was governed by the federal Act there is a waiver of any later objection that the case is governed by the state law. Ewig v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 167 Wis. 597, 167 N. W. 442, 169 N. W. 429.

d. State Workmen's Compensation Acts (p. 1220)

Acts superseded.—State compensation acts are superseded as to persons within the scope of the liability act. Erie R. Co. v. Linnekogel, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 248 Fed. 389, 160 C. C. A. 399.

"There never has been any doubt among the courts that, when Congress acts upon a subject, all state laws covering the same field are necessarily superseded by reason of the supremacy of the national authority. But there has been some controversy as to whether the federal Employers' Liability Act does cover injuries occurring without negligence. It has been the contention of some able counsel and is the holding of some of the state courts that the federal Employers' Liability Act covers or regulates the liability or obligation of carriers, and the right of the employee only for injury resulting in whole or in part from negligence, and does not cover injuries occurring without negligence. Following this line of reasoning, some of the courts have held that the state Workmen's Compensation Act could be invoked and relied upon, and brief given, in cases where the liability is not predicated on negligence, and the thought in the reasoning is that the federal Employers' Liability Act covers liability arising from the negligence of the carrier only. The Supreme Court of New Jersey, in Winfield v. Erie R. Co., (1916) 88 N. J. L. 619, 96 Atl. 394, held that, where the federal Act affords no remedy, that is, where the injury occurs under such circumstances that no liability is imposed upon the carrier by the Act, the injured employee may invoke the remedy given by the state statute, so it was said that, in order to defeat the right to invoke the State Workmen's Compensation Act, it must affirmatively appear that a right of action is given to the widow or personal representatives of the employee by the federal statute; in other words, that it must appear that the injury resulted in whole or in part from negligence chargeable to the defendant company, in order to bring it within the federal Employers' Liability Act. On this basis of reasoning that court held that the liability sought to be enforced was not a liability arising out of negligence, and therefore not covered by the federal Employers' Liability Act, but rested on a contractual obligation created by the state statute, consented to by both the employer and the employee, and said, in substance, that the injured party is entitled to invoke the state statute in the absence of any averment by her, or any proof offered, or any admission made by the defendant company, showing that the death of her decedent resulted from the defendant's negligence; that negligence is essential to create a liability against it under the federal statute. The New York court held to substantially the same doctrine in Winfield v. New York Cent. R. Co., (1915) 216 N. Y. 284, 110 N. E. 614, Ann. Cas. 1916A 817. The California and Illinois Supreme Courts, however, held to a different doctrine. Smith v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (1915) 28 Cal. App. 560, 147 Pac. 600; Staley v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1915) 268 Ill. 356, 109 N. E. 342, L. R. A. 1916A 450. In the last case it was said: 'The federal Employers' Liability Act has taken possession of—has occupied—that field for the purpose of calling into play therein this exclusive power of the federal government. Necessarily all common or state law of this state on that subject has been superseded. The field of liability as to employees injured while engaged in interstate commerce on railroads is occupied exclusively by the federal Employers' Liability Act, and that, too, regardless of the negligence or lack of negligence of either party to the litigation.' Whatever controversy may have existed has now been set at rest by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, and the doctrine announced by the courts of California and Illinois has been approved. Winfield v. New York Cent. R. Co., heretofore cited, came to the Supreme Court of the United States, and is reported in (1917) 244

U. S. 147, 37 S. Ct. 546, 61 U. S. L. ed. 1046, L. R. A. 1918C 439, Ann. Cas. 1917D 1139, and it was held that the doctrine announced by the Supreme Court of New York and New Jersey was wrong." Des Moines Union R. Co. v. Funk, (Ia. 1919) 170 N. W. 529.

By the federal legislation employees of an interstate railroad company are not within the purview of a state Workmen's Compensation Act, and the fact that such an Act permitted an interstate railroad company to become bound by its provisions would not entitle employees of such a company, injured while engaged in interstate commerce, to rely on such Act, merely because the company had consented to become bound, as the federal Employers' Act is exclusive of all state laws within the same field. Carey v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., (Mich. 1918) 166 N. W. 492, wherein the court said: "In our opinion the question before us is settled by New York Cent. R. Co. v. Winfield, (1917) 244 U. S. 147, 37 S. Ct. 546, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1045, Ann. Cas. 1917D 1139, unless a distinction can be made between the New York Workmen's Compensation Act (Consol. Laws, ch. 67) and ours. In that case the United States Supreme Court held that the entire subject of the liability of interstate railway carriers, for the death or injury of their employees, while employed by them in interstate commerce, is so completely covered by the provisions of the federal Employers' Liability Act of April 22, 1908, as to prevent any award under the New York Workmen's Compensation Act, where an employee was injured or killed without fault on the railway's part, while he was engaged in interstate commerce, although the federal Act gives the right of recovery only when the injury results in whole or in part from negligence attributable to the carrier. In other words, it was there held that by the federal Act, Congress manifested its will to cover the whole field of compensation or relief for injuries suffered by railroad employees engaged in interstate commerce, or at least the whole field of obligation of carriers relating thereto; and that it thereby withdrew the subject wholly from the domain of state action. The doctrine announced is that by the federal legislation employees of an interstate railroad company are not within the purview of a state Workmen's Compensation Act. This doctrine is reiterated in the Erie Railroad Co. Case, (1917) 244 U. S. 170, 37 S. Ct. 556, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1057. There the New Jersey statute was under consideration. The question presented included whether, by reason of the state statute, the carrier became bound contractually to make compensation, even though it came within the federal Act. Speaking of that statute the court said:

"Unless . . . a notice from one party to the other contain 'an express agreement in writing,' to the contrary, it 'shall be presumed' that the parties 'have agreed to be bound" by this part of the statute. There was no express agreement in this instance and there is no basis for regarding the carrier as in any way bound by this part of the statute save as it provides that an agreement to be bound by it shall be presumed in the absence of a declaration to the contrary. But such a presumption cannot be indulged here, and this for the reason that by the federal Act the entire subject, as respects carriers by railroad and their employees in interstate commerce, was taken without the reach of state laws. It is beyond the power of any state to interfere with the operation of that Act, either by putting the carriers and their employees to an election between its provisions and those of a state statute, or by imputing such an election to them by means of a statutory presumption.

"But it is said that the Workmen's Compensation Act of New York, being compulsory upon the employer, renders the Winfield cases inapplicable here. We are unable to agree with this contention."

Cases outside federal Act.—Jurisdiction under state Compensation Acts is excluded only as to cases which fall within the scope of the federal Act. San Francisco-Oakland Terminal Rys. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (Cal. 1919) 179 Pac. 386.

Burden of proof.—In a proceeding under the Workmen's Compensation Act of New Jersey brought by the widow of a railroad employee killed in a yard of the Erie railroad it was held that the burden was on the petitioner to show that the case was under that Act rather than under the federal Employers' Liability Act. Lincks v. Erie Co., (1918) 91 N. J. 166, 103 Atl. 176.

a. State Employers' Liability or Death Statutes (p. 1222)

Do not enlarge liability.—A state statute does not enlarge the liability created by the federal Act. Rask v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1918) 103 Kan. 440, 173 Pac. 1066.

Presumption of negligence.—There is no presumption of negligence under a state statute in an action under the federal Act. Eggler v. Southern R. Co., (Ga. App. 1918) 97 S. E. 93; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Hixon, (1918) 23 Ga. App. 105, 97 S. E. 554; Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. McCaskell, (1918) 118 Miss. 629, 79 So. 817.

State statutes abrogating assumption of risk do not apply to an action under the federal Act. Schaff v. Hendrich, (Tex. 1918) 207 S. W. 543.

f. State Laws Relating to Procedure (p. 1222)

The method of procedure provided by Congress must control. Swank v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (N. J. 1918) 104 Atl. 26.

A state death act providing that every action instituted under and by virtue of its provisions "shall be brought in the name of an administrator ad prosequendum" has no application to an action instituted under the federal Employers' Liability Act. Swank v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (N. J. 1918) 104 Atl. 26.

E. 1003, and see a valuable discussion of the subject in Hull v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1918) 132 Md. 540, 104 Atl. 274.

c. Electric Street Railroad (p. 1226)

Plaintiff employed wholly within one state on interstate car.—If a car on which the plaintiff is employed runs from one state into another he is engaged in interstate commerce although the crew to which he belongs takes the car within one state only and another crew takes it into the other state. Nelson v. Ironwood, etc., R., etc., Co., (Mich. 1918) 170 N. W. 45.

4. Hauling Empty Cars (p. 1227)

The hauling of empty freight cars from one state to another.—To same effect as original annotation, see Hester v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 787, 166 C. C. A. 233.

The presence of interstate cars in the train.—To same effect as original annotation, see Hester v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 787, 166 C. C. A. 233.

III. EMPLOYEE ENGAGED IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

1. Relation of Employer and Employee

a. In General (p. 1227)

A flagman employed jointly by two companies, one engaged in interstate commerce and the other not so engaged, is not within the Act so far as his services to the intrastate road are concerned. San Francisco-Oakland Terminal Rys. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (Cal. 1919) 179 Pac. 386.

b. Employee Going to or Returning from Work (p. 1228)

Employee going to place of work on Sunday to get tools.—The decedent was employed as a locomotive fireman. He came in from his run Saturday evening. He was to go out against at 3:45 a. m. on Monday. On Sunday he went to the railroad yard to get his tools from a "pony engine," and put them on a "pick-up" engine on which he might go out Monday morning, and also to get overalls to take home to be washed. While going through the railroad yards, he was struck by a locomotive and killed. It was held that he was not at the time engaged in interstate commerce. Hansen v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (1918) 91 N. J. L. 197, 103 Atl. 200, wherein the court said: "The decedent was doing nothing at the time of the injury but going for tools and overalls, which he was under the expectation he might need the next day upon another interstate journey. But this was nothing more than a mere expectation; he might have been ordered to other work; his act in getting the tools and overalls could not be directly and immediately connected with his previous work, since he did not expect to find the tools and overalls on the 'pick-up' locomotive he had been on the day before, but on what is called the 'pony' engine, on which he had worked at some previous time. Nor was his act in going for the tools and overalls directly and immediately connected with the work on which he expected to be employed the following day, since that work was subject to change, and even if he ran on the same train he did not know what locomotive he would have, since that would only be determined the following morning. In fact the engine which took out the 'pick-up' train had not come in at the time of his death. He therefore could not put the tools and overalls where they would be needed when the new run began."

f. Employee of Lessee Railroad (p. 1234)

To the same effect as the original annotation see Hull v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1918) 132 Md. 540, 104 Atl. 274, involving an agreement by which two railroad companies made use of each other's tracks. Hull, a brakeman employed by the Western Maryland Railway Company, one of the parties to the agreement, was killed while on a train running over the tracks of the Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., the other party to the agreement. Suit was brought against the latter company for Hull's death but it was held that the defendant was not liable because Hull was not at the time of his death its "employee," although subject to the rules and regulations of the defendant. The court said: "In the case of Robinson v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1915) 237 U. S. 84, 35 S. Ct. 491, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 849, Robinson was a porter on a Pullman car, was required to obey the rules and regulations of the railroad company, and collected tickets and fares from passengers coming on the train after 3 o'clock a. m. He was injured by the alleged negligence of the railroad company and sued under the federal Employers' Liability Act. It was held that he was not an employee within the meaning of that act. Justice Hughes said: 'We are of the opinion that Congress used the words "employee" and "employed" in the statute in their natural sense, and intended to describe the conventional relation of employer and employee. It was well known that there were on interstate trains persons engaged in various services for other masters. Congress, familiar with this situation, did not use any appropriate expression which could be taken to indicate a purpose to include such persons among those to whom the railroad company was to be liable under the act.' So it may be said that Congress may have been presumed to know that such arrangements as existed between these two companies were often made, and if it had intended to make the employees of the 'owning company,' as the agreement calls it, coemployees of the other company, it would have used language 'to indicate a purpose to include' them. The fact that the crews of the other company were subject to the rules and regulations of the owning company cannot be material in determining the question. That is, of course, necessary for the safety of all persons traveling on the line of the owning company, as well as all working on it. The business could not be successfully conducted on a road over which many trains ran, if the 'employees of each company,' to use the language of paragraph 21, while upon the tracks of the other, were not subject to and required to conform 'to the rules, regulations, discipline and orders of the owning company.' But that would certainly not have the effect of making them employees of the owning company, any more than it would the porter on a Pullman car, or an express agent, or mail agent traveling on the train. In Oliver v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (E. D. Wash. 1912) 196 Fed. 432, it was held by the United States District Court that a porter on a Pullman car could recover under the federal act under the circumstances of that case, but the decision was based on the ground that he was employed by an association composed of the railroad company and the Pullman company, which were joint owners of fifty cars. In Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Blalock, (1912) 105 Tex. 296, 147 S. W. 559, an agent of an express company who handled baggage, but there was no proof of employment by the railroad company, was held to be a passenger and not an employee within the meaning of the act. See also Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. West, (1913) 38 Okla. 581, 134 Pac. 655, to the same effect. It is the duty of the owning company to use all reasonable efforts to protect the employees of what we might call the 'visiting company,' and, even if there was no agreement on the subject, the owning company could enforce such rules and regulations as are necessary for the protection of its own employees and property, as well as those of the other company."

g. Independent Contractor (p. 1234)

The case of Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Bond, (1916) 240 U. S. 449, 36 S. Ct. 403, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 735, set out fully in the original annotation, is followed in Polluck v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (S. D. 1918) 166 N. W. 641, wherein the court said: "We think this case falls within the reasoning laid down in the similar case of Chicago, etc., Ry. Co. v. Bond, (1916) 240 U. S. 449, 36 S. Ct. 403, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 735, arising under the same act of Congress, wherein the court held that the injured person was not an employee but an independent contractor. . . . The distinguishing features of that case were that there the contract was in writing and the contractor absolved the railway company from liability for injury to himself and his employees, but those distinguishing features are to our minds unimportant."

Employee of stevedoring corporation.—Where an interstate railroad company contracts with an independent stevedoring corporation, whereby the latter, at a stipulated charge per ton, undertakes to load and unload freight of the railroad at its water front terminal, into and out of cars and vessels, and the stevedoring corporation selects and removes its own servants, defines their duties, fixes and pays their wages, and directs and supervises the performance of their tasks, subject only to the exigencies of railroad transportation, and to such inspection and control by the railroad as is essential to enable it to perform its functions as a common carrier, a workman of the stevedoring corporation, thus selected, paid and directed, and engaged in the work thus contracted for, is not an employee of the railroad. Drago v. Cent. R. Co., (N. J. 1919) 106 Atl. 803.

2. Employed in Interstate Commerce

a. General Rule and Tests (p. 1236)

It is essential to a case under the statutes. —To the same effect as the original annotation see Northern Trust Co. v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., (1918) 282 Ill. 565, 118 N. E. 986; Kuchenmeister v. Los Angeles, etc., R. Co., (Utah 1918) 172 Pac. 725.

It is the carrier engaged in interstate commerce that this act (Federal Employers' Liability Act) seeks to regulate in relation to its duties to its employees, and the power of Congress extends to, and the act was intended to cover, all the employees whose employment relates to such commerce; and if such common carrier is also at the same time engaged in intrastate commerce, using the same means and agencies for both, the power of Congress extends to, and the act was intended to cover, all the employees whose employment relates to such means and agencies. Eskelsen v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1918) 102 Neb. 423, 167 N. W. 408, 168 N. W. 366.

The employee must prove that he was employed in interstate commerce at the time he was injured. Matti v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 55 Mont. 280, 176 Pac. 154.

The true test as to whether one is engaged in interstate commerce. —To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Allen, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 280, 161 C. C. A. 288; Benson v. Bush, (1919) 104 Kan. 198, 178 Pac. 747; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. True, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 759.

Would the performance of the act in which the employee was engaged directly and immediately tend to facilitate the movement of interstate commerce, or, conversely, would the failure to perform the act directly and immediately interfere with or hinder the movement of such commerce? In applying this test, the three essential factors to be considered are time, place and intent. That is to say, Was the act which the employee was performing in point of time, place and intent so directly connected with interstate commerce as to constitute an integral part of interstate transportation? If it was, the employee is entitled to the protection of the Act. If not, he is not. Morrison v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 103 Wash. 650, 175 Pac. 325.

b. Employees Operating Train (p. 1244)

Employees within the statute—Brakeman.—Where the undisputed evidence shows that at the time of the alleged injury, the defendant company was engaged in interstate commerce, and that the plaintiff, who was brakeman on one of the defendant's freight trains, was injured on a freight car loaded with cotton which was being shipped to a point in another state, but to be taken to a point within this state for the purpose of compressing in transit, it was held that both plaintiff and defendant were at the time of the injury engaged in interstate commerce. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hessenflow, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 1161.

Engineer.—An engineer employed on an extra engine to help interstate trains up a heavy grade is engaged in interstate commerce even though on the return trip. Calahan v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (N. H. 1919) 106 Atl. 37.

Fireman.—A fireman on an interstate train is within the statute though at the time of the injury assisting in repairing the waterspout of a tank where the engine had stopped to take water. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Williams, (Tex. 1918), 200 S. W. 1149, wherein the court said: "It is conceded that the train with which the appellee was connected was at the time of the injury engaged in interstate commerce; that it was hauling a train of cars from the state of Louisiana into the state of Texas. But it is contended that his employment was that of a fireman; that when he undertook to assist in repairing the water tank he abandoned his authorized employment and voluntarily entered upon another branch of service of the appellant which had no connection with interstate commerce and also was beyond the scope of his employment. . . . It is true that under the evidence the appellee had been engaged by the appellant to perform only the duties of a fireman. But does it follow that under all circumstances a fireman is not expected to do something more than merely supply his engine with water and fuel? Emergencies might arise when as a member of a train crew he would be expected to perform a service not literally within the terms of a fireman's contract. For instance, a crew whose duty it is to operate a train is not employed to remove obstructions from the track; but a group of trainmen, upon discovering a small obstruction easily removed, would be expected to perform that service as an incident to the continued operation of their train. On the other hand, should the track become obstructed by a considerable slide of earth from an adjacent embankment requiring days to remove, a train crew would not be expected to undertake that service. Between those extremes there must be found many varying conditions in which the question of duty should be determined as an issue of fact. In this instance the evidence shows that it was a part of the fireman's duty to supply the engine with water, and that it was necessary to take water at that particular place in order that the train might proceed on its journey. Had the fireman, upon reaching the water tank, found some slight derangement about the waterspout which it was necessary to repair and which he could easily have adjusted, it would reasonably be regarded as his duty to make the required adjustments. The extent to which he would be expected to go in such instances must depend upon the facts of each particular case. At the time of the injury appellee was assisting in doing something necessary for the further operation of the train, and which required no extended delay. The jury had a right to conclude that he was performing a service incidental to his principal employment."

A fireman on an interstate train who has completed his run and is engaged in placing the locomotive on a storage track is within the act. Garber v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (Mo. 1919) 210 S. W. 377.

Electrical engineer instructing motorman.—Plaintiff, an electrical engineer, employed by defendant to instruct the motormen how to operate motors, in interstate business, was while so employed engaged in interstate commerce. The duties of such employee required him to ride passenger trains and freight trains, and at times to board them while in motion, and his time, pay and service began and ended at a certain point on defendant's railway; he remained such employee within the meaning of said Act so long as he was engaged in the discharge of his duties as such and while attempting to board a freight train to get back to his initial point in order to complete his day's service. Dumphy v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (1918) 82 W. Va. 135, 95 S. E. 863.

c. Employees Coupling, Uncoupling or Switching Cars (p. 1248)

Employees within the statute—Switching.—A member of a switching crew is engaged in interstate commerce at a time when having handled a train containing interstate cars it is being moved for the purpose of handling another such train. Wangerow v. Industrial Board, (1919) 286 Ill. 441, 121 N. E. 724.

Switching to siding preliminary to interstate trip.—An employee switching an empty foreign car to a siding to be returned to its owners outside the state is within the Act. Fayssoux v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., (1918) 109 S. C. 352, 96 S. E. 150.

Breaking up train.—Whether a switchman working at breaking up trains and classifying cars in a yard where interstate and intrastate traffic are handled indiscriminately is within the Act is for the jury. Robertson v. St. Louis Merchant's Bridge Terminal R. Co., (Mo. App. 1919) 213 S. W. 873.

A switchman employed in breaking up a train of cars which have been hauled into the state from another state is engaged in interstate commerce. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Stephens, (Tex. 1918) 201 S. W. 1076.

Spotting cars for loading.—A brakeman engaged in "spotting" local cars for loading on a side track is within the Act, the brakeman being employed on an interstate train, and the "spotting" being made necessary by the fact that the local cars were moved out of the way of that train. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Lester, (Tex. 1918) 207 S. W. 555.

Employees not within the statute—Switching for convenience of consignee.—Where a car on its arrival at destination is placed on a side track designated by the consignee the interstate transportation ends, and a crew who two days later engage in switching it to another side track on the request of the consignee are not within the Act. Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Peck, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 261, 166 C. C. A. 431.

d. Employees Engaged in Construction or Repairs (p. 1254)

Employees within the statute—Roadbed and tracks.—To the same effect as the second paragraph of the original annotation, see Morata v. Oregon-Washington, etc., Nav. Co., (1918) 87 Ore. 219, 170 Pac. 291.

A person employed by a railroad as a section hand and, with other servants, engaged in repairing and maintaining the track and roadway, by removing old and defective steel rails from the track and roadway and replacing the same with other steel rails is employed in interstate commerce. Kusturin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1919) 287 Ill. 306, 122 N. E. 512, wherein the court said: "It is urged by plaintiff in error that the work of removing old rails from the right of way was not an act in the work of repairing the road or roadbed in interstate commerce and that such work was not an act necessarily incident to such repair, and that therefore defendant in error, while so employed, was not engaged in interstate commerce. . . . There is nothing in the record to show that the employment of the defendant in error was in intrastate commerce, and while under the federal Employers' Liability Act it is incumbent on the employee to show that he was engaged in interstate commerce, regardless of the fact that he may not have been engaged in intrastate commerce, yet such fact is of assistance in determining whether he was, in fact, still engaged in interstate commerce, or had completed such employment and had taken up employment of a different character. In this case the one operation connected with interstate commerce was that of repairing the track, and if the removal of these old rails was a part of such repair work, then the defendant in error was engaged in interstate commerce at the time of his injury. It appears from the evidence that for two weeks they had been taking out these old rails and replacing them with new ones and tamping down the roadbed; that the defendant in error was engaged in tamping the roadbed and loading these rails on the morning of his injury; that after noon his work was confined, up to the time of his injury, to the loading of the old rails. We are of the opinion that the removal of such old rails was a part of the general work of repairing the track. The fact that if those old rails remained on the right of way they would not interfere with the use of the track in interstate commerce is not controlling in determining the question whether the work of removing them was practically a part of the repairing of the road. As we view the matter, the removal of these old rails was an incident to such repairing and necessary to a proper upkeep of the track. To hold that such work was not a part of the work of repairing the track would be analogous to holding that while the building of a scaffold which surrounds a house under construction is a necessary part of the work of construction, the removal of such scaffold when the house is built is not."

A railway employee who was injured in the course of his employment on the work of constructing an earth fill to take the place of a wooden trestle over which interstate trains were passing was then employed in interstate commerce where the fill had reached the stage where it required the work of men and machinery to keep the interstate tracks clear during further construction, and the employee, a part of whose duty it was with a shovel to keep the track between the rails clear of earth and stones which might fall upon it in the progress of the work, was, at the time of the accident, preparing to make the required use of the machinery provided for the double purpose of keeping the rails clear for the interstate commerce passing over them, and of pushing the piled-up dirt to the edge of the embankment, to widen it. Kinzell v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 130, 39 S. Ct. 412, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1918) 31 Idaho 365, 171 Pac. 1136, wherein the court said: "We cannot doubt that the Supreme Court of Idaho fell into error in regarding the fill as new construction so unrelated to the conduct of interstate commerce over the bridge at the time the accident to the petitioner occurred that the work being done by him should be regarded as not related to or necessary to the safe conduct of that commerce, and the judgment of that court is, therefore, reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion."

Dumping material into fill.—A section hand employed in dumping waste material over the side of a fill, supporting a track, used in interstate commerce, is within the act if the purpose of the dumping is to strengthen the fill and make it safer. Ohio Valley Electric R. Co. v. Brumfield, (1918) 180 Ky. 743, 203 S. W. 541.

Clearing turntable.—An employee injured while assisting in raising an engine which had fallen into the pit in which was situated a turntable of the railroad company "used for the purpose of turning its engines and locomotives used by it in interstate traffic" is within the Act. Deuel v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 857.

Unloading of rails.—In Reed v. Dickinson, (Ia. 1918) 169 N. W. 673, an employee engaged in unloading rails to be used in an interstate railroad was held to be within the terms of the Act. The court said: "It appears that the plaintiff was working on the main line of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company just east of Council Bluffs; that this line runs from Chicago, Ill., to Omaha, Neb.; and that passenger and freight trains pass over the track between these points. Just prior to the time of the injury, steel rails were being hauled over the main line, on flat cars, for distribution along the line, when distributed, to be placed in the track in substitution for old rails that were being removed. At the time the plaintiff was injured, he was helping remove these rails from the flat car. The rails so unloaded were being used in the repair of the track upon the main line of the company's road. Under all the decisions, both plaintiff and defendant were engaged in interstate commerce."

An employee engaged in loading rails which had been taken up for the purpose of laying new rails on a track used in interstate commerce is engaged in interstate commerce. Hargrove v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1918) 202 S. W. 186.

It is a question for the jury whether an employee loading rails on a flat car to be transported to another place and there used to repair the track is engaged in interstate commerce. Probus v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1918) 181 Ky. 7, 203 S. W. 862.

Unloading bridge piling.—A member of a bridge gang engaged in unloading piling from a car which came from another state, the unloading being done in a railroad yard and the piling to be stored, is not within the statute. Southern R. Co. v. Maxwell, (1918) 117 Miss. 62, 77 So. 905, wherein the court said: "Appellee's contentions are:

First, that he was engaged in interstate commerce at the time of his injury. . . . Appellee's first contention is ruled by Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington, (1916) 241 U. S. 177, 36 S. Ct. 517, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 941, and Lehigh Valley, etc., R. Co. v. Barlow, (1917) 244 U. S. 183, decided May 21, 1917, 37 S. Ct. 515, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1070, from which it appears that the interstate movement of the car here in question had terminated before appellee attempted to unload it, and that, while so doing, he was not employed in interstate commerce."

Employee procuring ice for cars.—In Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Pitchford, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 736, 165 C. C. A. 330, it appeared that cars of the defendant, taken from both interstate and intrastate trains, were carried into the defendant's Richmond yard, and there kept until needed. Plaintiff was a regular employee on the yard, known as a car cleaner, his duties being to clear the yard of papers and other refuse, and clean and ice cars, both interstate and intrastate. Every morning a delivery of several thousand pounds of ice was made at the yard. When the ice wagon arrived in response to the call "ice," the plaintiff and other yard employees were required to go to the chute through which the ice came from the wagons to the yard. Their duty was to put a push car on the track, put ice on, push it to an ice box, and place the ice in the box. It was from this box that plaintiff in the course of his employment took the ice and put it on the cars as it was needed. On May 21, 1915, plaintiff had finished cleaning a car, and had started on the work of cleaning up the yard, when he heard the call, "Pitchford, the ice is here." In response to the call, he went to the push car to aid in putting it on the track. While waiting by the belt line track for other employees to arrive, he turned to look at an engine approaching on the main track. At that instant, he was struck by a switch engine running rapidly on the belt line track. Holding that the Act was not applicable the court said: "It is immaterial that the plaintiff's last previous work may have been cleaning an interstate car, or that his next work would certainly have been icing an interstate car from the ice box. Illinois Cent. R. v. Behrens, 233 U. S. 473, 34 Sup. Ct. 646, 58 L. Ed. 1051, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 163; Erie R. Co. v. Welsh, 242 U. S. 303, 37 Sup. Ct. 116, 61 L. Ed. 319; Delaware, L. & W. R. v. Yurkonis, 238 U. S. 439, 35 Sup. Ct. 902, 59 L. Ed. 1397. He had entered upon the work of receiving ice from the chute and transporting it to an ice box. This work was too remote from interstate commerce to be regarded a part of it. Chicago, B. & Q. R. R. v. Harrington, 241 U. S. 177, 36 Sup. Ct. 517, 60 L. Ed. 941."

Lineman.—Where a railroad engaged in interstate commerce maintained and operated a telegraph line, a lineman injured while on his way in a gasoline motor car to assist in straightening some poles along the right of way is within this Act. Brier v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 183 Ia. 1212, 168 N. W. 339, wherein the court said: "The record shows that the foreman under whom plaintiff worked was instructed by the company to take this motor car to a point along the defendant's line where the telegraph poles needed straightening and to straighten them. These were poles on which wires were strung and used by the company in directing the operation of the trains. The defendant's road was used in carrying freight and passengers between different states. Plaintiff was taken by the foreman to do the work so directed to be done, and was on his way to the places where these poles were at the time he received his injury. He was not actually engaged in straightening the poles at the time he received his injury, but was on his way, in company with the foreman, to do the work of straightening them. The question arises: Was the employment of the plaintiff connected with interstate commerce so as to bring him within the federal Employers' Liability Act? In Ross v. Sheldon, (1916) 176 Ia. 618, 154 N. W. 499, a question very similar to the one here under consideration was before that court. In that case the action was brought under the state law. The defense then interposed was that decedent was engaged in interstate commerce at the time he received his injuries, and that his rights were governed by the federal act. In that case, as in this, the plaintiff was a lineman and was injured. The railway was operated by electricity. The poles were along the line, and on these poles were cross-arms. Upon the cross-arms were wires. The defendant was engaged in putting additional cross-arms upon the poles. While at work in nailing cross-arms upon the poles, he was killed by contact with a live wire. The claim of the defendant was that the poles and cross-arms and signal wires were a part of the necessary instrumentalities of defendant's interstate commerce, and that the injury to the decedent occurred while he was engaged in the work of repair and maintenance. This court said:

"The federal act in question laid upon the defendant, as a carrier of interstate commerce, not only the duty of mere repair, but the duty to maintain sufficiency in its equipment. The most that can be said in concession to the appellant is that the defendant was engaged in curing an 'insufficiency of equipment,' and that the decedent was engaged in work to that end. We reach the conclusion that the evidence brings the case within the operation of the federal act, . . . and that this action, brought by the plaintiff under the state laws, was properly dismissed for that reason."

"We think that case governs this. The only fact that distinguishes it at all is the fact that this plaintiff was not at the time of the injury actually engaged in the repair of the instrumentality necessary to interstate traffic. This, however, we think, is not a distinguishing factor."

The engineer on a wrecking car engaged in clearing a track after the derailment of a train is within the Act. Houston Belt, etc., R. Co. v. Christian, (Mo. 1919) 209 S. W. 816.

An employee engaged in repairing a car customarily used and to be then presently used in trains hauling interstate freight is within the Act. King v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (N. C. 1918) 97 S. E. 29.

Whether a workman in a repair shop engaged on a car used in both interstate and intrastate commerce is within the Act depends on whether on the completion of the repairs the car was to be "forthwith turned to interstate service." Cook v. Southern R. Co., (1918) 109 S. C. 377, 96 S. E. 148.

Repairs on cars in actual use.—A repair man engaged in making "light repairs" on cars while the train stands on a side track, there being on the train cars containing interstate freight, is within the Act. Southern Pac. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (Cal. 1918) 175 Pac. 453.

An employee repairing a locomotive which is used exclusively in interstate traffic is within the Act. Kuchenmeister v. Los Angeles, etc., R. Co., (Utah 1918) 172 Pac. 725. See to the same effect Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Woods, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 428, 164 C. C. A. 352, wherein the court in distinguishing the case from that of Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Winters, (1917) 242 U. S. 353, 37 S. Ct. 353, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 358, Ann. Cas. 1918B 54, in original annotation, said: "The case at bar, as we have stated, is distinguishable from the cases relied upon by counsel for plaintiff, inasmuch as the engine was taken out of interstate commerce for the express purpose that it might be repaired to enable it to continue as an instrument of interstate commerce. In other words, it is easily distinguished from the Winters Case because the character of the work in which the engine in this instance was employed did not depend 'upon remote possibilities or upon accidental later events.' It appears from the evidence that engine 88 was regularly engaged in hauling interstate passenger trains, operating under a rule of the road by which it reached Florence every three days. It further appears that on the day plaintiff was injured this engine was taken out of the Columbia-Wilmington train in order that the U-bolt in question might be repaired. It also appears that the engine was placed in the shop and sent out upon the same day on its regular run, hauling what is known as the Columbia-Wilmington train."

Employees not within the statute.—A laborer engaged in constructing a dirt fill beneath a wooden trestle, though employed by a railroad company engaged in both interstate and intrastate commerce, is not within the statute. Kenzell v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 31 Idaho 365, 171 Pac. 1136, wherein the court said: "It is held that one engaged in repairing or keeping in usable condition a roadbed, bridge, engine, car, or other instrument then in use in such transportation is engaged in interstate commerce. . . . So, also, one engaged in an act incidental to his employment in interstate transportation comes within the provisions of the act. . . . But one engaged in an employment upon an article which may ultimately become an element of interstate commerce, but which is too remote to be directly connected therewith, or incidental thereto, is not engaged in interstate commerce within the meaning of the act. . . . It is well settled that new construction of either roadbed or equipment, designed ultimately to be used in interstate commerce, is not, while in the process of building, an instrument of interstate commerce, and one injured while employed about the same is not within the terms of the act. . . . We are of the opinion that constructing a fill to take the place of a trestle which is being used in interstate commerce is new construction, and that the fill does not become part of the railroad until it is completed and the track is placed upon it instead of upon the trestle."

Taking out materials.—A section foreman taking out concrete tiling to be used at some future time in repairs is not within the Act. Morrison v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 103 Wash. 650, 175 Pac. 325.

Removing discarded rails.—A section man engaged in removing discarded rails is not within the Act though he is a member of the same crew with other men engaged in taking up old rails and putting down new ones. Perez v. Union Pac. R. Co., (Utah 1918) 173 Pac. 236.

Repairing cinder hoist.—An employee injured while repairing a cinder hoist used in connection with a cinder pit into which the engines of both interstate and intrastate trains emptied cinders is not within the Act. Southern R. Co. v. O'Dell, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 540, 164 C. C. A. 456.

Construction of building.—A railroad employee wheeling bricks from a car on a side track to a warehouse which is being constructed by the railroad company is not within the Act. Matti v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 55 Mont. 280, 176 Pac. 154.

Repairing locomotive.—Evidence which shows that a railroad employee was injured while repairing one of the company's locomotives, which had been using in pulling an interstate passenger train, and which had been taken from the line tracks and placed in a roundhouse for repairs, is insufficient to show that the rights of the parties were controlled by the privileges and obligations arising under the federal Employers' Liability Act. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Cronin, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 919.

e. Employee Supplying Fuel or Water
(p. 1267)

A coach cleaner filling the water cooler in a car used in interstate commerce and injured because of defects in a hose furnished to him for that purpose is within the Act. Cassin v. Lusk, (Mo. 1919) 210 S. W. 902.

f. Employee Guarding or Inspecting Property (p. 1269)

Employees not within the statute—Janitor.—In Heed v. Industrial Commission, (1919) 287 Ill. 505, 122 N. E. 801, it was held that a janitor in a railroad shop was not, in the state of facts shown, engaged in interstate commerce. The court said: "Concerning the nature of the commerce in which Pierce was employed, the facts are as follows: He performed the ordinary duties of a janitor in the shops of the company at Villa Grove. His work was sweeping, cleaning up, building fires in stoves during cold weather, helping to load scrap iron, and doing other work of that kind. The shops contained lathes, planers, and machinery, and slight repairs were there made upon engines which ran in and out of Villa Grove. The engines hauled trains both in interstate and intrastate commerce. On the morning of February 6, 1916, Pierce came to the shops and was splitting and breaking up kindling wood for the purpose of building fires in the stoves when a splinter flew from a board and struck the middle finger of his left hand."

Watchman.—A night watchman employed in railroad shops whose duties required him to take care of the locomotive shop and the storeroom was held not engaged in interstate commerce. Wabash R. Co. v. Industrial Commission, (1919) 286 Ill. 194, 121 N. E. 569, wherein the court said: "Dead engines were brought into the shops of plaintiff in error and repaired. While it is true that these engines had been used in both intrastate and interstate traffic, their repair had no direct connection with such traffic, and defendant in error, when performing his duties as watchman in those shops was not engaged in interstate commerce. Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co. v. Industrial Board, 273 Ill. 528, 113 N. E. 80, L. R. A. 1916F, 540."

Engine inspector.—In Mitchell v. Southern R. Co., (1919) 23 Ga. App. 196, 98 S. E. 184, it was said in an official syllabus: "There was no error in awarding a nonsuit on the first and second counts of the petition, as the evidence failed to establish that the defendant was engaged and the plaintiff employed, at the time of the injury, in interstate commerce. According to his testimony the plaintiff was 'inspector for engines, tanks, wheels, and all such as that—engine carpenter,' and inspected engines engaged in both intrastate and interstate commerce. He inspected any engine that came into the roundhouse, and an engine might run to Chattanooga, Tenn., on one day, to Jacksonville, Fla., on another day, or to Macon, Ga., on still another day."

g. Employee Going to or Returning from Work or Temporarily Diverted Therefrom (p. 1271)

Employees within statute—In general.—"It is now quite well settled by federal decisions that 'in leaving the carrier's yard at the close of the day's work' the employé is but discharging a duty of his employment, and that, if he was employed in interstate commerce while actually at work, he was, in legal contemplation, so engaged while leaving the yard when the actual work was ended. Erie R. Co. v. Winfield, (1917) 244 U. S. 170, 37 S. Ct. 556, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1057, [Ann. Cas. 1918B 662]. Our own decisions are in harmony with this principle. Ewald v. Chicago, etc., Co., (1888) 70 Wis. 420, 36 N. W. 12, 591, 5 A. S. R. 178; Kunza v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1909) 140 Wis. 440, 123 N. W. 403. Of course the employé must be leaving by the proper and usual way, or at least by a way known to and expressly or tacitly permitted by the employer. We think that there was sufficient evidence in the present case to take this question to the jury." Ewing v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 167 Wis. 597, 167 N. W. 442, 169 N. W. 429.

Arriving before time to begin work.—An employee arriving at the place of work a few minutes before the time fixed for beginning work and injured while waiting for that time to arrive, is as much within the Act as if engaged in his regular duties. Stool v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (1918) 88 Ore. 350, 172 Pac. 101.

Going to meet foreman.—A section man, who is a member of a crew engaged in laying rails, who goes to a station to meet the foreman, by order of the former, is within the Act while making the trip. Williams v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (1918) 181 Ky. 313, 204 S. W. 292.

Going to make report.—The timekeeper of a gang repairing a track used in interstate commerce is within the act while going to the telegraph office to send a report to his superior. Crecelius v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Mo. 1918) 205 S. W. 181.

Yard brakeman returning to engine.—The plaintiff was a member of a crew attached to a switch engine, and his day's work was in switching cars in interstate and intrastate commerce. He had just switched a string of 50 or 60, all on the same string, and some of the cars transported freight which came from other states into the state of New Jersey, and others freight which was being transported out of the state into other states, and still other cars contained freight which was being transported between places wholly within the state of New Jersey. The plaintiff had not concluded his day's work, and was not leaving the yard, but was crossing the tracks to rejoin his engine, to continue his work. It was held that he was within the act. Erie R. Co. v. Downs, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 415.

Returning with work train.—A conductor employed by interstate carrier and in charge of a work train distributing ties along a section of the carrier's line, which is wholly in one state, is engaged in interstate commerce, and that status obtains even after the ties have been distributed and he is returning home, still, however, in charge of the train. Ely v. Chicago Great Western R. Co., (Is. 1918) 166 N. W. 739, wherein the court said: "Plaintiff brought this action under the federal Employers' Liability Act, and his right to maintain it is challenged by counsel for defendant upon the ground that he was not, at the time of the accident, engaged in interstate commerce. He left Clarion in the morning in charge of extra No. 130 composed of an engine, caboose, and several cars loaded with ties to be distributed at various places along the track. Having finished unloading the ties at Thornton, in obedience to orders from the chief dispatcher, plaintiff and crew were returning to Clarion. The train at this time consisted of the caboose and engine. The crew comprised the fireman, engineer, two brakemen, and plaintiff. Several of the section men who had assisted in unloading the ties were also riding in the caboose. Although counsel does not concede that, while plaintiff was in charge of the train unloading ties with which to repair the track used for interstate traffic, he was employed therein, it has quite generally been held that an employee engaged in delivering material therefor, or in repairing bridges or tracks, used in interstate commerce, is likewise so employed. An employee while on his way to and from his work, if employed in interstate commerce, injured by the negligence of his employer, is entitled to prosecute his action for damages under the federal act."

Returning on tricycle.—A signal repairer returning home on a railroad tricycle furnished to him for the purpose of his work, is within the Act. Louisville, etc., R. Co., v. Mullins, (1918) 181 Ky. 148, 203 S. W. 1058.

Employee not within Act—Foreman taking crew to work.—In St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. True, (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 758, a roundhouse foreman was held not to be within the Act, the facts being stated as follows: "Under the rules of the company, the day shift left the roundhouse at 6 o'clock p. m., and it was plaintiff's duty to be there at that time and convey them in the motor-driven car furnished by the defendant to Barton, and there get the night crew and bring them back to the roundhouse in time for them to go to work at 7 o'clock p. m., after which his duties for the day ended. While plaintiff was nearing Lexi with the night crew on the car, they ran upon a cow lying on the track, which could not be seen, owing to the darkness, and the alleged negligence of defendant in failing to furnish proper lights for the car, which, on request of plaintiff, defendant had promised but had failed to supply. The particular work which the crew was to perform after arriving at Lexi was not shown, except that they were required to do whatever might be found to be done in the roundhouse and yards under the direction of their foreman; and whether they were expected to work on an engine or car used wholly in intrastate commerce, or whether they were to work on an engine or car used wholly in interstate commerce, or whether they would work on implements used both in intrastate and interstate commerce, the evidence does not disclose."

i. Other Employees (p. 1275)

Employees within the statute—Removing snow from track.—An employee of an interstate railway carrier, who is injured while removing snow from a track over which interstate trains are being run regularly, is engaged in interstate commerce. Koofos v. Great Northern R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 170 N. W. 859.

Care of "camp car."—A person employed by a railway company to care for and keep clean a so-called "camp car," to attend to the beds, and to cook for himself and a gang of railway bridge carpenters quartered in such car and engaged in the repair of railway bridges and abutments in use as instrumentalities of interstate commerce, was, at the time of receiving injuries in a collision between an engine and the camp car, then on a sidetrack, employed in interstate commerce where he was then inside the car, engaged in cooking a meal for the bridge carpenters and himself. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, (1919) 250 U. S. 101, 39 S. Ct. 396, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1918) 132 Md. 345, 103 Atl. 945, wherein the court said: "The only question we have to consider is whether plaintiff at the time he was injured was engaged in interstate commerce within the meaning of the statute. Petitioner, citing Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Behrens, (1914) 233 U. S. 473, 478 [34 S. Ct. 646, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051, 1055, Ann. Cas. 1914C 163], and Erie R. Co. v. Welsh, (1916) 242 U. S. 303, 306 [37 S. Ct. 116, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 319, 324], as conclusive to the effect that the true test is the nature of the work being done by the employee at the time of the injury, and that what he had been doing before and expected to do afterwards is of no consequence, argues that since plaintiff at the time of the injury and for some weeks prior thereto was and had been working as mess cook and camp cleaner or attendant for a gang of bridge carpenters who were quartered 'for their own convenience' in a camp car belonging to petitioner, which was not being moved in interstate commerce, but was located and standing on a switch track in the neighborhood of the bridge upon which the carpenters then were and for some weeks prior thereto had been and for some time afterwards were working;

and since plaintiff at the moment of the injury was engaged in cooking food which was the property of himself and the carpenters, he was not at the time engaged in interstate commerce.

"As thus stated, the relation of plaintiff's work to the interstate commerce of his employer would seem to be rather remote. But upon a closer examination of the facts the contrary will appear. Taking it to be settled by the decision of this court in Pedersen v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1913) 229 U. S. 146, 152 [33 S. Ct. 648, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1125, 1127, Ann. Cas. 1914C 153], that the repair of bridges in use as instrumentalities of interstate commerce is so closely related to such commerce as to be in practice and in legal contemplation a part of it, it of course is evident that the work of the bridge carpenters in the present case was so closely related to defendant's interstate commerce as to be in effect a part of it. The next question is, what was plaintiff's relation to the work of the bridge carpenters? It may be freely conceded that if he had been acting as cook and camp cleaner or attendant merely for the personal convenience of the bridge carpenters, and without regard to the conduct of their work, he could not properly have been deemed to be in any sense a participant in their work. But the fact was otherwise. He was employed in a camp car which belonged to the railroad company, and was moved about from place to place along its line according to the exigencies of the work of the bridge carpenters, no doubt with the object and certainly with the necessary effect of forwarding their work, by permitting them to conduct it conveniently at points remote from their homes and remote from towns where proper board and lodging were to be had. The circumstances that the risks of personal injury to which plaintiff was subjected were similar to those that attended the work of train employees generally and of the bridge workers themselves when off duty, while not without significance, is of little moment. The significant thing, in our opinion, is that he was employed by defendant to assist, and actually was assisting, the work of the bridge carpenters by keeping their bed and board close to their place of work, thus rendering it easier for defendant to maintain a proper organization of the bridge gang and forwarding their work by reducing the time lost in going to and from their meals and their lodging place. If, instead, he had brought their meals to them daily at the bridge upon which they happened to be working, it hardly would be questioned that his work in so doing was a part of theirs. What he was in fact doing was the same in kind, and did not differ materially in degree. Hence he was employed, as they were, in interstate commerce, within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act."

Employees not within the statute — Electric lineman.—An electric lineman injured while engaged in wiping insulators on the main power line between a power house and substations furnishing electricity to a railroad engaged in both interstate and intrastate commerce is not employed in interstate commerce. Southern Pac. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (Cal. 1918) 171 Pac. 1071, wherein the court said: "The Industrial Accident Commission made an award in favor of the dependents of William T. Butler, who was killed while working as an electric lineman in the employ of petitioner, Southern Pacific Company. Said company operates a system of electric railway lines in Alameda county; its cars being used in both intrastate and interstate commerce. For the generation of electric power the company maintains at Fruitvale a main power house, whence an alternating current of high voltage is transmitted through a main power line to substations. At the substations the current passes through converters and transformers which convert it to a direct current and reduce its voltage. The direct current, thus reduced, passes to the trolley wires, and from them to the motors on the cars. When Butler sustained the fatal injury, which was caused by an electric shock, he was engaged in wiping insulators on the main power line between the Fruitvale power house and the substations. . . . In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington, [1916] 241 U. S. 177, 36 S. Ct. 517, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 941, the Supreme Court of the United States had occasion to consider a state of facts more closely analogous to the situation here presented. The injured employee was a member of a switching crew which was engaged in switching cars of coal belonging to the railroad company. The coal was being switched to a shed, where it was to be placed in bins and chutes, and supplied as needed to locomotives engaged in interstate as well as intrastate transportation. It was held that the federal Employers' Liability Act was not applicable. Applying the test laid down in the Shanks Case, the court said that:

"Manifestly there was no such close or direct relation to interstate transportation in the taking of the coal to the coal chutes. This was nothing more than the putting of the coal supply in a convenient place from which it could be taken as required for use."

"The reasoning is apt here. The coal was essential to the production of motive power for the locomotives, just as, in this case, the electric current was necessary to move petitioner's cars. But in moving the coal to the shed Harrington was engaged in a work which was at least one step removed from the actual furnishing of the coal to the engines, and this precluded that close relation of his work to interstate commerce which would bring him within the scope of the federal act. So in this case Butler was working on the part of the line between the main power house and a substation. The current was still to pass through the transformers and converters, and be so converted and reduced as to be suitable for use in propelling the cars. The test of remoteness seems as applicable in the one case as in the other. It is true, as petitioner claims, that the electric current, once it is generated at the main power house, passes along the main power line, to and through the converters and transformers in the substations, and to the trolley wires, without interruption, and without storage. No doubt, too, a break in that current at any point, however remote from the lines of track, would immediately stop the progress of all cars then moving. But we think the decisive factor in the case is not to be sought in these characteristics of electric energy. As the Supreme Court of the United States says:

"The federal act speaks of interstate commerce in a practical sense suited to the occasion." Shanks v. Delaware, etc., R. Co. [(1916) 239 U. S. 556, 36 S. Ct. 188, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 436, L. R. A. 1916C 797]; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington, supra.

"Viewing the question before us in this light, we think the answer to it should be the same as that given in the Harrington Case. The main power line is not part and parcel of the railroad or its equipment, in the same sense as the roadbed or the trolley line. It is an instrumentality by means of which something necessary for the operation of the cars is brought to a point where it can be usefully applied. Its purpose is simply to get to the road the necessary power to operate cars thereon—the same purpose served by wagons or cars laden with coal to be carried to the road for the operation of its locomotives. Even though the power flows without interruption from the power house to the trolley lines, it still remains that all that the main line does, and all that those engaged in keeping it in order do, is to assist in putting on the trolley line the necessary power to be used by the operatives of the road as desired, or, to paraphrase the language already quoted from the Harrington Case, 'putting the electric power [coal supply] in a convenient place from which it could be taken as required for use.'"

Repairing dwelling house.—A railroad employee injured while walking on the track on his way to repair a house occupied as a residence by the general manager, is not within the Act. Walden v. Cumberland R. Co., (1918) 181 Ky. 100, 203 S. W. 854.

IV. INJURIES TO EMPLOYEE

1. Negligence Generally

a. Basis of Liability (p. 1277)

Negligence of employer as basis.—To same effect as original annotation, see Hoyer v. Central R. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 493, 166 C. C. A. 569.

Employer not insurer.—To same effect as original annotation, see Hoyer v. Central R.

Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 493, 166 C. C. A. 569.

b. Relation of Negligence to Injury (p. 1278)

Negligence must have been proximate cause.—To the same effect as the original annotation see Tremelling v. Southern Pac. Co., (Utah 1917) 170 Pac. 80.

Negligence concurring with that of employee.—Where an accident resulted from the failure of the injured person to keep a lookout for trains and the failure of the persons in charge of a train to give warning signals, the railroad company is liable, the negligence of the employee going only in reduction of damages. Stool v. Southern Pac. Co., (1918) 88 Ore. 350, 172 Pac. 101.

c. Mode of Determining What Constitutes Negligence (p. 1279)

Common law rules applicable.—The term "negligence" is interpreted in the light of the common law, as construed and applied by the federal courts, free from legislative interference. McLean v. Chicago Great Western R. Co., (1918) 140 Minn. 35, 167 N. W. 349.

Federal or state rules as controlling.—See to the same effect as the original annotation Pennsylvania Co. v. Stalker, (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 163.

Order of Interstate Commerce Commission.

—The orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission are not intended to fix the "maximum of negligence." Accordingly while the failure to equip a locomotive with a light on the rear is not shown to be a violation of rule 29 of the commission, because it is not proved that the locomotive in question was "shopped for heavy or general repairs" after the promulgation of the rule, the operation of the locomotive without such a light may be found to be common law negligence. Fuller v. Oregon-Washington R., etc., Co., (Ore. 1919) 181 Pac. 338.

d. Defects in Cars, Engines, Appliances, etc.

(2) Duty of Carrier as to Place to Work (p. 1280)

Safety stations on bridge.—Where a night watchman charged with the duty of guarding a railroad bridge was killed by a passing train under circumstances not disclosed by the evidence and it appeared that the bridge was inadequately provided with "safety stations," by which trains could be avoided by a person on the bridge, it was held that the question of negligence was for the jury. Kreitzer v. Southern Pac. Co., (Cal. App. 1919) 177 Pac. 477.

Leaving car near switch.—Whether it is negligence to leave a car on a side track so near a switch that a brakeman alighting from a train to throw the switch may be struck thereby is for the jury. Mills v. Roberts, (1918) 136 Ark. 433, 206 S. W. 751.

f. Effect of Section on Particular Doctrines or Maxims

(2) Fellow Servant Doctrine (p. 1284)

In general.—To the same effect as the second paragraph of the original annotation see Kusturin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1919) 287 Ill. 306, 122 N. E. 512; Clement v. Maine Cent. R. Co., (1917) 117 Me. 45, 102 Atl. 559; Scarlett v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1917) 222 N. Y. 155, 118 N. E. 513; Casey v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (1919) 231 Mass. 529, 121 N. E. 403; Rockwell v. Hustis, (N. H. 1918) 104 Atl. 127; Santomassimo v. New York, etc., R. Co., (N. J. 1918) 105 Atl. 14.

2. Persons Entitled to Sue

b. Personal Representatives (p. 1287)

Who is "personal representative."—A "personal representative" within the meaning of this section means an executor or general administrator. Swank v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (N. J. 1918) 104 Atl. 26.

c. Widow (p. 1289)

Widow cannot sue in individual capacity.—To same effect as original annotation, see Garber v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (Mo. 1919) 210 S. W. 377.

3. Pleadings

a. In General (p. 1295)

Sufficiency of complaint generally.—A petition in an action against a railroad company for personal injuries to plaintiff while he was in the employ of defendant, stating that defendant was the owner, and was "engaged in the operation of a system of steam commercial railroads traversing the states of Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, and other states," when not attacked by demurrer or motion, sufficiently alleges the interstate character of defendant so as to bring the cause of action within the federal Employers' Liability Act. Gwynne v. Goldware, (1918) 102 Neb. 260, 166 N. W. 625.

Cure of complaint by answer.—Failure to allege facts showing that the plaintiff was engaged in interstate commerce is cured by adversary pleadings supplying the facts, followed by a trial on the theory that the action is under the federal Act. King v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (N. C. 1918) 97 S. E. 29.

Statute need not be expressly referred to.—To the same effect as the original annotations, see Northern Trust Co. v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., (1918) 282 Ill. 565, 118 N. E. 986.

Plaintiff's original petition pleaded that the defendant owned and operated a railroad throughout Nebraska and other states named in the petition and that he was employed by the company as a baggage handler at its Omaha depot and while so engaged a fellow employee negligently caused a heavy trunk to fall upon him whereby he sustained personal injuries for which he sought to recover damages. The petition did not state that it was brought under a law of Nebraska.

It was held that the petition stated a cause of action under the federal Employers' Liability Act. In such case an amended petition filed more than two years after the accident, that in specific terms alleged the interstate character of defendant and of plaintiff's employment, did not state a new cause of action, but related back to the filing of the original petition, and the action was not barred by the federal statute of limitations. Eskelsen v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1918) 102 Neb. 423, 167 N. W. 408, 168 N. W. 366.

Pleading as showing cause of action under both federal and state statute.—In Southern R. Co. v. Maxwell, (1918) 117 Miss. 62, 77 So. 905, it was contended by the plaintiff who had recovered judgment against the defendant under the federal Employers' Liability Act that if not engaged in interstate commerce at the time he was injured as contended by the defendant in the appeal, yet he was entitled to have the judgment affirmed because he was entitled to a recovery under the Employers' Liability Act of Alabama. But to this contention the court replied as follows: "In support of the second contention it is urged by counsel for appellees that, while the declaration, which contains only one count, states a cause of action under the federal Employers' Liability Act, it also, treating the allegations relative to interstate commerce as surplusage, states a cause of action under the Alabama Employers' Liability Act, and that if the evidence fails to show that appellee was engaged in interstate commerce at the time he was injured, nevertheless the judgment should be affirmed, for the reason that he is entitled to a recovery under the Alabama statute. If these statutes were identical, so that the pleadings could have presented the same issues under the one as under the other, it may be that this contention would not be without merit; but, as pointed out by the Supreme Court of Alabama in Louisville, etc., Co. v. Carter, (1915) 195 Ala. 382, 70 So. 655, Ann. Cas. 1917E 292, they differ materially, in that under the Alabama statute contributory negligence may be pleaded in bar of the action, while under the federal statute it can be pleaded only in mitigation of damages."

c. Amendments to Pleadings (p. 1302)

Amendment changing parties plaintiff.—A judgment for the plaintiff in an action for damages for wrongful death cognizable under the federal Employers' Liability Act, commenced by the widow of the deceased in her personal capacity, was reversed by the Supreme Court of the state upon the ground that the plaintiff could not, although sole beneficiary, maintain the action, except as personal representative, such reversal being without prejudice to such rights as the personal representative might have. It was held not error for the trial court upon remand to allow the petition to be amended by joining the widow as personal representative of the deceased, as party plaintiff, without in any way enlarging or modifying the facts upon which the action was based. It was held, further, that such amendment of the petition is not equivalent to the commencement of a new action, for the purpose of applying the two-year limitation provided by the statute. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Lenahan, (Okla. 1918) 171 Pac. 455.

Common law liability.—Where the plaintiff brought suit under the federal Act and did not incorporate in his declaration a count charging a common law liability it was held that such omission could not be supplied by amendment on its appearing that he had no cause of action under the federal act, because such an amendment would introduce a new and different cause of action. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Branson, (1917) 131 Md. 686, 104 Atl. 356.

Stating cause of action under state law.—Where a complaint states a cause of action for damages, under the federal Employers' Liability Act, for death by wrongful act occurring in the state of Iowa, and plaintiff recovered judgment, which was reversed upon appeal, an amendment of the complaint eliminating therefrom all allegations relating to interstate commerce and the application of the federal Act, and pleading in lieu thereof certain statutes of the state of Iowa, does not constitute a departure from law to law, and the pleading of a new cause of action. Nash v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (1918) 141 Minn. 148, 169 N. W. 540.

Erroneous date.—Where plaintiff files a petition stating a cause of action under the federal Employers' Act but erroneously states the date of the injury it is proper to permit an amendment that correctly charges the date. Martinson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 102 Neb. 238, 166 N. W. 624.

4. Practice and Procedure

a. In General (p. 1306)

A state attorney's lien statute applies to causes of action arising under the Employer's Liability Act. Mytton v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (Mo. 1919) 211 S. W. 111.

c. Jury of Less than Twelve (p. 1313)

Verdict by three-fourths of jury.—To same effect as original annotation, see Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ward, (Okla. 1918) 173 Pac. 212.

5. Evidence

a. In General (p. 1317)

Sufficiency of evidence in general.—See to same effect as original annotation Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Selden, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 122, 161 C. C. A. 174.

b. Proof of Negligence (p. 1318)

Admissibility of ordinance regulating speed of train.—Where an employee was killed by being struck by a train traveling at an unlawful rate of speed the speed ordinance is admissible in evidence in an action to recover damages for his death. Pennsylvania Co. v.

Stalker, (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 163, wherein the court said: "Appellant insists that the court erred in rejecting 18 of the 41 instructions tendered. One of these rejected instructions is in the following language:

"(38) Certain provisions of an ordinance of the city of Valparaiso have been introduced in evidence on the trial of this cause. I now instruct you that these provisions of such ordinance are not to be considered by you for any purpose, and they are withdrawn from your consideration.' . . . Appellant contends that the refusal to give said instruction No. 32 is error, for the reason that since this action is under the federal statute all state laws and municipal ordinances are excluded from consideration. We cannot sustain the contention in this sense. The federal statute declares that employers within its scope shall be liable to their employees for negligence. It does not specify what shall constitute negligence, but leaves that question to be determined in accordance with the established rules of the law of that subject. The ordinance does not undertake to regulate interstate commerce or to create any civil liability against the railway company. It is merely a reasonable exercise of the police power, and is designed to promote the safety of persons and property which would be jeopardized by the running of trains at a dangerous speed within the municipality. We have not been advised that this point has been specifically decided by any federal court; but we are of the opinion that, on principle, such an ordinance ought to be considered as bearing on the question of negligence."

c. Evidence Bearing on Question of Damages (p. 1319)

Pain suffered before death.—The representative of a deceased person may recover in a single action damages for pain suffered by an injured person between his injury and death, and also for pecuniary damages resulting to the next of kin from the death, although the causes of action are separate and distinct, but both causes of action must be set up in the pleadings if recovery be sought in each, and if plaintiff proceeds to trial on a complaint for pecuniary damages resulting from death alone, and refuses, when given opportunity to do so, to amend his complaint to embrace the other cause of action, it is error to permit evidence, over objection, in support of the injury not covered by the complaint. The statute gives a single action for a double wrong, but each wrong must be declared on. Lennon v. Erie R. Co., (1918) 92 N. J. L. 209, 104 Atl. 444.

e. Burden of Proof (p. 1321)

Negligence.—To same effect as original annotation, see Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. McCaskell, (1918) 118 Miss. 629, 79 So. 817.

In an action by an employee against his employer, the fact of the accident carries with it no presumption of negligence on the part of the employer, but such negligence is an affirmative fact for the injured employee to establish by the evidence. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hesenflow, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 1161.

Effect of state statute.—The error of the trial court in instructing the jury, in an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act and the Boiler Inspection Act of February 17, 1911 (see vol. 8, p. 1200), that the so-called Prima Facie Act of Mississippi (Miss. Code 1906, § 1985, as amended by Laws 1912, ch. 215) applied, and that it relieved the plaintiff of the burden of proof to establish negligence, cannot be said not to have been prejudicial, on the theory that the Boiler Inspection Act imposed upon the railway company the absolute duty to have the locomotive and tender, and all parts and appurtenances thereof, in proper condition and safe to operate, and that the mere breaking of the king pin which fastened the drawbar to the tender, and the breaking of the coupling chains between engine and tender, which apparently caused the accident, show conclusively that they were defective, where the evidence did not establish as matter of law that the king pin or the chains were defective, but at most presented a question for the jury. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Scarlet, (1919) 249 U. S. 528, 39 S. Ct. 360, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (reversing (1917) 115 Miss. 285, 76 So. 265), followed Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Mullins, (1919) 249 U. S. 531, 39 S. Ct. 368, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 115 Miss. 343, 76 So. 147.

The rights of a railway company cannot be said not to have been prejudiced by the error of the highest state court in affirming a judgment of the trial court in favor of plaintiff in an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act for injuries received by a flagman while switching an interstate train, on the ground that the so-called Prima Facie Act of Mississippi (Miss. Code 1906, § 1985, as amended by Laws 1912, ch. 215), as to which the trial court had given no instruction, applied and relieved the plaintiff of the burden of establishing negligence, — even though there may have been sufficient evidence of the railway company's negligence to go to the jury, and the general instructions concerning negligence may have been proper, where the jury was also instructed that it was the absolute duty of the railway company to furnish the deceased with a safe place to perform the duties incident to his employment. Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Mullins, (1919) 249 U. S. 531, 39 S. Ct. 368, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 115 Miss. 343, 76 So. 147.

6. Damages

a. Recovery by Employee (p. 1322)

Statute does not affect measure of damages.—There is no merit in the argument that, because the federal law is virtually a compensation statute, and fixes liability for defective appliances, regardless of the question of negligence, public policy demands that there should not be as large verdicts as the one in this case. The same test is applied in this case as in any case of negligence in which the law does not designate certain acts of omission or commission as negligence per se. Compensation is the end to be attained in each instance. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Hopkins, (Tex. Civ. App. 1918) 202 S. W. 222.

Excessiveness.—Verdict awarding $37,500 for injuries causing permanent disablement of brakeman reduced to $12,500. Smith v. Kansas City Southern R. Co., (Mo. 1919) 213 S. W. 481.

b. Actions for Death

(1) In General (p. 1323)

Measure of damages generally.—To same effect as original annotation, see Oliver v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., (S. D. Ga. 1918) 250 Fed. 652, also holding that no damages are recoverable for pain and suffering of the employee.

Measure of damages stated.—The state courts are obliged, by rulings of the Supreme Court of the United States, to fix the amount of compensation, if compensation be due to the beneficiaries of a deceased employee, under the federal Employers' Liability Act, at the present or cash value of what the employee might reasonably have contributed to the support of the beneficiaries during the term of his life expectancy, according to the evidence. The right of recovery being limited to the pecuniary loss, that loss is to be determined or computed by discounting the lost future benefits, at a fair or reasonable rate at which the money might be loaned or invested safely at interest, for each year of the life expectancy. Jones v. Kansas City Southern R. Co., (1918) 143 La. 307, 78 So. 568.

Excessiveness of verdict generally.—For injuries to plaintiff, an engine house hostler, resulting in the permanent shortening of one leg, which was left in such condition that it caused constant pain when used, a verdict of $4,791.75 was not excessive, where the plaintiff, 30 years old at the time of the accident, was earning $20 a week, and in a short time would have become a duly qualified engineer, with an increase in salary. Clement v. Maine Cent. R. Co., (1917) 117 Me. 45, 102 Atl. 559.

Loss and suffering during lifetime.—"The Supreme Court held in St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Craft, (1915) 237 U. S. 648, 35 S. Ct. 704, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1160, that a recovery could be had for damages growing out of loss and suffering endured by an injured decedent while he lived, and also for the pecuniary loss suffered by the beneficiaries named in the statute because of his death, in the same action, recognizing, however, that the two claims are different. Lennon v. Erie R. Co., (1918) 92 N. J. L. 209, 104 Atl. 444.

(2) Pecuniary Loss (p. 1325)

Pecuniary loss must be shown.—The jury must find, as to each plaintiff, what pecuniary benefit each plaintiff had reason to expect from the continued life of the deceased, and the recovery must be limited to compensation of those relatives, in the proper class, who are shown to have sustained such pecuniary loss. Horton v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., (1918) 175 N. C. 472, 95 S. E. 883.

c. Recovery by Widow and Children

(1) In General (p. 1327)

Measure of damages generally.—To same effect as second paragraph of original annotation, see The Erie Lighter 108, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 490.

Presumption as to pecuniary loss.—To same effect as original annotation, see The Erie Lighter 108, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 490.

(3) Actions by Children (p. 1330)

Loss of care, society and companionship.—To same effect as original annotation, see The Erie Lighter 108, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 490.

e. Apportionment of Damages (p. 1331)

In general.—The jury is not required to apportion the award of damages among the beneficiaries of a deceased employee. Jones v. Kansas City Southern R. Co., (1918) 143 La. 307, 78 So. 568.

7. Questions for Court and Jury (p. 1334)

Negligence of carrier.—To same effect as original annotation, see Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. McGuffey, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 25, 164 C. C. A. 137, leaving car on repair track without giving warning of its position.

To the same effect see Kusturin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1919) 287 Ill. 306, 122 N. E. 512, wherein the court said: "It is also urged by plaintiff in error that there was no evidence tending to establish negligence on its part. The rule established by the federal courts is that the federal act proceeds on the principle which regards negligence as the basis of the duty to make compensation and excludes the existence of such duty in the absence of such negligence. . . . The question of negligence was therefore one of fact, to be left to the jury, under proper instructions from the court, and unless, upon a review of the evidence, this court is able to say that there was no evidence fairly tending to show negligence it will not disturb the verdict."

Failure to inspect car.—Negligence of railroad company in failing to inspect a foreign car held for the jury. Rowe v. Colorado, etc., R. Co., (Tex. 1918) 205 S. W. 731.

Proximate cause and assumption of risk.

The plaintiff, a switch foreman, rode on a rod or bar extending across the front of the engine with his back to the boiler, and in getting down to the footboard caught the clothing of one leg in the jagged end of a bar extending above and in the same direction as the footboard and projecting slightly beyond an upright brace to which it was fastened, and was thrown and injured. He was engaged at the time in the discharge of his duties and the place in which he was riding was one customarily used by switchmen. It is held that whether there was negligence of the defendant in respect of the projecting jagged end of the bar proximately causing the injury and whether the plaintiff assumed the risk were questions for the jury. Miller v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 140 Minn. 14, 167 N. W. 117.

8. Appeal and Error (p. 1336)

Absence of palpable error in state courts.

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Gillis v. New York, etc., R. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 515, 39 S. Ct. 355, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming (1916) 224 Mass. 541, 113 N. E. 212), wherein the court said: "The full court [of Massachusetts] reviewed the testimony quite elaborately and concluded from that review that 'the only person who was negligent was the deceased, and the judge was right in directing a verdict for the defendant,' and cited Great Northern R. Co. v. Wiles, (1916) 240 U. S. 444, [36 S. Ct. 406, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 732]. That case repeated the established principle that when the evidence justifies it, it is competent for a court to direct a verdict for a defendant. The principle is not attacked by plaintiff. The contention, however, is that the courts below, one of which tried the case, were wrong in their estimate of the evidence and that plaintiff was entitled to the judgment of the jury upon it. We are unable to yield to the contention. Nor do we think it necessary to give a review of the evidence. It will be found in the opinion of the court and we have verified its correctness. The case turns, therefore, upon an appreciation of the testimony and admissible inferences therefrom, and even if the conclusions of the courts were more disputable we should have to defer to them. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Whitacre, (1916) 242 U. S. 169 [37 S. Ct. 33, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 228]; Erie R. Co. v. Welsh, (1916) 242 U. S. 303 [37 S. Ct. 116, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 319]."

Failure to submit comparative negligence is harmless where the case is tried on the theory that contributory negligence bars a recovery and the jury finds for the plaintiff. Hinton v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Mo. 1918) 206 S. W. 396.

Failure of an administrator to allege pecuniary loss cannot be urged for the first time on appeal. Roberts v. Southern R. Co., (1918) 141 Tenn. 95, 206 S. W. 457.

Vol. VIII, p. 1339, sec. 3. [First ed.,
1909 Supp., p. 585.]

I. CONSTRUCTION OF SECTION (p. 1340)

In general.—In the absence of proof of negligence on the part of defendant, the presence or absence of contributory negligence on the part of plaintiff can have no bearing on the case. On the other hand, if negligence on the part of defendant is shown, it then becomes material to determine whether or not plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence. At common law contributory negligence, when shown, had the effect of defeating a recovery; but, under the statute on which this action is based, it has no effect other than to diminish the damages recoverable. Jackson v. Rutledge, (Ind. 1919), 122 N. E. 579.

Where the causal negligence is partly attributable to the employer, the contributory negligence of the employee will not defeat recovery, but only lessen the damages. It is only when the employee's act is the sole cause—when the employer's act is no part of the causation—that the employer is free from liability under the federal Employers' Liability Act. Koofos v. Great Northern R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 170 N. W. 859.

Distinction between contributory negligence and assumed risk, see notes under section 4, infra.

Damages shall be diminished.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Costa, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 892.

The damages recoverable by an employee guilty of contributory negligence bear "the same relation to the full amount as the negligence attributable to the carrier bears to the entire negligence attributable to both." Koofos v. Great Northern R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 170 N. W. 859.

Common law rules as applicable.—The term "contributory negligence" is used as interpreted in the light of the common law, as construed and applied by the federal courts, free from legislative interference. A municipal speed ordinance is not admissible to prove contributory negligence on the part of an engineer, in an action for damages for injury to his person while engaged in interstate commerce. McLain v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 140 Minn. 35, 167 N. W. 349.

Federal decision control.—Contributory negligence is to be determined in a state court by the rules laid down in the federal decisions. Rowe v. Colorado, etc., R. Co., (Tex. 1918) 205 S. W. 731.

II. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE

1. In General (p. 1342)

Not a defense.—Contributory negligence is not a defense. Brown v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., (Mo. 1919) 212 S. W. 26; Lancaster v. Hynes, (Tex. Civ. App. 1919) 214 S. W. 957.

"Contributory negligence is not a defense in an action to recover damages on account of negligence under the Employers' Liability Act, and it cannot therefore be taken into consideration on a motion for judgment of nonsuit." Davis v. Southern R. Co., (1918) 175 N. C. 648, 96 S. E. 41.

Necessity of pleading.—While there can be no objection to a properly framed plea of contributory negligence when such negligence is pleaded in bar as the sole cause of injury, we apprehend there is no necessity for such plea under the statute the result of which seems to be that the plea of not guilty puts the question of contributory negligence before the jury. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Wright, (Ala. 1918) 80 So. 93.

A plea of contributory negligence is demurrable if pleaded in bar instead of in mitigation of damages. Porter v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (Ala. 1918) 78 So. 375.

2. Effect on Amount of Damages (p. 1344)

Doctrine as to effect of contributory negligence in general.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Clement v. Maine Cent. R. Co., (1917) 117 Me. 45, 102 Atl. 559; Scarlett v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1917) 222 N. Y. 155, 118 N. E. 513; Morata v. Oregon-Washington, etc., Nav. Co., (1918) 87 Ore. 219, 170 Pac. 291; Fuller v. Oregon-Washington R., etc., Co., (Ore. 1919) 181 Pac. 338; Baird v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1918) 100 Wash. 384, 170 Pac. 1016, 173 Pac. 636; Miller v. Great Northern R. Co., (Wash. 1919) 177 Pac. 799.

3. Effect of Violation of Safety Appliance Acts (p. 1346)

Proximate cause.—Where a train was being switched at an excessive speed and got out of control because the automatic couplers were defective, the defect in the couplers is the proximate cause of injury to a brakeman injured while jumping from the car, and the question whether he was negligent in jumping is eliminated. Potter v. Los Angeles, etc., R. Co., (Nev. 1919) 177 Pac. 933.

Evidence of violation.—The fact that an automatic coupler failed in two successive trials to couple, is sufficient to warrant a finding that it was defective, which finding eliminates the question of contributory negligence. Thompson v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1919) 104 Kan. 116, 177 Pac. 536.

5. Instructions to Jury (p. 1349)

Improper instructions.—To the same effect as the last paragraph of the original annotation, see Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Williams, (Tex. 1918) 200 S. W. 1149.

Defendant should ask for instruction.—"There was no instruction to the jury that if they found for the plaintiff they should diminish the award 'in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to such employé.' It has been held in many decisions of our state that if a party desires to limit the amount of recovery for damages that plaintiff has sustained by reason of his injuries, it is the duty of defendant to ask for an instruction to that effect. Without passing on the question as to whether this rule of practice in our courts is here applicable or is subject to the control of Congress or of the courts of the United States, and without passing upon the question as to whether, in the absence of any request, it was error for the trial court to fail to instruct the jury that if they found for plaintiff the amount of damages should be diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the employé, in case they found the plaintiff employé guilty of contributory negligence, it is sufficient to say that the case was tried below on the theory that if plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence he was not entitled to recover anything. So, at the request of the defendant, the jury was here instructed. That is not only the settled law of this state and has been so for years, but is the rule of the common law, as see Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Tilghman, (1915) 237 U. S. 499, 35 S. Ct. 653, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1069." Harris v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (Mo. 1918) 200 S. W. 111.

As to duty to reduce damages.—An instruction as to reduction of damages for contributory negligence should require and not merely authorize the jury to make the deduction. Crecelius v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Mo. 1918) 205 S. W. 181.

Harmless error in instruction.—To instruct that contributory negligence is a defense, is harmless though the jury finds for the defendant where there is no evidence of negligence on the part of the employer. Miller v. Great Northern R. Co., (Wash. 1919) 177 Pac. 799.

Failure to instruct proper.—Where the record fails to disclose any contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff instruction to the jury need not state that in estimating the damages they were to consider the contributory negligence of the plaintiff. Capital Traction Co. v. McKeon, (1918) 132 Md. 79, 103 Atl. 314.

6. Questions for Jury (p. 1351)

Contributory negligence for jury.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. McGuffey, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 25, 164 C. C. A. 137; Jackson v. Rutledge, (Ind. 1919) 122 N. E. 679; Nelson v. Ironwood, etc., R., etc., Co., (Mich. 1918) 170 N. W. 45.

Watchman found dead.—Where a night watchman employed to guard a bridge is found dead, having been killed by a passing train, the fact that the body was found in a sitting or crouching position does not warrant an inference that he was asleep and the question of contributory negligence is for the jury. Kreitzer v. Southern Pac. Co., (Cal. App. 1919) 177 Pac. 477.

Failure to observe car near track.—A brakeman alighting at night from a moving train to throw a switch, is not, as a matter of law, guilty of contributory negligence, in failing to observe a car standing on an adjacent track so close as to strike him. Mills v. Roberts, (1918) 136 Ark. 433, 206 S. W. 751.

I. IN GENERAL

Effect limited to terms of Act.—To same effect as original annotation, see Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Tomasco, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 14; Kusturin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1919) 287 Ill. 306, 122 N. E. 512; Morata v. Oregon-Washington, etc., Nav. Co., (1918) 87 Ore. 219, 170 Pac. 291; Schaff v. Hendrich, (Tex. 1918) 207 S. W. 543; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Miller, (Tex. 1919) 207 S. W. 554; Holloway v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (1918) 276 Mo. 490, 208 S. W. 27.

Simple tools.—The doctrine of assumption of risk applies to a railway employee working with simple tools which are not within the Safety Appliance Act. Donahue v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1919) 183 Ky. 608, 210 S. W. 491.

Where no statute has been violated by the carrier the common law doctrine of assumption of risk obtains. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Roe, (Okla. 1919) 180 Pac. 371.

Where the automatic coupler Act is violated the defense of assumption of risk is eliminated. Potter v. Los Angeles, etc., R. Co., (Nev. 1919) 177 Pac. 933.

Decisions of the federal courts are controlling as to assumption of risk in an action under the statute. Jones v. Norfolk Southern R. Co., (N. C. 1918) 97 S. E. 48; Hargrove v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1918) 202 S. W. 188.

Assumption of risk is a substantive issue. It is not a matter of procedure nor a rule of evidence, and therefore the federal Act and the decisions of the United States Supreme Court constitute the substantive law on this subject; but the procedure is the established procedure prevailing in the courts of this state. Pennsylvania Co. v. Stalker, (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 163.

In matters outside the scope of the Act such as assumption of risks arising otherwise than by the violation of a statute, the state decisions are controlling in an action in a state court. Holloway v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (1918) 276 Mo. 490, 208 S. W. 27.

As to the effect of state statutes abrogating the doctrine of assumption of risk, see the annotation to section 1 of this Act.

II. PRINCIPLES GENERALLY AS TO ASSUMPTION OF RISK

1. In General (p. 1355)

Risks assumed.—Under the federal Employers' Liability Act (Act April 22, 1908, ch. 149, 35 Stat. 65, the servant assumes all the ordinary risks of his employment which are known to him, or which could have been known by the exercise of ordinary care to a person of reasonable prudence and diligence in like circumstances. Risks not naturally incident to the occupation, but which arise from the negligence of the master, are not assumed by the servant until he becomes aware of such negligence and of the risk arising therefrom, unless the negligence and risk are so apparent and obvious that an ordinarily careful person would observe the one and appreciate the other. Whether the risk is an ordinary risk of the employment, or an extraordinary risk known to the servant, or with knowledge of which he is chargeable, is a question of fact to be submitted to the jury. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ward, (Okla. 1918) 173 Pac. 212; Dickinson v. Granbery, (Okla. 1918) 174 Pac. 776.

Under the federal Employers' Liability Act the law of assumption of risk is that of the common law as it existed prior to the passage of said Act, except where the common carrier violates the provisions of any statute enacted for the safety of its employees; and where the evidence is undisputed and the injury not caused, as in this case, by any violation of such statutory provisions for the protection of employees, the question of assumption of risk is one of law. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hessenflow, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 1161.

Distinction between contributory negligence and assumption of risk.—In Donahue v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1919) 183 Ky. 608, 210 S. W. 491, in holding that a mechanic knowingly using a defective chisel assumed the risk, it was said: "There is a distinction recognized by all the courts between assumed risk and contributory negligence, but this distinction fades when pursued to the point where the danger to the servant becomes open and obvious, for there he may in some cases be said to be guilty of contributory negligence if he proceeds with the work, or in other instances to have assumed the risks of danger. The distinction, however, is important in cases tried under the federal Employers' Liability Act."

2. Knowledge as Affecting (p. 1356)

Actual knowledge of obvious risk.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Capan v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1917) 91 N. J. L. 164, 102 Atl. 661.

Adequacy of safety station on bridge.—Where a night watchman is killed on a bridge because a safety station designed to allow him to avoid passing trains is blocked by barrels, it must appear that he knew not only the general situation but that the extension of cars over the track made the place unsafe before he can, as a matter of law, be held to have assumed the risk. Kreitzer v. Southern Pac. Co., (Cal. App. 1919) 177 Pac. 477.

Remaining at work in presence of known danger.—It is negligence for which the master may be held responsible if, knowing of any peril which is known to the servant also, he fails to remove it in accordance with assurances made by him to the servant that he will do so. A servant who refrains from abandoning certain work on the assurance of his master that he will remove a known peril cannot ordinarily be said to have assumed the risk of injury from such peril. Koofos v. Great Northern R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 170 N. W. 859.

Must know not only condition but danger.—The servant has a right to assume that his employer has furnished him a safe place to work and has provided him with safe appliances with which to work. He assumes all the normal risks incidental to his employment that are known to him, or which, by the exercise of ordinary diligence and prudence by a person of reasonable caution and intelligence, are ascertainable, and does not include those risks incidental or attributable to the negligence of the employer, until he becomes aware of such negligence and the risks arising therefrom, and in that event it must appear that he not only knew the negligence or defect arising therefrom, but that it endangered his safety, or else the danger must have been so obvious that a person of ordinary prudence in like circumstances would have realized it, all of which are questions of fact for the jury. Wichita Falls, etc., R. Co., v. Davern, (Okla. 1919) 177 Pac. 909.

3. Acts of Master or Superior as Affecting (p. 1357)

Acting in obedience to orders of superior.—A great deal of confusion will be found among the decided cases on the effect of an order by the master, or his agent having authority to direct a certain work, upon the defense of assumption of risk. The rule adopted in Indiana seems to be that if a servant is injured while obeying a direct command of the master he will not be held to have assumed the risk unless the danger is so great and imminent that a reasonably prudent person would not have assumed it. The reasoning for this view is that by giving the direct command to perform the work the master takes upon himself the risks which otherwise would be assumed by the servant. The servant does not stand on the same footing with the master. His primary duty is obedience; and if when in the discharge of that duty he is damaged through the neglect of the master, it is proper that he should be recompensed. It is upon this inequality of positions that it is held that a prudent man has a right, within reasonable limits, to rely upon the ability and skill of the agent in whose charge the common master has placed him, and is not bound at his peril to set his own judgment above that of his superior. Vandalia R. Co. v. Kendall, (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 816.

In entering upon the work of a boiler maker's helper, plaintiff assumed the ordinary risks incident to the employment, but he did not assume the risk of injury arising from remaining in a tank for an unusual length of time, under the direction of his superior, if in so doing he acted with ordinary care under the circumstances. Martinson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 102 Neb. 238, 166 N. W. 624.

4. Negligence of Employer (p. 1359)

Risks from negligence not assumed.—A servant assumes all the ordinary risks which are incidental to his employment and that risk is an ordinary one which remains after the master has exercised reasonable care for the safety of his servant. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Wright, (Ala. 1918) 80 So. 93.

5. Negligence of Fellow Servant (p. 1361)

Rules stated.—To the same effect as the original annotation see Eakelsen v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1918) 102 Neb. 423, 167 N. W. 408; Jones v. Norfolk Southern R. Co., (N. C. 1918) 97 S. E. 48; Ewig v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 167 Wis. 597, 167 N. W. 442, 169 N. W. 429.

On same basis as negligence of employer.—“In saving the defense of assumption of risk in cases other than those where the carrier's violation of a statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury or death, the federal Employers' Liability Act places a coemployee's negligence, where it is the ground of the action, in the same relation as the employer's own negligence would stand to the question whether a plaintiff is to be deemed to have assumed the risk.” Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Brown, (Fla. 1919) 81 So. 156.

As to the effect of the Act on the fellow servant rule see the annotation under section 1 of this act.

III. PARTICULAR EMPLOYEES (p. 1362)

Brakeman.—A railroad brakeman does not assume the risk of being thrown off a car by the negligent act of the employer or his servants. Erie R. Co. v. Linnekogel, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 248 Fed. 389, 160 C. C. A. 399.

A brakeman alighting from a moving train to throw a switch does not assume as a matter of law the risk of injury from a car standing on an adjacent track. Mills v. Roberts, (1918) 136 Ark. 433, 206 S. W. 751.

Bridge painter.—The state doctrine as to assumed risk is applicable to a bridge painter struck by a passing train while at work. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Gericke, (Tex. Civ. App. 1919) 214 S. W. 668.

A fireman who, on the train's being started while he is in the station, climbs on top of a freight car and tries to make his way forward to his place in the cab assumes the risk of falling while so doing. Briggs v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1918) 102 Kan. 441, 175 Pac. 105.

Section hand.—Whether a section hand assumed the risk of being struck by a passing train was held for the jury. Stool v. Southern Pac. Co., (1918) 88 Ore. 350, 172 Pac. 101.

When a motor car is being driven by the foreman of a section hand crew at an excessive rate of speed, which causes it to leave the track with resulting injuries to a member of the crew, he will not be deemed to have assumed the risk incident to such excessive rate of speed by a failure to protest it, and a requested instruction to that effect was properly refused. Wichita Falls, etc., R. Co. v. Davern, (Okla. 1919) 177 Pac. 909.

A switchman in immediate charge of kicking cars onto a repair track, but under direction of a foreman on the ground, was held not to assume the risk of injury from cars standing on the track and unseen because of fog. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. McGuffey, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 25, 164 C. C. A. 137.

In Robertson v. St. Louis Merchant's Bridge Terminal R. Co., (Mo. App. 1919) 213 S. W. 873, it appeared that a yard switchman was injured while attempting to pass between a standing car and a moving car, because the standing car projected farther than he thought beyond the rails. It was held that he did not assume the risk but “at most” was guilty of contributory negligence.

A switchman having knowledge of the rough and uneven condition of a track assumes the risk of derailment of a switch engine thereby. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Roe, (Okla. 1919) 180 Pac. 371.

IV. BURDEN OF PROOF (p. 1363)

General rule—Assumption of risk.—To same effect as original annotation, see Kreitzer v. Southern Pac. Co., (Cal. App. 1919) 177 Pac. 477.

V. QUESTIONS FOR COURT AND JURY (p. 1363)

General rule.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Pennsylvania Co. v. Stalker, (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 163.

Danger of obeying order.—Whether a servant fully understood and appreciated the danger of obeying an order is ordinarily a question for the jury. Vandalia R. Co. v. Kendall, (Ind. App. 1918) 119 N. E. 816.

Vol. VIII, p. 1364, sec. 5. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 585.]

- II. Applicability of section generally.
- III. Settlement and release after injury.
- IV. Benefit or insurance contracts.

II. APPLICABILITY OF SECTION GENERALLY
(p. 1365)

Independent contractor agreeing to assume all liability.—No evasion of this section results from the making of a contract by an interstate railroad carrier with an independent stevedoring corporation under which the work of handling the railroad company's freight from cars to boats and from boats to cars at its water front terminal is to be performed by such independent contractor, even though the latter expressly assumes all liability for injury to its employees while employed upon the premises of the railroad company. Drago v. Cent. R. Co., (N. J. 1919) 106 Atl. 803.

Contract with express messenger, exempting the express company from liability for personal injuries is void under this section. Taylor v. Wells Fargo & Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 109, 161 C. C. A. 161. The court said: "It was the purpose of the Congress to provide special protection to persons subject to the hazards incident to the operation of railroads. There could have been no reason for giving the protection to a railroad conductor, and refusing it to an express messenger. It will not be assumed that Congress intended to make a distinction in the absence of language that would so indicate. It will certainly not be assumed in the face of language which is clear and unambiguous. Those of the decisions which seem to sustain the right of a railroad company and an express company, between them, to contract away the right of a human being to protection against negligence, are entirely out of harmony with fundamental principles of right and the ordinary conceptions of law. No court ought at this time, in the face of the unequivocal language of the Congress, to make a ruling which would differentiate express company messengers, not alone from other persons engaged in the hazards of railroading, but from all other persons engaged in hazardous businesses. The Employers' Liability Act is proof that Congress was not unresponsive to the universal feeling that every business should carry its hazards. It will not be assumed that language, which is properly and logically comprehensive, is to be so construed as to exclude a class dependent on legislation even for protection against negligence."

Actions not under federal Act.—An employee can claim the benefit of this section though he is not suing under the federal Employers' Liability Act. Taylor v. Wells Fargo & Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 109, 161 C. C. A. 161.

III. SETTLEMENT AND RELEASE AFTER INJURY (p. 1367)

General rule.—To the same effect as the original annotation see Kusturin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1919) 287 Ill. 308, 122 N. E. 512, wherein the court said: "It is also urged that defendant in error executed a release which is a bar to any further recovery. If defendant in error executes such release with knowledge of its meaning, such release will bar his recovery in an action at law. Hartley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1905) 214 Ill. 78, 73 N. E. 398; Momence Stone Co. v. Turrell, (1903) 205 Ill. 515, 68 N. E. 1078. The evidence shows that defendant in error was Croatian by birth; that he spoke and understood the English language very imperfectly, and could not read or write it; that when he had been in the hospital about fourteen weeks the claim agent of the plaintiff in error, who spoke English only, visited him in company with an interpreter employed by said claim agent, who spoke the Austrian language, of which the Croatian language was a dialect, or to which it was very similar. The plaintiff in error's claim agent secured the signature to an instrument releasing plaintiff in error from all liability both under the Workmen's Compensation Act (Laws 1913, p. 335) and the federal Employers' Liability Act for the sum of seventy dollars. The release and receipt for the said sum were in the English language. Defendant in error testified that he could not read the release, that they told him this was payment of half wages under the Compensation Law, that he worked under the compensation Law, elsewhere, and that he did not know that he was releasing his cause of action. The interpreter also testified that he told defendant in error that this paper was payment to him under the Compensation Act, and that it was offered as such payment for the fourteen weeks since the injury. Whether or not defendant in error, who could not talk or read English, signed this release with a knowledge of its meaning, was a question for the jury, and we cannot say that they were not justified in finding that he did not have such knowledge."

Settlement with one joint tortfeasor.—A settlement and satisfaction as against a railroad company operates as a release of a joint tortfeasor. Middaugh v. Des Moines, etc., Storage Co., (Ia. 1918) 8 169 N. W. 395.

IV. BENEFIT OR INSURANCE CONTRACTS
(p. 1368)

Acceptance of benefits of relief department. Congress did not intend that there should be both payment of benefits and a recovery of damages for the injury, at least in so far as Payment for both was to be made by the same defendant. Getkin v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1917) 259 Pa. St. 150, 102 Atl. 506.

It is apparent from an examination of this section of the statute that it was aimed at all contracts and devices whereby any railroad company attempted to relieve itself from liability to its employees, and that its purpose was to render such provisions void. The language is that such contract, rule, regulation, or device "shall to that extent be void." This section clearly contemplates that a relief association of railroad employees, organized and operated under such a plan as is disclosed by the answer to this case, shall be valid, except as to provisions releasing the company from liability. This is indicated by the provision to the effect that in any action brought under the provisions of the act the common carrier sued may set off therein any sum it has contributed or paid to any insurance, relief, benefit, or indemnity that may have been paid to the injured employee or to the person entitled thereto on account of the injury or death for which said action was brought. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, (Ind. 1918) 120 N. E. 706 (on rehearing; original opinion 119 N. E. 801).

State laws in any way conflicting with this section are superseded. Vandalia R. Co. v. Sanders, (Ind. 1918), 121 N. E. 275.

A state statute making void relief association agreements between railroad companies and employees whereby the employees are required to surrender or waive all right to damages against such companies for personal injuries, is superseded by this section. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, (Ind. 1918) 120 N. E. 706 (on rehearing; original opinion 119 N. E. 801). The court said: "This court has recently decided that section 5308, Burns 1914, is superseded by the section of the federal act quoted. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, (1915) 183 Ind. 323, 107 N. E. 545. There can be no doubt that Congress was acting within the scope of its granted powers in passing the section quoted, for it has been frequently decided that Congress has power to regulate contracts between shippers and the carriers of interstate commerce, and also to fix the number of hours that certain employees of such carriers may be required to work."

I. LIMITATION OF ACTION (p. 1370)

The cause of action for death does not accrue until the appointment of a personal representative for the deceased. Bird v. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co., (Tex. 1918) 207 S. W. 518.

A cause of action for death accrues at the time of the death of the employee and not at the time the fatal injury was received. Oliver v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., (S. D. Ga. 1918) 250 Fed. 652, wherein it was said: "I am aware of the conflicting English decisions under Lord Campbell's Act, and that some of them hold that the cause of action is the defendant's negligence, and that, if the deceased had in his lifetime accepted a sum of money in full satisfaction and discharge of his claim against the defendant, this would bar the right of the personal representative to recover for the homicide, on the theory that the death of the injured person did not create a fresh cause of action. The fallacy in this reasoning, as applied to the Employers' Liability Act, is the assumption that the act did not authorize two actions—one by the injured employee commenced in his lifetime, and the other by his personal representative for the benefit of his family, after his death. See, in this connection, Kansas City So. Ry. Co. v. Leslie, 112 Ark. 305, 167 S. W. 83, Ann. Cas. 1915B, 834; Fogarty v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 85 Wash. 90, 147 Pac. 652, L. R. A. 1916C 803. As remarked by Mr. Justice McReynolds in Garrett, Adm'r, v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 235 U. S. at page 312, 35 Sup. Ct. at page 33, 59 L. ed. 242: 'It is now definitely settled that the act declared two distinct and independent liabilities resting upon the common foundation of a wrongful injury: (1) Liability to the injured employee for which he alone can recover; and (2) in case of death, liability to his personal representative 'for the benefit of the surviving widow or husband and children,' and, if none, then of the 'parents, which extends only to the pecuniary loss and damage resulting to them by reason of the death.' It would seem to follow that, as the liability to the plaintiff in this case did not arise until his intestate's death, the cause of action accrued at that time, and, as the suit is brought within two years of the employee's death, it is not barred by the statute."

In Giersch v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (Kan. 1918) 171 Pac. 591, the facts were as follows: The widow brought her action under the state statute and recovered a judgment which was reversed. When reached the second time for trial, leave was given to amend by interlineation by increasing the amount of recovery prayed for and by the allegation of the widow's appointment as administratrix and by striking out the former allegation that no administration had been had nor any personal representative appointed. The plaintiff's intestate was killed more than two years before this time while engaged in interstate commerce. It was held that the statute of limitations had run, and that the plaintiff as administratrix could not recover.

Infancy.—Infancy is no excuse for failing to bring suit within two years after the injury was sustained in a state where that fact is not an obstacle to the beginning of an action based on a legal injury. Gillette v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1917) 91 N. J. L. 220, 102 Atl. 673.

Effect of amendment.—An amendment to the plaintiff's pleading relates back to the filing of that pleading, and the fact that the amended pleading was filed more than two years after the accident is immaterial provided the original pleading was filed within two years. Eskelsen v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1918) 102 Neb. 423, 167 N. W. 408, 168 N. W. 366.

Though the complaint failed to allege that the plaintiff was engaged in interstate commerce if the defect was cured by adversary pleadings the action is not barred though a trial amendment correcting the complaint was not made within two years from the accident. King v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (N. C. 1918) 97 S. E. 29.

Amendment made after two years from time of accrual of cause of action.—Where a petition is filed and service of summons made within two years from the date of injury the cause of action is not barred by the statute of limitations, although more than two years has elapsed between the date of the injury and the date of an amendment to the petition correcting the date of injury which was erroneously alleged in the petition as filed. Martinson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1918) 102 Neb. 238, 166 N. W. 624.

Effect of state statute.—A state statute allowing a new action to be brought within one year after a nonsuit has no application to an action under the Act. Belch v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., (1918) 176 N. C. 22, 96 S. E. 640.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE (p. 1372)

Enjoining suit in another state.—An administrator appointed in the state where the intestate lived and where the accident causing his death occurred may be enjoined from suing in a distant state for the purpose of forcing a settlement by subjecting the defendant to unnecessary expense. Reed v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1918) 182 Ky. 455, 206 S. W. 794.

The courts of any state where the defendant railroad does business have jurisdiction. Reed v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1918) 182 Ky. 455, 206 S. W. 794.

III. REMOVAL TO FEDERAL COURT (p. 1374)

Pleadings as determining removability of cause.—Where there is diverse citizenship and there is a question whether the cause of action is under a state law or under the federal Employers' Liability Act the determination of this question depends upon the state of the pleadings and the record at the time of the application for removal. Northern Trust Co. v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., (1918) 282 Ill. 565, 118 N. E. 986.

A complaint is sufficient to prevent removal which alleges that the plaintiff's intestate was a car repairer and was killed while at work on a car which was used in commerce of both sorts and was brought to the shop for repairs with a view to its being returned and continued in such interstate and intrastate commerce. Cook v. Southern R. Co., (1918) 109 S. C. 377, 96 S. E. 148.

Order of removal not conclusive.—In Deuel v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 857, the court in remanding an action for injuries received by an employee while engaged in interstate commerce said: "Defendant makes the point that since, under the act of Congress, the state courts and the federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction in actions arising under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (Act April 22, 1908, c. 149, 35 Stat. 65), the action of a state court in removing a case to a federal court on the ground of diversity of citizenship, presumptively thereby determining that the action is not one prosecuted or prosecutable under the federal act, is conclusive, and that this court may not, in any wise, sit in appellate judgment, so to speak, upon the state court's conclusions. No authority is cited in support of this contention, and apparently it is in direct opposition to the uniform practice obtaining in such proceedings. I am persuaded it is the duty of the federal courts to remand cases arising under this particular statute no less than in other instances, where they have been erroneously removed. See Kansas City Southern Railway v. Leslie, 238 U. S. 599, and the cases cited therein with approval, appearing on page 602 et seq., 35 Sup. Ct. 844, 59 L. ed. 1478."

A section hand employed in sweeping snow from the switches connected with the railroad yards is not within the Act. Jones v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (Ky. 1919) 209 S. W. 350.

Joint employee of two companies.—In U. S. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 464, 161 C. C. A. 422, the court stated the facts as follows: "The operator was a joint employé of the defendant and the Santa Fé Company. For the services performed for the defendant the agent received his instructions directly from its chief dispatcher and other officials, and for services performed for the Santa Fé he received his instruction directly from the chief dispatcher and other officials of that company. The regular hours of his service were from 7:15 a. m. to 7:15 p. m. On June 17, 1915, he went on duty at his regular time at 7:15 a. m., and remained on duty until 8:45 p. m. Knowing that a train on the Santa Fé line was due to pass Portland about 7 o'clock p. m., he inquired of the train dispatcher of that company about handling said train, and was advised by the train dispatcher that the train might be expected through Portland at any time after 7 o'clock, and that he should attend to it on its arrival, giving it proper clearance through the interlocking plant. In response to this order he remained on duty until the train arrived at 8:45 p. m. and performed the desired service. The officers, agents and representatives of defendant, except only the operator himself, were not aware of the instructions of the train dispatcher of the Santa Fé, just referred to, nor of the operator's intention to remain on duty. After 7:15 p. m. the operator performed no service for defendant, but his services from 7:15 to 8:45 were wholly for the Santa Fé Company in the clearance of said train. For the overtime involved in this service defendant paid the operator, and was repaid by the Santa Fé Company. The officers and agents of the defendant, who allowed and paid the operator's claim for overtime, had no knowledge that the overtime claimed by him involved a violation of the Hours of Service Act." Holding that the defendant was guilty of a violation of the Act it was said: "The agent was its agent, was employed and paid by it, and was at the post of duty to which that company assigned him. It could not escape liability by showing that the Santa Fé Company was the more primary cause of the excess service. Its duty under the statute still remained imperative. It was bound to see to it that the agent did not remain on duty for an excess period. If it failed to discharge that duty, it 'permitted' the employé to perform the excess service, and was liable to the penalty fixed by the statute."

Employees of terminal company.—A navigation corporation engaged in conducting the usual terminal operations for a number of interstate railways, including the transportation between its docks and warehouses and points on any of the said railways of all property that is offered, is a "common carrier," although all the services rendered are performed under contracts with such railway companies as agent for them, and not on its own account, and all the freight transported is contained only in cars furnished by the railway companies with which it has contracts. U. S. v. Brooklyn Eastern Dist. Terminal, (1919) 249 U. S. 296, (39 S. Ct. 283, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 287, 152 C. C. A. 275, wherein the court said: "The Hours of Service Act declares (in the first section) that, 'The term "railroad" as used in this Act shall include all bridges and ferries used or operated in connection with any railroad, and also all the road in use by any common carrier operating a railroad, whether owned or operated under a contract, agreement, or lease.' Hence, neither the character of the Terminal's railroad nor its independent ownership excludes it from the scope of the act. But the Terminal contends that it is not subject to the provisions of the statute, since it is not incorporated as a common carrier and does not hold itself out as such; does not file tariffs; and does not undertake to transport property for all who may apply to have their goods transported; but merely transports as agent such freight as is delivered to it by or for those carriers, and those only, with whom it has elected to make special contracts; and that, under these contracts it performs for the railroads, and not for the public, a part of the whole carriage which they, as common carriers, have undertaken with the shipper to perform. We need not undertake a definition of the term 'common carrier,' for all purposes. Nor are we concerned with questions of corporate power or of duties to shippers, which frequently compel nice distinctions between public and private carriers. We have merely to determine whether Congress, in declaring the Hours of Service Act applicable 'to any common carrier or carriers, their officers, agents, and employees, engaged in the transportation of passengers or property by railroad,' made its prohibitions applicable to the Terminal and its employees engaged in the operations here involved. The answer to that question does not depend upon whether its charter declares it to be a common carrier, nor upon whether the state of incorporation considers it such; but upon what it does. Terminal Taxicab Co. v. Kutz, (1916) 241 U. S. 252, 254, [36 S. Ct. 583, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 984, 986, Ann. Cas. 1916D 765]. The relation of the Terminal to the several railroads is substantially the same as that of the terminal considered in U. S. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1912) 225 U. S. 306, [32 S. Ct. 817, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 1100], (1913) 231 U. S. 274, 288, [34 S. Ct. 75, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 218, 226]. The transportation performed by the railroads begins and ends at the Terminal. Its docks and warehouses are public freight stations of the railroads. These with its car floats, even if not under common ownership or management, are used as an integral part of each railroad line, like the stockyards in U. S. v. Union Stockyard, etc., Co., (1912) 226 U. S. 286, [33 S. Ct. 83, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 226], and the wharfage facilities in Southern Pac. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, (1911) 219 U. S. 498, [31 S. Ct. 279, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 310]. They are clearly unlike private plant facilities. Compare Tap Line Cases, (1914) 234 U. S. 1, 25 [34 S. Ct. 741, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1185]. The services rendered by the Terminal are public in their nature, and of a kind ordinarily performed by a common carrier. If these terminal operations were conducted directly by any, or jointly by all, of the ten railroad companies with which the Terminal has contracts, the operations would clearly be within the scope of the Hours of Service Law. The evils sought to be remedied exist equally, whether the terminal operations are conducted by the railroad companies themselves or by the Terminal as their agent; and whether the Terminal acts only as such agent for railroads or undertakes in addition to transport on its own account goods for shippers."

VI. ON DUTY (p. 1396)

Period allowed for meals.—In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 555, 165 C. C. A. 225, the meal hour of a telegraph operator was held not to break the continuity of his service, the court stating the facts and its conclusions as follows: "The usual daily service of the operator was from 2 p. m. to 11 p. m., with an hour out for rest and his evening meal. The hour, generally from 6 o'clock to 7, was not definitely fixed, but depended upon the requirements of the work. The understanding between him and the company, and the practice, was that, though at some time he should have his hour off, it was alterable and adjustable to the needs of the office; also that, while off duty during the hour, he was subject to recall by the company whenever its business required. It is clear that the time allowed was so uncertain and restrained that it was not a period for refreshment, rest, and recreation within the meaning of the law. It was not his own, to occupy as he deemed best. He was at his employer's beck at any time, and might even be called to the office from the table. He was not free to go from his home beyond reach of a summons to active duty, but had to hold himself within call and in readiness to respond at any moment. Instead of that sense of freedom essential to mental and physical relaxation, a tenseness was imposed as by an alarm clock sounding peremptorily, but with uncontrolled irregularity. The hour of rest and refreshment was dominated by the business requirements of the company. That on the day in question he was not called before it expired is immaterial. The arrangement between them and the practice determined their relation, and whether the operator should be regarded as free or on continuing duty."

Periods of rest.—In U. S. v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 382, 162 C. C. A. 452, it appeared that an operator in an office open only during the daytime was on duty in the aggregate during the twenty-four-hour period eleven hours and twenty-four minutes, and at liberty twelve hours and thirty-six minutes. The periods of relief or rest constituting these twelve hours and thirty-six minutes were respectively three hours and seven minutes, two hours and twenty-four minutes, fifty minutes for dinner and six hours and fifteen minutes. The court said: "Counsel for the government suggest that, if the first two periods are thought to be too short or too inopportune for rest and relief, the operator was on duty more than 13 hours. But these two periods came in the night, when the operator was in the station where he lived and slept, and it was his practice to pass them in bed. The court below found these periods to be times of substantial rest, and refused to count them as periods of labor or duty, and any other conclusion would be evidently unjust and irrational."

VII. DAY AND NIGHT OFFICES (p. 1400)

Two offices operated together.—In Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 646, the following facts appeared:

Prior to the Hours of Service Act, and until the K. S. tower was constructed and put in operation, February 25, 1906, the company used the Elmira office continuously through one agent operator from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., and another operator from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. From the opening of K. S. tower until May 26, 1914, when it burned down, the Elmira office was used only as a day office and by one agent operator from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. The K. S. office was used continuously by two operators, one during the day and the other during the night, until the Hours of Service Act went into effect, March 4, 1908; it was then used continuously by three operators, each working eight hours in the twenty-four; this practice was continued until May 24, 1914, though by overlapping, the hours of each operator were increased to nine. By reason of the fire the K. S. office was temporarily abolished, and during this period—that is, from May 25, 1914, to April 21, 1915—the Elmira office was again used continuously though by three operators, each working nine hours. On April 21, 1915, day service alone was resumed at the Elmira office through an agent operator from 7 a. m. to 7:30 p. m.; and this was continued until and including the dates now in question, March 13 to 17, inclusive, 1916. When the day service was so renewed at the Elmira office, the company, through the use of a box car, re-established a telegraph and telephone office at the site of the K. S. tower; and from that time on, and including the dates in issue herein, this box car office was used as follows: One operator served regularly from 7 p. m. to 7:30 a. m., though this was not all the service rendered there. The operator at the Elmira office, in addition to his duties there as a station agent, was compelled to keep in touch with the box car office daily, by going there himself to look after way-bills, and by giving orders over the telephone from the Elmira office to conductors and engineers, as well as receiving necessary information from them, at the box car office; the conductors and engineers, as well as the agent operator at the Elmira office, having been supplied with pass-keys to enter and use the box car office. When necessary, the train employees, such as conductors, would go from the box car office to the Elmira office to communicate personally with the agent operator in regard to orders concerning the movements of cars or trains. It was held that the box car and the station were to be regarded as a single office and that the Act was violated.

Office operated only in daytime—Construction of Act.—"Little reflection is required to convince that this statute may not be literally construed and enforced. It cannot be indispensable to the existence of a night and day office that it shall be continuously operated every hour of the night and every hour of the day, nor can it be indispensable to the existence of the daytime office that it shall never be operated in the nighttime. An enforcement of the statute as it literally reads would render its terms contradictory, would cause the daytime and the night and day time to overlap each other, and would make the enactment absurd and its enforcement impracticable. It must have a reasonable, sensible construction, one that will advance the remedy it provides, repress the wrong at which it was leveled, and effect the intention of the Congress that enacted it. To this end the facts of each case as it arises must be laid alongside the statute, and the office to which they relate must be assigned to the class to which, in the light of such an interpretation of the law, it belongs." U. S. v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 250 Fed. 382, 162 C. C. A. 452, holding that "An office in which the telegraph operator's regular hours are from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. daily, with an intermission of an hour at noon for dinner, and in which he is required to serve ordinarily from 30 to 40 minutes at 12:35 a. m. and from 30 to 40 minutes at 4:20 a. m., in order to meet trains passing through his station at those times, but in which the aggregate of his time on duty does not exceed 13 hours in any 24-hour period, is an office operated only during the daytime" within the meaning of this section.

timony offered to show what changes in method, practices and properties had been made by the railroad company to enable it, in the exercise of reasonable care, prudence and foresight, to meet the new conditions created by the statute and to secure compliance therewith. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 261, 163 C. C. A. 417, wherein the court said: "This testimony was offered on the theory that a general exercise of diligence on the part of the defendant to avoid future violations of the statute might be shown in evidence as bearing upon the question whether it had or had not violated the law in the particular instances in which violation was charged. We think the evidence was properly excluded as foreign to the issues. Proof of reasonable care and diligence to make provision against violations of the Hours of Service Law in the operation of a railroad is not proof, and does not tend to prove, that the law has not been violated. The law imposes on carriers, not an obligation to exercise care and diligence, but a positive and absolute duty to obey its command."

Due diligence to avoid keeping a train crew in service more than sixteen hours in case of delay by accident involves more than merely providing a relief crew at the first terminal point reached. If a relief crew could have been sent out from a terminal point to the delayed train the failure to do so renders the carrier liable. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 753.

Delay equal to excess service.—It is not a defense to show that an unavoidable accident caused delays for a period of time sufficient to equal the excess service, but the defendant must show what use was made of the remainder of the time, or that the excess service was the necessary result of the accidents which caused the delays. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 261, 163 C. C. A. 417, wherein the court said: "The evidence is that the first crew were on duty six hours and twenty-five minutes beyond the regular running time, whereas the delay caused by what is claimed to have been unavoidable accident was but two hours and twenty-five minutes; that the second and third crews were on duty five hours beyond the regular running time, whereas the delays attributable to the accidents were in each case but one hour, leaving in each case four hours unaccounted for. No attempt was made to explain the delays in the running of the trains as resulting from other causes. The burden was upon the defendant to show that the excess service was the necessary result of the causes which are claimed to have justified it, and that the defendant exercised the requisite diligence to prevent it."

1918 Supp., p. 754, sec. 1. [Eight-hour day, etc.]

Scope of Act.—This Act applies only to trainmen who work "on the engines and in the cars" and not to a switch tender in railroad yards. Coke v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (W. D. Tenn. 1919) 255 Fed. 190. Discussing the scope of the Act, the court said: "Clearly the Adamson Law does not apply to all employes of railroads engaged in interstate commerce, nor does it apply to all those who are actually engaged in doing some of the things necessary for the operation of trains. It would seem, therefore, reasonable and proper to follow the line of cleavage which the Congress intended to establish, as gathered from the contemporaneous history of events attending the consideration and passage of the law. When the act is thus considered in the light of the utterances of the President, the Congressional Record, the hearings before the committee on interstate commerce, and the report of the wage commission, it appears that Congress was dealing with the four brotherhoods only, and intended the legislation to apply only to those doing the work performed by the brotherhoods; that is to say, to trainmen who worked 'on the engines and in the cars.'"

Preparatory service.—Thirty minutes of "preparatory service" required of an employee before each run, is to be included in computing overtime. Nelson v. St. Joseph, etc., R. Co., (Mo. 1918) 205 S. W. 870.

Contract for monthly compensation.—The Act is applicable to a railroad employee whose contract calls for a stipulated compensation per month and contains no provision as to hours of service or overtime. Nelson v. St. Joseph, etc., R. Co., (Mo. 1918) 205 S. W. 870.

Possibility of calculating daily wage.—Under a contract at a monthly rate for a specified day's run to be made four days in each five, it is possible to calculate the daily wage by dividing the monthly rate by the number of trips made, and therefore it is possible to apply the overtime provisions of this Act to the contract. Nelson v. St. Joseph, etc., R. Co., (Mo. 1918) 250 S. W. 870.

I. VALIDITY

1. Act of Congress

Generally.—That Congress had authority in time of war to enact the legislation placing certain public utilities under federal control is now generally conceded, and the constitutionality of the acts cannot be seriously questioned. Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, (1919) 250 U. S. 135, 63 L. ed. 897, P. U. R. 1919D, 705, 39 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505; Nueces Valley Town-Site Co. v. McAdoo, (1919) 257 Fed. 143; Dahn v. McAdoo (1919) 256 Fed. 549; Wainwright v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1918) 253 Fed. 459; Vaughn v. State, (Ala. 1919) 81 So. 417; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Ault, (Ark. 1919) 216 S. W. 3; West v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., (Mass. 1919) 123 N. E. 621; Lavalle v. Northern P. R. Co., (Minn. 1919) 172 N. W. 918.

Assuming that this Act vests power in the President to make regulations concerning the venue of actions in federal courts against railroads while under federal control, it is constitutional as being within the war powers of Congress. Wainwright v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (E. D. Mo. 1918) 253 Fed. 459. The court said: "In McCulloch v. Maryland, 17 U. S. (4 Wheat.) 316, 421 (4 L. ed. 579), Chief Justice Marshall delivering the opinion of the court, it was held as a proper canon of the interpretation of the powers of Congress under the national Constitution, among others: 'Let the end be legitimate, let it be within the scope of the Constitution, and all means which are appropriate, which are plainly adapted to that end, which are not prohibited, but consist with the letter and spirit of the Constitution, are constitutional.' This rule of construction has never been doubted or questioned by any subsequent decision, but has been uniformly followed, whenever it has been before the courts, and must therefore be accepted as elementary in the construction of the national Constitution. That there is nothing in the Constitution prohibiting Congress from determining the venue in civil actions is beyond question. Article 1, § 8, cl. 11, of the Constitution, grants Congress the power to declare war, and clause 12 of that section empowers it to raise and support armies. That, by virtue of these provisions of the Constitution, Congress may use all means which are, in its opinion, appropriate to that end and not prohibited by some provision of the Constitution, has, under the rule established in McCulloch v. Maryland, been settled in Miller v. United States, 78 U. S. (11 Wall.) 268, 20 L. Ed. 135, and Stewart v. Kahn, 78 U. S. (11 Wall.) 493, 506, 507, 20 L. Ed. 176, reaffirmed in Mayfield v. Richards, 115 U. S. 137, 5 Sup. Ct. 1187, 29 L. Ed. 334. In Stewart v. Kahn it was held:

"The measures to be taken in carrying on war and to suppress insurrection are not defined. The decision of all such questions rests wholly in the discretion of those to whom the substantial powers involved are confided by the Constitution. In the latter case the power is not limited to victories in the field and the dispersion of the insurgent forces. It carries with it inherently the power to guard against the immediate renewal of the conflict, and to remedy the evils which have arisen from its rise and progress.'

"The same principle was recognized in the Legal Tender Cases, 79 U. S. (12 Wall.) 457, 539, (20 L. Ed. 286), where it was held:

"Before we can hold the legal tender acts unconstitutional, we must be convinced they were not appropriate means, or means conducive to the execution of any or all of the powers of Congress, or of the government, not appropriate in any degree (for we are not judges of the degree of appropriateness), or we must hold that they were prohibited. This brings us to the inquiry whether they were, when enacted, appropriate instrumentalities for carrying into effect or executing any of the known powers of Congress, or of any department of the government. Plainly to this inquiry, a consideration of the time when they were enacted, and of the circumstances in which the government then stood, is important. It is not to be denied that acts may be adapted to the exercise of lawful power, and appropriate to it, in seasons of exigency, which would be inappropriate at other times.'

"See, also, the address of former Justice Hughes on the War Powers under the Constitution, 42 American Bar Association, 232.

"Whether the exigencies existed when Congress enacted this statute was for that body to determine, and cannot be questioned by the courts, if there is any substantial ground therefor. McCulloch v. Maryland, supra; Lottery Cases, 188 U. S. 321, 355, 23 Sup. Ct. 321, 47 L. Ed. 492; McDermott v. Wisconsin, 228 U. S. 115, 128, 33 Sup. Ct. 431, 57 L. Ed. 754, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 984, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 39. That there was substantial ground for the enactment of the statute requires no argument. The conditions so graphically described in the Legal Tender Cases (79 U. S. [12 Wall.] 540, 20 L. Ed. 286) prevail now, and it will conduce to brevity to refer to what was there said, without quoting it in this opinion.

"That the act was enacted under the war power is not only apparent from its context, but it is expressly declared in section 16 of the act 'to be emergency legislation, enacted to meet conditions growing out of war,' and section 14 provides that the federal control of railroads shall continue not exceeding one year and nine months after the ratification of the treaty of peace."

Validity denied.—In one case, however, the authority of Congress to pass the Act of March 21, 1918, has been challenged, and it was held unconstitutional in so far as it pertains to the maintenance of actions and the recovery of judgments against carriers for damages sustained by employees and others while the railroad is being operated by and under the direction of the federal authorities. Schumacher v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1919) 106 Misc. 564, 175 N. Y. S. 84.

2. Presidential Proclamations

Proclamations of December 26, 1917.—The authority of the President, in his proclamation of December 26, 1917, taking possession and control of certain systems of transportation by virtue of the Act of Congress approved August 29, 1916 (see vol. 9, p. 1095), to appoint the Secretary of the Treasury as Director General of Railroads, is seriously questioned in Muir v. Louisville & N. R. Co., (1918) 247 Fed. 888.

However, the subsequent Act of Congress of March 21, 1918, apparently confirms the authority of the President, and, in effect, ratifies his act in the appointment of the Director General of Railroads. This construction is found in Rhodes v. Tatum, (Tex. 1918) 206 S. W. 114, where the decision in Muir v. Louisville & N. R. Co., (Fed.) supra, is reviewed. In the former case it is said: "It was doubtless this criticism of the act which induced Congress to pass the law of March 21, 1918, and we think this act cures the defects in the former act discussed by Judge Evans. One purpose of the Act of August 29, 1916, and of the Act of March 21, 1918, was to place all transportation companies under the control of the national government to facilitate the handling of troops, equipment, etc., necessary to a successful prosecution of the war. It is provided by section 8 of the latter act that 'the President may execute any of the powers herein and heretofore granted him with relation to federal control through such agencies as he may determine, and may fix the reasonable compensation for the performance of services in connection therewith,' etc. This section, in effect, approves the appointment of a Director General, and approves the acts of such officer and his subordinates done in the execution of the powers granted the President, and under its provisions we must accept the Director General and his department as one of the agencies selected by the President to aid him in the execution of the powers granted by the acts mentioned."

To the same effect see Dahn v. McAdoo (N. D. Ia. 1919) 256 Fed. 549.

3. Orders of Director General of Railroads

General Orders 18 and 18A.—General orders 18 and 18A of the Director General of Railroads are valid. Wainwright v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1918) 253 Fed. 459; Johnson v. McAdoo, (E. D. La. 1919) 257 Fed. 757; Russ v. New York, (1919) 179 N. Y. S. 310; Rhodes v. Tatum, (Tex. 1918) 206 S. W. 114.

General Order No. 26 is valid. Rhodes v. Tatum, (Tex. 1918) 206 S. W. 114.

Continuance under General Order No. 26 of the Director General of Railroads rests in the discretion of the court. Illinois Cent. R.

Co. v. Ryan, (Tex. Civ. App. 1919) 214 S. W. 642 (holding the refusal of a third continuance not to be an abuse of discretion). See to the same effect Cocker v. New York, etc., R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 876; Harnick v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 748.

General orders invalid.—General orders 18, 18A and 26 are invalid. Friesen v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Neb. 1918) 254 Fed. 875; Haubert v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ohio 1919) 259 Fed. 361; Ralyo v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (Minn. 1919) 175 N. W. 687; El Paso, etc., R. Co. v. Lonick, (Tex. 1919) 210 S. W. 283; El Paso, etc., R. Co. v. Havens, (Tex. 1919) 216 S. W. 444; Illinois Central R. Co. v. Ryan, (Tex. 1919) 214 S. W. 642; Frank v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Wis. 1919) 173 N. W. 701.

In Benjamin Moore & Co. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (N. Y. 1919) 106 Misc. 58, 174 N. Y. S. 60, it was held that General Orders 18 and 18A must be construed to be wholly perspective in their operation, and if construed so as to cut off or extinguish a right of action already existing they were beyond the power of the President and his agents to make. To same effect see West v. New York, etc., R. Co., (Mass. 1919) 123 N. E. 621.

In Friesen v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Neb. 1919) 254 Fed. 875, it was held that orders of the Director General providing that suits against carriers, while under federal control, should be brought in the county or district where the plaintiff resided at the time of the accrual of the cause of action or in the county or district where the cause of action arose, did not have the effect of limiting the plaintiff's right of action, and that when authorized by a state statute he might bring an action against a railroad on a cause of action, which did not arise out of a violation of its duties as a common carrier, in a district other than that in which he resided when it accrued. Construing this section the court said: "The plain meaning of the words used in this section is that the laws then existing governing the relationship of the railways as common carriers were to remain in effect except when they were inconsistent with the terms of that Act of Congress or of any other act applicable to federal control or with any order of the President. Orders of the President relating to the carriers' duties and liabilities, other than as common carriers, were not authorized by this portion of section ten. The authorization of the bringing of an action at law as then provided by law, against the railway company upon a cause of action, not arising against it, as a common carrier, was therefore not subject to an order of the President limiting the districts in which such an action could be commenced, because of anything contained in this section of the Act of Congress. Authority for the orders in question, as applied to an action of this kind, is sought in the provisions of section 9. . . .

"It may be conceded that the President would have been authorized to make these orders under the broad grant of power in the Act of August 29, 1916, but by the terms of section 9 this grant thereafter remains in force 'except as expressly modified and restricted in this act,' and the President is granted further powers 'necessary or appropriate to give effect to any of the powers herein and heretofore conferred.' These words are a restriction of the powers previously vested in the President, so that he may not take action contrary to the provisions of this Act of Congress. It was manifestly not the purpose of Congress in the elaborate provisions of this act to give authority by which the President might abrogate any or all of it. The provisions for financial management of the roads while under federal control and for the reimbursement of the owners; the right of the Interstate Commerce Commission, under the terms of section 10, to hear complaints of the justness of an order of the President establishing or changing rates, regulations, and practices of the carriers; the creation of a criminal offense, by the terms of section 11, for violation of the act or interfering with the possession or use of the property of the carrier; the declaration in section 12 that moneys and other property derived from the operation of the carriers during federal control are the property of the United States; and the declaration in section 14 that the period of federal control shall not extend beyond 21 months after the proclamation of the President of the exchange of ratifications of the treaty of peace—are illustrations of powers, liabilities, and limitations that were not subject to annulment by an executive order. The general grant of power in section 9 is to give effect to the powers 'herein and heretofore granted,' and not to the powers herein or heretofore granted, and the prior act remains in force 'except as expressly modified and restricted by this act.'"

General Order No. 50 of the Director General of Railroads is valid. Dahn v. Union Pacific R. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1919) 256 Fed. 549; Rutherford v. Union Pacific R. Co., (D. C. Neb. 1919) 254 Fed. 880; Mordis v. Hines, (W. D. Ark. 1919) 258 Fed. 945; Haubert v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ohio 1919) 259 Fed. 361; Nash v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1919) 260 Fed. 280; Owens v. Hines, (N. C. 1919) 100 S. E. 617; Castle v. Southern R. Co., (S. C. 1919) 99 S. E. 846. See also Sagona v. Pullman Co., (N. Y. 1919) 174 N. Y. Supp. 536.

In Peacock v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., (Mich. 1919) 195 N. W. 580, the court, without passing directly on the validity of this order, granted a motion to substitute the Director General for the railroad company as defendant.

General Order No. 50 is invalid as in conflict with section 10 of this Act. Jensen v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (D. C. Colo. 1919) 255 Fed. 797; Scorborough v. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co., (La. 1919) 82 So. 286; Lavelle v. Northern Pacific R. Co., (Minn. 1919) 172 N. W. 918; Gawan v. McAdoo, (Minn. 1919) 173 N. W. 440.

In Vaughn v. State, (Ala. 1919) 81 So. 417, the order was held invalid as being a denial of due process of law. In this case it was said: "In view of the express provisions of the Act of Congress that, 'while under federal control, . . . actions at law or suits in equity may be brought by and against such carriers and judgments rendered as now provided by law,' etc., and other considerations hereafter to be stated, it is a question of serious doubt whether the making of this order is within the scope of the Director General's authority; but, assuming that it is, his authority is sustainable on no other theory than that the transportation companies themselves are under federal control, and therefore within his jurisdiction. If they are not under his jurisdiction, what authority has he to say that they cannot be sued, and why is it necessary for him to so say? If the transportation companies have no connection with the operation of the railroads, this fact is a complete defense to any action against them, and this order is wholly futile. Moreover, if the transportation companies are under federal control, the Director General is without authority to interfere with the orderly administration of justice or to set aside the ordinary and usual course of procedure in courts of justice according to the course of the common law and deny to a plaintiff the right to pursue his ordinary legal remedy against one who, he alleges, has transgressed or violated his rights. Such a proceeding as authorized by this general order would effect an entire change of parties, and, after a plaintiff has pursued his remedy to judgment, it would not be enforceable. Confessedly the Director General is not personally liable, and there is no statute or authority for binding the government in such a proceeding, and this course would clearly amount to a denial of due process of law in violation of the Constitution, both state and federal." Vaughn v. State, (Ala. App. 1919) 81 So. 417.

Vested rights.—And in McGregor v. Great Northern R. Co. the order was held to be invalid and not warranted by this Act, in so far as it purported to be applicable to causes of action already vested.

Likewise in Smith v. Atlantic Coast R. Co., (S. C. 1919) 100 S. E. 148, the court without passing directly on the validity of General Order No. 50, held that it was not applicable to a cause of action which arose and on which suit was commenced before the issuance of the order.

Liability of carrier corporations.—Section 10 provides that actions at law may be brought against carriers and judgment rendered "as now provided by law." Order No. 50 issued by the Director General of Railroads October 28, 1918, required that actions for death or injury to persons growing out of the possession, control or operation of any railroad by the Director General should be brought against the Director General and not otherwise. In so far as such order prohibits the maintenance of such an action against the railroad company, it is in conflict with this section. Lavelle v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (Minn. 1919) 172 N. W. 918; McGregor v. Great Northern R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 172 N. W. 841.

In Hatcher & Snyder v. Atchison R. Co., (D. C. Colo. 1919) 258 Fed. 952, the court, while denying the liability of a railroad company for negligence when under federal control, refused to grant a motion to substitute the Director General as defendant and dismiss the railroad company in accordance with General Order No. 50.

II. CONSTRUCTION

A "transportation system" within the meaning of section 11 of this Act is a system which transports something from one place to another. U. S. v. Kambeitz, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 247.

"Use" and "operation" of transportation system.—The "use" of a transportation system within the meaning of section 11 consists in taking up, carrying, and putting down property, and the "operation" of the system consists in running the cars and carrying therein such property so being moved from one point or place to another. U. S. v. Kambeitz, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 247.

Interference with operation of transportation system.—Express company employees who steal express packages from the company's cars, after they have been taken over and are being operated by the government under this Act, are guilty of interfering with and impeding "the possession, use, operation, or control . . . of any transportation system" within the meaning of section 11 of the Act. U. S. v. Kambeitz, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 247.

Property derived from operation of transportation system.—Property being transported for hire by an express company under government control, is "property derived from or used in connection with the possession, use, or operation" of a transportation system and an employee who steals it is guilty of a criminal offense under section 11. U. S. v. Kambeitz, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 247.

III. EXTENT OF FEDERAL CONTROL

In general.—"The Act of Congress of March 21, 1918, and the orders of the Director General of Railroads, . . . clearly evince a construction of the Act of August 29, 1916, and the action of the President thereunder, inconsistent with the view that federal control extends to, and embraces, only the property and facilities of the transportation companies. In fact, the Act of March 21, 1918, defines the terms 'system or systems of transportation' as used in the Act of August 29, 1916. . . . The 'systems of transportation' or 'carriers' . . . have officers and employees, are capable of contracting and being contracted with, may sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, are entitled to compensation, are capable of arbitrating differences with the government, are authorized to settle and adjust claims, and declare dividends; in short, are capable of exercising all the functions and powers of corporations with limitations essential to federal control and the carrying out the purposes of the government . . . to meet the extraordinary conditions imposed by the fact that the United States is at war with a foreign power. These facts lead to the inevitable conclusion that federal control of the transportation systems of the country contemplated and effected a mobilization under one head of the persons and corporations engaged in the business, as well as the facilities of transportation for the purpose of meeting and coping with these extraordinary conditions, and the Director General of Railroads is just what his designation or title imports,—the general in command of the army of transportation." Vaughn v. State, (Ala. App. 1919) 81 So. 417. To the same effect, see Marshall v. Bush, (1918) 102 Neb. 279, 167 N. W. 59; Haubert v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1919) 259 Fed. 361.

The Act contemplates that the carrier corporations shall be permitted to transact their business as formerly except as modified by the federal control of their transportation facilities. McGregor v. Northern Pacific R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 172 N. W. 841.

Government as lessee.—In the case of Peacock v. Detroit, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., (Mich. 1919) 175 N. W. 580, it was held that the relations between the railroad and the government during federal control of railroads were either technically those of lessor and lessee or analogous thereto.

Government as bailee.—In Bloch v. United States, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 321, the defendant was convicted of the offense of receiving or having in his possession property stolen from an interstate shipment, knowing the property to have been stolen. The indictment was challenged because it did not sufficiently allege the ownership of the goods. In sustaining the indictment the court said: "The shipment is alleged to have been made over an interstate railroad and during the period of government operation and control. The government was therefore a bailee of the property during its transportation. The court takes judicial notice of this status, and neither averment nor proof of it was required."

Master and servant.—"From the time that the proclamation of the President became effective on December 28, 1917, the Director General as the representative of the President has been in the exclusive possession and control of the railroad. The railroad company exercises no control whatever.

The railroad is operated under the orders of the Director General. The railroad company has nothing to do with such operation. When the Director General assumed control all the employees on the railroad ceased to be employees of the railroad company and became employees of the Director General. At that time the relation of master and servant ceased to exist between the employees operating the railroad and the railroad company. That relation then began and still exists between such employees and the Director General." Mardis v. Hines, (1919) 258 Fed. 945.

Switching charges.—But see Lincoln Commercial Club v. Missouri P. R. Co., (Neb. 1919) 172 N. W. 687, P. U. R. 1919E 57, wherein it was held that an order, made prior to the time of the President's proclamation taking over the control of the railroads by the federal government, by which a state railway commissioner found that switching charges were discriminating and unjust, and canceled that portion of a tariff rate, will not be reversed, as the federal control does not make a change in the situation.

Outlying parcels of land.—The extent of federal control is to be measured by the necessities of the business of the corporation as a common carrier; and outlying parcels of land not connected with such business are not included within the meaning of the legislation on the subject. United States R. Administration v. Burch, (1918) 254 Fed. 140.

Intrastate rates.—In taking over the railroads from private ownership to its control and operation, the resulting power of the United States to fix the rates to be charged for the transportation services to be rendered by it is not subordinated to the asserted authority of the several states to regulate the rates for all local or interstate business. This has been definitely decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, (1919) 250 U. S. 135, 63 L. ed. 897, P. U. R. 1919D 705, 39 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, in reversing the decision of the lower court (N. D. 1919), 172 N. W. 324. To the same effect see Kneeland-Bigelow Co. v. Michigan Central R. Co., (Mich. 1919) 174 N. W. 605.

Review of rate regulation.—Rates initiated by the President or Director General, under section 10, are subject to review by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and its power to revise or alter is the power previously vested in it under the Act to regulate interstate commerce, as amended, which gives it authority to regulate intrastate rates as such. State v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 172 N. W. 324.

Local taxes.—The fact that by this Act and the President's proclamation under the same, railroads have been taken charge of by the United States, and are being operated and controlled by the government, is not a defense against the payment of local taxes.

Any question of taxation concerning a bridge owned by a corporation and used by various railroad companies can only arise between the federal government and the state. People v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., (1919) 287 Ill. 246, 122 N. E. 467.

State taxation.—State authorities have the right under this Act to tax moneys derived from the operation of the railroads by the government. Wabash R. Co. v. Board of Review, (1919) 288 Ill. 159, 123 N. E. 259, wherein the court said: "By the terms of the act federal control was not to continue to exceed 21 months after the war. We understand the taking over of the operation and control of the railroads by the federal government was a temporary war measure, and that they did not thereby become instruments or agencies of the government for the purpose of carrying into effect powers of the government conferred by the people—at least to the extent that their property was not subject to taxation by the states. It would seem from the provision of section 1 'that other taxes assessed under federal or any other governmental authority' during federal control, 'or on the revenues, or any part thereof, derived from operation, . . . shall be paid out of revenues derived from railway operations while under federal control,' and from the provisions of sections 10, 12, and 15 relating to tax accruals, that it was not the intention of Congress to deprive the states of the power of taxation which they possessed and exercised prior to the passage of the act temporarily taking over, not the ownership, but the operation and control, of railroads."

"Police regulation."—The term "police regulation" as used in section 15 is not limited to regulations directly affecting the health, lives and morale of the people, but embrace regulations designed to prevent discrimination and economic oppression. Thus pre-existing intrastate regulations continue in force as lawful police regulation. State v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 172 N. W. 324.

Effect of armistice on powers conferred on President.—The Act conferred upon the President extraordinary executive powers rendered necessary by the existence of a state of war. And the termination of hostilities under the armistice did not justify judicial interference to restrain the further exercise of those powers rendered necessary by a state of war. State v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 172 N. W. 324.

IV. RIGHT OF ACTION BY RAILROAD

In general.—The right of action by a public utility under federal control is not affected by the legislation upon this subject, and it would appear that it may sue either in its corporate capacity, as an agency of the government, or with the Director General of Railroads named as plaintiff. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 363, 63 L. ed. 1032, 39

Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; United States R. Administration v. Burch, (1918) 254 Fed. 140. See also McGregor v. Great Northern R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 172 N. W. 84, where it is said: "They may sue and be sued as formerly."

And in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 363, 63 L. ed. 1032, 39 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513, where the action was begun prior to the Federal Control Act, but no decision handed down till 1919, although both defendant and plaintiff were under government control, no substitution was made, but in their corporate capacity the litigants remained upon the record until the final termination of the suit.

V. RIGHT OF ACTION AGAINST RAILROAD

In general.—Under this Act no restriction is placed upon the right of action against public utilities while under federal control. Whatever uncertainty may exist from the interpretation of the orders of the Director General of Railroads as to the proper forum and other restrictions attempting to impede the rights of litigants, it is generally conceded that a right of action remains unimpaired. Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, (1919) 250 U. S. 135, 63 L. ed. 897, P. U. R. 1919D 705, 39 Sup. Ct. 502; Nueces Valley Town-Site Co. v. McAdoo, (W. D. Tex. 1919) 257 Fed. 143; Dahn v. McAdoo, (N. D. Ia. 1919) 256 Fed. 549; Jensen v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 255 Fed. 795; Rutherford v. Union P. R. Co., (D. C. Neb. 1919) 254 Fed. 880; Frierse v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Neb. 1918) 254 Fed. 875; Wainwright v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (E. D. Mo. 1918) 253 Fed. 459; Muir v. Louisville & N. R. Co., (W. D. Ky. 1918) 247 Fed. 888; Johnson v. McAdoo, (E. D. Co.*, (1919) 145 La. 323, 82 So. 286; West v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., (Mass. 1919) 123 N. E. 621; Clegg v. American Express Co., (Mass. 1919) 125 N. E. 162; Gowan v. McAdoo, (Minn. 1919) 173 N. W. 440; Lavalle v. Northern P. R. Co., (Minn. 1919) 172 N. W. 918; Marshall v. Bush, (1918) 102 Neb. 279, 167 N. W. 59; Schumacher v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (Vt. 1919) 106 Atl. 587.

"Both the President in his original proclamation and Congress in the Act of March 21, 1918, clearly contemplated that the liability of the carriers should continue. . . . Since the liability continues, it is competent for a suitor to resort to the ordinary legal remedies to establish it." McGregor v. Great Northern R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 172 N. W. 84.

It is manifest, therefore, although no attachment or levy can be made, that there is no prohibition for actions for damages in accordance with the civil procedure prescribed by the states. West v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., (Mass. 1919) 123 N. E. 621, holding that the President's "proclamation does not purport to limit or restrict the right to bring suit on causes of action then existing until the Director General may, by general or special order, otherwise determine. It is plain, in the absence of such order by the Director General, that only the rights of attachment on mesne process and of levy on execution are suspended."

So that, by the legislation under discussion, Congress did not intend either to extinguish or impair vested rights of action, or to authorize the President or his agents to do so. Benjamin Moore & Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., (1919) 106 Misc. 58, 174 N. Y. Supp. 60.

In Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Steele, (1918) 180 Ky. 290, 202 S. W. 878, the right of action under section 10 of the Act of March 21, 1918, is sustained by the court in the following words: "It does not prevent a litigant from bringing this action against the latter in any court of competent jurisdiction, or such court from granting him such relief in the form of a judgment or otherwise, short of the coercive payment or satisfaction of such judgment by the levy of an execution or other like process upon or against any property of the carrier, as the litigant might, but for the passage of the act, under the laws of the state of his residence, have been entitled to. In other words he may, notwithstanding the act, bring his action and obtain judgment against the carrier, but he cannot enforce against the latter the satisfaction of the judgment, when obtained, by execution or similar process. The object of the act of Congress and of the President's proclamation referred to is to prevent, except as allowed by the Director General of the railroad under the control of the government, the seizure or sale of its property, which, if allowed, would interfere with the government's use of such property as required in its efforts to bring the war to a successful issue."

To the same effect, see Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mirck, (Ky. 1918) 180 Ky. 294, 202 S. W. 879; Le Clair v. Montpelier, etc., R. Co., (Vt. 1919) 106 Atl. 587.

Such an action is not subject to the objection that it is an action against the United States without its consent. Dahn v. McAdoo, (N. D. Ia. 1919) 256 Fed. 549. See to the same effect Rutherford v. Union Pac. R. Co., (D. C. Neb. 1919) 254 Fed. 880.

VI. JURISDICTION AND VENUE OF ACTION BY OR AGAINST RAILROAD

Jurisdiction generally.—Jurisdiction of the state and federal courts, it would seem, remains undisturbed by the Act of March 21, 1918. However, the construction of that statute and of the various orders has been such that, in identical circumstances, the federal court and the state court have respectively assumed jurisdiction. Thus it has been held that a suit brought against the Director General of Railroads, his agents and employees, acting in behalf of the government of the United States, pursuant to the acts of Congress and proclamations of the President, in actual control and operation of railroad property, is one under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and within the jurisdiction of the federal courts. Nueces Valley Town-Site Co. v. McAdoo, (W. D. Tex. 1919) 257 Fed. 143.

Federal court.—In United States R. Administration v. Burch, (E. D. S. D. 1918) 254 Fed. 140, the court, on the question of jurisdiction of the federal court, said: "The defendant, in his return to the rule, has raised the question that this court has no jurisdiction of the cause, and cannot enjoin a sale under execution under a judgment in a state court. Inasmuch as this question is a question arising in a case which asks for the enforcement of a right claimed to exist and be given under the terms of an act of Congress, it is evidently an action of a civil nature in equity, brought by an officer of the United States authorized to sue, and arising under the laws of the United States, where it appears upon the face of the bill of complaint that the right claimed by the plaintiff and sought to be enforced arises by virtue of and under a statute of the United States. The question whether or not final process can be levied against this property is one that arises under the very terms of the Act of March 21, 1918; nor is the position that this court has no jurisdiction to stay the execution of a judgment recovered in the state court well taken. It has been laid down that the United States courts, by virtue of their general equity powers, have jurisdiction to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment in the state court upon the usual principles under which courts of equity will enjoin the enforcement of a judgment."

Citizenship of railroad.—In Smith v. Babcock, (N. D. Ohio 1919) 260 Fed. 679, it was held that the citizenship of the railroad, and not of the Director General, determined the jurisdiction of the federal court; and an action against a railroad under federal control could be brought only in such courts as would have had jurisdiction in the absence of federal control. In this connection Westenhaven, D. J., said: "This section [§ 10] further provides that no defense shall be made in any actions at law or in equity to enforce any liability on the ground that the carrier is an instrumentality or agency of the federal government, and that no such carrier shall be entitled to transfer any action brought by or against it to any federal court. Obviously this means that right to sue in or remove to the federal court is not restricted or enlarged in consequence of federal control. Construing these provisions together with the entire act, it seems obvious that Congress intended to interfere as little as could be avoided with the situation existing at the time the railroads were taken over, and that the rights and remedies of all persons should be preserved and might be enforced with a minimum of interference with pre-existing rights and remedies. Assuming the existence of a liability it seems evident that it was intended parties should have the right to assert the same in any court, and in the same manner as it might previously have been asserted. This intent extends, not merely to the method of bringing the parties into court, but to the jurisdiction of the court."

State courts.—On the other hand, in Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, (1919) 250 U. S. 135, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) 897, P. U. R. 1919D 705, 39 S. Ct. 502, it was held that an action against the railroad company and the Director General of Railroads, to enjoin the defendants from putting into effect a schedule of rates, is within the jurisdiction of the state court, since the United States is not a necessary party.

In Benjamin Moore & Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., (1919) 106 Misc. 58, 174 N. Y. Supp. 60, the court said: "Congress did not intend to authorize the President or his agents to make an order affecting the jurisdiction of the state courts, or affecting the right to maintain actions therein, since it is expressly provided, without qualification of any kind, that actions at law and suits in equity may be brought against carriers and judgments rendered therein 'as now provided by law.'" And see L. N. Dantzler Lumber Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co., (1919) 119 Miss. 328, 80 So. 770.

VII. SERVICE OF PROCESS

Service of process on the agent of the government engaged in the operation of a railroad of the carrier under federal control does not constitute service on the railroad because of any former employment. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (S. D. Ga. 1919) 257 Fed. 138, wherein the court said: "Under the presidential proclamation of Dec. 26, 1917, the possession, control, and operation of the railroads shall be exercised by and through William G. McAdoo as Director General. When the Director General assumed control, the acts of the former officers and employees, who retained their positions and conducted the details of operation of the railroads, were the acts of the Director General. Rutherford v. Union P. R. Co., (1919; D. C.) 254 Fed. 880. Their employment by the Director General made them exclusively the servants or agents of the employer. There could be no divided allegiance as agents of the railroad corporation and of the Director General so as to accomplish the purpose of Congress. The acts of Congress, the proclamation of the President, and the general orders of the Director General, neither expressly nor by implication contemplated a dual agency of employees engaged in the operation of the railroads."

VIII. REMOVAL OF CAUSE TO FEDERAL COURT

In general.—Where the plaintiff, in his complaint, has only stated a cause of action against a domestic corporation, the application for removal is properly denied in view of sec. 10 of the Act of March 21, 1918, providing as follows: "Nor shall any such carrier be entitled to have transferred to a federal court any action heretofore or hereafter instituted by or against it, which action was not so transferable prior to the federal control of such carrier." Hill v. Director General of Railroads, (N. C. 1919) 101 S. E. 376.

Injunction to restrain transfer of officers.—In Nueces Valley Townsite Co. v. McAdoo, (1919) 257 Fed. 143, where an injunction was sought to restrain the defendant from removing certain officers from one town to another, it was held that the action was against the Director General of Railroads, his agents and employees, acting in behalf of the government of the United States, pursuant to the Acts of Congress and proclamations of the President, and in actual control and operation of property, and was therefore a suit arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and, having been removed to the federal court, would not be remanded to a state court.

IX. EXECUTION OF PROCESS AGAINST RAILROAD

In general.—The provision in the Act of Congress of March 21, 1918, that "no process, mesne or final, shall be levied against any property under such federal control," although it does not prevent the reduction of a claim to judgment, must be construed as prohibiting the issuance of any writ in the nature of levy and execution upon the judgment. Thus, in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Steele, (1918) 180 Ky. 290, 202 S. W. 878, after reciting the provisions of the statute, it was said: "Obviously, the effect of the foregoing provisions of the statute is to entirely suspend the right of issuing and levying executions, attachments, or other like process during the continuance of such control."

To the same effect, see West v. New York, etc., R. Co., (Mass. 1919) 123 N. E. 631; Johnson v. McAdoo, (E. D. La. 1919) 257 Fed. 757.

A distinction is to be noted, however, between the provisions of the Act and those of the proclamation of the President of December 26, 1917. In the former the prohibition as to execution is positive, while in the latter, discretion appears to be vested in the Director General of Railroads. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Lovick, (Tex. 1919) 210 S. W. 283.

Where a railroad company is sued for a tort and judgment recovered against it the provision that "no process, mesne or final, shall be levied against any property under such federal control," is effective to prevent the levy of execution without the necessity of the defendant moving for an order that no execution issue against any of the defendant's property now under federal control. LeClair v. Montpelier, etc., R. Co., (Vt. 1919) 106 Atl. 587.

Voluntary payment by Director General.—Where in an action under this section judgment is recovered against the Director General, no process will issue thereon that will interfere with the possession of the property under his custody, but he may provide for the payment of the judgment from the income or other funds under his control, or Congress may otherwise provide for its payment as it may see fit. Dahn v. McAdoo, (N. D. Ia. 1919) 256 Fed. 549.

See to the same effect McGregor v. Great Northern R. Co., (N. D. 1919) 172 N. W. 841. And see also Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mirch, (1918) 180 Ky. 294, 202 S. W. 879.

Garnishment of traffic balance.—In Dooley v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1918) 250 Fed. 142, it was held that traffic balances which go to make up the working or liquid capital of a railroad company are not subject to garnishment during federal control, because "the tying up of such fund would clearly be detrimental to the successful operation of a railroad system."

Specific performance of contract.—In Kneeland Bigelow Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., (Mich. 1919) 174 N. W. 605, action was brought by a shipper to compel the railroad company to specifically perform a contract entered into before the railroads were placed under federal control. In affirming a decree dismissing plaintiff's bill the court said: "Since this contract was entered into in 1911, a grave change of conditions, for which neither contracting party is responsible and neither anticipated, has imposed upon the defendant company impossibility of further performance on its part, whether temporarily or permanently we need not inquire; while on plaintiff's part the existence of a state of war with resultant governmental interference in taking possession and control of defendant's transportation system has only affected them by advanced traffic rates. This they seek relief from in a court of chancery under a bill for specific performance against a defendant deprived of power to perform by the federal government, which is in absolute control of the transportation system essential to perform and with it fulfilling the contract, except as to the matter of rates, while none of its officials in control and imposing the conditions complained of are parties to the suit. Under such conditions, a degree of specific performance against the party ousted and incapable of performance would seem to be a vain thing. For disposition of the issue directly involved we deem it sufficient to find and hold that, by a war measure interposition of the sovereign governmental power, this contract was rendered unenforceable, for the time being at least, and so long as such interposition is maintained by vis major."

Order of corporation commission for removal of depot.—An order of a corporation commission requiring a railroad company to remove its depot and to replace it by a modern structure will be set aside and the case continued until further orders of the court. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. State, (Okla. 1918) 170 Pac. 1146; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. State, (Okla. 1919) 180 Pac. 250.

The contrary view, however, was taken in Commercial Club v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Minn. 1919) 171 N. W. 312, holding that this Act had no bearing on an order of the state railroad and warehouse commission, directing the railroad to erect a new depot.

Attachment for jurisdictional purposes.—The statute and presidential proclamation were not intended to include, nor do they prohibit, the issuance of an attachment for the purpose of obtaining jurisdiction over defendants, preliminary to a trial of the issue. Such a writ is not a process of execution, either mesne or final. See L. N. Dantzler Lumber Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co., (1919) 119 Miss. 328, 80 So. 770.

Process against outlying lands.—But the Director General, to be entitled to the protection of that clause of the Act approved March 21, 1918, which provides that no process, mesne or final, shall be levied against any property under federal control, must be in legal possession of such property. Hence it has been held that property which consists of several tracts or lots in a city and adjacent thereto, not necessary to the daily running of a railroad, is not within the provision of the Act. United States R. Administration v. Burch, (E. D. S. C. 1918) 254 Fed. 140.

To the same effect, see Schumacher v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (N. Y. 1919) 106 Misc. 564, 175 N. Y. S. 84.

Stay of condemnation proceedings against railroad.—Proceedings by a telegraph company to condemn a right of way for a line along the right of way of a railroad under federal control are not subject to be stayed under section 10, and where a district judge stays proceedings in such an action he may be compelled by mandamus to proceed with them. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Call, (1919 C. C. A. 5th Cir.) 255 Fed. 850.

The goods or private citizens while in the course of transportation are not subject to the premises of the Act or General Order No. 43 which provides "It is therefore ordered that no moneys or other property under federal control or derived from the operation of carriers while under federal control shall be subject to garnishment or like process in the hands of such carriers or any of them, or in the hands of any employé or officer of the United States Railroad Administration." Consequently the lawful owner of goods may recover them from a railroad company holding them merely for transportation. Salant v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (N. Y. 1919) 177 N. Y. S. 475.

A proceeding to compel the performance of a duty required by the state is not within the contemplation of this Act and judgment will be enforced. In re Morris Ave. Bridge Co., (1919) 105 Misc. 659, 174 N. Y. S. 682.

RIVERS, HARBORS AND CANALS

Vol. IX, p. 12, sec. 2476. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 787.]

Navigable waters defined.—To same effect as original annotation, see U. S. v. Brewer-Elliott Oil, etc., Co., (W. D. Okla. 1918) 249 Fed. 609.

Determination of navigability.—"Navigability does not depend on the amount of tonnage, depth of water, width of the stream, nor the use at some time for commerce. Navigability is determined by natural conditions. Gaston v. Mace, 33 W. Va. 14, 10 S. E. 60, 5 L. R. A. 392, 25 Am. St. Rep. 848. Neither character of craft nor relative ease or difficulty of navigation are tests of navigability. State v. Pacific Guano Co., 22 S. C. 50. 'The test of navigability is navigable capacity without regard to the character of the craft, the business done, the ease of navigation, the surroundings of the stream.' Heyward v. Farmers Mining Co., 42 S. C. 139, 19 S. E. 963, 20 S. E. 64, 28 L. R. A. 42, 46 Am. St. Rep. 702." Economy Light, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 792.

Vol. IX, p. 15, sec. 5251. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 790.]

Application of section.—A patent to an Indian tribe of lands lying on both sides of a river in Louisiana, does not convey title to the bed of the river, if navigable, in view of the provisions of this section. U. S. v. Brewer-Elliott Oil, etc., Co., (W. D. Okla. 1918) 249 Fed. 609.

Vol. IX, p. 16, sec. 5255. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 790.]

Effectiveness of cession a question of fact.—In Brickel v. Wright, (1918) 180 Ky. 181, 202 S. W. 672, the court, referring to the state and federal Acts and joint resolutions relating to the cession of the canal, said: "It will be seen that none of these acts establishes the date when the cession became effective, or whether in fact it has ever become effective; and there is no proof whatever in the record upon the question, unless it be assumed, as is done for the purposes of this opinion, that the proof of Messrs. Burk and Butler establishes the fact that at the time of the accident the place had been ceded by the state to the federal government."

Vol. IX, p. 44, sec. 3. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 609.]

"Section" erroneously used for "paragraph"—"As to the amount of the fine, it is apparent that in the Act of August 18, 1894, the word 'section' is loosely used for 'paragraph.'" The 6 S., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 348.

Defective machinery.—Where the dumping of a scow before it reaches its destination is due to a breakdown in the machinery of the tug having it in tow, which could have been avoided by proper inspection, the owner of the tug is liable under this section. The Columbia, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 515.

Vol. IX, p. 49, sec. 4. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 801.]

Condition precedent to suit in admiralty.—The conviction and fining of persons offending against the provisions of this Act forbidding the dumping of mud in New York harbor, are not conditions precedent to the maintenance of the suit in admiralty against the vessel, authorized by this section. The 6 S., (1919) 250 U. S. 269, 39 S. Ct. 452, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 348.

No criminal proceeding is necessary to fix the liability imposed by the statute. The 6 S., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 348, wherein it was said of the statute: "It provides that the boat 'may be proceeded against summarily.' I cannot quite see what the meaning of the word 'summarily' can be, if it does not include a libel without the condition precedent of a criminal prosecution. The statute is not, it is true, drawn with scientific paucity; but I must still give to all its words some significance, so long as I can, and if I hold that a criminal prosecution must precede a libel, it seems to me to fly in the face of the purpose so expressed."

Jurisdiction of libel in rem.—Jurisdiction in a federal court of a libel in rem against a vessel for the penalties prescribed for dumping mud in New York harbor, if not conferred by the provision of the Judicial Code, § 24, subd. 9 (see vol. 4, p. 1048) on the theory that the proceeding was one for the enforcement of a penalty or forfeiture incurred under a law of the United States, is conferred by the provision of this section that the offending vessel may be proceeded against summarily by way of libel in any District Court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof. The 6 S., (1919) 250 U. S. 269, 39 S. Ct. 452, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 348.

Intent to supersede state authority.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Watts v. Evansville, etc., R. Co., (Ind. App. 1919) 123 N. E. 709, wherein the court said: "Counsel assert that the courts of Indiana are without jurisdiction in the case at bar for the reason that the federal government has entered the field and taken control of the entire subject-matter involved. To sustain their contention they point to sections 9 and 10 of the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1151, c. 425), and to section 2 of the similar Act of August 11, 1888 (25 Stat. 423, c. 860). Counsel have not directed us to any decision by any federal court in which any provision of these statutes has been discussed or applied. They have presented to us nothing but the bare statement that by the enactment of said sections the Congress deprived the state of Indiana of all jurisdiction in the premises. Under these circumstances, we can only say that in our opinion by these sections the Congress did not intend to concern itself further than to prevent obstructions and nuisances in navigable streams which would interfere with interstate commerce. It seems unreasonable to say that the Congress intended thereby to assume control of the bottom lands which extend far back from the low-water line."

Indiscriminate dredging by private parties for sand and gravel may be prohibited under this section when it is affecting navigation. McMorran Milling Co. v. C. H. Little Co., (1918) 201 Mich. 301, 167 N. W. 990.

Diversion of water from Niagara river.—Any diversion of water from the Niagara river on the American side in such quantity as substantially to interfere with the navigable capacity of that river or the connected lakes, or which in any substantial degree alters or modifies the course, location, or channel of either of these waterways, is prohibited by this section, unless in advance recommended by the chief of engineers and authorized by the Secretary of War. (1913) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 217.

Vessel anchored in wide channel.—A vessel anchoring at a point in the channel, where, notwithstanding such anchorage, other vessels navigating with the care the situation required, can safely pass, neither violates this section, nor renders the vessel liable for a collision under the general rules applicable to navigation, although she may to a certain extent obstruct the channel. The Hesperas, (E. D. Va. 1918) 252 Fed. 858.

Liability of owner for failure to mark wreck.—This statute is a criminal statute, and the failure of duty on the part of the owner of a vessel sunk in navigable waters penalized by it is failure to mark the wreck after knowledge of the fact necessitating the performance of the duty; and the duty imposed upon the owner as a basis for civil liability cannot be greater and will not arise until after knowledge that the vessel is a wreck. Eastern Steamship Corp. v. Great Lakes Dredge, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 497, 168 C. C. A. 3, affirming (D. C. Mass. 1917) 250 Fed. 916.

Movement and anchorage of vessels in St. Mary's river.—The authority granted to the Secretary of War by this section to define and establish anchorage areas in waters generally, does not divest the Secretary of Commerce of the specific authority granted him by the Act of April 26, 1906 (see vol. 9, p. 75), to regulate the movement and anchorage of vessels in the St. Mary's river. (1915) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 459.

Vol. IX, p. 81, sec. 9. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 805.]

Concurrent authority.—The effect of this section "reasonably interpreted, is to make the erection of a structure in a navigable river, within the limits of a state, depend upon the concurrent or joint assent of both the national government and the state government. The Secretary of War, acting under the authority conferred by Congress, may assent to the erection by private parties of such a structure. Without such assent the structure cannot be erected by them. But under existing legislation they must, before proceeding under such authority, obtain also the assent of the state acting by its constituted agencies." Economy Light, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 792, 168 C. C. A. 138.

Application of section.—This section should be construed as applying to streams of actual navigable capacity even though not now used for interstate commerce. Economy Light, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 792, 168 C. C. A. 138.

Navigability as question for federal and not state court.—In Shortell v. Des Moines Electric Co., (Ia. 1919) 172 N. W. 649, it was held that whether the Des Moines river was to be treated as a part of the navigable waters of the United States was a question for the federal and not the state courts to determine.

The Desplaines river in Illinois, being a navigable stream, comes within the provisions of this section, consequently a dam constructed therein without the consent of the United States is illegal. Economy Light, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 792, 168 C. C. A. 138.

Vol. IX, p. 86, sec. 18. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 818.]

Injury to bridge by vessel.—A bridge over a navigable stream built in accordance with the laws of the United States, does not become on account of wear, tear and incidental repairs, with unsubstantial variations from the original plans, an unlawful structure, which may be injured by a passing vessel, without such vessel incurring liability to the owner of the bridge, regardless of the fact as to whether such variations or defects were the approximate cause of the injury or not. Savannah, etc., Trans. Co. v. Klarenn Bridge Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 499, 164 C. C. A. 415.

Navigable waters wholly within state.—Conceding that Congress has the power to take sole and exclusive jurisdiction over navigable waters wholly within a state it has not done so by the enactment of this section which does not restrict or encroach upon the power a state had previously been authorized to exercise. People v. Metropolitan West Side Elevated R. Co., (1918) 285 Ill. 276, 120 N. E. 748.

Failure to open draw on signal.—It is the duty of the owner of a drawbridge over a navigable stream to equip the bridge with proper lights and give warning of the position of the bridge and of its opening and closing, and if for any reason the bridge cannot be opened, proper signals should be given to that effect, such as will warn an approaching vessel in time to heave to. Therefore the owner of a bridge is liable for injury to a vessel where it appeared that on approaching the bridge when the weather was not clear and the lights could not be distinguished for any great distance, the vessel commenced to signal when a mile distant, which signals were repeated at regular intervals, but no reply was received from the bridge until the vessel was too close to turn without avoiding a collision. Derby v. Staten Island Rapid Transit Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 882.

Vol. IX, p. 97, sec. 3. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 347.]

Creates no new cause of action.—"Section 3 of the dam act was not intended to give a cause of action not already existing, but merely preserved existing rights as against taking or injuring property. The act was not intended to legalize the construction and maintenance of the dam, and at the same time authorize a recovery of damages upon the theory that a lawful act was a public nuisance." Mcharg v. Alabama Power Co., (Ala. 1918) 78 So. 909.

Vol. IX, p. 111, sec. 2. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 372.]

Liability of master for injuries to servant.—An action for personal injuries lies by a servant against his master resulting while in the course of his employment. Panama R. Co. v. Bosse, (1919) 249 U. S. 41, 39 S. Ct. 211, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 303, 152 C. C. A. 291), wherein the court said: "By the Act of Congress of April 28, 1904, c. 1758, § 2, 33 Stat. 429, temporary powers of government over the Canal Zone were vested in such persons and were to be exercised in such manner as the President should direct. An executive order of the President addressed to the Secretary of War on May 9, 1904, directed that the power of the Isthmian Commission should be exercised under the secretary's direction. The order contained this passage, 'The laws of the land, with which the inhabitants are familiar, and which were in force on February 26, 1904, will continue in force in the canal zone . . . until altered or annulled by the said commission;' with power to the commission to legislate, subject to approval by the secretary. This was construed to keep in force the Civil Code of the Republic of Panama, which was translated into English and published by the Isthmian Canal Commission in 1905. By the Act of Congress of August 24, 1912, c. 390, § 2, 37 Stat. 560, 561, 'All laws, orders, regulations, and ordinances adopted and promulgated in the Canal Zone by order of the President for the government and sanitation of the Canal Zone and the construction of the Panama Canal are hereby ratified and confirmed as valid and binding until Congress shall otherwise provide.' On these facts it is argued that the defendant's liability is governed by the Civil Code alone as it would be construed in countries where the civil law prevails and that so construed the code does not sanction the application of the rule respondet superior to the present case. But there are other facts to be taken into account before a decision can be reached. On December 5, 1912, acting under the authority of the before-mentioned Act of August 24, 1912, § 3, the President declared all the land within the limits of the Canal Zone to be necessary for the construction, etc., of the Panama Canal and directed the chairman of the Isthmian Commission to take possession of it, with provisions for the extinguishment of all adverse claims and title. It is admitted by the plaintiff in error that the Canal Zone at the present time is peopled only by the employees of the Canal, the Panama Railroad, and the steamship lines and oil companies permitted to do business in the Zone under license. If it be true that the Civil Code would have been construed to exclude the defendant's liability in the present case if the Zone had remained within the jurisdiction of Colombia it does not follow that the liability is no greater as things stand now. The President's order continuing the law then in force was merely the embodiment of the rule that a change of sovereignty does not put an end to existing private law, and the ratification of that order by the Act of August 24, 1912, no more fastened upon the Zone a specific interpretation of the former Civil Code than does a statute adopting the common law fasten upon a territory a specific doctrine of the English courts. Wear v. Kansas, 245 U. S. 154, 157. Probably the general ratification did no more than to supply any power that by accident might have been wanting. Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Co. v. Wilder, 211 U. S. 137, 142. In the matter of personal relations and duties of the kind now before us the supposed interpretation would not be a law with which the present 'inhabitants are familiar,' in the language of the President's order, but on the contrary an exotic imposition of a rule opposed to the common understanding of men. For whatever may be thought of the unqualified principle that a master must answer for the torts of his servant committed within the scope of his employment, probably there are few rules of the common law so familiar to all, educated and uneducated alike."

Partition—Necessity for possession.—Where land is properly in the possession of the United States under this section, even if a bill for partition or for a sale for division could be made the means of trying a disputed title, a court could not, in a suit between private parties, render an enforceable decree for the partition or sale of the property. Reina v. Brocho, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 834.

The term "compensation," as used in this section, refers to salary or wages payable to employees as separate and distinct from the privileges or allowances that may be granted them as to quarters, light and fuel. Consequently, the money value of these privileges should not be taken into consideration in determining the salary or compensation of employees of the Panama Canal. (1916) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 548.

Appointment of assistant to district attorney of Canal Zone.—By virtue of an executive order, dated February 2, 1914, delegating to the governor of the Canal Zone certain powers of appointment, which were conferred upon the President by this section, the governor has authority to appoint, with such official designation as he may deem proper, an assistant to the district attorney of the Canal Zone. (1916) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 561.

Vol. IX, p. 113, sec. 6. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 375.]

Panama railroad as private corporation.—In view of the provisions of this section, the Act of June 25, 1910, ch. 384, and the various departmental regulations and rulings, it is clear that it was intended that the relation between government and the Panama railroad should be that of stockholder to the corporation which issued the stock and not that of principal and agent. The railroad cannot, therefore, claim exemption from liability for personal injuries caused by its negligence on the ground that it is not a private corporation. Panama R. Co. v. Curran, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 768, 168 C. C. A. 114. To the same effect, see Panama R. Co. v. Robert, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 773, 168 C. C. A. 119.

Amendment of Criminal Code by President.—Section 23 of the Code of Criminal Procedure of the Canal Zone may be amended by the President by virtue of this section, which authorizes him to establish by order rules governing the magistrates' courts. (1914) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 344.

SALVAGE

Vol. IX, p. 121, sec. 1. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 384.]

What constitutes salvage service.—Raising and restoring to commerce a sunken steamer lying at the bottom of a navigable river, narrow and much traveled, though in no immediate peril of destruction and without the employment of means or the incurring of hazards beyond those necessary to the undertaking, is salvage, creating a property right enforceable by process in rem; and this is true whether the service is rendered voluntarily or under contract. Great Lakes Towing Co. v. St. Joseph-Chicago S. S. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 635, 165 C. C. A. 261.

Saving the hull of a vessel during the process of saving the cargo is salvage service entitling the salvor to remuneration. The Wanala, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 255 Fed. 599.

Salvage service distinguished from towage.—For services outside the contemplation of the parties in making the contract for towage, remuneration may be given, and, if they amount to salvage, a salvage award is due. Thus on discovering that a tug is leaking and about to founder if the tug takes it into a harbor and assists in stopping the leak, the service rendered is outside the towage contract and may be recovered for as salvage. The Joseph F. Chinton, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 977, 163 C. C. A. 227.

The elements.—To same effect as original annotation, see The John J. Howlett, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 256 Fed. 971.

The elements which enter in the estimate of salvage are: (1) The value of the property in peril and the proportion of the value lost and saved; (2) the degree of peril from which lives and property are rescued; (3) the value of the property employed by the salvor, and the risk of life and property incurred; (4) the skill and dispatch shown in rendering the service together with the foresight and skill exercised in the preparation to render it; (5) the time consumed and the labor performed by the salvor. The Blackwall, 10 Wall. 1, 19 L. ed. 870. The consideration of all these elements should result in an award which will express reasonable actual compensation for the labor, risk, and skill of the salvor and the use of his vessel and appliances, and an added amount based on the degree of peril of property and life and the value of the property saved and lost sufficient to promote the highest degree of readiness and efficiency for the relief of vessels in distress. The Kia Ora, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 507, 164 C. C. A. 423.

While the actual expense incurred, or loss of time by a vessel in salvaging another, do not constitute claims for which payment may be demanded, they are elements to be considered in making the award. The Jelling, (E. D. N. C. 1918) 253 Fed. 381.

Danger of injuring some other craft.—In ascertaining the nature of the salvage service it is fair to consider the difficulty of safely landing the tow and the risk run of injuring some other craft, for such risk is an element of hazard quite the same in principle as the risk of injury to the salving boat itself. The No. 92, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 117, 164 C. C. A. 229.

Amount of salvage.—It is well settled that the amount of salvage should be sufficient to obtain again the same service. The Annie Lord, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 251 Fed. 157, wherein the court said: "The Lord was an abandoned vessel; and the public benefit from saving what might otherwise become a dangerous floating derelict in frequented paths of commerce is entitled to recognition. The saving of life and the temporary abandonment of her voyage by the salving vessel are to be taken into account, as well as the enterprise, courage, and skill displayed by the salvors."

Where there were no elements of heroism or dangers to life, and the only danger to the salving tug was such as was incident in going to the ship ashore, which in the instant case was slight, and no damage was suffered except such as was incidental to pulling on the tug's hawser, an award of $40,000 to a tug worth $85,000 for salvaging a ship and cargo worth $1,000,000 was held to be excessive and was reduced to $10,000. The Tordenskjold, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 672.

Necessity for completing work.—It is not necessary, in order to establish a claim to salvage, that the salvor should actually complete the work of saving the property at risk. It is sufficient if he endeavor to do so, and his efforts have a causal relation to the eventual preservation of it. The Annie Lord, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 251 Fed. 157.

Purpose of award.—"Salvage is both compensation and reward, and while it should not be extravagant, or such as to excite greed, it should be liberal, to encourage prompt, energetic, and efficient service in the relief of vessels in peril." Steamer Avalon Co. v. Hubbard Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 854.

Saving human life.—In The Annie Lord, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 251 Fed. 157, the court said: "The crew of the Lord were in no danger of death by drowning, unless by being washed overboard; but they were admittedly in great danger of death from exposure. They were all in serious condition when rescued. On their own vessel they were without shelter or warm food, and exposed to intense cold and a rough sea. Whether they would have lived until another vessel than the Oliver picked them up is mere speculation. The Oliver certainly rescued them from a position of great and imminent peril. It seems to me that her action saved human life within the meaning of the statute."

SEAMEN

Vol. IX, p. 152, sec. 4526. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 863.]

Sinking of vessel by submarine.—The sinking of an American vessel by a German submarine at a time when war did not exist between the United States and Germany terminated the voyage, and seamen are not entitled to wages after the time of the sinking. Foreman v. Benas, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 133, wherein it was said: "The proclamation of the Imperial Government as to the 'war zone,' and the subsequent proclamation limiting the number per week and defining the permissible route of American vessels, rendered every American vessel engaged in European trade, which was not armed or under convoy, exposed to daily risk of destruction by German submarines. This was particularly so after the severance of diplomatic relations with this government. I think it is ignoring the substance of things to regard the carrying of contraband without notice to the seamen, where the articles provided for passage through the war zone, as a material variation of the libelants' contract. The torpedoing of the vessel was in my opinion a loss which terminated the voyage, and entitled the libelants, under section 4526 of the Revised Statutes, only to wages prior to that event."

Relation to section 4530.—This section and section 4530, infra, should be construed together in determining the wages due a seaman. The Cubadist, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 203, affirming (S. D. Ala. 1918) 252 Fed. 658.

The words "within 24 hours after the cargo has been discharged" as used in this section refer to a discharge of cargo upon the completion of the voyage for which the seamen shipped. The Cubadist, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 203, affirming (S. D. Ala. 1918) 252 Fed. 658.

"After the cargo has been discharged."—The provision of this section that seamen shall be entitled to their wages in the case of vessels making foreign voyages within twenty-four hours "after the cargo has been discharged" indicates a termination of the period for which the seaman had been employed and does not entitle him to be paid his wages in full up to the time the cargo is discharged at any port or ports at which the vessel calls and unloads her cargo. The Cubadist, (S. D. Ala. 1918) 252 Fed. 658.

Right to one-third of earned wages.—Under this section a seaman is not entitled to be given a bonus when he is discharged, equal to one-third part of the balance of the wages then owing to him, but the purpose of the statute was to secure the payment to him, at once upon his discharge, of one-third of the balance of the wages then owing him. The Cubadist, (S. D. Ala. 1918) 252 Fed. 658.

Double pay for refusal to pay wages.—This section applies only where the refusal to pay was willful and without excuse. The Cubadist, (S. D. Ala. 1918) 252 Fed. 658, wherein it was said: "There are numerous instances where masters have been known to willfully refuse to pay seamen their wages. In these cases I think it unquestionable that, if the seaman recovers, he should also recover double pay. There are, however, other cases where the master may have just cause to doubt whether the seaman is entitled to demand his pay, or cases where it may be a very close question. I do not think that the statute was intended to penalize any master or vessel for exercising sound judgment and discretion, or to require them to surrender such judgment under a penalty of double pay. I think the language used carries with it the idea that, where the court finds that the master's refusal was willful and without justification or excuse, double pay should be given, but where the master was exercising a reasonable and proper discretion, and the question was doubtful, it reserves to the court the power to pass upon the question of the reasonableness or the sufficiency of the excuse of the master, and give or deny the double pay, accordingly as the court may find the contention of the master to be honest or a mere pretext."

Vol. IX, p. 158, sec. 4530. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 228.]

Constitutionality.—In The Strathearn, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 631, 168 C. C. A. 25, reversing (N. D. Fla. 1917) 239 Fed. 583, in original annotation, it was contended that the provision of this section authorizing seamen to demand one-half of their earned wages on the arrival of their ships at American ports, was unconstitutional on the ground that it deprived parties without due process of law of rights under contracts made in foreign jurisdictions. In answering this contention, the court said: "The statute does not purport to affect, and does not affect, the rights of the parties under a contract made in a foreign jurisdiction, except to prevent such contract standing in the way of the enforcement of the domestic law in behalf of and against parties who have subjected themselves to the domestic jurisdiction. 'It is part of the law of civilized nations that, when a merchant vessel of one country enters the ports of another for the purposes of trade, it subjects itself to the law of the place to which it goes, unless by treaty or otherwise the two countries have come to some different understanding or agreement.' Wildenhus' Case, 120 U. S. 1, 11, 7 Sup. Ct. 385, 387 (30 L. Ed.) 565. A contract made in Great Britain for the services of a British seaman on a British vessel which goes to an American port is not so far effective as to be enforceable in the latter place, if its enforcement there would result in setting at naught the law of that place. As the foreign contract is incapable of giving the right claimed by virtue of it, the statute in question cannot properly be regarded as depriving a party to the contract of a right under it; the right claimed not being one which was conferred by the contract or otherwise. The obligation of a contract entered into in one jurisdiction does not extend so far as to entitle the parties to such contract to be exempt from the operation of the law of another jurisdiction to which they subject themselves, which law forbids such effect being given to the contract as is sought to be given to it in that jurisdiction."

What law governs.—Shipping articles signed before a British consul in an Italian port are governed by British law and not by the La Follette Act. The Hannington Court, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 252 Fed. 211.

Right to one-half wages—Generally.—The provision of this section authorizing seamen to demand one-half their earned wages on the arrival of their ship at American ports, is not invalid on the ground that it is not within the legislative power of the United States to make, in that it undertakes to nullify contracts entered into between foreigners in a foreign country, in which such contracts are valid and enforceable. The fact that the seamen and the vessel are foreign does not prevent the American law being applicable to them while both are in an American port. The Strathearn, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 631, 168 C. C. A. 25, reversing (N. D. Fla. 1917) 239 Fed. 583, in original annotation.

Time of demand.—In The Strathearn, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 631, 168 C. C. A. 25, reversing (N. D. Fla. 1917) 239 Fed. 583 in original annotation, it was held that this section authorizes a demand for wages two days after the arrival of a ship at a port, if more than five days have elapsed since the voyage commenced. In reversing the lower court's decision, it was said: "The provision that 'such demand shall not be made before the expiration of, nor oftener than once in five days,' is not to be given the effect of requiring that five days must have elapsed after the arrival of a ship at a port where it loads or delivers cargo before a demand for half wages can be made with the effect given to it by the statute. Evidently the intention was that such a demand should not have the effect given to it by the statute if it is made within five days 'after the voyage has commenced,' or if made sooner than five days after the making of a previous demand contemplated by the statute. The appellant's demand was not premature."

Time for compliance with demand.—A master is entitled to a reasonable time in which to comply with a demand for wages and where he offers and the men accept orders on stores for a part of the demand he is entitled to a reasonable time when a second demand is made for the balance. The Pinna, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 642, affirming (E. D. La. 1918) 252 Fed. 203, wherein it was said: "A demand, to be legal, must afford the person on whom the demand is made a reasonable time to accede to it. If, upon the second demand, the master had pleaded inability to immediately comply, not coupled with a request for time to put himself in shape to comply, it might be construed to be a refusal to comply, which would entitle the appellants to full wages and a discharge. Upon the ship's arrival in port, the master was entitled to a reasonable time to prepare himself to comply with any demands made upon him for wages. The acceptance of the orders tendered by the master in response to the first demand authorized the master to assume that the men would not insist on further payment, at least until he was notified to the contrary by the second demand. He was not, therefore, in default for not having anticipated and prepared for the second demand. He was entitled to a reasonable time, after the making of the second demand, to get the money to comply with it. This was certainly true, if he requested the extension of such indulgence to him and expressed a purpose to put himself in shape to comply shortly with the demand, if granted, and this is what the record discloses in this case. The purpose of section 4 of the Seamen's Act was to furnish a remedy by which sailors could procure a proportion of their earned wages at each port, and not to provide a method by which the shipping articles could be terminated at the will of the seaman, because of a failure on the master's part to instantly comply with a demand by the seaman, which was made with the purpose of procuring the right to demand a discharge from the shipping articles, rather than the payment of half of the earned wages under them."

Deduction of previous payments.—The half part of wages then earned which the seaman is entitled to receive is to be computed by dividing the total earnings by two and deducting the amount previously paid, not by making first the deduction and then the division. The Thor, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 248 Fed. 942.

Effect of prior payment.—It is only a demand for the payment of one-half part of the wages earned which stands in the way of the making of another such demand within five days thereafter. Consequently where on the arrival of a ship in port a demand for less than one-half of the earned wages is complied with, the seaman receiving such payments is not barred from making a further demand within the time prescribed by this section. Rederiaktiebolaget Transatlantic v. Eklund, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 95.

Acceptance of store orders.—The acceptance by seamen of store orders on the statement of the master that the cash to meet their demands was not at the moment available bars them from disputing the validity of the payment, and such compliance with their demand does not put the master in default, so as to entitle them to full wages and a discharge. The Pinna, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 642, affirming (E. D. La. 1918) 252 Fed. 203.

Foreign seamen.—To same effect as original annotation, see The Strathearn, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 631, 168 C. C. A. 25, reversing (N. D. Fla. 1917) 239 Fed. 583, in original annotation.

Where a British seaman under contract to make a voyage to this country and return deserts his vessel on arrival in the United States he forfeits all his effects and wages under the British law (Merchants Shipping Act, 1894, sec. 221), and after such desertion he cannot recover by making demand as provided by this section. The Wells City, (E. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 689.

Foreign seamen on a British ship, who refuse to sign new articles on arrival at a port in the United States, the original articles having been lost overboard, and who refuse to return to the ship when ordered by the master, cannot recover half wages under this section, and may be treated by the master as deserters under the British law. The Nigretia, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 56, 166 C. C. A. 384.

Termination of voyage.—Generally.—Under this section a voyage is ended for any particular seaman when his period of employment under his contract ends. The Cubadist, (S. D. Ala. 1918) 252 Fed. 658.

Under shipping articles describing a voyage from Boston to a Cuban port and to such other ports and places in any part of the West Indies or the Gulf of Mexico as the master might direct, and back to a final port of discharge in the United States, north of Hatteras, for a term of not exceeding six months, the voyage is not terminated until the expiration of the six months' period or the return to a port north of Hatteras. The Cubadist, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 203, affirming (S. D. Ala. 1918) 252 Fed. 658.

Cost of transportation to home port.—Under the treaty between the United States and the Netherlands, May 23, 1878, article 11, providing that the consular authorities of each nation shall have jurisdiction of disputes between masters and crews of vessels of the respective nations concerning wages, exclusive of local authorities, the courts of the United States have no jurisdiction, by virtue of this section, over a dispute between the master and crew of a Dutch vessel concerning the payment of transportation for the crew to Holland. The Rindjoin, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 254 Fed. 913, 166 C. C. A. 275.

Costs on libel for wages.—The failure to comply with the demand for the payment of half the wages earned, entitles seamen to full payment of wages earned, with costs of the libel proceedings for the recovery thereof. Rederiaktiebolaget Transatlantic v. Eklund, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 95.

Right to fees.—A shipping commission is not entitled to receive a fee from the estate of a deceased seaman but must pay the same into the registry of the District Court. In re MacDonald, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 248 Fed. 983, following Lewis v. U. S., (1917) 244 U. S. 134, 37 S. Ct. 570, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1039, and overruling In re Johnson, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 251 Fed. 319.

Amount of fees.—An allowance to the shipping commissioner of a fee of $2 and one per cent of the amount of the wages received is authorized by this section. In re Johnson, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 251 Fed. 319.

Vol. IX, p. 168, sec. 4547. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 879.]

Withholding wages during controversy.—Where there is an actual controversy between the crew and the owner of a vessel as to a claim for extra compensation, as evidenced by the submission of the disputed questions to a shipping commissioner and his decision in favor of the captain, the refusal to pay the sums demanded by the crew does not amount to a wrongful withholding of wages without sufficient cause. The Silver Shell, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 235 Fed. 340.

Application of section.—Advances in foreign port.—Advances to seamen made by the master of an American vessel in a South American port are not affected by this section. Neilson v. Rhine Shipping Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 205, 39 S. Ct. 89, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 180, 162 C. C. A. 316, which reversed The Rhine, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 833), wherein the court said: "The District Court decided in favor of the libellants. 244 Fed. Rep. 833. The Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the decrees. 250 Fed. Rep. 180. The cases are here on writ of certiorari.

"The section of the statute is the same as that involved in the case of The Talus [Sandberg v. McDonald], No. 392, ante, 185. The difference is that the advances were made by the master of an American vessel in a South American port, whereas in The Talus the advancements were made to foreign seamen in a British port. The same general considerations as to the interpretation of the statute which controlled in the decision of the case of The Talus are applicable here and need not be repeated.

"That American vessels might be controlled by congressional legislation as to contracts made in foreign ports may, for present purposes at least, be conceded. It appears that only by compliance with the local custom of obtaining seamen through agents can American vessels obtain seamen in South American ports. This is greatly to be deplored, and the custom is one which works much hardship to a worthy class. But we are unable to discover that in passing this statute Congress intended to place American shipping at the great disadvantage of this inability to obtain seamen when compared with the vessels of other nations which are manned by complying with local usage.

"The statute itself denies clearance papers to vessels violating its terms. This provision could only apply to domestic ports and is another evidence of the intent of Congress to legislate as to advances made in our own ports."

Foreign vessels.—This section only applies to foreign vessels "while in waters of the United States" and does not make invalid the contracts of foreign seamen so far as advance payments were made in a foreign country where the law sanctioned such contract and payment. Sandberg v. McDonald, (1918) 248 U. S. 185, 39 S. Ct. 84, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 670, 160 C. C. A. 570, which reversed The Talus, (S. D. Ala. 1917) 242 Fed. 954), wherein the court said: "The Dingley Act of 1884 (23 Stat. 55, 56), which is the origin of this section, contains terms much like those found in this act. That statute, as the present one, in the aspect now before us, was intended to prevent the evils arising from advanced payments to seamen, and to protect them against a class of persons who took advantage of their necessities and through whom vessels were obliged to provide themselves with seamen. These persons obtained assignments of the advanced wages of sailors. In many instances this was accomplished with little or no service to the men who were obliged to obtain employment through such agencies. In the Dingley Act it was made unlawful to pay seaman's wages before leaving the port at which he was engaged. In the present act it is made unlawful to pay seaman's wages in advance of the time when he has actually earned the same. The Act of 1884 by its terms applied as well to foreign vessels as to the vessels of the United States, and masters of foreign vessels violating the law were refused clearance from any port of the United States. The present statute is made to apply as well to foreign vessels while in the waters of the United States as to vessels of the United States.

"In the present statute, in the section from which we have just quoted, masters, owners, consignees, or owners of foreign vessels are made liable to the same penalties as are the like persons in case of vessels of the United States. Such persons in case the vessels are those of the United States or foreign vessels, seeking clearance in ports of the United States, are required to present their shipping articles at the office of clearance, and no clearance is permitted unless the provisions of the statute are complied with.

"The Act of 1884 came before the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York in the case of The State of Maine, 22 Fed. Rep. 734. In a clear and well-reasoned opinion by Judge Addison Brown the law was held not to apply to the shipment of seamen on American vessels in foreign ports. After some amendments in 1898, not important to consider in this connection, the matter came before this court in the case of Patterson v. Bark Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, and it was held to apply to a British vessel shipping seamen at an American port, and, furthermore, that the act, as thus applied to a foreign vessel in United States waters, was constitutional. . . . Legislation is presumptively territorial and confined to limits over which the law-making power has jurisdiction. American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co., 213 U. S. 347, 357. In Patterson v. Bark Eudora, supra, this court declared such legislation as to foreign vessels in United States ports to be constitutional. We think that there is nothing in this section to show that Congress intended to take over the control of such contracts and payments as to foreign vessels except while they were in our ports. Congress could not prevent the making of such contracts in other jurisdictions. If they saw fit to do so, foreign countries would continue to permit such contracts and advance payments no matter what our declared law or policy in regard to them might be as to vessels coming to our ports.

"In the same section, which thus applies the law to foreign vessels while in waters of the United States, it is provided that the master, owner, consignee, or agent of any such vessel, who violates the provision of the act, shall be liable to the same penalty as would be persons of like character in respect to a vessel of the United States. This provision seems to us of great importance as evidencing the legislative intent to deal civilly and criminally with matters in our own jurisdiction. Congress certainly did not intend to punish criminally acts done within a foreign jurisdiction; a purpose so wholly futile is not to be attributed to Congress. United States v. Freeman, 239 U. S. 117, 120. The criminal provision strengthens the presumption that Congress intended to deal only with acts committed within the jurisdiction of the United States.

"It is true the act provides for the abrogation of inconsistent treaty provisions, but this provision has ample application treating the statute to mean what we have here held to be its proper construction. It abolishes the right of arrest for desertion. It gives to the civil courts of the United States jurisdiction over wage controversies arising within our jurisdiction. These considerations amply account for the treaty provision. See Treaties in Force, ed. 1904, index, p. 969.

"It is said that the advances in foreign ports are against the policy of the United States and, therefore, not to be sanctioned here. As we have construed this section of the statute; no such policy as to foreign contracts legal where made is declared."

"Seaman having command."—To the same effect as the original annotation, see The Colusa, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 21, 160 C. C. A. 161, affirming (N. D. Cal. 1917) 241 Fed. 968, cited in the original note.

The first officer of a vessel is not a fellow servant of a seaman, but is the agent of the owner in so far as the security of the vessel's gear is concerned, and if the seaman is injured because of its defective condition it is either the fault of the owner for installing faulty gear or of his agent for failure to inspect it and keep it in proper condition, and in either event the owner is liable. Corrado v. Pedersen, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 249 Fed. 165.

"Those."—The word "those" as used in this section refers to seamen and not to those injured. Hence, a longshoreman employed from the land to assist in loading the vessel is not within the meaning of the statute. The Hoquiam, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 627, 165 C. C. A. 253.

Failure to furnish light to watchman.—Where a muleteer is ordered to act as night watchman and is injured by falling in the dark because of the failure of those in authority to provide him with a light, the ship is liable under this section for his injury. The Baron Napier, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 126, 161 C. C. A. 178.

Vol. IX, p. 191, sec. 4568. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 893.]

Substitution of equivalents.—The owner is not liable under this section for a failure to provide proper food where it appears that on a shortage of food the best substitutes obtainable at the ports where the vessel was when the shortage occurred, were provided; nor is he liable because of poor cooking when every effort to engage a competent cook was made. The Silver Shell, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 340.

Recovery—Burden of proof.—To same effect as original annotation, see The Silver Shell, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 340.

Medicine and medical treatment.—An action will not lie against the ship for an error of diagnosis on the part of the officers with respect to an injury to one of the crew, but the vessel should not be absolved from liability if the ignorance of the officers is merely a basis for their utter failure to appreciate that they should do something to supplement their own lack of knowledge. The Van Der Duyn, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 746, wherein it appeared that the libellant, a coal passer, had his right arm fractured, but the ship's officers treated it as a lacerated bruise, and on the arrival of the ship at Havana five days later had the arm examined by a doctor but did not send the libellant to a hospital, but brought him to New York, where he received hospital treatment on his own initiative, the ship's officers in the meantime having charged him with shamming. The court said: "But undoubtedly the libellant suffered additional pain and discomfort, and was not given considerate treatment by the officers of the vessel, who concluded that he was shamming, and who looked upon the injury as a mere bruise, or laceration of the flesh. The treatment, while useful in preventing infection, was not that which a possibly broken arm should have received, and the evidence supports a finding that the officers were not justified in relying upon their own opinion or in assuming from the examination given by the quarantine doctor at Havana that no other treatment was necessary. Their failure to take such steps as the situation evidently called for, while unintentional on their part, can nevertheless not be overlooked, and the vessel is certainly liable for that failure, as the vessel owed it to the seaman to take reasonable precautions and to furnish reasonable aid, even to the extent of taking the man to the nearest place for remedy."

Vol. IX, p. 203, sec. 4580. [First ed., vol. VI, p. 902.]

Effect of certificate of discharge.—Although a consular certificate of discharge is only prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein, yet a libellant, who sues to recover for wages and transportation because of his discharge in a foreign port, must offer proof sufficient to overcome this prima facie case in order to be entitled to recover. The Oregon, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 752.

SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION

Vol. IX, p. 252, sec. 4132. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 373.]

The word "outfit" and the word "equipment," used in this section, are practically synonymous. U. S. v. Richard & Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 231.

Spare engine parts.—Although engines for operating the auxiliary lighting plants of ships built in this country must be regarded as parts of the vessels, and not as outfit or equipment for them, still spare or repair smaller wearing parts for such engines, such parts being carried in duplicate by such vessels, are admissible free of duty as "outfit and equipment" of vessels built in the United States, under this section. U. S. v. Richard & Co., (1917) 8 U. S. Cust. App. 231.

"After the passage of the Act."—To same effect as original annotation, see The San Joan, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 93, 162 C. C. A. 265, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 241 Fed. 288.

The words "this Act" as used in this section refer to the Act of March 3, 1897, the original enactment of this section, and the requirements as to crew space on vessels, prescribed in the amendment to this section by the Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 153, sec. 6, apply to all vessels constructed after the passage of the Act of March 3, 1897. (1916) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 558.

Vol. IX, p. 296, sec. 4197. [First ed., vol. VII, p. 45.]

Clearances in general.—The ship before it leaves port must obtain its "clearance" from the collector of the port. Clearances have a history in the maritime law extending over hundreds of years. A clearance is an important document, even in times of peace. It is particularly so in time of war. It certifies the fact that a vessel has complied with the law and is authorized to leave port. It contains the name of the master of the vessel, and of the port to which it is going. It bears an official seal and is a ship's passport, which entitles it to go from one end of the sea to the other, except that it cannot enter a blockaded port. Its regularity is the first thing that is inspected in time of war when the boarding officer of a belligerent vessel boards the ship to determine whether she is on a lawful voyage. Hamburg-American Steam Packet Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 747, 163 C. C. A. 79.

Vol. IX, p. 340, sec. 8. [First ed., vol. VII, p. 67.]

Continuity of voyage.—Foreign vessels which transport passengers from San Juan, Porto Rico, to the port of New York, are liable to the fine imposed by this section, as amended by the Act of 1898, although the passengers go ashore for brief stays at intervening foreign ports. (1913) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 44.

Vol. IX, p. 341, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. VII, p. 68.]

Transportation by land and water.—The words of this section by their plain, natural import, refer to a voyage entirely by water by vessels between ports of the United States. It follows that the transportation of merchandise on through bills of lading by American vessels from Seattle to Skagway, thence by rail over the White Pass and Yukon route across the international boundary to Whitehorse, in Yukon Territory, and thence by foreign vessels down the rivers, across the international boundary again, to Fairbanks, would not violate the provisions of this section. (1913) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 3.

Liability of tug for injury to tow.—In Aldrich v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 330, 166 C. C. A. 500, discussing the liability of a tug for injury to a vessel which it has taken in tow, the court said: "While the general rule respecting the duty and liability of one undertaking towage services for another is that he is bound to exercise reasonable skill and care, such as a prudent navigator would exercise in similar service until it is accomplished, and he is responsible for any damage which may result to the tow as a result of the failure to perform the responsibilities of such an undertaking, he is not an insurer and required to use the highest possible degree of skill or care. . . . The burden is on the one who asserts negligence to prove it, and the mere fact that a barge has been damaged while in tow does not raise the presumption that the tug has been at fault."

I. Introductory.

II. Definition and nature of maritime lien.

III. Person entitled to lien.

V. "Repairs, supplies or other necessities."

VII. Repairs, etc., furnished to vessel.

VIII. Necessity that credit was given to vessel.

I. INTRODUCTORY (p. 347)

Purpose of Act.—In the South Coast, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 84, 159 C. C. A. 302, it was said that the Act obviated the doubt which at one time existed as to a lien for supplies furnished on the personal order of the owner. The court said: "Prior to the adoption of the Act of Congress of June 23, 1910 (36 Stat. 604), relating to liens upon vessels for repairs, supplies, or other necessities, there was much confusion respecting the law, as to whether a lien would attach where the necessities and supplies, etc., were ordered by the master when the owner was personally present, or whether such a lien was susceptible of being impressed orally by the owner in case the supplies, etc., were furnished through his personal order on the credit of the ship. In the first instance, it was thought that it would not attach because, the owner being present, the presumption seemed to prevail that there was want of authority in the master to bind the vessel. But, if the ship were in a foreign port and the owner were not present, the authority of the master to bind the ship would exist through necessity, that the ship might be repaired and provisioned in order to go forward upon its voyage. Thomas et al. v. Osborn, 19 How. 22, 15 L. ed. 534; The Kalorama, 10 Wall. 204, 212, 213, 19 L. ed. 941; The Underwriter, (D. C.) 119 Fed. 713, 755. In the second instance, according to many authorities, the personal order of the owner gave rise to the presumption that the supplies were furnished on his personal credit. The St. Jago de Cuba, 9 Wheat. 409, 6 L. ed. 122. And it was not even clear that the owner could impose a lien upon the vessel by oral agreement. The Iris, 100 Fed. 104, 40 C. C. A. 301; Cuddy v. Clement, 113 Fed. 454, 51 C. C. A. 288. But all this controversy has been put at rest, or rather obviated, by the statute, which imposes a lien in favor of the person furnishing repairs, supplies, etc., 'upon the order of the owner or owners, . . . or of a person by him or them authorized.'"

II. DEFINITION AND NATURE OF MARITIME LIEN (p. 348)

A contract cannot afford the necessary basis for a maritime lien, unless it is maritime in its nature, so as to be cognizable in admiralty; and it is not enough that the contract is maritime as to some of its provisions—it must be maritime in its entirety. The Walter Adams, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 20, 165 C. C. A. 40.

Executory contract.—So long as a contract remains wholly executory, the vessel and cargo are subject to no lien which can be enforced in rem. The Rancagua, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 843.

So where a contract was for the libellant's services as a stevedore and was maritime in its nature, it was decided that performance under it was required to confer a lien enforceable by proceedings in rem against the vessel and cargo, if their ownership was such that they could be subjected to a lien, it being declared that contracting to render such service was not the rendering of them. The Rancagua, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 843.

III. PERSON ENTITLED TO LIEN (p. 348)

Architects.—It has been said that if the person who did the work of repairing a vessel should include a charge for drawing plans it would evidently give him a lien therefor and that it would follow that the work was a part of the repairs even when done for a third party. So it has been held that an architect is entitled, under this section, to a lien for work done in preparing plans for repairs to the hull, engines, boilers, machinery, etc., of a vessel. The Schuykill, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 249 Fed. 781.

V. "REPAIRS, SUPPLIES OF OTHER NECESSARIES" (p. 349)

Presumption of necessity.—It seems to be settled law that, unless repairs and supplies are necessary to render the vessel seaworthy to enable her to proceed on her voyage, the master is not authorized, as between himself and the owners, to procure them on the credit of the owners or of the vessel. But the necessity for credit will be presumed where it appears that the repairs and supplies were ordered by the master, and that they were then necessary for the ship when lying in port, or to fit her for an intended voyage, unless it be shown that the master had funds, or that the owners had sufficient credit, and that the repairer, furnisher, or lender knew those facts, or one of them, or that such facts and circumstances were known to him as were sufficient to put him upon inquiry, and to show that if he had used due diligence he would have ascertained that the master was not authorized to obtain any such relief upon the credit of the vessel. The South Coast, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 84, 159 C. C. A. 302.

Towage is not a necessary within the meaning of this Act. The Hatteras, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 518, 166 C. C. A. 586.

Supplies furnished in home port.—The lien given by this section applies in the case of supplies furnished in the home port. In this connection it is said: "Congress could have had but one intent in the passage of this act. It was to give a lien for supplies, etc., to the person furnishing the same, upon the vessel to which same was furnished, under the circumstances set out in the act. If such was not the intent, why specify the conditions under which the supplies, etc., were to be furnished? Theretofore the lien for supplies furnished to a vessel in her home port was dependent upon the statutes of the several states, and Congress, in the fifth section of the act, specifically supersedes all such state statutes. This action alone, even if the words of the act were doubtful, would be very persuasive of the intent to give a maritime lien for supplies furnished a vessel, whether in her home port or not. I have examined the cases of The St. Jago de Cuba, 9 Wheat. 409, 6 L. ed. 122, The Sinaloa, (D. C.) 209 Fed. 287, and L. C. Transp. Co. v. Gulf Refining Co., 211 Fed. 336, 128 C. C. A. 15, but find nothing in them adverse to this construction of the act of Congress." The Bud III, (S. D. Fla. 1918) 250 Fed. 918.

This Act applies only to repairs, supplies and other necessities furnished the vessel at the home port, and not to damages for a breach of contract for a charter. Corsica Transit Co. v. W. S. Moore Grain Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 689, 165 C. C. A. 283.

The letting of a barge to be used by a company in dredging operations has been held not to be a furnishing of repairs, supplies or other necessities so as to support a libel against a dredge with which it was used and in connection with which use it was sunk. The Dixie, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 46, 161 C. C. A. 106.

Effect on lien of acts of seller under conditional contract of sale.—Where a libellant has a lien for supplies furnished a vessel on the order of a person in possession under a conditional contract of sale, such lien cannot be displaced by any act of the seller in taking possession of the boat on an alleged default in payments and in advertising and selling it subsequent to the time the lien attached. The Bud III, (S. D. Fla. 1918) 250 Fed. 918.

VII. REPAIRS, ETC., FURNISHED TO "VESSEL" (p. 351)

Supplies furnished for specified vessel.—Where specific supplies or materials have been furnished to the owner upon a distinct understanding that they were for a specified vessel, and the owner has, after delivery to him, appropriated them to the vessel so designated between the parties, they have been held to have been furnished to her in the sense of the statute; and maritime liens for them under it have been sustained. The Walter Adams, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 20, 165 C. C. A. 40.

VIII. NECESSITY THAT CREDIT WAS GIVEN TO VESSEL (p. 352)

Where coal was delivered to a corporation and there was no understanding as to the coal so delivered, or any definite part of it, that it was for either of the vessels libeled, or for all of them, or even for all the vessels in a fleet, as distinguished from the factories; and, except that the coal was understood to be for use in its business as carried on at those places, its ultimate disposition was left as above for determination by the corporation subsequently to the making of the agreement regarding coal for the season, and subsequently to both its shipments and its delivery, and the shipments were all charged by the libellant on its books to the corporation, without any entries charging any of it either to a specific vessel, or to specific vessels, or to the fleet; and they were billed to the corporation only, without any reference to vessels or fleet, it was held that no maritime lien on any vessel was created. The Walter Adams, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918, 253 Fed. 20, 165 C. C. A. 40.

Charterer bound by contract to protect against liens.—The fact that the charter party binds the charterer to save the owner harmless from liens does not negative the authority of a master appointed by the charterer to procure repairs or supplies on the credit of the vessel. The South Coast (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 84, 159 C. C. A. 302, affirming (N. D. Cal. 1916) 233 Fed.

327) wherein it was said: "Many ships sail under charter, either verbal or in form of regularly drawn charter parties, and it is usual and customary for the charterer in either event to disburse the necessary expenses of the ship; and of this all persons furnishing supplies, etc., to a chartered ship must be deemed to have notice. But notwithstanding this notice, or even knowledge that the ship is under charter, we cannot believe that it was the intentment of the statute or of the law that the furnisher should, because of that fact, be deprived of his lien when advancing necessary repairs or supplies in good faith to enable the ship to engage in her accustomed traffic. Nor do we believe that it was the intentment of the statute or of the law thus to impose so vital a hindrance upon maritime shipping, and unless there is something more in the charter party, that unalterably inhibits the master or the charterer from incurring any expenditures on the credit of the ship that may become a lien thereon, the master's ordinary authority is not impaired or abbreviated; nor can the right of the furnisher of repairs, etc., to extend credit to the ship, and his consequent lien, be so subverted. The terms of the present charter party as respects the furnishing of repairs, supplies, etc., are only those usual to most charter parties, and by reason of the provision that the charterer will hold the owner harmless from all liens against the vessel, there is an implication of authority on the part of the charterer to incur such expenses on the credit of the vessel. True it is that the owner attempted to prevent the libellant from advancing the supplies on the credit of the vessel; but this was an invasion of the charterer's rights under the charter party, and was unavailing to subvert the master's authority in the premises."

1918 Supp., p. 788, sec. 9.

The business situation which Congress had in mind in passing this section was one in which vessels would be acquired by the board, and operated under charter or lease from it, or sold by it outright. The G. A. Flagg, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 256 Fed. 852.

Construction.—The basic intention seems clear from the language of paragraph 2 of this section, that merchant vessels should gain no exemption from the ordinary legal liabilities because of any interest which the United States might have in them. The G. A. Flagg, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 256 Fed. 852.

"Purchased, chartered or leased."—A vessel operating under a charter executed by agents of the United States Shipping Board to a coal company—even if the agreement were merely one whereby the shipper paid a stipulated rate per ton for the cargo carried—is "purchased, chartered, or leased" from such board within the meaning of the provision of the Shipping Board Act of September 7, 1916, that vessels so purchased, chartered or leased, while employed solely as merchant vessels, shall be subject to all laws, regulations and liabilities governing merchant vessels, whether the United States is interested therein as owner or otherwise. The Lake Monroe, (1919) 250 U. S. 246, 39 S. Ct. 460, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

"Employed solely as a merchant vessel."—The restrictive provision of this section, that vessels purchased, chartered or leased from the United States Shipping Board, while employed solely as merchant vessels, shall be subject to all the laws, regulations and liabilities governing merchant vessels, whether the United States is interested therein as owner or otherwise, must be deemed to apply to a vessel requisitioned by the President through the Emergency Fleet Corporation, under authority of the Urgent Deficiency Appropriation Act of June 15, 1917, documented in the name of the United States, and then employed by the President through the Shipping Board and the Emergency Fleet Corporation under charter to a private concern, in view of the provisions of the Act of July 15, 1918, amending said section 9, but re-enacting this provision almost verbatim, and of the Act of July 18, 1918 (see ante, p. 340), conferring upon the President power to prescribe charter rates and freight rates, and to requisition vessels, which defines the term "charter" as meaning any agreement, contract, lease or commitment by which the possession or services of a vessel are secured for a period of time, or for one or more voyages, whether or not a demise of the vessel. The Lake Monroe, (1919) 250 U. S. 246, 39 S. Ct. 460, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Assignment to the New England coal trade at a time when the government, through the fuel administration, was rationing the coal supply of the country, of a vessel operated under a charter executed by agents of the United States Shipping Board to a coal company, does not justify the view that she was not employed solely as a merchant vessel, within the provision that vessels purchased, chartered or leased from the United States Shipping Board shall, while employed solely as merchant vessels, be subject to all laws, regulations and liabilities governing merchant vessels, whether the United States be interested therein as owner in whole or in part, or holding a mortgage, lien or other interest therein. The Lake Monroe, (1919) 250 U. S. 246, 39 S. Ct. 460, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Liability of vessel to libel.—A vessel requisitioned by the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation and by it chartered to the government of France is liable for collision while being navigated under that charter. The Florence H., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 248 Fed. 1012.

Exemption of vessel from arrest.—A vessel to which title was taken in the name of the United States and was thus registered by the Shipping Board was held to be exempt from arrest as the property of the United States on a libel against the vessel to recover damages for personal injuries sustained while she was proceeding without cargo to a port in this country "for entering upon the public service of the United States." The G. A. Flagg, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 256 Fed. 852.

Liability for collision of vessel chartered by Shipping Board.—The liability of a merchant vessel operated under a charter executed by agents of the United States Shipping Board to a private concern to be subjected to judicial process in admiralty for the consequences of a collision was among those recognized by the provision that vessels purchased, chartered or leased from the United States Shipping Board, while employed solely as merchant vessels, shall be subject to all laws, regulations and liabilities governing merchant vessels, whether the United States is interested therein as owner or otherwise. The Lake Monroe, (1919) 250 U. S. 246, 39 S. Ct. 460, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Burden of proof.—The general rule being that a government vessel is exempt from arrest, it devolves on a libellant to establish that a vessel comes within the excepted class in this section. The G. A. Flagg, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 256 Fed. 852.

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' CIVIL RELIEF

1918 Supp., p. 812, sec. 100.

Constitutionality.—"There can be no question of the constitutionality of the act. It is a war measure within the power of Congress, therefore the supreme law of the land." Hoffman v. Charlestown Five Cents Sav. Bank, (1918) 231 Mass. 324, 121 N. E. 15.

1918 Supp., p. 813, sec. 103.

Forfeiture of bail bond.—The Act does not prevent the forfeiture of a bail bond where the principal, though in the military service, could have obtained a furlough and made no effort to do so. Briggs v. Com., (1919) 185 Ky. 340, 214 S. W. 975. The court said: "As stated in the act itself, it is intended as a protection for those in the military service of the United States in order to prevent prejudice or injury to their civil rights. No civil rights of the defendants are involved here, but even so Congress could hardly have intended to extend protection in a case presenting facts such as this, where the parties affected could have prevented the default had they made any effort so to do."

1918 Supp., p. 814, sec. 200 (1).

Construction of provision as to affidavit.—This provision does not affect the right of a court to assume jurisdiction, and therefore where it appears that the defendants, against whom a judgment by default was entered, were not in service, they are not entitled to have the judgment set aside because the affidavit provided for in this section was not filed. Howie Min. Co. v. McGary, (N. D. W. Va. 1919) 256 Fed. 38. In construing this section the court said: "The plaintiff has, upon this motion, tendered an affidavit of one of its attorneys that neither of these defendants had been or were in the service contemplated by the act during the war, and it is not contended by defendants themselves that they, or either of them, are or have been in such service.

"They contend, in effect, however, that in all cases where defendants fail to appear this statute goes to the jurisdiction of the court—that it has no power, while its provisions are in force, to enter judgment against any defendants until the affidavit, or one of them, required by the act, has first been filed by the plaintiff. . . .

"If this construction contended for by defendants' attorney be true, this act must inevitably have very sweeping, far-reaching effect, not only during this period of the war, but for years thereafter; for it is safe to say that in the inferior courts of the country many hundreds, if not thousands, of judgments have been taken where the affidavit has not been filed, all of which would become absolutely void. In such case, it might be doubted whether the act could be maintained as constitutional even as war-time legislation, but it is not deemed necessary here to discuss that proposition. There are several reasons why I do not regard it as applicable to this case:

"First. By the terms of this section itself a question arises at once as to what character of cases is meant by the words 'default of an appearance' by the defendant. There are a large number of cases constantly brought in our courts by publication of notice or summons, such as divorce cases in personam, or attachment cases in rem, where no personal service is had upon a defendant, in which, however, the courts are by law authorized to proceed to decree and judgment. This statute in construction could very well be restricted in application to such, for when one has been, in person, properly served with process, he is presumed to be in court, and the legal obligation upon him to appear and make his defense, if he has any and desires to do so, becomes imperative. It can hardly be presumed that Congress intended that one, for instance, not in service, so served, and upon whom such obligation in consequence rests, should, by reason of being even afterwards called to service, be relieved of the instant legal obligation upon him that he had theretofore incurred.

"Second. Be this as it may, it seems clear that the terms of the act should be construed together, with a view to ascertain the reasonable purpose designed to be accomplished by it. It cannot be questioned that it is exclusive in its terms, designed solely for the benefit of certain persons for the time being in certain defined classes of military and naval service, their sureties, indorsers, and guarantors, and no others. This is made very clear by the sections of article 1 of the act; further, that it does not pretend to abrogate the contracts of such persons, but only to suspend the enforcement thereof by legal proceedings for a specified period; that the entering of such judgment or decree against such persons may notwithstanding be by the court done, provided it has appointed an attorney to represent such person in service to protect his interest, and has required of plaintiff a bond to indemnify the defendant in such service 'against any loss or damage that he may suffer by reason of any judgment, should the judgment be thereafter set aside in whole or in part.'

"Third. If action is brought against such person in service, the court in which it is pending, in its discretion, on its own motion, or upon application of such defendant in service, or someone for him, shall stay the prosecution of the action for the period specified, 'unless, in the opinion of the court, the ability of the plaintiff to prosecute the action, or the defendant to conduct his defense, is not materially affected by reason of his military service,' and in case of executions, attachments, and garnishments, like stay may, in the discretion of the court, under like conditions, be granted, and attachment or garnishment of property, money, or debts in the hands of another, whether before or after judgment, may be vacated. Where the person in military service is a co-defendant with others, the plaintiff may nevertheless, by leave of court, proceed against the others. From all these provisions, taken together, it seems to be clear that Congress had no intention by this act to either destroy or limit the inherent jurisdictional right of the courts to try cases, or enforce rights and remedies, against people generally, but only to secure certain security for those certain persons in military and naval service who might otherwise by reason of service be subject to injustice and oppression.

"Fourth. To fully establish the view herein taken, it would seem that the terms of the fourth clause of this article 2 [§.200] of the act are conclusive. This clause reads as follows:

"(4) If any judgment shall be rendered in any action or proceeding governed by this section against any person in military service during the period of such service or within thirty days thereafter, and it appears that such person was prejudiced by reason of his military service in making his defense thereto, such judgment may, upon application, made by such person or his legal representative, not later than ninety days after the termination of such service, be opened by the court rendering the same and such defendant or his legal representative let in to defend; provided it is made to appear that the defendant has a meritorious or legal defense to the action or some part thereof. Vacating, setting aside, or reversing any judgment because of any of the provisions of this act shall not impair any right or title acquired by any bona fide purchaser for value under such judgment.'

"In view of all these provisions, I conclude that this statute does not affect in any way the right of the courts to assume jurisdiction over individual citizens not engaged in the service specified by the statute; that in case they have or do assume such jurisdiction over one in such service, it is their duty, in case attention is called to the fact, by either the defendant in service or someone for him, to see to it that such defendant is properly represented by attorney and the action is stayed unless his interests will not be materially affected or he is by bond indemnified; that in case judgment is taken against him he has full remedy under this fourth clause to have such judgment vacated; that none of these provisions can in any way inure to the benefit of persons not in such service and, therefore, unless one or the other of these defendants can show that he was in such service at the time this judgment was rendered the failure of the plaintiff to file affidavit that such was not the case becomes wholly immaterial, so far as any right on their part is concerned, to disturb or cause this judgment to be set aside."

1918 Supp., p. 815, sec. 201.

Motion to set aside divorce.—In State v. Klene, (Mo. 1919) 212 S. W. 55, it was held a proper exercise of discretion to refuse to stay a motion by a wife to set aside on the ground of fraud a decree of divorce rendered against her, though the husband was absent in the service and was unable to procure a leave of absence.

1918 Supp., p. 815, sec. 203.

Conflict with state law.—The right to proceed in civil court against a person in the military service of the United States must be determined in accordance with this act, and a state statute in conflict with this section is void. Konkel v. State, (1919) 168 Wis. 335, 170 N. W. 715, wherein the court said: "There can be no doubt that Congress in the exercise of the powers conferred upon it may prescribe the conditions under which persons in the military service of the United States shall be subject to the process of courts, whether state or federal. Such provision seems necessarily implied from the provisions expressly granted, to maintain an army and navy. No question as to the validity of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act is raised, and we see no ground upon which its validity could be successfully assailed. It is equally within the power of a state to confer upon persons in the military service of the United States certain privileges and immunities respecting the process of its courts. The United States and the states have a concurrent right in respect to the subject matter here under consideration. The question then arises whether or not there is a conflict between chapter 469 and the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act, for, if there be a conflict, the act of Congress, by subdivision 2 of article 6 of the Federal Constitution, is made the supreme law of the land. Gibbons v. Ogden, (1824) 9 Wheat. 1, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 23. We think it must be held that the laws clearly conflict. New York Cent. R. Co. v. Winfield (1917) 244 U. S. 147, 37 S. Ct. 546, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1045, L. R. A. 1918C, 439, Ann. Cas. 1917D 1139. In the first place, they speak upon identically the same subject matter; that is, the exemption of persons in the military service of the United States from the process of civil courts. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act prescribes what that exemption shall be in the courts of the United States and of the states, including the state of Wisconsin. Chapter 409 prescribes what that exemption shall be within the state of Wisconsin, and it prescribes a different exemption than that prescribed by the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act."

1918 Supp., p. 817, sec. 302 (1).

Property affected.—This section is not limited to property used by a soldier or sailor or by his dependents for business or dwelling purposes. Hoffman v. Charlestown Five Cents Sav. Bank, (1918) 231 Mass. 324, 121 N. E. 15, wherein the court said: "The defendant's first contention is that section 302 here in question is 'limited to property used by a soldier or sailor or by his dependents for business or dwelling purposes.' But there is no such limitation in that section. The contention is based on a note made by persons who assisted in making the draft of the bill which resulted in the act here in question. See special April number of the Massachusetts Law Quarterly at page 212. It would seem from this note that the original draft of section 302 contained such a limitation. But after the bill was introduced in the House of Representatives the judiciary committee 'produced a new bill' See Massachusetts Law Quarterly, ubi supra, at page 204. The explanation would seem to be that the note which applied to the draft has been published as a note to the act, and the limitation in question never became a part of the section as it was enacted."

Equitable owners of mortgages.—The Act applies to persons in the military service of the United States who are equitable as well as those who are legal owners of property covered by mortgages within the Act. A person may be the equitable owner of the property notwithstanding that an agreement which brought his equitable ownership into being was within the statute of frauds and that statute was not satisfied. This is because the statute of frauds is a defense which is personal to the maker of the contract and cannot be set up by a third person. Hoffman v. Charlestown Five Cents Sav. Bank, (1918) 231 Mass. 324, 121 N. E. 15.

1918 Supp., p. 817, sec. 302 (2).

Review of discretion.—The discretion of the trial court in refusing a further stay, after a writ of restitution has been suspended for three months, will not be interfered with. Gilluly v. Hawkins, (Wash. 1919) 182 Pac. 958.

1918 Supp., p. 818, sec. 302 (3).

Relief from foreclosure of mortgage made in violation of clause 3.—In Hoffman v. Charlestown Five Cents Sav. Bank, (1918) 231 Mass. 324, 121 N. E. 15, which was a bill in equity brought in behalf of an officer in the military service of the United States outside the commonwealth to get relief from the foreclosure of a mortgage made in violation of the clause, the appeal was from a decree dismissing the bill. It was held that the decree appealed from must be reversed and a decree entered enjoining the defendant from conveying the property covered by the mortgage in question to the person who bought it at the attempted foreclosure sale set forth in the bill. Contentions of the defendant based upon a finding of the master that the defendant had no notice or reason to suppose that the plaintiff was the owner of the property, and that the plaintiff's agent in care of the property had full knowledge of the foreclosure sale and acquiesced in and in fact approved of it, were overruled. As to the first contention the court said: "There is nothing in the section here in question which limits its provisions to owners of record or to cases where the mortgagee in fact knew or had reason to know who the owner of the property was. The act in terms includes every case where the mortgaged property is 'owned by a person in the military service at the commencement of the period of military service and [is] still so owned by him.' If the section is construed to apply in every case where the owner is in the military service of the United States whether the mortgages did or did not know who the owner was, it would seem on the face of it to be a drastic statute. The fact of the owner (when he is ascertained) being or not being in the military service of the United States is a fact which it is at least as hard for the mortgagee to find out as it is for the mortgagee to find out who the owner of the property is. Yet without question there is no such limitation as to that fact. When the relief given by clause 3 of section 302 is taken into account the section construed as stated above is not a drastic one. The section does not forbid the foreclosure of mortgages on property owned by persons in the military service of the United States. What the section does forbid is the foreclosure of such a mortgage under a power of sale (contained in it) 'unless [the sale under the power is made] upon an order of sale previously granted by the court and a return thereto made and approved by the court.' Clause 3 of section 302 was enacted to secure to every person in the military service of the United States who owns property subject to a mortgage within the act the relief to which he is entitled under the act. The defendant has urged against this construction of the section that if that be the true construction of it the result is that until the termination of the time specified in the act no mortgage can be foreclosed by any mortgagee except under an order of court and it cannot be that that was the intention of Congress. We are of opinion that this is the result of the true construction of the act, for in that way alone can a mortgagee be certain that the foreclosure of his mortgage will not be made in violation of the act. We are of opinion that since this is the result of the true construction of the act this must be taken to have been the intention of Congress." As to the second contention the court said: "The protection given by the act is given to the person in the military service of the United States. The right given to him is personal to him. For that reason the knowledge, acquiescence and approval of the plaintiff's agent for the care of the property is of no consequence."

Foreclosure of mortgage under power of sale without order of court.—The necessity of a previous order of sale by the court in the case of a foreclosure of a mortgage under power of sale is dependent on whether the mortgagor is in the military service of the United States. If he is not then no previous order of sale by the court is necessary. But in an action of specific performance to require the defendant to accept title to land agreed to be purchased, if the defendant refuses to carry out the contract on the ground that plaintiff's title was not good because obtained through the foreclosure of a mortgage under power of sale without a previous order of sale by the court, it is for the plaintiff to show that the mortgagor was not in the military service at the time of the foreclosure. Morse v. Stober, (Mass.

1919) 123 N. E. 780, wherein the court said: "The act of Congress does not require in terms that all mortgages upon real estate be foreclosed under order of court. Grave constitutional questions might lie in the way of an act of such sweep. It does provide that 'no sale under a power of sale' to enforce an obligation originating prior to the date of the approval of the act of Congress, 'and secured by mortgage . . . upon real or personal property owned by a person in the military service [as defined in the act] at the commencement of the period of the military service and still so owned by him,' 'shall be valid if made during the period of military service or within three months thereafter, unless upon an order of sale previously granted by the court and a return thereto made and approved by the court.'

"[2, 3] It was held in Hoffman v. Charlestown Five Cents Sav. Bank, (1918) 231 Mass. 324, 121 N. E. 15, that the act of Congress applies to equitable as well as legal interests constituting property in real estate and owned by a person in military service, without limitation as to use or amount, whether known to the mortgagee or not, and whether appearing of record or not. The act of Congress in this regard takes no account of our statutes as to registration of deeds. The foreclosure of a mortgage by sale, under a power of sale affecting any such property right of a person in military service, is forbidden by the act unless made under order of court as therein provided. It further was said in that opinion:

"Clause 3 of section 302 was enacted to secure to every person in the military service of the United States who owns property subject to a mortgage within the act the relief to which he is entitled under the act. The defendant has urged against this construction of the section that if that be the true construction of it the result is that until the termination of the time specified in the act no mortgage can be foreclosed by any mortgagee except under an order of court and it cannot be that that was the intention of Congress. We are of opinion that this is the result of the true construction of the act, for in that way alone can a mortgagee be certain that the foreclosure of his mortgage will not be made in violation of the act. We are of opinion that since this is the result of the true construction of the act this must be taken to have been the intention of Congress."

"This construction of the act of Congress (in the absence of a contrary decision by the Supreme Court of the United States) must be accepted as sound. It does not mean, however, that in all cases it is and must be impossible to satisfy a court of equity beyond a reasonable doubt that no person in the military service of the United States had any interest in the property subject to the mortgage which has been foreclosed. The meaning of the decision in Hoffman v. Charlestown Five Cents Savings Bank is that the safe course for the mortgagee is to foreclose his mortgage under the order of a court of equity. It is only by pursuing that course that he gets a record title not open to successful attack under the said act of Congress, and therefore in that way alone can he be certain that the foreclosure of his mortgage will not be made in violation of that act of Congress. But it is not a proposition unprovable in the nature of things or practically impossible to show beyond doubt in a court of equity that no person in the military service of the United States had an interest in the premises described in a mortgage foreclosed without order of court."

STEAM VESSELS

When section took effect.—This section under the provisions of section 18 of this Act (see vol. 9, p. 236), became effective on November 4, 1915, as to United States vessels and March 4, 1916, as to all other vessels. (1915) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 334.

Foreign vessels within section.—When not actually carrying passengers, neither foreign cargo nor foreign passenger steam vessels leaving ports of the United States are subject to the regulations prescribed by this section. Only foreign private steam vessels carrying passengers from any port of the United States to any other place or country, which are not exempt by reason of the conditions set forth in R. S. sec. 4400 (see vol.

9, p. 418), are subject to said regulations. (1915) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 441.

Fishing vessels.—A steam vessel used in transporting persons for hire from New York city to and from the fishing banks in the Atlantic Ocean from 8 to 10 miles outside the lower bay of New York harbor, is subject to the provisions of this section. (1916) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 537.

Vol. IX, p. 475, sec. 1. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 387.]

Article XI of the Service Regulations annexed to the international radiotelegraphic convention, which was ratified by the United States Senate on January 22, 1913, does not affect a modification of the terms of this section. (1913) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 84.

SURETY COMPANIES

The process must be served personally on the resident agent. U. S. v. Southern Dredging Co., (D. C. Del. 1918) 251 Fed. 400, wherein the court said: "The act of Congress contemplates the service of process upon the agent, or if that be impracticable, upon the clerk of the district court. As the service upon the clerk of the court is manifestly a personal service, so in the absence of any provision for substituted service it must be a personal service upon the resident agent. I know of no principle or authority to justify the contention that service may be made in any other manner than personally on the resident agent or the clerk of the court . . . Under the act of Congress in question process 'may' be served upon the resident agent of a foreign surety corporation, or upon the clerk of the district court. But while this provision is permissive in form it is mandatory, if the statutory remedy is to be enforced. To secure such enforcement process must be so served. And service in this connection means personal service, there being no statutory or other authority for a resort to substituted service."

III. STATE AND MUNICIPAL REGULATION (p. 510)

Workmen's Compensation Act.—A state may subject an interstate telegraph company operating within its borders to the provisions of a Workmen's Compensation Act. State v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., (1918) 101 Wash. 630, 172 Pac. 902.

IV. TAXATION

1. In General (p. 511)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see People v. State Board of Tax Com'rs, (1918) 224 N. Y. 167, 120 N. E. 192.

3. State and Municipal License Tax (p. 513)

General license tax.—A reasonable tax upon the maintenance by a telegraph company, which has accepted the provisions of this section of poles and wires erected and maintained by it within the limits of a city pursuant to authority granted by municipal ordinance, is not an unwarranted burden upon interstate or foreign commerce, or upon the functions of the telegraph company as an agency of the federal government, and does not infringe rights conferred by such Act of Congress. Mackay Tel., etc., Co. v. Little Rock, (1919) 250 U. S. 94, 39 S. Ct. 428, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 131 Ark. 306, 199 S. W. 90.

The fact that a municipal license tax is imposed upon poles of a telegraph company that stand upon a railway right of way as well as upon those that stand upon the city streets is not sufficient to condemn the ordinance,—especially where the highest court of the state finds that the telegraph line as laid along the railway right of way crosses a street car line and several highways coming into the city and that for the protection of travelers it is necessary that there shall be local governmental supervision of the telegraph lines crossing these highways. Mackay Tel., etc., Co. v. Little Rock, (1919) 250 U. S. 94, 39 S. Ct. 428, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 131 Ark. 306, 199 S. W. 90.

A municipal license tax of 50 cents a year for each pole maintained by a telegraph company within the city is not unreasonable in amount, even though it be made to apply to poles standing upon private property or upon a railway right of way as well as to poles erected in the city streets. Mackay Tel., etc., Co. v. Little Rock, (1919) 250 U.

S. 94, 39 S. Ct. 428, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 131 Ark. 306, 199 S. W. 90.

A municipal telegraph franchise ordinance which imposes the same pole tax that is exacted by a general ordinance from other companies maintaining poles in the city cannot be said necessarily to deny the equal protection of the laws merely because such general ordinance has not been enforced against such other companies in the same manner that it is proposed to enforce the franchise ordinance. Mackay Tel., etc., Co. v. Little Rock, (1919) 250 U. S. 94, 39 S. Ct. 428, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 131 Ark. 306, 199 S. W. 90.

Acceptance of the Post Roads Act by a telegraph company does not give it immunity from municipal taxation. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Decatur, (Ala. App. 1918) 81 So. 199.

1918 Supp., p. 834. [Government control, etc.]

In general.—Congress possessed the right under the war power to confer upon the President by this joint resolution, the power to take over and operate telephone and telegraph systems as a war emergency measure. And the courts may not inquire into an asserted excess or abuse of discretion by the President in exerting the authority conferred upon him. Dakota Cent. Telephone Co. v. South Dakota, (1909) 250 U. S. 163, 39 S. Ct. 507, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (reversing (S. D. 1919), 171 N. W. 277, followed in Kansas v. Burleson, (1919) 250 U. S. 188, 39 S. Ct. 512, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Burleson v. Dempsey, (1919) 250 U. S. 191, 39 S. Ct. 511, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —; MacLeod v. New England Telephone, etc., Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 195, 39 S. Ct. 511, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 232 Mass. 465, 122 N. E. 567, 4 A. L. R. 1662.

Construction.—This Act, being a war measure, should be liberally construed. Southwestern Tel., etc., Co. v. Houston, (S. D. Tex. 1919) 256 Fed. 690.

"Police regulations."—This term is used in its primary or narrow, rather than in its broader, sense, and hence the police power of the states was not encroached on by vesting in the President authority to make rates. Southwestern Tel., etc., Co. v. Houston, (S. D. Tex. 1919) 256 Fed. 690.

"By adopting the proviso to the resolution here in question, and under which the President must operate, if at all, the telegraph and telephone systems of the country as public utilities, it was the intention of the Congress to cause the control of the several states over the operation of the telegraph and telephone systems within their borders, to be interfered with only to the extent necessary to safeguard the transmission by the government of its own messages, and the issuance of the stocks and bonds of such telegraph and telephone systems as might be taken charge of by the President, and 'the lawful police regulations,' therein referred to, are not limited to such only as promote the public health, morals, or safety, but extend also to such as promote the public convenience or the general welfare, within which is embraced a regulation fixing the tolls to be charged for intrastate messages." State v. Cumberland Telephone, etc., Co., (Miss. 1919) 81 So. 404.

Federal decisions as controlling state courts.—In the interpretation of this Act by state courts federal decisions must be looked to in deciding federal questions. Groesbeck v. Michigan State Telephone Co., (Mich. 1919) 172 N. W. 799.

Effect of federal control on right of condemnation.—The control of the United States over the lines of a telegraph company does not affect the right of the company to institute condemnation proceedings, as the government's action under this section affects only the physical existing lines of the company and does not extend to a taking over of its corporate entity and franchises. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Call, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 850.

Exercise of President's discretion not reviewable.—The authority to enter into a contract for compensation under this section which is conferred on the President involves the exercise of his own judgment, and where such authority is vested in him and he has exercised it the courts have no power to inquire whether he acted wisely or to the best advantage. Southwestern Tel., etc., Co. v. Houston, (S. D. Tex. 1919) 256 Fed. 690.

Regulation of intrastate rates.—The Postmaster General by virtue of this joint resolution has authority and power to prescribe local telephone rates applicable only to a municipality without reference to the laws of the state. And a state court has no jurisdiction to restrain a proposed increase of rates made by the Postmaster General on the ground that such increase had not been obtained by the method prescribed by the laws of the state. Groesbeck v. Michigan State Telephone Co., (Mich. 1919) 172 N. W. 799.

An injunction lies to restrain the Postmaster General of the United States from putting in force intrastate rates and regulations for telephone messages on telephone lines under federal control. State v. Dakota Cent. Telephone Co., (S. D. 1919) 171 N. W. 277, wherein the court said: "It is contended by plaintiff that the term 'lawful police regulations' is there used in its broad sense, which includes the power of rate regulation. Chesapeake Telephone Co. v. Man- ning, (1902) 186 U. S. 238, 22 S. Ct. 881, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1144. It is contended by the defendants that such term is there used in its narrow sense as referring simply to the public safety, health, and morals. Leaving out of consideration for the moment the two exceptions mentioned therein, we may observe that if by that proviso the Congress intended that the states should continue to exercise their undoubted powers to reasonably regulate the intrastate rates and charges of telephone companies, then the power to fix such rates did not pass to the President nor to his representative the Postmaster General. If by that proviso Congress intended to deprive the states of the power to regulate rates for intrastate messages, then, but not until then, we would have to consider the power and authority of Congress so to do. In our opinion Congress intended the former. The act and the proviso should be so construed unless the contrary clearly appears. The contrary should not be assumed by mere implication. . . . It is further urged that the assumption of control and operation imply the taking over of all revenues, and that by reason of the taking over of the revenues of the companies Congress intended to assume authority to fix all rates, interstate and intrastate. The contention ignores the second proviso of the resolution. The resolution says nothing about the taking over of the revenues. The provisions of the contracts entered into between the Postmaster General and the telephone company are not persuasive of the correct interpretation of the proviso; but, even if the act does contemplate the taking over of all revenues, interstate and intrastate, that fact is not entitled to weight in construing the terms of the proviso, because that fact would not at all be inconsistent with its dependency on the right of the states to continue to regulate intrastate rates. Intrastate rates, as well as interstate rates, established under the authority of law are entitled to the benefit of a presumption that they are fair and reasonable. How can it be said to be inconsistent with the assumption of the revenues for Congress to declare that such assumption was subject to the reasonable rates lawfully established? It is further urged that, by the several steps taken by Congress, by the President, and by the Postmaster General, the properties taken over have become the properties of the United States government unshackled from state authority, and that this action is in reality one against the United States, which cannot be maintained in this court because Congress has not given its assent thereto. The answer is that, even if the property has become the property of the United States government, the government's title thereto is incumbered by the reserved power of the state to regulate intrastate rates. When, therefore, the Postmaster General seeks to promulgate rates, and the defendant telephone company seeks to carry them out, in defiance of the state laws, they are wrongdoers, and are amenable to the laws of this state. The action is not one against the United States or its property, but is one seeking to restrain the commission of an authorized act."

In granting an injunction against an increase of rates in violation of a state law the court in State v. Cumberland Telephone, etc., Co., (Miss. 1919) 81 So. 404, said: "The injunction here sought is not against the President in person, but against a subordinate officer who seeks to justify his contemplated action by the claim of power delegated to him by the President. This claim does not of itself oust the court of jurisdiction, but must be established by the appellees, and this they cannot do for the reason that the President himself has not been vested by the resolution of the Congress here in question with any power to disregard the police regulations of the several states, nor to authorize any subordinate so to do; but, on the contrary, the resolution expressly enjoins him to observe them, from which it necessarily follows that no such power has been or can be delegated by the President to a subordinate. . . . The appellants did not ask the court below to interfere with the official discretion of the Postmaster General, but in the language of Judge Hughes in Philadelphia Co. v. Stimson, 223 U. S. 605, 32 Sup. Ct. 340, 56 L. Ed. 570, 'challenged his authority to do the things of which complaint is made. The suit rests upon the abuse of power, and its merits must be determined accordingly; it is not a suit against the United States.'"

Intrastate telephone rates.—Authority to take complete possession and exclusive control, with the right to the entire operating revenues, was conferred upon the President by this joint resolution, and state control over intrastate telephone rates ceased with the exercise by the President of his authority notwithstanding the proviso in such resolution that nothing therein contained shall be construed "to amend, repeal, impair, or affect existing laws or powers of the states in relation to taxation or the lawful police regulations of the several states, except wherein such laws, powers, or regulations may affect the transmission of government communications, or the issue of stocks and bonds by such system or systems." Dakota Cent.

Telephone Co. v. South Dakota, (1919) 250 U. S. 163, 39 S. Ct. 507, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (reversing (S. D. 1919), 171 N. W. 277), followed in State v. Burleson, (1919) 250 U. S. 188, 39 S. Ct. 512, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Burleson v. Dempsey, (1919) 250 U. S. 191, 39 S. Ct. 511, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —; MacLeod v. New England Telephone, etc., Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 195, 39 S. Ct. 511, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 232 Mass. 465, 122 N. E. 567, 4 A. L. R. 1662.

Parties to suit during government control.—An action to enjoin the collection of alleged excessive rates cannot be maintained against the agents of the Postmaster General in charge of a telephone system; the Postmaster General himself being a necessary party. Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. v. State, (Okla. 1919) 181 Pac. 487. The court said: "The congressional resolution under consideration in this case was enacted as a war measure, giving to the President the power to take possession of the entire telephone system, including all property and appurtenances, whenever he deemed such action necessary and expedient, and to operate such system in such manner as he deemed necessary and desirable, for national security and defense. The petition alleges that he did take possession, and is now, through the Postmaster General, operating the entire telephone system. A decree restraining his agents from carrying out orders in the manner of operation would be, in effect, to interfere with his operation and control, and for that reason the Postmaster General, through whom the President is in actual possession, is a necessary and indispensable party to the action."

Effect of turning back of cables to owners on pending litigation.—The turning back to the cable companies of all their property previously taken over by the President under the authority of this joint resolution renders moot the controversy presented by bills to enjoin the Postmaster General or his representatives from interfering with the property of the cable companies under direction of the President, and requires that decrees below, dismissing the bills for want of equity, be reversed by the federal Supreme Court on appeal and the cases remanded, with directions to set aside the decrees and to substitute decrees dismissing the bills without prejudice and without costs. Commercial Cable Co. v. Burleson, (1919) 250 U. S. 360, 39 S. Ct. 512, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 255 Fed. 99.

TIMBER LANDS AND FOREST RESERVES

Vol. IX, p. 587, sec. 1 (H). [First ed., vol. VII, p. 314.]

For decisions relating to the selection of lieu lands see State v. Hyde, (1918) 88 Ore. 1, 169 Pac. 757, 171 Pac. 582, Ann. Cas. 1918E 688.

Vol. IX, p. 590, sec. 4. [First ed., vol. X, p. 405.]

Rights of way for transmission lines.—This section does not invest the Secretary of the Interior with authority to grant rights of way for transmission lines through the national forests for the distribution of electrical power. (1914) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 263.

Right of way for mining purposes—Incidental use of electricity.—Under this section a right of way may be granted through the national forests when the objective is to employ the right of way in a process of "milling and reduction of ores," and it is unobjectionable that the intermediate purpose is to generate and use electricity. (1915) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 358.

Foreign corporation as entitled to water power permit.—A mining corporation, organized and existing under the laws of Canada, is not entitled to a water power permit within the Okanogan National Forest in the state of Washington. (1916) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 581.

Vol. IX, p. 591, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 662.]

Adverse claims.—An entry of public lands under this section will prevail over a subsequent mining location on a finding of facts, in effect, that the land in controversy is not mineral but agricultural land. Meyers v. Pratt, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 765.

Vol. IX, p. 598, sec. 7. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 392.]

Acquisition of forest watershed lands by condemnation.—Construing this Act in connection with the Act of Aug. 1, 1888 (vol. 8, p. 1111), it has been held that the present Act must be read as contemplating and intending the acquisition of forested watershed lands by condemnation. U. S. v. Graham, (W. D. Va. 1917) 250 Fed. 499, wherein, in reply to an objection that the Secretary of Agriculture was only authorized to purchase at a price to be fixed by the National Forest Reserve Commission, it was further declared that there was no reason why the commission may not as well fix the price it is willing to pay after a report by the commissioners of condemnation, as after negotiations in pais with landowners.

Mode of ascertaining value of land.—Commissioners appointed in a proceeding under this section to ascertain the value of land are not necessarily restricted to the value agreed on between the government and some of the claimants, there being nothing in the law which forbids the condemnation commissioners to report the full value of the land and the full damage done by taking it and the Forest Reserve Commission having power to refuse to pay the money into court if the condemnation commissioners fix too high a valuation. U. S. v. Graham, (W. D. Va. 1917) 250 Fed. 499.

Vol. IX, p. 606, sec. 1. [Timber and Stone Lands Act.] [First ed., vol. VII, p. 300.]

Annulment of patent on mineral land.—To annul a patent under the Timber and Stone Lands Act as wrongfully covering mineral land, it must appear that at the time of the proceedings which resulted in the patent "the land was known to be valuable for mineral"; that is to say, it must appear that the known conditions at the time of those proceedings were plainly such as to engender the belief that the land contained mineral deposits of such quality and in such quantity as would render their extraction profitable and justify expenditures to that end. If at that time the land was not thus known to be valuable for mineral, subsequent discoveries will not affect the patent. The inquiry must be directed to the situation at that time, as were the applicant's proofs and the finding of the land officers. U. S. v. Porter Fuel Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 769, 159 C. C. A. 627.

Vol. IX, p. 629, sec. 8. [First ed., vol. VII, p. 306.]

Traffic in timber.—Residents of the states named in this section were not authorized to traffic in timber upon the public lands, no matter what use may have been the purpose to make of it. Caldwell v. U. S., (1917) 53 Ct. Cl. 33.

III. CONSTRUCTION OF ACT

1. In General (p. 647)

Scope of Act generally.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Buckeye Powder Co. v. E. I. Du Pont De Nemours Powder Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 55, 39 S. Ct. 38, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 881, 139 C. C. A. 319; Pulp Wood Co. v. Green Bay Paper, etc., Co., (1910) 168 Wis. 400, 170 N. W. 230.

"Unlawful agreement is the essence of the offense of combination or conspiracy under the Sherman Act. It is what separates what is permitted from what is forbidden. To hold it illegal for persons in the same business and same trade organization, after exchanging information and views, to act in the same way, but independently of each other, on buying, selling, or prices, would extend the scope of the act beyond anything heretofore decided, and beyond its proper meaning, and would cause the greatest confusion and uncertainty.

"The necessary agreement or understanding may, of course, be tacit as well as expressed; its existence may be inferred—and, even in criminal cases, often is inferred—from the conduct of the parties. Eastern States Lumber Ass'n v. U. S., supra; U. S. v. Naval Stores Co. (C. C.) 172 Fed. 455, 460. Concert of action among the members of an association, in particular such as are set forth in this indictment, strongly suggests agreement; but, if that is the construction which the prosecution places upon the defendants' conduct, it ought to be so stated." Per Morton, J., in U. S. v. Piowaty, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 251 Fed. 375.

3. Words and Terms Defined and Construed (p. 649)

"Restraint of trade."—These principles may be briefly stated as follows: First, The contract in question involved interstate commerce, and hence the federal statute is the statute to be applied to the case, although little, if any, difference is to be observed in the result in the present case whether the state or the federal statutes, or both, apply. Second. The words "restraint of trade" in the federal statute have the same meaning which they had at common law, namely, acts, contracts, agreements or combinations which operate to the prejudice of the public interests by unduly restricting competition or by unduly obstructing the due course of trade. Pulp Wood Co. v. Green Bay Paper, etc., Co., (1919) 168 Wis. 400, 170 N. W. 230.

V. APPLICATION OF ACT

2. Application in Particular Instances

a. Combinations and Contracts to Affect Prices and Terms of Sale (p. 660)

Price control by manufacturer.—Conduct of a manufacturer which, as intended, has the effect of procuring adherence on the part of its wholesale and retail customers to resale prices fixed by it, does not offend against the unlawful combination provisions of this section, where there was no agreement which obligated any dealer not to resell except at the fixed prices, his course in this respect being affected only by the fact that he might, by his action, incur the displeasure of the manufacturer, who could refuse to make further sales to him. U. S. v. Colgate, (1919) 250 U. S. 300, 39 S. Ct. 465, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (E. D. Va. 1918) 253 Fed. 522, wherein the court said: "The purpose of the Sherman Act is to prohibit monopolies, contracts and combinations which probably would unduly interfere with the free exercise of their rights by those engaged, or who wish to engage, in trade and commerce—in a word to preserve the right of freedom to trade. In the absence of any purpose to create or maintain a monopoly, the act does not restrict the long recognized right of trader or manufacturer engaged in an entirely private business, freely to exercise his own independent discretion as to parties with whom he will deal. And, of course, he may announce in advance the circumstances under which he will refuse to sell. 'The trader or manufacturer, on the other hand, carries on an entirely private business, and can sell to whom he pleases.' U. S. v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, (1897) 166 U. S. 290, 320, [17 S. Ct. 540, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 1007, 1020]. 'A retail dealer has the unquestioned right to stop dealing with a wholesaler for reasons sufficient to himself, and may do so because he thinks such dealer is acting unfairly in trying to undermine his trade.' Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Ass'n v. U. S., (1914) 234 U. S. 600, 614, [34 S. Ct. 951, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1490, 1500]."

A contract of absolute sale, made by a manufacturer, of its various manufactured preparations, in which the purchaser agrees to sell all goods purchased "at regular retail prices to be indicated by it" (the manufacturer), where its entire product is sold throughout the country only by means of like restrictive contracts, operates as a "restraint of trade," unlawful as to interstate commerce under Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, ch. 647, 26 Stat. 209, upon the subject of trusts and restraints of interstate trade. Hunt v. W. T. Rawleigh Medical Co., (Okla. 1918) 176 Pac. 410.

Refusal to do business with certain dealers.—The refusal of a manufacturer to sell to dealers who will not maintain suggested prices, or will sell to other dealers and not merely to the consumer, is not a violation of this Act. Baron v. Goodyear Tire, etc., Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 571, wherein the court said: "There is no restriction upon title alleged. The selected dealers who got the merchandise could do as they pleased with it. No agreement among the dealers to fix prices or restrict sales to the consumer is set forth. The sole gravamen of the action is the attempt of the defendants to prevent price cutting by refusing to sell to dealers who did not maintain the suggested price. The enforcement of the Sherman Act, if that act were read literally, would reach nearly every commercial enterprise. To understand the act at all, we must view it in the light of the decisions. There is no decision of an appellate court construing the Sherman Act, to which I have been referred, that prevents a single trader from rejecting a customer because he did not like the prices at which the customers resold, or otherwise disapproved of his mode of conduct. Nor does the fact that a single trader extends his policy of refusing to sell to any one of many customers who may cut prices impose any additional legal liability. It is impossible to see how a single person may choose one customer or reject one customer with impropriety, and not separately select or reject a number of customers with equal freedom."

d. Labor Unions (p. 664)

Agreements between labor union and employers.—In Shinsky v. O'Neil, (Mass. 1919), 121 N. E. 790, an action involving an agreement between employers, lasters and a labor organization known as the United Shoe Workers of America, the Sherman Anti-Trust Act was not brought into the case by the plaintiff and the agreement was held valid. No opinion was expressed as to whether it would have been held valid had that Act been involved. The court laid down these rules governing agreements such as the facts in the case showed: "It is established that workmen can combine to get the advantage of bargaining for their common benefit in respect to the terms and conditions upon and under which they should work. It is further established that if they are successful in getting the bargain they wish they can insert in the agreement setting forth that bargain a clause providing that all work of the employer shall be given to them or that a preference shall be given to them in the employment of workmen."

e. Railroads (p. 665)

Agreement regarding routing of troops.—Neither this section or section 2 of this Act, nor section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act of Feb. 4, 1887 (see vol. 4, p. 404) prevents the Navy Department from agreeing with many railroads, or prevents such railroads from agreeing among themselves, that a common agent of the roads may for a definite period direct the routing of federal troops. (1915) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 381.

f. Miscellaneous Cases (p. 669)

Sole agencies.—To same effect as original annotation, see Baron v. Goodyear Tire, etc. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 571.

VI. PROCEEDINGS UNDER ACT

1. In General (p. 677)

Survival of right of action.—On this question it has been said: "The Sherman Law is silent as to the survival of the right of action. As there is no other statute of the United States in point, whether the action survives or not must be determined by the principles of the common law, regardless of the law of Louisiana. Schreiber v. Sharpless, 110 U. S. 80, 3 Sup. Ct. 423, 28 L. Ed. 65; Michigan Central R. R. v. Vreeland, 227 U. S. 59, 33 Sup. Ct. 192, 57 L. Ed. 417, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 176.

"At common law as a general rule all actions ex delicto abate with the death of either party. Exception was made in some cases, as where the decedent had been deprived of particular property and his estate diminished by the wrongful act. But this was on the theory that the duty of the wrongdoer to return the property created a quasi contract.

"The general rule is not disputed by plaintiffs, but they contend a cause of action based on the Sherman Law is sui generis and does not sound in tort. With this I cannot agree. In my opinion this case is identical in principle with other cases based on fraud and deceit, which have always been held to come under the general rule. And, as it cannot be said Mrs. Burguiere was damaged in any particular property or that there was an implied promise on the part of defendants to reimburse her, it follows that the cause of action abated with her death." Caillouet v. American Sugar Refining Co., (E. D. La. 1917) 250 Fed. 639.

2. Indictments (p. 679)

Overt acts.—To same effect as original annotation, see U. S. v. Norris, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 255 Fed. 423.

Sufficiency in general.—The agreement being the crime, that must be charged, and nothing more. If the indictment relates the elements of the agreement in sufficiently clear terms, defendants are informed of what they are required to meet. They need not be told what means or measures they had decided on to carry out their agreement, or that any act was done by any person in the execution of the agreement. U. S. v. Norris, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 255 Fed. 423.

The indictment should allege an unlawful agreement in violation of the Act. U. S. v. Piovaty, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 251 Fed. 375, wherein the court said: "The government's contention that the indictment alleges an agreement to which the defendants were parties is based principally on the word 'concerted.' It is a word which unquestionably is often used in a sense implying agreement. But it is also used to describe similar action by different persons with the same object in view, not proceeding from agreement between them. An unorganized mob may be said to make a 'concerted' attack. If the indictment as a whole were obviously based on the assumption of an agreement to which the defendants were parties, it might be that the language used would be sufficient; but that is not this case. There is no allegation or direct suggestion that the defendants acted under agreement with each other. The absence of such an averment is apparently not due to inadvertence; it seems to be studiously avoided. The indictment appears to have been drawn on the theory that agreement was not essential. Its language and tenor are not such that the averment of one can be found by implication—certainly not with such clearness and definiteness as the defendants are plainly entitled to upon such an important allegation."

former competitive market, is held to have been unlawful under section 2 of said anti-trust statute, even though such combination may have produced beneficial results in increasing and making more steady the supply of pulp wood, in preventing ruinous competition and ruthless sacrifice of natural resources, in enabling the paper makers to make larger contracts for pulp wood and extend their field of supply into Minnesota and Canada, in reducing operation expenses, in making the annual supply sufficient and dependable, and in facilitating the readjustment of freight rates. All contracts which formed essential or convenient parts of the machinery of such combination must be held void. Thus, in an action by one of the purchasing agencies against a paper manufacturer for breach of certain provisions of contracts between them by which defendant was to pay, for spruce pulp wood delivered to it, its pro rata share of the cost thereof to plaintiff, including expense of operating and interest on the capital used, it is held that there can be no recovery for such breach. It being admitted that defendant has paid the reasonable value of the pulp wood delivered to it, the action cannot be considered as one brought to recover the value of goods sold. Claims, embraced in such action, based on defendant's breach of provisions in said contracts relating to hemlock pulp wood cannot be severed from the other claims, although no effort is found to have been made by the combination to control the output of hemlock. The inclusion of hemlock pulp wood in its contracts being one of the means found necessary or convenient to accomplish the illegal purpose of the combination, the contracts are void in that respect also. Pulp Wood Co. v. Green Bay Paper, etc., Co., (1919) 168 Wis. 400, 170 N. W. 230.

Modification of decree by consent.—Where a decree had been granted by consent, in a suit to dissolve an association to which the defendants, among other persons, belonged, as illegal under this act, enjoining them from continuing a license under certain patents, the court refused to modify the decree so as to allow the defendants, two of whom were owners of the patents in question, jointly to grant licenses to manufacture and sell articles embodying the patents, on the contention that one of the patents was broad enough to dominate the other, that any device manufactured under the latter would infringe the former and that the patents were therefore not competitive. U. S. v. Discher, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 255 Fed. 719, wherein the court further said: "At all events such a matter as this should hardly be determined in a case where the petitioners, instead of being antagonists interested in holding either patent invalid, are consenting to have the patents both regarded as valid and noncompetitive. I could at best reach a superficial conclusion without the aid of testimony as to the practicability of either the Discher or Turner and Crabill devices, or the commercial success of such mechanisms as substantially followed their drawings. To modify the decree to which the defendants consented with their eyes open, I should have convincing proof that it is unjust and burdensome. While a different conclusion might perhaps be reached if the Turner and Crabill patent were held valid and to infringe the Discher patent after litigation against infringers conducted in good faith, where full testimony was before the court, I have been unable, after careful perusal of the matters submitted to me, to regard the present proof as justifying relief."

It is essential, in civil actions for penalties under this Act, as well as in prosecutions thereunder, that the restraint of trade intended or accomplished shall be unreasonable in extent or shall be directly aimed at interstate traffic. McLatchy v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 250 Fed. 920.

II. RIGHT TO SUE (p. 717)

Who may sue to enjoin.—A person who shows no injury to himself other than as a member of the general public is not entitled to prosecute an action. Ketchum v. Denver, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 248 Fed. 106, 160 C. C. A. 246.

III. PLEADING, PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE (p. 719)

Limitation.—The provision of section 5 of the Clayton Act (see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. 2d ed. 737) respecting the running of the statute of limitations and the suspension under certain circumstances is not retrospective in its operation. Buckeye Powder Co. v. E. I. Du Pont De Nemours Powder Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 55, 39 S. Ct. 38, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 881, 139 C. C. A. 319.

Election of section.—In Buckeye Powder Co. v. E. I. Du Pont De Nemours Powder Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 55, 39 S. Ct. 38, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 881, 139 C. C. A. 319, which was an action brought by the plaintiff in error to recover triple damages under this section, resulting in a judgment for the principal defendant the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours Powder Company, one of the exceptions complained of the court's sustaining a motion at the end of the trial that the plaintiff should elect whether it would rely upon the first or the second section of the Sherman Act. Overruling this exception the court said: "The first section deals with contracts in restraint of trade, the second with monopolizing and attempting to monopolize it. The declaration, after stating the organization of the plaintiff in January, 1903, for the purpose of manufacturing and selling powder, particularly black blasting powder, alleges a long previous conspiracy on the part of various companies to monopolize the trade in explosives, which ended in the organization of the E. I. DuPont de Nemours Powder Company in May, 1903, in order more completely to carry out that end. It is alleged that the defendants and others have carried out that end, and that in pursuance of it they did acts, detailed at great length, for the purpose of compelling the plaintiff to join them or else go out of business. That, with an allegation that they succeeded and forced the plaintiff to sell out at a loss, is the whole scope of the declaration. There was a motion to strike it out for duplicity, but the motion was overruled on the ground that the declaration was as we have stated. 196 Fed. Rep. 514. The trial proceeded on that footing without complaint. So far as contracts bore upon the supposed attempt to subject plaintiff to the monopoly the jury was allowed to consider them. The case was fully tried upon the ground taken by the plaintiff at the outset and the only one on which it could hope to succeed. The plaintiff did not ask to amend. It is unnecessary to advert to the statement of the judge that in his opinion the exception to be considered should have the whole record behind it, or whether, as has been suggested, the second section is not the only one addressed to transactions such as were alleged. Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 404. When the plaintiff, after the ruling of the judge, went through the form of electing to rely upon acts done contrary to § 2 of the statute, it simply adhered to the interpretation of its declaration that it had accepted at the beginning and had endeavored to sustain throughout.

Portions of the charge are criticised in this connection for pointing out to the jury that § 2 embraced not only monopoly but attempts to monopolize. But this was wholly to the plaintiff's advantage, as it explained that if the plaintiff was driven out of business by the defendant's acts it was entitled to recover if those acts were done in the course of an attempt to monopolize, whether or not they were crowned with success. It allowed the jury to consider everything that indicated such an attempt."

Pleading in general.—It is necessary that the declaration, in an action under this section, should state facts showing unreasonable interference with interstate trade. It should show the extent of the interstate trade either actually or relatively. McLatchy v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 250 Fed. 920.

Duplicity.—A declaration in a civil action for the penalty under this act, which sets out both a conspiracy to restrain trade and an actual restraint of trade, is not bad for duplicity or uncertainty, it being declared that it seems not only proper but necessary to allege both the conspiracy and its results in order to establish a cause of action. McLatchy v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 250 Fed. 920.

Where a complaint sets out in one cause of action facts which may be regarded as violations of this section and the Clayton Act (9 Fed. Stat. Ann. 730), the defendants are entitled to have these commingled causes of action separately stated, in different counts, so that they may better prepare for trial and have the advantage by demurrer of eliminating one count from consideration if a demurrer should be sustained. Baron v. Goodyear Tire, etc., Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 256 Fed. 570.

Parties defendant.—Members of the listing committee of an association are liable for setting in motion against the plaintiffs organized action illegal under this act and a recovery may be had against them without joining either the association or the members thereof as defendants. McLatchy v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 250 Fed. 920.

IV. EVIDENCE (p. 724)

Judgments.—The provisions of section 5 of the Clayton Act (see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. 2d ed. 737) respecting the admissibility in evidence of judgments in government suits and the weight to be given such evidence have no retrospective operation. Buckeye Powder Co. v. E. I. Du Pont de Nemours Powder Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 55, 39 S. Ct. 38, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 881, 139 C. C. A. 319.

Determination of violation of anti-trust laws.—Under the provisions of this section, the question whether the person or corporation who owns, operates or controls any vessel seeking passage through the canal is doing business in violation of the anti-trust laws is to be determined by the final judgment or decree of a court of the United States of competent jurisdiction. Hence, where a vessel seeking passage through the canal is owned or operated by persons against whom no judgment that they have violated the anti-trust laws has been rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction, there is upon the officials of the canal no duty to refuse to permit the vessel to pass. And where the vessel is operated or controlled by a person or company against whom a judgment has been rendered under the anti-trust laws in a court of competent jurisdiction, if the proceeding was at the instance of the United States and resulted in a decree designed to restore competitive conditions, and no question has been raised by the United States in appropriate judicial proceedings as to noncompliance with such decree, it should not be refused passage through the canal. (1915) 30 Opp. Atty-Gen. 355.

Pleading — Duplicity.—Where a complaint sets out in one cause of action facts which may be regarded as violations of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act (9 Fed. Stat. Ann. 644) and this Act (Clayton Act), the defendants are entitled to have these commingled causes of action separately stated in different counts, so that they may better prepare for trial and have the advantage by demurrer of eliminating one count from consideration if a demurrer should be sustained. Baran v. Goodyear Tire, etc., Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 256 Fed. 570.

What constitutes price discrimination — Different prices to manufacturer and retail dealer.—A sale by a manufacturer of his products to other manufacturers, who use the articles produced by him in their products, at a less price than he sells them to dealers who buy in much smaller quantities for resale to the individual consumer, is not a violation of this section. This principle has been applied in the case of sales by a manufacturer of automobile tires to manufacturers of automobiles at a less price than he sold them to dealers for resale to the consumer. Baran v. Goodyear Tire, etc., Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 571, wherein the court said: "There is nothing in the complaint to show how the alleged discrimination might substantially lessen competition, and it certainly could not tend to create a monopoly. Every manufacturer holds a monopoly in the goods of his own manufacture, but there is no allegation that the defendants have a monopoly 'in any line of commerce,' to use the term of the Clayton Act. Manufacturers of automobiles ordinarily would buy tires in much larger quantities than dealers, and consequently the defendants could generally afford to sell to such manufacturers at a lower price than to dealers. The manufacturers sell to dealers, and the latter to the consumer. There is apparently no competition between the manufacturers of tires and the dealers, nor is it alleged that any exists. The differentiation in price would not therefore substantially lessen competition. If such would be the effect, it must be set forth in some discernible way, and not in the mere language of the statute. There is no unreasonable arrangement set forth, nor is it made apparent how competition may be substantially lessened, or how the defendants were doing more than to select 'their own customers in bona fide transactions and not in restraint of trade.' More than mere sweeping conclusions in the language of the statute should be alleged to subject parties to trial."

Sale of magazines.—This section is not violated by the refusal of the publishers of a magazine to allow its district agents to furnish retail dealers and newsboys with a magazine published by a competitor without first obtaining the former's approval, where it appears that such prohibition is set forth in the contracts between the company and its agents, and that although under such contract the agents are "purchasers" of its magazines, they are also part of an elaborate sales force conceived and organized by the company. Pictorial Review Co. v. Curtis Pub. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 255 Fed. 206.

Sale of patterns.—A contract whereby, in consideration of the granting by a company making patterns of an agency for the sale of its patterns, the grantee agreed "not to sell or permit to be sold on its premises during the term of the contract any other make of patterns" and not to sell the company's patterns "except at label prices" has been held to be within the prohibition of this Act. Standard Fashion Co. v. Magrave Houston Co., (D. C. Mass. 1918) 254 Fed. 493.

Retrospective operation of section.—The provisions of this section respecting judgments as evidence and the running of the statute of limitations have no retrospective operation. Buckeye Powder Co. v. E. I. Du Pont De Nemours Powder Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 55, 39 S. Ct. 38, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 881, 139 C. C. A. 319.

Organizations mentioned must conduct business in lawful manner.—The organizations mentioned in this section are not privileged to adopt methods of carrying on their business which are not permitted to other lawful associations. U. S. v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 250 Fed. 908.

Sufficiency of indictment.—In U. S. v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 250 Fed. 908, the defects in an indictment and the conclusion of the court appear from the following extract from the opinion: "The indictment alleges that 'said association . . . was made up of persons and concerns engaged in shipping' certain potatoes commonly called Aroostook county potatoes. It does not allege that the association was composed of persons raising such potatoes, nor that a single member of it was an actual producer of them. The basis on which the organization is founded is that its members shall be 'shippers' of Aroostook county potatoes. They may be farmers, commission merchants, or independent dealers. Nor does it appear whether the association has capital stock, nor whether it is conducted for profit. Its business and activities are not completely set forth in the indictment. These considerations would be enough to require me to hold that the organization is not shown, upon the allegations of the indictment, to be within the Clayton Act."

Extent of relief.—The suits covered by this section are limited to those seeking preventative relief; i. e., injunction 'against threatened loss or damage.' Fleitmann v. Welsbach Co., 240 U. S. 27, 36 Sup. Ct. 233, 60 L. Ed. 505; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Frank, 226 Fed. 906, 141 C. C. A. 510. No other equitable suits at the instance of private parties are expressly authorized by the Clayton Act; and, as the relief sought in the present supplemental bill is not of a preventative character but to annul a consummated transaction, none of the venue provisions of the Sherman or Clayton Acts is available to him under that bill. To obtain that character of relief in a federal court, the plaintiff must bring his suit in the district whereof the defendant is an inhabitant, as provided by section 51 of the Judicial Code. The service of process upon the Bethlehem Company cannot be sustained on the ground that the supplemental bill presents a federal question." Venner v. Pennsylvania Steel Co., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 292.

TRADEMARKS

Vol. IX, p. 747, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 676.]

Power of Congress to legislate.—Property in trademarks and the right to their exclusive use rest upon the laws of the several states, and depend upon them for security and protection; the power of Congress to legislate on the subject being only such as arises from the authority to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states and with the Indian tribes. United Drug Co. v. Theodore Rectanus Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 90, 39 S. Ct. 48, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 545, 141 C. C. A. 301.

Character of property in.—"There is no such thing as property in a trademark except as a right appurtenant to an established business or trade in connection with which the mark is employed. The law of trademarks is but a part of the broader law of unfair competition; the right to a particular mark grows out of its use, not its mere adoption; its function is simply to designate the goods as the product of a particular trader and to protect his good will against the sale of another's product as his; and it is not the subject of property except in connection with an existing business. Hanover Milling Co. v. Metcalf, 240 U. S. 403, 412-414." United Drug Co. v. Theodore Rectanus Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 90, 39 S. Ct. 48, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 545, 141 C. C. A. 301.

I. In general.

II. Particular words, names, marks, or symbols.

2. Personal and corporate names.
3. Descriptive words.
5. Geographical names.
7. Similar names.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 755)

Trademark defined.—A trademark is a design or mark rather than a container or package, and hence the shape and appearance of a package or wrapping cannot be made the subject of a trademark. Societe Anonyme, etc. v. Puziello, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 250 Fed. 928.

Effect of registration.—The allowance of a trademark by the Patent Office furnishes a strong presumption of its validity. All presumptions, however, from the action of the Patent Office are overcome by the great weight of evidence, and therefore where words are used which according to the common understanding are merely descriptive of the desirable qualities of the article, the presumption will not control. Chapin-Sacks Mfg. Co. v. Hendler Creamery Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 553, 166 C. C. A. 111.

Registration of a trademark establishes prima facie ownership in the registrant, and places burden of proof on one claiming prior use. Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. v. Schwarzenbach-Huber Co., (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 249. To same effect, see Fulton Waterworks Co. v. Bear Lithia Springs Co., (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 437, also holding that a registrant acquires no vested right in a trademark by registration.

Use under assignment from dissolved partnership.—Use of a word as a trademark cannot be predicated upon an assignment of the mark by the former member of a dissolved copartnership, who on dissolution of the firm did not continue its business. Under such circumstances the mark becomes abandoned and subject to appropriation by anyone. Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. v. Schwarzenbach-Huber Co., (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 249.

II. PARTICULAR WORDS, NAMES, MARKS, OR SYMBOLS

2. Personal and Corporate Names (p. 759)

The words "Stark Trees" in a striking and characteristic form and arrangement constitute a valid trademark. Stark Bros. Nurseries, etc., Co. v. Stark, (W. D. Mo. 1918) 248 Fed. 154.

Use of name and photograph.—The use of the name and photograph of a person coupled with words descriptive of the goods may, when the required consent to the use of the photograph has been obtained, be the subject of a valid trademark by another. M. B. Fahey Tobacco Co. v. Senior, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 579, 164 C. C. A. 495.

3. Descriptive Words (p. 762)

Generic name.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Chapin-Sacks Mfg. Co. v. Hendler Creamery Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 553, 166 C. C. A. 111.

The terms "Arch Builder" and "Heel Leveler" are susceptible of exclusive appropriation as trademarks for insoles for shoes since they are used in a secondary sense. Wonder Mfg. Co. v. Block, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 748, 161 C. C. A. 658.

The words "High-Efficiency" as a trademark for safety relief valves are more descriptive than suggestive, and hence are not registerable. In re Crosby Steam Gage, etc., Co., (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 382.

The word "Infallible" when used in connection with smokeless powder is within the rule as to the use of descriptive words and therefore is not subject to protection as a trademark. Hercules Powder Co. v. Newton, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 906.

The word "Kanelasses," as applied to cane molasses or syrup, is not registerable as a trademark, as the provision of this section prohibiting the registration of descriptive words cannot be avoided by resorting to phonetic spelling. In re American Sugar Refining Co., (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 375.

The word "Leghornette" as applied to hats is descriptive, and is, therefore, not registerable as a trademark. Elishewitz v. Leyser Green Co., (1917) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 193.

The word "Pollyanna" as applied to a series of books is descriptive, and therefore not registerable as a trademark, where one of the series is a book bearing that title. In re Page Co., (1917) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 195.

"Spearmint" is a common noun, denoting flavor, and is therefore not susceptible of appropriation as a trademark. L. P. Larson, Jr., Co. v. Wm. Wrigley, Jr., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 914, 166 C. C. A. 14.

The word "Tag" in connection with a physical tag has been held to be descriptive and may not become the subject of an exclusive trademark. M. Werk Co. v. Grosberg, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 968.

The words "The Velvet Kind" applied to ice cream are descriptive and not the subject of a valid trademark. Chapin-Sacks Mfg. Co. v. Hendler Creamery Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 553, 166 C. C. A. 111.

5. Geographical Names (p. 764)

When name has secondary meaning.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see McIlhenny Co. v. Gaidry, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 613, 165 C. C. A. 239.

7. Similar Names (p. 766)

Similarity.—The test in a trademark opposition is not whether there will be a likelihood of a purchaser confusing the products, but whether confusion in the mind of the purchaser will arise as to the source from which they came. Williams v. Kern, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 441.

The unnecessary adoption of a part of a plaintiff's trademark—a part so substantial as to have become a tradename or nickname for the goods—is generally regarded as an infringement. Ammon v. Narragansett Dairy Co., (D. C. R. I. 1918) 252 Fed. 276.

A word may not be denied registration as a trademark for ice cream cones, which are made wholly without milk or any dairy product, and are used as containers for ice cream, because of the prior use of the same word by another person as a trademark for dairy products, such as condensed and evaporated milk and cream. Borden's Condensed Milk Co. v. Eagle Mfg. Co., (1917) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 191.

Prior use by a party of the word "Hub" as a trademark for rubber boots and shoes requires denial of registration by another party of the same word as a trademark for leather shoes; the question being, not whether rubber and leather goods should be separately classified, but whether the marks of the parties are so similar as to tend to create confusion in trade when used on footwear generally, or on particular grades of footwear. Boston Rubber Shoe Co. v. Abramowitz, (1917) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 199.

Illustrations—Beverages.—In the following cases, involving the name applied to a beverage, the name first given was held to be infringed by the names which follow: "Coca-Cola"—"Coca and Cola" and "El-Cola," Coca-Cola Co. v. Duberstein, (S. D. Ohio 1918) 249 Fed. 763. "Virginia Dare"—"Virginette," Garrett v. A. Schmidt, Jr., etc., Wine Co., (N. D. Ohio 1919) 256 Fed. 943.

Food products and confectionery.—In the following case, involving the name applied to a food product or confection, the name first given was held to be infringed by the name which follows: "Success"—"Success," Williams v. Kern, (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 441 (flour.)

Musical instruments.—In the following case, involving the name applied to a musical instrument, the name first given was held to be infringed by the name which follows: "Orchestrola"—"Orchestrelle," Thomas Mfg. Co. v. Aeolian Co., (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 376.

Pencil sharpeners.—In the following case, involving the name applied to a pencil sharpener, the name first given was held not to be infringed by the name that follows: "Junior"—"Stewart Junior," Automatic Pencil Sharpener Co. v. Stewart Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 52, 161 C. C. A. 112.

Wearing apparel.—In the following case, involving the name applied to wearing apparel, the name first given was held to be infringed by the name which follows: "Dri-Shod"—"Dry-Socks," Kirkendall v. Mayer Boot, etc., Co., (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 245.

Miscellaneous articles.—In each of the following cases, involving the name applied to the article indicated in parentheses after the case, the name first given was held to be infringed by the name which follows: "Listerine"—"Mentho-Listine," Lambert Pharmacal Co. v. Mentho-Listine Chemical Co., (1917) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 197 (mouth wash and tooth powder); "Duxbak"—"Duxbak," Schieren Co. v. Whittemore Bros. Corp., (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 247 (paste or liquid dressing for shoes).

Retroactive.—To same effect as original annotation, see Fulton Waterworks Co. v. Bear Lithia Springs Co., (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 437.

Grounds for cancellation.—The invasion of a party's right to register a trademark by the wrongful registration of the same mark to another implies damage, and is sufficient ground for cancellation. Great Bear Spring Co. v. Bear Lithia Springs Co., (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 434.

Effect of cancellation.—The cancellation of a registration does not extinguish a right which the registration did not confer but which exists independently of it, as for instance an exclusive right to the use of a symbol or device as a trademark. McIlhenny v. Galdry, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 613.

Application to noncompeting goods.—Where a trademark is registered to be applied to "chemicals, medicines and pharmaceutical preparations" no relief can be granted under the registration against its use on cigars. Peninsular Chemical Co. v. Levinson, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 658, 159 C. C. A. 560.

Descriptive name in general use before registration.—In Shipley v. Hall, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 256 Fed. 539, it was held that where the plaintiff, a number of years before registering the name "Bethabara Wood" as a trademark, had arbitrarily selected and adopted it as a means for identifying certain wood used in his business, and such name by general use had become a descriptive name for the wood, he was not entitled to the exclusive right to use the name.

Jurisdiction of federal courts—Diversity of citizenship is not necessary to give jurisdiction to an action to protect a registered trademark. Stark Bros Nurseries, etc., Co. v. Stark, (W. D. Mo. 1918) 248 Fed. 154.

Where the bill is based on diverse citizenship the court has jurisdiction to give relief against the infringement of a common law trademark. Ingersoll v. Doyle, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 247 Fed. 620.

"So far as it seeks to recover for the alleged infringement of plaintiff's trademark, and for unfair competition in trade, it is well settled that the federal courts have no jurisdiction of such controversies between citizens or corporations of the same state. *Elgin National Watch Co. v. Although the plaintiff may obtain an injunction it does not necessarily follow that an accounting will be ordered. So it has been refused where the evidence fails to show any intention on the part of the defendant to deceive the public or to appropriate plaintiff's good will or trade reputation and there is no evidence in the case to show that in fact the goods of the defendant were ever mistaken for those of the plaintiff, or that any person was ever deceived in the purchase of goods by the use of the defendant's marks, or that the defendant has interfered with the plaintiff's market, or deprived it of any profits, or to show any elements of actual fraud. Ammon v. Narragansett Dairy Co., (D. C. R. I. 1918) 254 Fed. 208. See also (D. C. R. I. 1918) 252 Fed. 276.

Scope of order for accounting.—In respect to an order relating to an accounting it is said to be within the discretion of the court to require the defendant to disclose in his account such facts as are necessary to show not only his own profits from his wrongdoing but also the extent of the injury otherwise done by him to the plaintiff. So he may be required to include in his account the names and addresses of all purchasers of goods bearing the infringing trademark. O. & W. Thum Co. v. Dickinson, (W. D. Mich. 1918) 254 Fed. 219, wherein the court said: "The claim of defendant that he ought not to be required to disclose the names and addresses of his customers might rest upon a somewhat more substantial foundation, if the profits made by him in the manufacture and sale of the infringing goods alone were involved; but the accounting is ordered to ascertain both his gains and profits and the damages suffered by plaintiff. In a recent petition defendant has averred that he has made no profits. If his averment is true, and he cannot now gainsay its truth, plaintiff will be limited in its recovery to the damages (as distinguished from the infringer's profits) it has sustained. An important element of such damages, if any, may be sales of goods bearing the infringing trade-mark, which have prevented sales by plaintiff of its own goods to its own customers. Whether any such sales have been made cannot be learned until after the discovery of the names of the purchasers of infringing goods from defendant. An account merely stating dates, amounts, and prices would afford little, if any, assistance in the determination of this important question. To hold that plaintiff is not entitled to such information until after the filing of his account and exceptions thereto, and not even then unless, possibly, it can be obtained from an examination of the defendant either viva voce or upon interrogatories, would be to create and to invite the delays which the rule was intended to prevent."

Recovery of profits.—To same effect as original annotation, see M. B. Fahey Tobacco Co., v. Senior, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 579, 164 C. C. A. 495, modifying and affirming (E. D. Pa. 1917) 247 Fed. 809.

Estoppel.—The abandonment of a suit with knowledge of the expenditure of money and labor in the promotion by the defendant of the sale of goods under the name complained of as an infringement in a locality in which plaintiff had made no effort for custom has been regarded as a sufficient waiver or estoppel to prevent a decree for profits. Chapin-Sacks Mfg. Co. v. Hendler Creamery Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 553, 166 C. C. A. 111.

Vol. IX, p. 786, sec. 18. [First ed., vol. X, p. 414.]

Scope of review.—Whether, upon inspection, it can be said as matter of law that the admitted acts of the defendant are a wrong of which the plaintiff can complain, is the only question which the Federal Supreme Court will consider in a trademark or unfair competition suit in which both courts below have found for the defendant. Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co. v. Houston Ice, etc., Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 28, 39 S. Ct. 401, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 817, 154 C. C. A. 519.

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY

1918 Supp., p. 847, sec. 1.

Purpose of Act.—This Act of Congress must be construed in the light of two purposes: (1) to absolutely prevent any act which would result in a detriment to the United States in the progress of the war; and (2) not to permit or compel any act which would result in an injury to an individual alien enemy, which act would in no wise benefit the United States in the progress of the war. Keppelmann v. Keppelmann, (N. J. 1918) 103 Atl. 27.

"The intent of the 'Trading with the Enemy Act' was, of course, to shut off trade and financial aid from the enemy, but the problems involved were so many and varied in character that large discretion was conferred upon the President." U. S. v. Meinel, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 396.

"The broad general purposes of the Trading with the Enemy Act included the prohibition of commercial relations, except in some circumstances under executive license, and the capture and custody of enemy property, so as to prevent the advantage which would come to the enemy of using such resources. In order to carry out the extremely important purposes of the act, rendered necessary by the exigencies of war, the statute has devised a series of steps by which, in the first place, enemy property is laid hold of, and, secondly, then administered. Congress apparently held the view that a preliminary 'hearing' would not be practicable; but, to safeguard against acts which in law might be arbitrary, an 'investigation' was preliminarily required. In the effort to protect those who, in one form or other, transferred property to the Custodian, Congress included certain provisions intended to safeguard the persons so transferring property to the Custodian. The language of the statute seems to have been carefully selected, with a view, on the one hand, of being comprehensive as to subject-matter, and, on the other, of being particular as to details of execution." American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Palmer, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 680.

"Nowhere in the act is there evidence of any legislative intent that the purpose of seizing or taking enemy property under the act is to furnish our government with means to prosecute the war. The final disposition of such property as has been or will be taken under the act will be governed by treaty arrangements or congressional legislation or both. In a broad sense, the United States is a trustee to hold enemy property taken under the act, until such time as the United States, in orderly course, shall determine the final disposition thereof. It is fair to assume that any treaty will safeguard the rights of American citizens whose property has been seized in enemy countries, and therefore that the provisions of such treaty will, in this respect, be reciprocal. Undoubtedly resources captured under this act could, as an incident, be used by the United States in the course of its prosecution of the war; but the fundamental purpose of the act was to prevent the enemy from having the advantage of such resources as might be susceptible of capture under the act." American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Palmer, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 680.

Effect of Act no powers of attorney.—Powers of attorney for collection of money, executed prior to the existence of a state of war, rendering principals enemy aliens, may continue to be valid, notwithstanding the state of war, and notwithstanding the Trading with the Enemy Act, and may be exercised without violating the rules of public policy. But where it is obviously against the interests of the principal that the agency should continue, or where its continuance would impose some new obligation or burden, the assent of the principal to the continuance of the power after the war broke out will not be presumed, but must be proved, either by his subsequent ratification or in some other manner. It is plainly against the interest of alien principals that their attorneys in fact give refunding bonds to executors of an estate and receive their legacies and turn the same over to the alien property custodian, so it will not be presumed that such principals desire the agency of their attorneys in fact to continue. That alien enemies have been made parties to a suit and served by publication and mailing under license of war trade board, and have interposed no defense by counsel as authorized by the Trading with the Enemy Act, is insufficient to constitute an election to continue powers of attorney to citizens to receive their legacies. But it being to the interest of enemy alien principals that their attorneys in fact represent them in proceedings to determine accounting and distribution of their shares in an estate, consent to continuance of a pre-war power of attorney therefor will be presumed. Keppelmann v. Keppelmann, (1918) 89 N. J. Eq. 390, 105 Atl. 140.

1918 Supp., p. 847, sec. 2.

"Enemy" as used in this section was held not to apply to a resident of New Jersey who while born in Germany and a subject of that nation was not an officer, official or agency of Germany, or of any political or municipal subdivision thereof. Tortoriello v. Seghorn, (N. J. 1918) 103 Atl. 393, wherein the court said: "This is an action to compel the specific performance of a contract for the sale of certain real estate on Warwick street in the city of Newark, where all the parties reside. The facts in the case are undisputed. Defendants, however, refused to perform their contract and convey the premises in question to complainant, because they claim they are advised that to do so would make them subject to the penalties of fine and imprisonment imposed by the act of Congress, approved October 6, 1917, and known as the Trading with the Enemy Act, as they are not citizens of the United States and were born in the German empire, and are considered subjects of that country, with which this country is at war; and they further claim that they have been advised that by reason of their German citizenship they are considered alien enemies, and are not permitted under the act to complete their contract and convey their property. . . . It is true that some text-books on international law and some of the older cases hold that the natives, citizens, and subjects of one belligerent are enemies of the country with which it is at war; and that such persons cannot ordinarily trade in or transact business within such country. The more modern, and I believe the better, view is, that since the Congress has assumed jurisdiction over the subject and has enacted legislation with respect thereto, such legislation, and not the theories and speculations of writers, however eminent, should control in determining the status of aliens while this country is at war. Our statute relating to aliens was enacted in 1817 to correct conditions growing out of the War for Independence and the War of 1812 with Great Britain. This act, among other things, expressly authorizes aliens to purchase and hold real estate in this state (C. S. p. 39), and while it prohibits an alien from purchasing lands while this country is at war with any state or power of which such alien is a subject, yet such purchases made by an alien (as in this case) before the war or after it are permitted, and an alien may 'have and to hold the same to him or her and his or her heirs and assigns forever, as fully to all intents and purposes as any natural-born citizen of the United States may or can do.' And it will be noted that while there are restrictions imposed upon the purchase of real estate during the war, no such restraint is imposed on the sale or alienation of real estate, no matter when acquired. Congress in the Trading with the Enemy Act, aside from the power thereby vested in the President, has made the test of enemy character depend upon residence, or official or agency relation, and not upon nationality, or mere alienage. The President by his proclamation has extended the ban upon trading only to such aliens as have been or may be arrested and interned in the custody of the War Department for the duration of the war; and with his intimate knowledge of the situation, he has not yet found it necessary to include within the meaning of the word 'enemy' other individuals who may be natives, citizens, or subjects of the German Empire. As a result of this forbearance, aliens not so classified have been at liberty to continue in the pursuit of their business and trade, including the receipt, banking and expenditure of money belonging to them, without the slightest governmental interference or supervision. Such being the case, there is no reason apparent why an exception should be made with respect to transactions relating to real estate; and if such an exception is to be made, I cannot think of a satisfactory reason why the courts should assume the prerogative of making it, as the Congress has expressly vested that power in the President; and we require no assurance that he will wisely exercise it when and as the exigencies of the situation call upon him for action."

"Alien enemy."—In Lutz v. Van Heynigen Brokerage Co., (Ala. 1918) 80 So. 72, it was said with respect to a German subject who had resided in the United States and who had been interned: "As affecting civil rights and liabilities, it is said to be clear law that it is not his nationality, but the fact that he carries on business or voluntarily resides in an enemy country, that makes an alien enemy. Porter v. Frendenberg, 1 L. R. K. B. Div. [1915] 857. Therefore plaintiff was not to be considered as an alien enemy prior to his internment; but consideration of the causes for which such internment may have been ordered lead to the conclusion that plaintiff's internment reduced him substantially to the status of an alien enemy as defined above."

This section recognizes residence or doing business in hostile territory as the test of an alien enemy for the purpose of trading. Krachanake v. Acme Mfg. Co., (1918) 175 N. C. 435, 95 S. E. 851, Ann. Cas. 1918E 340, L. R. A. 1918E 801.

Who is alien enemy.—A citizen of Germany, who came to this country in 1885 and then took out his first naturalization papers, which were subsequently destroyed by fire, who, previous to and at the time of the declaration of war with Germany, was working for one of the packing house companies of Kansas City, and who immediately after that declaration was, by the federal authorities, given a permit to reside in the packing house district and to work for the packing house, is not declared to be an "alien enemy" by the act of Congress of October 6, 1917 (chapter 106, § 2, 40 Stat. 411) and is entitled to prosecute an action under the Workmen's Compensation Act of this state. Wolf v. Cudahy Packing Co., (1919) 105 Kan. 317, 182 Pac. 395.

Plaintiff, a citizen of Germany residing in this state and earning his living here, sued for damages sustained by reason of a collision between his motorcycle and an automobile van. At the trial it appeared that he was born in Germany, had never been naturalized in this country, and was living and working in this state as aforesaid. It was held that it was improper to nonsuit him on the ground that he was an alien enemy, first, because the defense had not been pleaded or otherwise entered upon the record; secondly, because the alien enemy rule is not applicable to a citizen of an enemy country peaceably residing and doing business here with the implied license and permission of our government; there being nothing to show that he was within any of the classes denounced by the Trading with the Enemy Act or any presidential proclamation. Heiler v. Goodman's Motor Express Van, etc., Co., (1918) 92 N. J. L. 415, 105 Atl. 233, 3 A. L. R. 336.

Infant son.—In Krachanake v. Acme Mfg. Co., (1918) 175 N. C. 435, 95 S. E. 851, Ann. Cas. 1918E 340, L. R. A. 1918E 801, it was held that an infant son, residing in North Carolina with his father, a native of Austria-Hungary, a country with which the United States was at war, but who himself was born in Canada, was not an "alien enemy," and could sue in that state. It was further held that his father could bring the action, as next friend, because a next friend was not a party in the legal sense. The court said: "The first question presented by the appeal is as to the right of the plaintiff, a native of Austria-Hungary, and resident in this state, to maintain an action in our courts, as next friend, to recover damages for personal injury to his infant son. The plaintiff left Hungary fifteen years ago, and since then has lived two years in Ohio, eight years in Canada, and five years in this state. There is neither allegation nor evidence that he has been guilty of any act or utterance unfriendly to the United States, and, so far as the record discloses, he is a quiet law-abiding laborer. He comes, however, within the classification of an alien enemy, because the country to which he owes allegiance is at war with the United States; and conceding that his son, who was seven years old at the time of his injury, stands in the same relation to this government as his father, which does not seem to be the American rule (12 Mod. Am. L. 143; Case of Carl Gundlich, 12 Mod. Am. L. 698), can the action be maintained?

"The question is new in this court, but it has been considered so frequently and with such unanimity of opinion in England and America, and the conclusion reached has been so clearly recognized by the President in his proclamation after the declaration of war against Germany and Austria-Hungary, and by Congress in the Trading with the Enemy Act, that but little is left for us to do except to give the result of our investigations. The statement is often made by the law-writers that an alien enemy cannot sue, and upon the ground that to permit a recovery would strengthen and add to the resources of the hostile government, and correspondingly weaken our government; but when reference is had to the facts it is found that the principle is predicated upon residence in the country at war with ours, and that it has no application to the alien enemy resident here, who may be interned and held as a prisoner of war without the right to apply for the writ of habeas corpus, and whose property may be taken into custody by the government. See note to Daimler Co. v. Continental Tyre Co., Ann. Cas. 1917C 193, where the authorities are collected.

"The test, therefore, of the right to sue, which has been universally adopted, is residence, and not nationality, where the alien enemy is and not what he is. This was substantially declared in 1697 in Wells v. Williams, 1 Ld. Raym. 282, and was approved in 1813 in an opinion by Chancellor Kent in Clarke v. Morey, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 70, and in 1915 in an opinion by Lord Reading, Chief Justice of England, in Porter v. Frendenberg, 1 K. B. 857, Ann. Cas. 1917C 215. The learning upon the question will be found in these two opinions, and in an interesting article in the Yale Law Journal of December, 1917, written by Mr. Picciotto of the Inner Temple, London, and in the notes to Daimler Co. v. Continental Tyre Co., Ann. Cas. 1917C 193. . . .

"The father is not, however, a party in the legal sense. He is an officer appointed by the court to protect the interest of his son, who is the real plaintiff (Hockoday v. Lawrence, (1911) 156 N. C. 322, 72 S. E. 387); and the son is ten years of age, and was born in Canada, a province of Great Britain, with which we are in alliance; and, while most of the European countries have adopted the rule that nationality follows parentage, 'the United States and Great Britain follow the older territorial rule, according to which nationality is primarily determined by the place of birth.' 12 Mod. Am. L. 143."

"Trade."—Notwithstanding that the word "trade" has been defined to include the payment of a debt and the receipt of property, before the performance of the act became illegal, it must be in behalf of, or for the benefit of, the alien enemy. Keppelmann v. Keppelmann, (1918) 89 N. J. Eq. 390, 105 Atl. 140.

1918 Supp., p. 850, sec. 4.

Suspension of operation of act.—Communication with the enemy relating to routine matters of business was lawful under this Act for a period of thirty days after October 6, 1917. U. S. v. Meinel, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 396.

1918 Supp., p. 853, sec. 7 (a).

Failure to report to Alien Property Custodian—jurisdiction of offense.—The duty imposed to make report to the Alien Property Custodian, involves the duty to make such report in the district of his residence; and a failure to make it was an offense against the United States, committed in that district. Rumely v. McCarthy, (1919) 250 U. S. 283, 39 S. Ct. 483, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 565.

1918 Supp., p. 854, sec. 7 (b).

Power of alien enemy to defend.—The provisions of this section empowering an alien enemy to "defend by counsel any suit in equity or action at law which may be brought against him" includes an heir at law who is one of the contestants in a proceeding brought by an executrix for the proof and allowance of a will. Riddell v. Fuhrman, (Mass. 1919) 123 N. E. 237, wherein the court said: "If it be assumed in favor of the appellants, but without so deciding, that a petition for the proof and allowance of a will of a deceased citizen of this commonwealth is 'a suit or action at law or in equity' (Peters v. Peters, (1851) 8 Cush. (Mass.) 529), and that the Trading with the Enemy Act is binding upon the courts of this commonwealth because enacted pursuant to the war powers of the federal government (Selective Draft Law Cases, (1918) 245 U. S. 366, 38 S. Ct. 159, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 349, L. R. A. 1918C 361, Ann. Cas. 1918B 856), it is plain that the words of that act not only do not prohibit the prosecution of this petition to a final decision, but expressly authorize the one of the appellants who is an alien enemy to appear and defend her rights through counsel."

Stay of distribution proceeding.—Where in a distribution proceeding the published notice summons all persons claiming an interest to admit or deny the claim of heirship advanced by the petitioner, an alien enemy is entitled to appear and obtain a continuance until the end of the war. In re Henrichs, (Cal. 1919) 179 Pac. 883.

Staying application for administration.—An application for the appointment of an administrator will be stayed where it appears that the deceased left no property in the state and that the only reason for the appointment of an administrator is to prosecute a suit for damages for the benefit of heirs who are alien enemies resident in enemy country. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Blankfield, (Tex. 1919) 211 S. W. 808. The court said: "The prosecution of this proceeding by an alien enemy being against public policy, it is the duty of the courts to stay the proceedings when the fact that the plaintiff is an alien enemy is made to appear at any stage of the proceedings, and it is not necessary that any plea or exception to the proceedings should have been made by the defendant. While the court, upon the fact being made to appear that the plaintiff was an alien enemy, might be authorized to dismiss the proceedings, the less harsh practice of suspending the proceedings until the end of the war is now the proper practice. Watts v. Unione Austriaca Di Navigazione, 248 U. S. 9, 39 S. Ct. 1, 63 L. ed. —."

Compelling issuance of fishing license.—Under the proclamations of the President as to the privileges accorded to resident natives of Austria-Hungary during the war a declarant alien who is a native of that country is entitled to a fishing license under the Washington statute and may sue for mandamus to enforce his right thereto. State v. Darwin, (1918) 102 Wash. 402, 173 Pac. 29, L. R. A. 1918F 1012.

Order in writ of error in suit by alien enemy.—Where pending a writ of error to review a judgment, the outbreak of war makes the plaintiff an alien enemy, the judgment will be modified to require payment to the clerk of the trial court, to be by him turned over to the Alien Property Custodian. Birge-Forbes Co. v. Heye, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 636, 160 C. C. A. 536.

1918 Supp., p. 856, sec. 7 (c).

Bank deposits.—"Money" undoubtedly, under some circumstances, would have a very broad meaning, but under this section of the Act, whatever else might come under the definition of money, it is plain that, where the relation of bank depositor and bank exists, an ordinary deposit is not money within the meaning of this section. American Exch. Bank v. Palmer, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 680.

A debt may possibly be designated as property in the sense of the assets of an estate or of a creditor, but as used in this section of the Act the word "property" undoubtedly refers to a tangible res, or some evidence of debt, or share in property, such perhaps as, on the one hand, a note or bill of exchange, and, on the other hand, a certificate of stock or an undivided interest in real property, but a debt arising out of the obligation of a bank to a depositor is held not to be property. American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Palmer, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 680.

1918 Supp., p. 856, sec. 8 (c).

Alien custodian's authority and right.—Under Trading with the Enemy Act, and executive order of February 26, 1918, the Alien Property Custodian's authority is over the property of and interests of alien enemies in property, and not in property in which they have an interest, so that the custodian's interest in the right of alien enemies to legacies is to receive such shares from the trustees upon giving the refunding bonds required of beneficiaries to protect creditors and executors, since they are not protected by section 7, subdivisions c, e. Keppelmann v. Keppelmann, (1918) 89 N. J. Eq. 390, 105 Atl. 140.

1918 Supp., p. 858, sec. 9.

Purpose of section.—"This section was intended to cover and include property the title to which was in an enemy, and which had been transferred or paid to the custodian, either voluntarily or following a requirement. It is the citizen's right in enemy's property in the custodian's hands that is being considered. It is to prevent placing enemy property beyond the reach of American citizens or nonenemies, who may have a right or an interest in or a lien upon the property of an enemy in the custodian's possession. The section was not intended to include nonenemies owning property in the United States in which no enemy had an interest, and which therefore was not required to be reported or transferred to the custodian." American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Palmer, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 680.

Who is debtor.—Where cotton was sold and the proceeds of the sale were deposited in a bank for the benefit of the owner of the cotton, when determined, the money was declared to belong to the owner, who held title under an assignment of bills of lading, and the obligation of the bank to pay it over to the owner created the relation of debtor and creditor. City Nat. Bank v. Dresdner Bank, (S. D. Ala. 1919) 255 Fed. 225.

1918 Supp., p. 859, sec. 10.

Continuance at request of alien enemy plaintiff of a suit begun before the war will be refused where the plaintiff has been interned. Lutz v. Van Heynigen Brokerage Co., (Ala. 1918) 80 So. 72, wherein it was said: "In the present case, it has been observed, an alien enemy plaintiff invokes the power of the court to order a suspension for the duration of the war. Plaintiff, by reason of his nationality, apprehends a serious handicap in the prosecution of his suit, and suggests on appeal that the policy which allows him to further maintain an action begun before a state of war was declared should in fairness grant his motion for a suspension, and this suggestion he seeks to reinforce by reference to the generally unsatisfactory nature of a showing for an absent witness and the necessity for his personal presence at the trial. This statement of plaintiff's contention and the adjudications to which we have referred suffice to show that the policy with which those adjudications were concerned has no application to the question raised by plaintiff's motion in the case under consideration. That peculiar policy laid thus out of view, we do not perceive any sufficient reason for holding that the trial court in its action upon plaintiff's motion should have treated it differently from the motion of any other plaintiff who, pending the trial of his suit, is so unfortunate—we speak not of the fortune of the government, whether good or bad—as to subject himself to confinement in a 'penitentiary, prison, jail, military camp or other place of detention.'"

1918 Supp., p. 865, sec. 17.

Determination of what is enemy property.—The congressional assumption, as shown by this section providing that federal courts may make orders and decrees necessary to enforce the Act, is that the courts should determine what is or what is not enemy property. Keppelmann v. Keppelmann, (1918) 89 N. J. Eq. 390, 105 Atl. 140.

Interpleader.—A bank may maintain a bill of interpleader where money deposited with it by an American citizen is claimed by the Alien Property Custodian as belonging to an alien enemy. Regarding such right of the bank it was said: "Under this section, this court no doubt could have made a formal rule to cover procedure in just such a case as this, and what can be done by rule obviously can be done by decree. If on facts of the character set forth in this complaint, procedure by bill of interpleader is sanctioned, the purposes of the statute are satisfied, and the rights of American citizens safeguarded. . . . The amount on deposit with the plaintiff bank is in every sense captured. The bank seeks to deposit that amount in court, where it cannot be withdrawn without an appropriate decree of a court of competent jurisdiction. If the court should find that the deposit is enemy-owned, then the amount representing that deposit can never reach the enemy. If the court, on the other hand, should find that the deposit belongs to defendant Simon, an American citizen, the situation will be that Simon, nevertheless, cannot have this fund pending a final decree, and thus the United States will be protected against this resource reaching the enemy." American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Falmer, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 680.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

Vol. IX, p. 834, sec. 7. [First ed., vol. VII, p. 382.]

"Public moneys."—Moneys received by the Federal Reserve Board under section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act of December 23, 1913, ch. 6 (see vol. 6, p. 826) are "public moneys" within the meaning of this section and section 10 of this Act (see vol. 9, p. 805), and consequently are subject to audit by one of the auditors of the Treasury Department. (1914) 30 Op. Atty.-Gen. 308.

WAR DEPARTMENT AND MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT

Vol. IX, p. 958, sec. 1199. [First ed., vol. VII, p. 995.]

Power to reverse not given.—The word revise, as here used, does not confer the power to reverse. "It is not reasonable to suppose that the exercise of such an important power would be conferred in vague and doubtful terms, or that it lurks behind the word 'revise.' Applying the rule 'noscitur a sociis,' the word 'revise' is to be read in connection with the words that precede and follow it, and, thus read, the duty it imposes is analogous to the duty of receiving and recording the proceedings. Had it been intended by the statute to introduce such a marked innovation into the pre-existing functions of that officer, and to convert a staff officer or the head of a bureau into a judicial officer having the ultimate decision in all cases of military offenses, the power to affirm, reverse, or modify the proceedings of courts-martial would have been lodged in plain and explicit language. The language employed is more appropriate to indicate the discharge of clerical duties.

"It is not intended to intimate that it is not the province and the duty of the Judge Advocate General to revise the proceedings of courts-martial so far as may be necessary to rectify errors of form, and to point out errors of substance which, in his judgment, should be corrected by the proper authorities, nor is it doubted that, as to all such topics as are within the purview of his official scrutiny, his opinion is entitled to that respectful consideration which is due to the dignity and importance of the position which he holds." Ex p. Mason, (N. D. N. Y. 1882) 256 Fed. 384.

Enlistment of minors—Enlistment in National Guard.—Assuming that this section is applicable to enlistment in the National Guard, its effect is, at most, to make such enlistment voidable by the parent. It does not make the enlistment void, and where, after the son becomes eighteen years old, the National Guard unit is mustered into the service of the United States, the father cannot secure his discharge. Reed v. Cushman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 872, 164 C. C. A. 88, wherein the court said: "If the petitioner could have avoided it, he made no attempt whatever to do so while Cushman remained under the age of 18 years, although there can be no doubt from the evidence before us that he knew Cushman had enlisted as early as April 17, 1917, more than two months before his eighteenth birthday. . . . We are unable to agree with the petitioner's contention that his right to avoid his son's enlistment, whether in the National Guard or the Army of the United States, remained open to him from March 8, 1917, until his son should reach the age of 21. Congress has declared that the Militia of the United States shall consist of all able-bodied citizens between the ages of 18 and 45, and that the National Guard, being one of three classes into which such Militia is divided, shall consist of the regularly enlisted Militia between the ages before specified. See sections 57 and 58 of the National Defense Act. Members of the National Guard are subject to draft into the military service of the United States in time of war, and when so drafted.

but not before, they become part of the Army of the United States and stand discharged from the Militia. Sections 1, 111, of the same act. The right of a father to the services of his minor son are subject to these provisions. In view of them it may be doubted whether enlistment in the National Guard, without mustering into the military service of the United States, can be regarded as an enlistment such as section 27 of the act referred to. It would seem that such enlistment does no more than enroll the enlisted man in a class subject in time of war to be mustered into the military service of the United States, if over the age of 18 years at the time of such mustering in. After the father of a minor under 18 has knowingly permitted his son to remain a member of such class until after he has reached the prescribed age at which its members become subject to be mustered into the military service of the United States, and until after such mustering in has then taken place, we think that, even if he might have avoided the original enlistment in the National Guard, he had no right to avoid the different status later created after the age of eighteen had been reached."

Promotion of army officers.—This Act does not make it obligatory upon the President to promote to a vacancy existing in the grade of lieutenant-colonel the senior officer in the next lower grade, if, in his opinion, the record of the officer has been such as to indicate that he is disqualified for promotion. (1913) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 177.

Vol. IX, p. 1095, sec. 1. [Transportation of troops in time of war, etc.] [First ed., 1918 Supp., p. 975.]

Purpose.—An inspection of the whole statute, as well as of this clause, shows that the purpose and intent of the statute was to provide for the speedy and expeditious transportation of troops, war material, and equipment; and for that purpose to give possession of the systems of transportation to the government, through the Secretary of War, with power to use such systems for such transportation to the exclusion, as far as may be necessary, of all other traffic, either in passenger or freight thereon. U. S. Railroad Administration v. Burch, (E. D. S. C. 1918) 254 Fed. 140.

Extent of President's powers as judicial question.—The extent of the President's powers is a judicial question. "All acts done and all property taken possession of within the adjudicated extent of the powers allowed might be a ministerial question; but as to the extent of those powers, and whether the powers were given, must always, under the Constitution of the United States, remain a judicial question, and one to be decided by the courts of the land." U. S. Railroad Administration v. Burch, (E. D. S. C. 1918) 254 Fed. 140.

Property which may be taken possession of.—"It is evident that the purpose of the statute giving such enlarged powers, to be exercised during the emergency of war, was not for the purpose of taking possession of any property which might be owned by the different corporations operating and owning systems of transportation, and which property was wholly independent of transportation uses, and neither incidental nor necessary for them, but was simply to allow the government to get control of everything necessary or appropriate for transportation purposes. . . .

"The position of counsel for the complainant is that the statute and the proclamation must be considered to include all property of a railroad. If this contention were correct, it would cover all moneys of the railroad in its possession, when possession was taken under the proclamation of the President. It would also cover all personal property, including stocks in industrial corporations, if any such were owned by the railroad at that time.

"A fair construction of the statutes, and of the proclamation itself, however, would not appear to warrant any such inference that their provisions include such property. The language appears to be clearly limited to transportation systems, and to property which was used for transportation purposes, including therein all property fairly incidental or necessary for use in effecting such purposes. Separated, disconnected, unutilized tracts of land would not appear to come within this definition." U. S. Railroad Administration v. Burch, (E. D. S. C. 1918) 254 Fed. 140.

For cases construing Presidential proclamations regarding federal control, see Dooley v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (D. C. Minn. 1918) 250 Fed. 142; U. S. Railroad Administration v. Burch, (E. D. S. C. 1918) 254 Fed. 140.

Vol. IX, p. 1108, sec. 1224. [First ed., vol. VII, p. 1010.]

Leave of absence to enable officer to undertake prohibited employment.—The Secretary of War is prohibited by this section from granting leave of absence to an officer of the Engineer Corps in order that he may be employed by the Interstate Commerce Commission to assist in the valuation of properties of common carriers under the Act of March 1, 1913, ch. 92 (see vol. 4, p. 495). (1913) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 184.

Vol. IX, p. 1136, sec. 1. [First ed., 1918 Supp., p. 1010.]

I. Construction of Selective Service Act.

1. Right to compel military service.
2. Persons subject to conscription.
3. Exemptions.
4. Determination of liability to conscription.
5. Offenses against Conscription Law.

I. CONSTRUCTION OF SELECTIVE SERVICE ACT

1. Right to Compel Military Service (p. 1139)

Constitutionality of Act.—To same effect as original annotation, see U. S. v. Olson, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 253 Fed. 233; Sugar v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 74, 164 C. C. A. 186, affirming (E. D. Mich. 1917) 243 Fed. 423.

In Frama v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 28, 166 C. C. A. 356, it was contended that a conviction for a conspiracy to evade the provisions of section 6, infra, by holding a mass meeting, making speeches thereat and distributing pamphlets, violated the constitutional guaranty of free speech. Answering this contention, the court said: "The free speech secured federally by the First Amendment means complete immunity for the publication by speech or print of whatever is not harmful in character, when tested by such standards as the law affords. For these standards we must look to the common-law rules in force when the constitutional guaranties were established and in reference to which they were adopted. By legislative action the boundaries of unpunishable speech have doubtless and often been much enlarged; but the constitutional limit remains unchanged, and what the legislature has done it can undo. Legal talk-liberty never has meant, however, 'the unrestricted right to say what one pleases at all times and under all circumstances.'"

In general.—This Act is supplemental to the Act of June 3, 1916. It authorizes voluntary enlistments in all the military branches of the government, and also authorizes the President to draft into the military service of the United States the various military organizations and individuals falling within the classes therein prescribed, "for the period of the existing emergency." Like the Act of June 3, 1916, it mentions the various military organizations, and distinguishes between the regular army and the other military organizations. It is apparent that Congress by the passage of this Act recognized a dividing line between the professional soldier who serves "in peace and war" and the man who enlists for the term of "the emergency" under the Act of May 18, 1917. State v. Moorhead, (1918) 102 Neb. 276, 167 N. W. 70.

Necessity of registrants remaining at homes.—This Act does not require persons registering thereunder to remain in their permanent homes and actual places of legal residence until drafted into the military service of the United States, nor did the selective service regulations prescribed by the President make such a requirement. U. S. v. Wheeler, (D. C. Ariz. 1918) 254 Fed. 611.

2. Persons Subject to Conscription (p. 1140)

To same effect as second paragraph of original annotation, see Ex p. Lamachia, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 814.

Registrant's status.—In Ex p. McDonald, (E. D. Wis. 1918) 253 Fed. 99, regarding the status of registrants, it was said: "The selective service law had a purpose of enabling the raising of an army, and it defines certain persons who are liable to be called. It does not give them any status, as a military status, solely by virtue of their being within certain ages. They retain the ordinary status which they have as civilians and citizens unless and until it is changed through the operation of law. In other words, the law defines those who are liable to selection, and that, by necessary implication, means that when they are selected as prescribed by the law, they enter the service. Unless and until they are selected, they are not in the service, and enjoy their ordinary civil rights and privileges; and if this be true, it must be true of those who have never been called, and of those, who, having been called, are not selected, either because of deferment or rejection."

See to same effect, Ex p. Henry, (E. D. Wis. 1918) 253 Fed. 208.

Classification.—Where a registrant, after being inducted into military service, is discharged from service through error, he should be placed by his local board in the same position in which he was prior to such discharge. Ex p. Fischer, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 253 Fed. 159.

"Regular or ordained minister of religion."—Where a person has been granted an exemption as "a regular or ordained minister of religion" to which he is not entitled, it is not only within the power but it is the duty of the local board properly to classify the registrant when its attention is called to the error. Ex p. Short, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 839.

Marriage subsequent to registration will not operate to defeat the government's right to his services. Ex p. Tinkoff, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 254 Fed. 222, affirmed (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 225, 165 C. C. A. 513.

3. Exemptions (p. 1141)

Regular or ordained minister of religion.—A person is not entitled to an exemption as "a regular or ordained minister of religion" where it appears that at the date of his questionnaire he had not been engaged in ministerial work for several months. Ex p. Short, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 839.

"Dependent" defined.—"A dependent is one who is sustained by another; one who relies upon another for support; a person who is not self-sustaining." U. S. v. McHugh, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 253 Fed. 224.

A person is not a dependent if he has money or means from which he could get support, or has property which could be converted into means of support or is able to support himself by physical labor irrespective of means or money. U. S. v. McHugh, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 253 Fed. 224.

Persons having dependents.—A registrant who has persons designated by this Act dependent upon him for support is entitled to exemption. U. S. v. McHugh, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 253 Fed. 224.

Person convicted of crime.—To same effect as original annotation, see Ex p. Henry, (E. D. Wis. 1918) 253 Fed. 208.

Proof of alienage.—"The Selective Service Act provides that all male persons within the prescribed ages shall be subject to registration, 'and all persons so registered shall be and remain subject to draft into the forces hereby authorized, unless exempted or excused therefrom as in this act provided.' In brief, the act makes persons of the prescribed age subject to draft, unless exempted or excused by the designated authority. It does not follow that a nondeclarant alien is ineligible to military duty under the act, or that he is automatically exempted from service. The facts which bring him within the exempted class must be affirmatively proved by him before his local board, the tribunal created by the act, to which is given power to hear and determine, subject to review by appeal to a district board, 'all questions of exemption under this act,' and the decision of the district board is made final." Napole v. Rowe, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 832.

Effect of improper refusal of exemption.—Where a registrant was admittedly within the class of persons liable for service under this Act, his claim that he was wrongfully held for service because he was not granted exemption based on the ground of the dependency of his wife on him for support was held not to relieve him of his obligation to obey army orders or to observe its discipline or from liability to punishment for disregarding them. Ex p. Tinkoff, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 254 Fed. 912.

4. Determination of Liability to Conscription (p. 1141)

Power of boards generally.—It is evident that Congress intended to give the local boards the widest possible latitude for the purpose of informing themselves concerning the truth or falsity of the statements made under oath by registrants, and that the boards are not to be in any way restricted to what would be competent legal evidence in any judicial proceeding. Brown v. Spelman, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 215.

Jurisdiction of district boards.—Under the Selective Service regulations local and district boards have jurisdiction of a registrant, and retain their power to hear and determine matters relating to him, up to the time fixed in the notice of the local board requiring him to report for service. Accordingly where the decision of a local board inducting a registrant into military service, is reversed by the district board before the time when he is required by the local board's notice to report, he cannot thereafter be arrested by order of the local board for failure to report. Ex p. McDonald, (E. D. Wis. 1918) 253 Fed. 99. Regarding the jurisdiction of district boards, the court said: "That brings us to the question as to whether the district board did have jurisdiction in this matter. I am ready to hold that it did, upon two grounds, one of which is easy: First, the practical concession of all parties here that there is nothing in law which forbade the district board originally to hear and determine this application for deferred classification at the time it in fact heard and determined it; secondly, jurisdiction appears entirely clear under the regulations issued by the Provost Marshal General and by the President. Under such regulations induction into service contemplated by the law is the point whereat the jurisdiction of these two boards ends, and, as such, is the time and hour fixed in the notice given by the local board. That regulation, of course, is supportive of the very idea to which I have adverted, namely, order, harmony, and effectiveness. It may be an interesting question, not relevant here, whether from and after that time, and prior to taking the oath as a soldier, the registrant is in fact a full-fledged soldier. But it is entirely clear that at no time, prior to the actual induction defined in the regulations, is the power of these boards within their respective jurisdictions to hear and determine matters pertaining to the case of a registrant wholly cut off. There is no statutory or other bar. Indeed, the regulations, wisely and in the interest of justice, seek to preserve and retain that power until the last moment. So I am ready to determine, both upon the concession and upon the record returned here, that there is nothing whatever in the law or the regulations which cuts off the power of the district board to exercise its original jurisdiction at any time prior to the induction which is defined in the regulation, namely, the hour specified in the notice of the local board. Notwithstanding some little contention respecting the exercise of jurisdiction informally, thereby ignoring regulations prescribing time within which a thing shall be done as a matter of practice or procedure, I consider it of no moment here. Such regulations are directory. The mere fact that the district board entertained this application prior to the time specified in the notice and made its determination prior to that time operated, in my judgment, under the very express terms of the regulations wholly to supersede the determination of the local board."

Review by courts—Generally.—Courts are bound to respect the determination made by the functionaries created under the Selective Service Law on all matters within their jurisdiction and this rule limits the courts at the outset to determine and ascertain whether there has been action under the law, and secondly what is the quality and effect of that action in so far as it affects rights appertaining to the individual. Ex p. McDonald, (E. D. Wis. 1918) 253 Fed. 99. See also Brown v. Spellman, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 215.

Where inquiry is made of the court on behalf of a citizen who seeks to prosecute a remedy which, if granted, will lead to his liberty, the court is limited to asking the question: "Have these boards acted; and if so, how? To what effect has the law been applied to the individual?" Ex p. McDonald, (E. D. Wis. 1918) 253 Fed. 99.

The determination of a local board, in any case where it has authority to act, is final, except by appeal to the District Board or to the President. Ex p. Platt, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 413.

The action of the local board becomes final as against the registrant under the regulations, unless appealed from within five days, but does not become final as against the government at any time. If the local board has made an error in a registrant's favor, and awarded him a deferred classification to which his questionnaire shows he was not entitled, there is nothing in the law or the regulations which would prevent the board from correcting that error, if and when it is called to its attention. The result of such procedure would only be that for the period of time during which the error remained uncorrected the registrant would enjoy a deferred classification and an exemption from duty to which he was not entitled, a situation about which he could not be heard to complain. Ex p. Short, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 839.

It is only on a showing of denial of a fair hearing or gross abuse of discretion in the local or district board that resort may be had to the courts. Napore v. Rowe, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 832.

Where the members of the local board acted strictly in accordance with the law in holding a registrant for military service, their determination will not be interfered with by the courts. Brown v. Spellman, (D. C. E. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 215.

If the local board has made an error in a registrant's favor, and awarded him a deferred classification, to which his questionnaire shows he was not entitled, there is said to be nothing in the law or the regulations which would prevent the board from correcting the error when it is called to its attention. Ex p. Short, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 839.

In U. S. v. Rauch, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 814, on the question of the right to review by certiorari the action of the local board as to classification, the court said: "In conclusion, it is held that no opinion is expressed as to the general right of the District Court to issue independent writs of certiorari for any purpose other than to test jurisdiction; second, that there is no jurisdiction to issue such a writ against a local board created by the selective draft statute, because it is an executive body; third, there is nothing in this record to show any error on the part of the board for division No. 157, except one of fact, and there is no power in this court to substitute its own opinion upon a question of fact for that of said local board; and, fourth, because under the circumstances shown the writ should be denied as a matter of discretion." See also In re Ritzerow, (E. D. Wis. 1918) 252 Fed. 865.

"The decision of the district board is made final by the act itself, and the courts can interfere with their action, if at all, only when the registrant has been denied a fair hearing, when he has not been given an opportunity to be heard at all, or when the action of the board is so manifestly unfair and unjust as to make it apparent that the rights of the registrant have been disregarded, and that he has been clearly wronged." Bottano v. District Board, (N. D. Cal. 1918) 250 Fed. 812.

Failure of a person to exercise his right to appeal to the district board is of itself a bar to relief by habeas corpus. Ex p. Timkoff, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 254 Fed. 222, affirmed (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 225, 165 C. C. A. 513.

Failure to comply with regulations promulgated by President.—Section 61 of the regulations promulgated by the President November 8, 1917, under authority of the Act of Congress approved May 18, 1917, known as the Selective Service Law, provided as follows:

"Section 61. Cancellation of Registration of Persons Not Subject to Registration.—Whenever a claim shall be made to a local board that, through error or fraud, a person is registered who is not subject to registration the board shall require the person to submit his claim in writing, together with such proof as he may care to offer. The local board shall forward the claim and the proof with its finding of fact and recommendation to the adjutant general of the state, who shall examine the proof, and, if he is of the opinion that the person was not subject to registration, shall direct the local board to cancel the registration and amend its records accordingly."

In this case application was made for a writ of certiorari or mandamus, directing the defendants, and each of them, to strike the name of the plaintiff from the registration lists of one of the local boards and asking that a writ of prohibition be issued prohibiting the defendants from certifying the plaintiff to military service. The defendants were the members of local board for division 35 of the city of New York. There was nothing to indicate that the plaintiff had complied with section 61 of the regulations just referred to, and the court refused the application. Brown v. Spelman, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 255 Fed. 863.

Certiorari and habeas corpus.—The courts have uniformly held that all persons, save enemy aliens, within the draft age are subject to the draft, unless exempted or excused therefrom by the local or district board, and that the action of these boards, where there has been a fair hearing, is final, and not subject to review by the courts, either on habeas corpus or certiorari. Ex p. Beales, (S. D. Cal. 1918) 252 Fed. 177.

The determination of the local board will not be interfered with on habeas corpus where it appears that it was based on a hearing on evidence, and the petition does not show that the board disregarded all the evidence before it or that it held an unfair hearing or that it acted on anything except its conclusion on the testimony and the witnesses before it. Ex p. Flatt, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 413.

Claim of alienage.—To same effect as original annotation, see U. S. v. Kinkead, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 692, 162 C. C. A. 654, affirming (D. C. N. J. 1918) 248 Fed. 141 in original annotation; Ex p. Beales, (S. D. Cal. 1918) 252 Fed. 177; Ellen v. Johnson, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 909; Napoleon v. Rowe, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 832.

In Lehto v. Scott, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 767, the facts were as follows: The applicant was drafted into the army in Massachusetts and transferred to Camp Upton, where he had applied for a writ of habeas corpus. It appears that he registered at Prescott, Mass., but left for Maine in order to engage in work in that state, leaving no new address, and therefore failed to receive the notices to appear for examination. Subsequently he returned and endeavored with diligence to submit himself for examination. In order to claim exemption, he sought to prove that he had not intentionally evaded his call under the Selective Draft Law. He was a nondeclarant alien, and claimed that his default in demanding exemption or discharge from the original call should not be enforced against him, even though admitted, inasmuch as he did not intend to default, and inasmuch as his mistake might be attributed to his lack of understanding of English. The court said: "A person who wished to avoid the draft might thus disappear. He might succeed in obtaining an acquittal, if indicted, unless it could be shown that he had knowledge of the law which he evaded. This would not be the usual case, where ignorance of the law could not be urged as an excuse. But the selective portion of the Draft Law is not worded like a statute defining a crime. The Draft Law in effect gives the military authorities the right to take for service every registered person in the United States who does not claim exemption or secure discharge according to the machinery of the Draft Law itself. It does in fact disavow, in section 2, the general purpose of impressing nondeclarant aliens into service; but in the succeeding sections Congress has plainly intimated that it will use nondeclarant aliens who are willing, and also those who do not comply with the statute in obtaining discharge. Under these circumstances the courts have nothing to do with the release of a person who has failed to comply with the Draft Law and hence is in the army, whether his desire to be released is the result of change of opinion, or the result of unintentional failure on his part to present his application for release in proper form."

Where the evidence showed that the petitioner was a Russian subject who had made no declaration of his intention to become a citizen of the United States, which facts were undisputed, and he made due claim for exemption and filed proper affidavit in support thereof, it was held that the petitioner should be discharged as the local board acted beyond its authority in denying him a hearing, and that, inasmuch as the district board, with which the local board took up the matter, approved of its action an appeal to the district board would have been useless. Ex p. Cohen, (E. D. Va. 1918) 254 Fed. 711.

Waiver of claim of alienage.—Where an alien waived his claim for exemption before the only tribunal empowered to act upon it, and such tribunal having accorded him a fair hearing, and classified him strictly in accordance with the terms of the Act and the regulations made by the President by virtue of the authority conferred upon him, it was held that the court would not interfere on a petition for habeas corpus. Ex p. Beales, (S. D. Cal. 1918) 252 Fed. 177.

A nondeclarant alien who fails to claim exemption before the local board or on appeal to the district board is not entitled to assert it on habeas corpus. U. S. v. Bell, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 248 Fed. 995.

An alien who has not presented to his local board a claim of exemption in accordance with the regulations and who has not availed himself of the privilege accorded by the regulations of applying to the local board to reopen his case is not entitled to habeas corpus, where his only excuse is ignorance of the law and facts and there is no showing of a denial of a fair hearing or abuse of discretion in the local or district board. Ex p. Tinkoff, (N. D. Ill. 1918) 254 Fed. 222, affirmed (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 225, 165 C. C. A. 513; Napoleon v. Rowe, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 250 Fed. 832.

In Ex p. Romano, (D. C. Mass. 1918) 251 Fed. 762, it appeared that an Italian who had not declared his intention to become a citizen, and who, therefore, was not liable to draft, and who had almost from the beginning endeavored, though in an unskilled and inaccurate way, on account of his ignorance of our language and law, to obtain the exemption to which he was entitled, found himself held for military service and charged with desertion for not responding. The court said: "The obligation upon administrative boards, which exercise great powers, subject to but slight restrictions as to procedure and to only a limited review, is very great to deal fairly with the individual concerned, as well as with the public. The strict enforcement of this obligation is the only protection which the individual has against an abuse of such powers. The petitioner was plainly not subject to military service; and he was, without his fault, under great difficulties in understanding and obtaining his rights. Upon the case as a whole it does not seem to me that he has been fairly dealt with by the local board. He would, if not under arrest, be entitled either to a hearing in this court on his right to exemption (Chin Yow v. U. S., 208 U. S. 8, 13, 28 Sup. Ct. 201, 52 L. Ed. 369; Antrim's Case, Fed. Cas. No. 495), or to have these proceedings suspended, and to be discharged, unless accorded a fair hearing by the draft tribunals (U. S. v. Petkos, 214 Fed. 978, 131 C. C. A. 274 [C. C. A. 1st Cir.]). The ultimate question in the case is, therefore, whether the military authorities have the right to hold him for desertion. He was indisputably within the class of persons reached by the act and within the jurisdiction of the tribunals established thereunder. Their notification to report for service related to a matter also within their jurisdiction. Although based on irregular proceedings, it was not void. Until vacated, it was binding on the petitioner. It brought him under the jurisdiction of the military authorities, and rendered him liable to punishment by them for breach of military duty."

Where a person fails to claim exemption as an alien the draft board is without authority to exempt him. Ex p. Tinkoff (N. D. Ill. 1918) 254 Fed. 222, affirmed (C. C. A. 1918) 254 Fed. 225, 165 C. C. A. 513.

Correction of questionnaires.—"The enforcement of the Selective Service Act has not been intrusted to the Judicial Department of our government, or to the courts, but to the War Department. The correction of the questionnaires of registrants, in the absence of fraud, is not for the courts, but for that department of the government having charge of registrations, questionnaires, and exemptions, viz., the War Department." Ex p. Kuswieski, (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 977.

Effect of pardon to one convicted of felony.—Whatever may be the legal effect of a particular pardon, if there is evidence on which the board's conclusions can be supported, namely, proof of a full pardon, the court will not disturb their judgment respecting his liability to conscription and his classification. U. S. v. Commanding Officer of the 78th Div., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 252 Fed. 314.

Injunction.—A district board is a public body exercising quasi judicial functions in passing upon the right of exemption within the provisions of the rules and regulations prescribed by the President and this Act, and therefore a court of chancery has no jurisdiction, by means of injunction, to interfere with the duties of the board. Boniface v. Thompson, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 252 Fed. 878.

The word "liability" is used in section 2 of this Act in its ordinary sense of obligation or responsibility. Ex p. Lamachia, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 250 Fed. 814.

Power of local boards.—The Selective Service Act confers upon the local board merely jurisdiction to determine the questions of exemption and the like of persons within the registrable age who have been duly registered. It confers upon it no authority whatever over persons not within the registrable age, and none to investigate, of its own motion, the question of age of a person who has not registered and to place him upon the draft lists in the event it determines that he is in fact of registrable age.

5. Offenses Against Conscription Law

Failure to register.—Pending a prosecution for failure to register under section 5 of this Act, the defendant is still subject to registration and military service, and his failure to respond to a call after registration renders him a deserter under military law. He was an offender both under the criminal and under the military law of the United States. Which department of the government should first proceed against him was a matter to be settled between them. He had no right to have the criminal case go forward first, if the prosecuting authorities saw fit to allow the military accusations to take precedence. Ex p. Dunn (D. C. Mass. 1918) 250 Fed. 871.

Persons absent from country.—In U. S. v. Scott, (E. D. Wash. 1918) 253 Fed. 281, it was contended that a person subject to registration but who was absent from the United States on registration day and failed to register within five days after his return to this country, as required by section 5 of this Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder, could avoid registering by leaving the country again before the expiration of the five days. The court said: "The sole contention now made in his behalf is that, under the regulations promulgated by the War Department, he was allowed the full period of five days to register after entering the United States, and was guilty of no offense until after the expiration of that period; that during the period thus allowed he was at liberty to again leave the United States and return to the Dominion of Canada, or to any other foreign country, without violating the laws of the United States or the regulations made pursuant thereto, and, having been denied the right to thus leave the country because of his imprisonment and forcible detention, he should be acquitted. With this contention I am unable to agree. The court cannot inquire into the lawfulness of his deportation from the Dominion of Canada. He came into the United States on the 6th day of December, and the duty to register within five days thereafter was absolute and unqualified. That duty he could not shirk or avoid by leaving the country before the expiration of five days, any more than any other citizen could avoid the like duty by leaving the country immediately prior to the 5th day of June, 1917."

A person who fails to register at his place of domicile on the day set for registration, or if absent, fails to register by mail as provided for by the Act, is guilty of a violation thereof, and is not excused from liability by registering in another state. In such a case if his failure to register in the place of domicile was willful he may be convicted, but it is for the jury to say under all the circumstances whether he willfully attempted to evade the registration law. Pass v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 735.

An indictment under this section which contains a statement with reference to the proclamation of the President provided for in section 5 of the Act sufficient to give the defendant all the information and notice required for every purpose is not open to objection on the ground that the proclamation is not set out in full. U. S. v. Olson, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 253 Fed. 233.

Conspiracy—Common design.—In a prosecution for a conspiracy to violate the Selective Service Act "the common design is the essence of the charge, and while it is not necessary, to establish a conspiracy, to prove that two or more persons met together and entered into a formal and explicit agreement or understanding, or that they should directly or by words or in writing state what the unlawful scheme was to be, or the general understanding or detail of the plan or means by which an unlawful combination was to be made effective, if they knowingly work together for a common purpose, and that purpose is the illegal act charged as their object, and if the acts of the parties so dovetail and fit together that the conclusion is inevitable that there was an understanding between them as to the thing to be done, as charged, it would establish a conspiracy." U. S. v. McHugh, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 253 Fed. 224.

Moral turpitude.—The offense of aiding another to avoid registration involves moral turpitude, so that conviction thereof is ground for disbarment. In re Hofstede, (1918) 31 Idaho 448, 173 Pac. 1087.

Alcoholic liquors, prohibition of sale.—"The contention that this statute conflicted with the Conscription Act is without merit. The act of Congress, conferring upon the President authority to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquor within 5 miles from the training camp, did not interfere with the state's police power to establish a 25-mile dry zone around the camp. The state legislature had in mind the civilian as well as the soldier, in abolishing the danger of the blights of intoxicating liquor. Thousands of the state's young citizens had been taken from their homes to the camp. The General Assembly thought the law would have to supply the want, in some measure, of the deterring influence of the home and family; that 25 miles would not be at all too far to remove the temptation, nor too far for the arm of the law to reach, to lay the hand upon the blind tiger. Nothing in the act of Congress interfered with the exercise of the General Assembly's judgment in that respect." State v. Lahiff, (1919) 144 La. 362, 80 So. 590.

Indictment—Negating exceptions.—All exceptions contained in this Act which qualify the general provisions are sufficiently stated in an indictment which charges that the accused was a male person between the ages of 21 and 30 years, that he was a resident of the district wherein the board sat for registration and that he willfully failed and refused to present himself for registration at the time and place indicated, and further that he was not at that time "an officer or enlisted man of the regular army, or the navy, or of the Marine Corps of the United States, and not being then and there an officer or an enlisted man of the National Guard or Naval Militia in the service of the United States, or of the Officers' Reserve Corps in the service of the United States, and not being then and there in any manner exempted or excused from registering under the terms of the aforesaid act of Congress." Furthermore, there is no necessity of averring in the indictment that the accused was in good health, inasmuch as there is no exception of that character named in the statute, though at the trial under such an indictment evidence of bad health and consequent inability to get to the place of registration might have been offered to show that the failure to attend and register was not "willful" within the meaning of the statute. Nor need the exact age of the accused be alleged. Sugar v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 74, 164 C. C. A. 186, affirming (E. D. Mich. 1917) 243 Fed. 423.

Effect of overt act.—An indictment which charges that defendant conspired with members of a draft board to violate the provisions of section 6 of the Selective Service Act charges the commission of an offense against the United States, and where an overt act is alleged in pursuance of and to effect the object of the conspiracy it is not necessary to allege in what manner the overt act would tend to affect the object of the conspiracy. Gruber v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 474, 166 C. C. A. 550.

Prosecution on information.—In denying the contention of the accused that under the fifth amendment to the Constitution a prosecution under section 12 could only be by indictment the court in U. S. v. Nelson, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 889, said: "The constitutional amendment relied upon by the defendant, by its very language does not require an indictment, even for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger. This gives the government the right, in time of war, to prosecute by information a violation of section 12 of the Selective Service Law, even if such a violation be held to be an infamous crime, for such a crime is a case arising in the land or naval forces in actual service in time of war. The Fifth Amendment does not provide that the cases must be against the land or naval forces. It is clearly much broader and refers to such crimes as involve the land or naval forces in their origin. Section 12 of the Selective Service Law forbids the sale of intoxicating liquor to a man in uniform in the military service of the United States, and therefore a violation of its provisions is now a crime arising in the land forces in actual service in time of war."

Evidence.—In a prosecution for the violation of section 12 of this Act the testimony of the soldiers alleged to have bought the liquor that they were in uniform at the time, together with the testimony of additional witnesses that they were spoken of as soldiers by others present when the sale was made and that the defendant addressed one of them as "sergeant" justified the jury in finding that the soldiers were in uniform when they bought the liquor. Goldstein v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 813.

In a prosecution for failure and refusal to present himself for registration at the place of his permanent residence, admissions made by the defendant are admissible where there is no evidence of any substantial character to show force or threats against him, or as inducements offered to him by the agents of the government; the mere fact that he was in custody when he made the statements and that they were in answer to questions put by the agents do not make such admissions involuntary. Nor is it error to admit a circular opposing the selective draft where there is evidence tending to show that the defendant was responsible for its publication, and he had testified that he had acted in good faith in registering at a place other than that of his permanent residence. U. S. v. Pass, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 731.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to obstruct the draft, the minutes of meetings of the executive committee of a political party kept by one of the defendants and containing resolutions adopted by the committee in furtherance of a plan for obstructing the draft and in pursuance of which circulars were issued and distributed by another one of the defendants, are admissible to show conspiracy on the part of both defendants. U. S. v. Schenck, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 253 Fed. 212.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to aid and abet others to evade the provisions of section 6 of this Act the government is not confined to that which is charged in the indictment as the overt act, but may show other acts tending to prove the conspiracy charged, as there can be no legal complaint of testimony tending to show the object of the conspiracy, which evidence may be called an overt act. Fraina v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 28, 166 C. C. A. 356.

Where in a prosecution for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by aiding and abetting unknown persons unlawfully to evade the requirements of this Act, it is shown that a mass meeting was called by advertisement and that one of the defendants called the meeting to order and that certain others distributed pamphlets concerning the object of the meeting, a conspiracy or combination in thought will be inferred among the platform occupiers and their helpers. Fraina v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 28, 166 C. C. A. 356.

Question for jury.—In a prosecution for failure to register at his place of residence and permanent home, the question as to whether the accused acted in good faith in registering in another state is properly submitted to the jury. Pass v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 731.

Review.—In a prosecution for conspiracy to evade the provisions of section 6 of this Act, it is not necessary that the act of combining should be first made to appear before proving the acts and declarations of the co-conspirators, though ordinarily this is the proper practice. It is only a question of the order of proof and as such within the discretion of the trial judge which is only reviewable when abuse of discretion is shown. Fraina v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 28, 166 C. C. A. 356.

Membership not inconsistent with city office.—A member of a local draft board is not disqualified from holding the position of city police commissioner under a charter provision disqualifying any person holding "an office or position of trust or emolument or regular employment under appointment by the President of the United States or any department of the federal government." Johnston v. Chambers, (1919) 148 Ga. 768, 98 S. E. 263.

Membership not inconsistent with office of clerk of court.—A clerk of court does not vacate his position by accepting appointment to a local draft board, though the state constitution prohibits any state officer from holding "any office of trust or profit under the United States." State v. Joseph, (1918) 143 La. 428, 78 So. 663, L. R. A. 1918E 1062.

For cases construing the Selective Service Regulations promulgated by the President under the provisions of section 4 of this Act, see U. S. v. Local Exemption Board No. 157, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 252 Fed. 245; U. S. v. Commanding Officer of 78th Div., (D. C. N. J. 1918) 252 Fed. 314.

Vol. IX, p. 1159, sec. 5. [First ed., 1918 Supp., p. 1018.]

Arrest without warrant.—A sheriff has no power to arrest without a warrant for failure to register, on the verbal request of the chairman of a local exemption board. Ex p. Jones, (Tex. 1919) 208 S. W. 525.

For cases construing presidential regulations promulgated pursuant to section 5 of this Act, see Ex p. Dunn, (D. C. Mass. 1918) 250 Fed. 871; Boitano v. District Board, etc., (N. D. Cal. 1918) 250 Fed. 812.

Vol. IX, p. 1159, sec. 6. [First ed., 1918 Supp., p. 1019.]

False notarial certificate.—A person is guilty of violating this section who adds a notarial certificate to a statement relating to the physical condition of a draftee, made by three doctors, when in fact the doctors never appeared before him and never acknowledged the statement as true. U. S. v. Blakeman, (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 306, wherein the court said: "The defendant on the argument of this demurrer urges that the falsity of these statements, respectively in this respect, is immaterial, and does not bring the case within the meaning, or letter, or spirit of the section of the Selective Service Law above quoted. The contention of the defendant is that, while it may be and probably is true that the making of such a false certificate by the notary added to and written on the statement of the doctors, respectively, constitutes a crime under the law of the state of New York, such act does not constitute a crime under the federal laws or statutes, and that such false statements and certificate of the notary public added to the doctor's statement forms no part of the statement itself referred to in section 6 of the Selective Service Law, as that relates to the falsity of the statements made by the doctors themselves contained in the statement or certificate, and not to the falsity of the notarial certificate as to the execution of such statement; that the falsity must actually relate to and concern the fitness or liability for service, and these false certificates of the notary added by him relate only to the execution of the paper and its authenticity, and not to the fitness or liability to service.

"I cannot yield to or concur in this narrow construction of the statute quoted. I think the statement or certificate must be taken and read as a whole, or as a completed document in so far as material. Clearly the certificate of the notary that these doctors appeared before him and acknowledged the execution of or signature to a statement or to the statements is material, and a material part of the statement as to physical fitness presented and filed. It is a certificate of authenticity, and one which gives the statement credence with the draft board. This is its purpose. These notarial certificates added to the statements induce the draft board to accept such statements as authentic and genuine, and to act thereon in determining the fitness for military service of the persons or person in whose behalf or interest they are made and presented, and in exempting or declining to exempt such person from service. These false statements or certificates, false when taken and read in their entirety and as a completed statement and certificate, were 'as to the fitness or liability' of Mandes for service under the Selective Draft Act."

Indictment.—An indictment charging the defendant with making false statement or certificate as to the unfitness or liability of another person for service under the Selective Service Act is insufficient. U. S. v. Blakeman, (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 306, wherein the court said: "The indictment charges a false statement or certificate as to the unfitness or liability, while the statute makes it an offense to make a false statement or certificate 'as to the fitness or liability,' etc. The offense charged in the indictment is not the one specified in the statute, and the error in using the word 'unfitness,' instead of 'fitness,' is not cured by other allegations, as the contents of these statements are not set out in the indictment. The defects can be remedied by a presentation of the case to another grand jury and a new indictment. I do not think it can be held that the words 'fitness' and 'unfitness' mean the same thing, or that a certificate or statement as to the 'unfitness' would include a certificate or statement as to 'fitness.' The doctors in their statement or certificate might include a statement of every fact as to 'unfitness,' and exclude, or not include, all information as to 'fitness,' in a statement of or as to 'unfitness.' The draft board is entitled to their statement of all facts as to 'fitness,' which might include the facts as to 'unfitness'; but a statement as to 'unfitness' clearly does not include the facts as to 'fitness.'"

See notes to section 1 of this Act, supra, p. 822.

Constitutionality.—Congress under its constitutional power to raise and support armies had the power to enact this section. Moreover it had power to leave details to the regulation of the Secretary of War, and provide for the punishment of those who violated the restrictions. McKinley v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 397, 39 S. Ct. 324, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

In Pappens v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 55, 164 C. C. A. 167, it was contended that a rule promulgated by the Secretary of War pursuant to this section was an invasion of the police power reserved to the states. Answering this contention, the court said: "We cannot sustain the contention. Congress, having acted under its constitutional power in declaring that the state of war between Germany and the United States exists, found it necessary and proper that there should be the exercise of the additional constitutional powers 'to raise and to support armies,' and also 'to make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces.'"

"The execution of these powers assigned to the national government came within the obligation or duties of Congress, and its control over the subject is plenary. Tarble's Case, 80 U. S. (13 Wall.) 397, 20 L. Ed. 597. Power to raise an army to carry on the war was recognized by the pledge of Congress (by joint resolution approved April 6, 1917 [40 Stat. 1]) of all the resources of the country 'to bring the conflict to a successful termination,' and has been executed by the several acts of legislation providing for the organization and support of the Army and Navy and to promote the efficiency thereof. It is obvious that, to avoid calamity to the nation, the powers referred to in their greatest strength must be upheld as indispensably incidental to the power to declare war."

Offenses after termination of war.—This section applies only to offenses committed "during the present war" and consequently a person cannot be convicted for a violation thereof for an offense committed after the war has come to an end, which for the purposes of this section was fixed as of the time when the President declared to Congress that the war was "at an end." However, as facts may develop to show that the statement of the President was not accurate, the defendant in such a case will be granted a new trial and a motion in arrest of judgment will be overruled. U. S. v. Hicks, (W. D. Ky. 1919) 256 Fed. 707.

Indictment.—An indictment charging the keeping of a house of ill fame within five miles of a military post in violation of the order of the Secretary of War issued pursuant to this section, forbidding the maintenance of such houses within the prescribed limits, charges a misdemeanor, as the statute makes the violation of such an order a misdemeanor. This is true although the indictment contains no averment of the receiving of any persons into a house used for the purpose of prostitution. Pappens v. U. S., (C.

C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 55, 164 C. C. A. 167.

Longevity pay.—Congress by the Act gave to retired officers of the army detailed on active duty the longevity pay which would accrue to them by reason of their added active service after retirement, which pay they could not theretofore receive by reason of the Act of March 2, 1903, 32 Stat. 932. Jonas v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 254.

Vol. IX, p. 1254, art. 2. [First ed., 1918 Supp., p. 977.]

Construction by Secretary of War.—In Ex p. Mikell, (E. D. S. C. 1918) 253 Fed. 817, the court, in holding that a construction of this section by the Secretary of War was not conclusive, said: "The position of the counsel for the respondents is that William E. Mikell is a person serving with the armies of the United States 'in the field,' and as such is subject to military law. For this respondents cite the construction claimed to have been put upon this clause by the Secretary of War, and maintain that such construction is conclusive. Such a contention could not be admitted by this court for a moment. The construction of the meaning of a statute of Congress is for the courts of the land, especially in so far as it affects the relation of the armies of the United States, with the rest of the people of the United States. The construction of the Secretary of War may be held as applicable in all matters among persons controlled by the Articles of War, or regulations thereunder, within the scope of the authority given him; perhaps it may be said, also, in matters where third persons are concerned, where the matter is limited to the question of what is the rule under the Articles of War among persons admittedly subject to the Articles of War. In all matters, however, pertaining to the people at large and to the effect of the language contained in the statute with relation to people who are not admittedly subject to military law, any construction put by the Secretary of War on the statute has no more effect than the opinion or the construction given by an individual. It may be persuasive in argument to the court as the construction given by a person acquainted with the subject, but it has no controlling effect whatsoever."

Transport service.—A cook in the United States Army Transport Service is a person "serving with the armies of the United States in the field," and is subject to military law. Ex p. Falls, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 251 Fed. 415, wherein the court said: "Carrying supplies to equip and sustain the army is a very important military operation in time of war. The petitioner by a reasonable and natural interpretation of the second Article of War is a person 'serving with the armies of the United States in the field,' and as such is in the same position with reference to trial by court-martial as any person belonging to one of the other classes enumerated in said article. Any other interpretation of the statute under all the facts would be unreasonable, illogical, and disastrous 'in time of war.' It is unthinkable that Congress did not mean to include persons in the United States Army Transport Service, engaged in transporting our armies and sustaining them with equipment and supplies, in the class, in time of war, of those 'persons accompanying or serving with the armies of the United States in the field.'"

Civilian employees.—A camp or cantonment located within the boundaries of the United States at a time when there are no actual hostilities in the United States is not a place where armies can be said to be "in the field" within the meaning of this section. Consequently a civilian employee at such a camp charged with rendering false claims against the United States is not subject to military law but must be tried by the civil courts. Ex p. Mikell, (E. D. S. C. 1918) 253 Fed. 817.

"Retainer to camp."—A chauffeur employed by a construction company doing work at a training camp in this country is not a retainer to the camp or a person accompanying or serving with the armies of the United States in the field within the meaning of this section and is therefore not subject to military law. Ex p. Weitz, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 256 Fed. 58, wherein it was said: "The expression 'retainers to the camp' means 'officers' servants and the like, as well as camp followers generally.' Davis, Military Law, p. 478. It would not, in my opinion, include firms engaged in construction work, nor their employes. Persons 'accompanying or serving with . . . armies in the field' are those who, though not enlisted, do work required in maintenance, supply, or transportation of an army. The work which Weitz was doing was not of that character. He was no more serving with or accompanying the army than was a carpenter building barracks, or a laborer working on a road in the camp, or a machinist hired by the day to do work in the machine shop. There is, I think, a clear distinction between work done in the erection or maintenance of a camp of semipermanent character, and work having a direct relation to the transport, maintenance, or supply of an army in the field. Both sorts of work are necessary to the army, but only persons engaged in the latter sort are amenable to military law and punishment. To hold otherwise would be to subject to military law a very large body of civilian employes, never directly coming in contact with military authority, and not heretofore generally supposed to be subject thereto."

Jurisdiction of civil courts.—This provision was manifestly designed to make it clear that even as to other military tribunals the jurisdiction of courts-martial was not to be considered exclusive with relation to offenders or offenses that by the law of war might lawfully be tried by such other tribunals. It had no relation whatever to the matter of jurisdiction of the civil courts. People v. Denman, (Cal. 1918) 177 Pac. 461.

Accused cannot object to civil jurisdiction.—"Conceding the paramount right of the military authorities in time of war to the custody of any person in the military service of the United States, notwithstanding criminal charges against him in the courts of a state, the right is solely that of the military authorities, to be enforced as the best interests of the military service may seem to them to require. In the absence of some showing of a claim by such authorities, no question of want of jurisdiction can arise." People v. Denman, (Cal. 1918) 177 Pac. 461.

Constitutionality.—This section is not violative of the Fifth Amendment to the Federal Constitution as depriving the accused of a trial by jury on a presentment or indictment by a grand jury. Ex p. Falls, (D. C. N. J. 1918) 251 Fed. 415, wherein the court said: "This amendment in excepting 'cases arising in the land or naval forces' in effect says that in cases arising in those forces a person may be held to answer to a capital or otherwise infamous crime without a presentment or indictment by a grand jury; in other words, such cases may be dealt with according to military law. Runkle v. United States, 19 Ct. Cl. 396; Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487, 6 Sup. Ct. 148, 29 L. Ed. 458. It is provided in the Constitution (article 1, § 8), that Congress has power 'to make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces.' This power Congress has exercised in the second Article of War, by defining the various classes of persons who are subject to military law, and in the fifty-eighth Article of War by declaring the punishment which may be imposed by a court-martial upon any one of those classes who deserts or attempts to desert the service of the United States."

Vol. IV, p. 1281, art. 74. [First ed., 1918 Supp., p. 991.]

Jurisdiction of civil courts.—The concurrent jurisdiction of civil courts and courts-martial, heretofore existing, to try persons subject to military law, who commit offenses against federal or state laws, is not affected by the Articles of War as amended by the Act of August 29, 1916. U. S. v. Hirsch, (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 109.

Vol. IX, p. 1286, art. 92. [First ed., 1918 Supp., p. 994.]

State jurisdiction.—The superior jurisdiction of the military courts cannot be urged by the accused soldier as an objection to a prosecution in a state court. Funk v. State, (Tex. 1919) 208 S. W. 509.

Vol. IX, p. 1286, art. 93. [First ed., 1918 Supp., p. 994.]

Jurisdiction of state court.—The military authorities may waive their priority of right and permit a trial in a state court. Stewart v. Com., (1919) 185 Ky. 34, 213 S. W. 185.

Vol. IX, p. 1295, art. 117. [First ed., 1918 Supp., p. 1001.]

Act not in military capacity.—In this prosecution the appellant is accused of murdering a citizen of the state, while the deceased was pursuing his civil avocation and the appellant was engaged in an enterprise in no wise connected with or incident to his duty as a soldier. His connection with the homicide is denied by him, and there is no contention that the prosecution was commenced "on account of any act done under color of his office or status;" nor was it an act "in respect to which he claims any right, title or authority under any law of the United States respecting the military forces thereof, or under the law of war." If he committed the act charged, it is not justified by any law. We are therefore of opinion that the trial court committed no error in refusing to grant his petition for removal. Funk v. State, (Tex. 1919) 208 S. W. 509.

II. APPROPRIATION OF WATERS (p. 1351)

What waters may be appropriated.—Percolating water, unconfined to a definite channel, is not the subject of appropriation, but belongs to the realty. McKenzie v. Moore, (Ariz. 1918) 176 Pac. 568.

Vol. IX, p. 1360, sec. 2340. [First ed., vol. VII, p. 1096.]

Rights of subsequent entryman.—The statute "in effect declares" that where ditches are constructed over public lands a subsequent entryman takes them burdened with the easement. Lowry v. Carrier, (1918) 55 Mont. 392, 177 Pac. 756.

Vol. IX, p. 1367, sec. 4. [First ed., vol. VII, p. 1099.]

Validity of contract to furnish power exclusively to electric company.—A contract between a gas and electric company and the United States whereby the company surrenders and conveys all its rights within the physical limits of the Salt River reclamation project and in lieu thereof the United States agrees to furnish to the company in the city of Phoenix, Ariz., a specified amount of electrical energy generated at its works at the Roosevelt Reservoir at a stipulated sum of money and for a term not exceeding ten years, and further agrees that while serving power to the company under the terms of the contract it will refrain from entering into a general retailing of power to customers in such city, and from furnishing power to any one in said city to be again sold or retailed, does not violate the provisions of the Sherman Anti-trust Act of July 2, 1890, ch. 647 (see vol. 9, p. 644) nor of this section. (1913) 30 Op. Atty-Gen. 197.

Vol. IX, p. 1374, sec. 5. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 544.]

Failure to reside on withdrawn lands.—Under this section a charge of abandonment of an entry cannot be successfully maintained against an entryman whose failure to make improvements and reclaim the land entered by him was during a time when he was hindered, delayed, or prevented from making such improvements and from reclaiming the land by reason of the withdrawal of the land from public entry for irrigation contemplated by the Reclamation Act of June 17, 1902. Edwards v. Bodkin, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 562, 161 C. C. A. 488.

Taking timber from national forest.—An irrigation and canal company may be permitted under this Act to take timber from the Teton National Forest free of charge for use in raising the dam at Jackson Lake, Wyo., which is a project authorized under the Reclamation Act of June 17, 1902, ch. 1093 (see vol. 9, p. 1363). ### III. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE

1. Debauchery (p. 1410)

In Beyer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 39, 163 C. C. A. 289, the indictment charged that the defendant conspired with certain others to transport women and girls from the United States to Mexico for the purpose of debauchery. The evidence was that the defendants were conducting a bar, a gambling hall, a dance hall, and a house of prostitution in a building in Mexicali, Mexico, and that they hired several women and girls at Los Angeles to go to their establishment in Mexicali to act as entertainers, and furnished transportation for some of them. The duties of the entertainers were to sing and dance, and to dance with the male habitués of the place, and although there was no evidence that the entertainers were to sell liquor, there was evidence that they did in fact invite men to dance, and that the men knew that "if they danced they had to buy a drink." The girls were to derive a profit of from 40 to 50 per cent. of the selling price of the liquors sold. Back of the dance floor was a hall. The first door leading from the hall was a dressing room for the entertainers. Beyond, on both sides of the hall, were rooms occupied by prostitutes. The prostitutes were permitted upon the dance floor and in the café and at the bar. The entertainers were bound by contracts not to engage in prostitution, and they were instructed that, if men should approach them and make improper suggestions to them, they were to say that they were not there for that purpose, but that there were others there. It was held that the purpose of the accused was within the prohibition of the statute. The court said: "They intended to and did place the girls in a house of prostitution. They subjected them to all the evil influences of such surroundings. They required them to dance on the same floor with prostitutes. There was evidence that they were instructed, in case they were solicited to engage in sexual intercourse, to refuse, and to say in substance that there were others there for that purpose, and thus to advertise the prostitutes. They were to be in the dance hall for the purpose of luring men to dance with them, and to induce men to purchase intoxicating liquors, and thereby to aid in maintaining the business of prostitution in which the plaintiff was engaged. They placed the girls in an environment in which they were likely to be solicited to engage in prostitution, and their contracts with the girls indicate that they expected that such solicitations would be made. In Simpson v. United States, 245 Fed. 278, 157 C. C. A. 470 (certiorari denied 245 U. S. 664, 38 Sup. Ct. 133, 62 L. ed. 537), we held that one who induced a woman to travel from California to Mexico to manage a house of prostitution was punishable under the White Slave Act (Act June 25, 1910, c. 395, 36 Stat. 825). There is no difference in principle between that case and this. While the girls who were transported to Mexicali were not engaged in managing the house of prostitution, they were engaged in luring men to it, and probably were as essential to its success as a manager would have been."

IV. INDICTMENT

1. In General (p. 1411)

An allegation, in an indictment under this Act, that the transportation was from a place in the southwestern division of the southern district of a certain state, fixes jurisdiction therein. Yeates v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 60, 165 C. C. A. 470.

Objections to indictment.—Where no demurrer or motion to quash was interposed, no motion made for a directed verdict on the ground of a defect in the indictment, and no attention called specifically to the alleged defect at any time in the lower court, and it is clear from the record that there was no misunderstanding on the part of the defendant or his counsel as to the nature of the offense charged, that the evidence was ample as to every element of the offense to sustain conviction, and that there is no possibility that the judgment of conviction could not be successfully pleaded to any other prosecution under an indictment containing the omitted words but covering the same transactions, it has been declared that under these circumstances the defendant's contention as to the insufficiency of a count of the indictment is not entitled to receive so favorable consideration as if it had been raised by demurrer. Hamilton v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 511.

V. EVIDENCE

2. Sufficiency (p. 1412)

For evidence held to be sufficient to show a violation of this Act, see Hamilton v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 511.

3. Variance (p. 1413)

Evidence showing additional offense.—The fact that the offense proved may contain the elements of a graver crime, cognizable by the state laws, does not affect the prosecution. Yeates v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 60.

VII. TRANSPORTATION OF WIFE BY HUSBAND (p. 1414)

The wife of the accused is a competent witness against him. Denning v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 463, 159 C. C. A. 517, L. R. A. 1918E 487, wherein it was said: "It must be held that it is within the reason of the common-law exception to the rule of incompetency to permit the wife to testify against the husband when the commission of the offense charged against the latter is an act directed against the person of the former. It cannot be that the common law would protect the wife against a single act of violence, and not against a system of assaults; against an act that brought mortification and shame, and not against a series of acts which brought degradation and destruction of body and soul; against a single essay at crime, and not against a continuing effort at pre-eminence in infamy. The offense cannot be classed with those which merely offend the marital relation. It operates immediately and directly upon the wife. It is an offense against the wife. A primary purpose of the Mann Act was to protect women who were weak from men who were bad. Its protection was not confined to unmarried women. Its punishment was not intended to be limited to unmarried men. Men led by cupidity to the base crime have utilized marriage in the accomplishment of their ends. They should not be permitted to use marriage to prevent their punishment. They should not be permitted to invoke a sacred institution, and the rules established for its protection, to secure immunity from punishment for the most infamous crime that could be devised for its degradation."

WITNESSES

Vol. IX, p. 1421, sec. 858. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 708.]

III. Criminal cases.

VI. State statutes affecting competency.

III. CRIMINAL CASES (p. 1422)

In Louie Ding v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 12, 159 C. C. A. 230, it was held that the competency of a witness in a criminal case in a federal court is to be determined by the law of the state in which the court sits as it existed at the time of the admission of that state into the Union. Applying the rule so announced it was held that a witness who did not believe in the existence of a Supreme Being was competent to testify on the trial of a criminal prosecution in a federal court sitting in the state of Washington, the constitution of that state at the time of its admission providing that no person shall be incompetent as a witness on account of his opinions in matters of religion. Discussing the decisions in U. S. v. Reid, (1851) 12 How. 361, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 1023, and Logan v. U. S., (1892) 144 U. S. 263, 12 S. Ct. 617, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 429, the court said: "But we do not understand that in the general statement, to the effect that the rules of evidence in criminal cases are the rules which were in force in the respective states when the Judiciary Act of 1789 was passed, the Supreme Court ever intended to establish a guide which would prevent the application of the rule as we have before indicated; the test is what local law obtained at the time of the creation of the state, rather than that which obtained at the time of the enactment of the Judiciary Act of 1789. Wigmore on Evidence, § 6 (see notes 9 and 10). In Maxey v. United States, 207 Fed. 327, 125 C. C. A. 77, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit considered the question of competency of a witness who had been convicted of a felony, and who was offered as a witness in the trial in the federal court in the district of Arkansas, and it was held that the competency of the witness was to be determined by the common law of the state where the trial was had, as it was when the United States courts were established, except where Congress provided otherwise. While the decisions upon the question discussed are not as clear as they might be, yet, when we accept the doctrine of Reid v. United States, supra, to be that neither the common law as it existed at the time of the emigration of the colonists nor the rule which at that time prevailed in England is controlling upon the subject, but that the known rules which were in force in the respective states at the time of their creation are, unless Congress has specially otherwise provided, it leads to the view that the court should have followed the rule which the local courts adopted in their usual daily practice when the state of Washington was admitted into the Union."

The competency of a witness in a criminal case in a federal court is to be determined by the law of the state where the court sits as it existed when the state was admitted to the Union, and accordingly where the original state constitution continues the territorial laws in force those laws govern. McCoy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 861, 160 C. C. A. 83, holding that in a federal court sitting in Florida a person who had been convicted of a felony in another state was competent.

VI. STATE STATUTES AFFECTING COMPETENCY (p. 1423)

State decision construing statute.—We are under obligation to follow, as to the matter of competency of witnesses in civil cases, the law of the state; and the statements by the highest courts of the state as to what that law is will, of course, be followed. Central Iron, etc., Co. v. Hamacher, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 50, 160 C. C. A. 190.

Transaction with a decedent.—Under the Delaware statute a transaction with a deceased officer of a corporate party is not excluded. Wright v. Barnard, (D. C. Del. 1917) 248 Fed. 756.

Vol. IX, p. 1424, sec. 876. [First ed., vol. VII, p. 1121.]

Subpoenas duces tecum.—The authorization of subpoenas for witnesses in criminal cases to run into any other district includes subpoenas duces tecum as well as the ordinary subpoenas ad testificandum. In re Subpoenas Duces Tecum, (E. D. Tenn. 1916) 248 Fed. 137.

No order necessary.—In a criminal case subpoena duces tecum may be issued by the clerk without an order of court. In re Subpoenas Duces Tecum, (E. D. Tenn. 1916) 248 Fed. 137.

Vol. IX, p. 1434. [Defendants in criminal cases may be witnesses.] [First ed., vol. VII, p. 1120.]

Reference to "uncontradicted testimony."—In Shea v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 440, 162 C. C. A. 458, it appeared that neither defendant testified on the trial.

In discussing the testimony, in the course of the charge, the court several times referred to certain testimony on the part of the government and certain identifications of the defendants as "uncontradicted," "not directly contradicted," or "without any contradiction." The appellate court held that this was not error, saying: "If these comments were manifestly designed to direct the attention of the jury to defendants' failure to testify (or, perhaps, if they had such necessary effect), they would constitute reversible error. Wilson v. United States, 149 U. S. 60, 65, 13 Sup. Ct. 765, 37 L. Ed. 650, and following; McKnight v. United States, (C. C. A. 6) 115 Fed. 972, 981-983, 54 C. C. A. 358. But unless they were intended as such comment, or would naturally be so understood, no error was committed. Jackson v. United States, (C. C. A. 9) 103 Fed. 473, 487, 42 C. C. A. 452; Carlisle v. United States, (C. C. A. 4) 194 Fed. 827, 114 C. C. A. 531; Rose v. United States, (C. C. A. 8) 227 Fed. 357, 363, 142 C. C. A. 53. To say the least, it is not so plain that, as to any of the subjects commented upon by the District Judge, no one but plaintiffs in error could, in the nature of things, have disputed them, if untrue, as to make it clear that the court's remarks were intended to be, or that they would naturally be understood as, an unfavorable comment on the failure of plaintiffs in error to testify. They thus did not constitute error."

ON THE ### CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

Vol. X, p. 376, art. 1, sec. 7.

III. "Two thirds of That House" (p. 379)

Two-thirds of quorum.—The two-thirds vote of each house required to pass a bill over a veto is the two-thirds vote of a quorum of each body, not a two-thirds vote of all the members of the body. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Kansas, (1919) 248 U. S. 276, 39 S. Ct. 93, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1915) 96 Kan. 609, 152 Pac. 777, Ann. Cas. 1917A 612.

Vol. X, p. 410, art. 1, sec. 8.

3. a (1) In General (p. 435)

Transportation of child-made goods.—Congress exceeded its power under the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution in enacting the provisions of the Act of September 1, 1916, 39 Stat. at L. 675, ch. 432, 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 426, which prohibit the transportation in interstate commerce of manufactured goods the product of a factory in which, within thirty days prior to the removal of the goods, children under fourteen have been employed, or children between fourteen and sixteen have been employed more than eight hours in a day, or more than six days in a week, or between seven in the evening and six in the morning. Hammer v. Dagenhart, (1918) 247 U. S. 251.

b (1) In General (p. 439)

Transmission of stock quotations.—The telegraphic transmission of the quotations of the New York Stock Exchange to the Boston offices of the telegraph companies, whence they are transmitted by an operator to tickers in the offices of brokers within the state who have subscribed for such service and have been approved by the Exchange, conformably to a contract between the telegraph companies and the Exchange, does not lose its character as interstate commerce until it is completed in the brokers' offices, and the state of Massachusetts may not interfere with such commerce by ordering the removal of an alleged discrimination resulting from the refusal of the telegraph companies to furnish one broker the service supplied to others. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Foster, (1918) 247 U. S. 105, reversing (1916) 224 Mass. 365.

(2) (a) In General (p. 443)

Sale of artificial ice plant.—A provision in a contract of sale of an artificial ice plant by which the foreign corporate seller agreed to furnish an engineer who should assemble and erect the machinery at the point of destination, and should make a practical efficiency test before complete delivery, is relevant and appropriate to the interstate sale of the machinery, and, therefore, does not justify the courts of the state to which the machinery was shipped in refusing to enforce payment of the purchase price, on the theory that the corporation was doing local business in the state without having first secured the permit made by a state statute a condition precedent to the right to sue in the local courts. York Mfg. Co. v. Colley, (1918) 247 U. S. 21, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 963, reversing (Tex. 1915) 172 S. W. 206.

b. National Subjects Requiring Uniform Regulations (p. 448)

To same effect as original annotation, see American Distributing Co. v. Hayes Wheel Co., (E. D. Mich. 1918) 250 Fed. 109.

(5) Indirect or Incidental Interference with Commerce (p. 455)

Removal of street railway tracks.—No unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce results from a municipal ordinance which directs a railway company to remove its tracks from a busy street intersection, thereby necessitating resort to other accessible and fairly convenient means of getting cars to and from tracks beyond such crossing, where the ordinance makes no discrimination against interstate commerce, will not impede its movement in regular course, and will affect it only incidentally and indirectly. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Denver, (1919) 250 U. S. 241, 39 S. Ct. 450, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Licensing transportation of lobsters beyond limits of state.—A state statute relating to the necessity of obtaining a license to transport lobsters beyond the limits of the state is a valid and reasonable provision even if interstate commerce is indirectly involved in the absence of legislation by Congress on the subject. State v. Dodge, (1918) 117 Me. 269, 104 Atl. 5.

(2) Local Subjects May be Regulated by State Action (p. 460)

Location of railroad shops, etc.—A state cannot be said, as a matter of law, to have imposed an unconstitutional burden upon interstate commerce by forbidding any change in location of the machine shops, round-houses, and general offices of a railway company which has agreed to maintain them in a designated county in consideration of receiving county aid. International, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson County, (1918) 246 U. S. 424, 38 S. Ct. 370, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 807, affirming (Tex. Civ. App. 1915) 174 S. W. 305.

m. Intoxicating Liquors (p. 497)

The Reed amendment prohibiting the transportation of liquor into any state or territory the laws of which prohibit the manufacture or sale of the same for beverage purposes, is constitutional, though construed to include the transportation of the same on the person for personal use, and though transported into a state which permits the introduction of liquor for personal use in limited quantities. U. S. v. Hill, (1919) 248 U. S. 420, 39 S. Ct. 143, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

(2) Act of March 1, 1913 — Webb-Kenyon Act (p. 500)

State statute requiring records kept by carriers of liquors.—The enactment of the Webb-Kenyon Act, divesting intoxicating liquors of their interstate character in certain cases, removed any restrictions in the Federal Constitution or laws upon the power of a state to adopt such a law as N. C. Pub. Laws 1913, ch. 44, § 5, requiring railway companies to keep a separate record of the name of every person to whom intoxicating liquor is shipped, together with the amount, kind, date of receipt and delivery, followed by the consignee's signature acknowledging delivery, and to permit inspection of such record by any officer or citizen, and making noncompliance with such statute a misdemeanor. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. North Carolina, (1917) 245 U. S. 298, 38 S. Ct. 96, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 299, affirming (1915) 169 N. C. 295, 84 S. E. 283.

1. What Constitutes an Original Package (p. 514)

Natural gas.—Natural gas transported through pipe lines is an original package so long as it is in the main line, but it ceases to become a part of the interstate commerce when it leaves the main line, being separated from the bulk of gas in such line and forced into intermediate lines and the pipes of individual consumers, where it cannot return to the main line, and where it remains until used. It is then subject to state legislation. West Virginia, etc., Gas Co. v. Towers, (Md. 1919) 106 Atl. 265.

b. Cannot Authorize Restraints of Commerce (p. 521)

Excessive charge by state for approving issue of bonds of interstate railroad.—In Union Pac. R. Co. v. Public Service Commission, (1918) 248 U. S. 67, 39 S. Ct. 24, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1916) 268 Mo. 641, 187 S. W. 827, the facts and conclusion reached thereon were stated by the court as follows: "This case concerned the validity of a charge made by the Public Service Commission of Missouri for a certificate authorizing the issue of bonds secured by a mortgage of the whole line of the Union Pacific road. The statutes of Missouri have general prohibitions against the issue of such bonds without the authority of the commission, impose severe penalties for such issue and purport to invalidate the bonds if it takes place. Moreover the bonds would be unmarketable if the certificate were refused. Upon these considerations the plaintiff in error applied, in all the states through which its line passed, for a certificate authorizing the issue of bonds to the amount of $31,848,900. The Missouri commission granted the authority and charged a fee of $10,962.25. The railroad company accepted the grant as required by its terms, but protested in writing against the charge as an unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce, and gave notice that it paid under duress to escape the statutory penalties and to prevent the revocation of the certificate. It moved for a rehearing on the ground that the statutes of Missouri, if they gave the commission jurisdiction, did not purport to authorize the charge, or, if they did purport to do so and to invalidate an issue without the Commission's assent, were in conflict with the Constitution of the United States. The rehearing was denied and thereupon the railroad, pursuant to state law, applied to a local court for a certiorari to set the commission's judgment aside as an interference with interstate commerce and as bad under the Fourteenth Amendment. The court decided that the charge was unreasonable and that the minimum statutory fee of $250 should have been charged. On appeal by the commission the Supreme Court held the railroad estopped by its application, reversed the court below and upheld the charge. 268 Missouri 641.

"The railroad company is a Utah corporation having a line over thirty-five hundred miles long, extending through several states, from Kansas City, Missouri, and elsewhere, to Ogden, Utah. It has only about six-tenths of one mile of main track in Missouri, and its total property there is valued at a little more than three million dollars, out of a total valuation of over two hundred and eighty-one millions. The bonds were to reimburse the company for expenditures of which again less than one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars had been made in Missouri. The business done by the railroad in Missouri is wholly interstate. On these facts it is plain, on principles now established, that the charge, which in accordance with the letter of the Missouri statutes was fixed by a percentage on the total issue contemplated, was an unlawful interference with commerce among the states."

(3) Inspection Fees (p. 530)

Oil and gasoline.—"Specifically, state laws providing for the inspection of oils and gasoline have several times been recognized as valid by this court. Fatterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501; Red "C" Oil Mfg. Co.

v. Board of Agriculture of North Carolina, 222 U. S. 380, and Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Deselms, 212 U. S. 159. But if such inspection charge should be obviously and largely in excess of the cost of inspection, the act will be declared void because constituting, in its operation, an obstruction to and burden upon that commerce among the states the exclusive regulation of which is committed to Congress by the Constitution. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Taylor, 192 U. S. 64; Foot & Co. v. Maryland, 232 U. S. 494, 504, 508. Plainly the application of the principles thus stated leaves open for consideration only the question as to whether the inspection charge is so excessive as to render the act a revenue measure, as the plaintiff in error claims that it is, and not an inspection law enacted in good faith to promote the public safety and prevent fraud and imposition upon the users of oil and gasoline. In the consideration of this question the discretion of the legislature in determining the amount of the inspection fee will not lightly be disturbed. Its determination is prima facie reasonable and the courts will not 'enter into any nice calculation as to the difference between cost and collection; nor will they declare the fees to be excessive unless it is made clearly to appear that they are obviously and largely beyond what is needed to pay for the inspection services rendered.' Foot & Co. v. Maryland, 232 U. S. 494, 504, and Western Union Telegraph Co. v. New Hope, 187 U. S. 419." Pure Oil Co. v. Minnesota, (1918) 248 U. S. 158, 39 S. Ct. 35, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 134 Minn. 101, 158 N. W. 723.

In Excess of Expenses of Inspection (p. 532)

Oil inspection fees.—A state oil inspection law under which fees grossly in excess of the cost of inspection (the total receipts for ten years being $335,000, more than four times the expense of administration) must be paid by importers after inspection before the oils may be lawfully sold, even in the original receptacles or containers in which they were brought into the state, is unconstitutional as a direct burden on interstate commerce. Standard Oil Co. v. Graves, (1919) 249 U. S. 389, 39 S. Ct. 320, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 94 Wash. 291, 162 Pac. 558.

(b) aa. At County Seats (p. 554)

Regulating stoppage of trains at county seats.—A state may require that four passenger trains each way, if so many are run daily, Sundays excepted, shall stop at all county-seat stations, although this may necessitate the stopping of two interstate mail trains, one each way, at a place having a population of but 1,500, where this is the only county seat at which those trains do not stop, and they do stop at some smaller places, as well as make a detour to go through an important city, and where but little time will be consumed in making these additional stops. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, (1918) 246 U. S. 58, 38 S. Ct. 236, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 574, affirming (Tex. Civ. App. 1914) 169 S. W. 385.

f. Requiring Notice of Time of Trains' Arrival to Be Posted (p. 558)

Requiring trains to keep to schedule time.—As applied to through interstate trains originating outside the state on the lines of other carriers, an order of a state railway commission under which a railway company must start its passenger trains in the state at the point of origin and at local stations on schedule time, with an allowance of not more than thirty minutes for connections, is an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce, especially where there is sufficient accommodation for local traffic independent of the through trains. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, (1918) 245 U. S. 484, 38 S. Ct. 178, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 419, L. R. A. 1918C 535, reversing (Tex. Civ. App. 1914) 167 S. W. 822, wherein the court said: "On its face the order as applied was an interference with such commerce. It undertook to fix the time allowed for stops in the course of interstate transit. It was a serious interference, for it made the defendant liable for an interstate train not starting on schedule time, when the train did not come into the defendant's hands, from another company in another state, until too late. This, as we understand the facts, was the train to which the advertised schedule applied, and, if so, the mere statement of the result is enough to show that the burden imposed not only was serious, but was unwarranted as well as unjust. The suggestion that compliance with the order could have been secured by having an extra train ready to run if the regular one was not on time hardly is practical, and is not an adequate answer, even in form. For the defendant advertised, or at least had the right to advertise, the interstate train, and, if it did so, would not free itself from liability for a delay on the part of that train by offering another. We think it plain that this order was applied in a way that was beyond the power of the Commission and courts of the state."

(c) Charges on Poles and Wires (p. 582)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Mackay Tel., etc., Co., v. Little Rock, (1919) 250 U. S. 94, 39 S. Ct. 428, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 131 Ark. 306, 199 S. W. 90.

i. Warehouses and Elevators (p. 617)

Weighing.—A state statute is constitutional prohibiting "any person, corporation or association other than a duly authorized and bonded state weigher to issue any weight certificate . . . [for any] grain weighed at any warehouse or elevator in this state where duly appointed and qualified state weighers are stationed . . . or to make any charge for such weighing, . . . or weight certificates." Merchants' Exch. v. Missouri, (1919) 248 U. S. 365, 39 S. Ct. 114, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 269 Mo. 346, 190 S. W. 903, Ann. Cas. 1917E 871, wherein the court said: "Section 63 does not violate the commerce clause of the Constitution. The contention that it does was rested below solely on the ground that the prohibition, as applied to grain received from or shipped to points without the state, burdens interstate commerce. It clearly does not. Pittsburg & Southern Coal Co. v. Louisiana, 156 U. S. 590; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452."

c 1 (1) In General (p. 639)

Licensing vessels engaged in lobster fisheries.—The imposition of a license fee for smacks or vessels engaged in the lobster fisheries on waters within the jurisdiction of the state, and moving in interstate commerce, if reasonable, is not a burden on interstate commerce. State v. Dodge, (1918) 117 Me. 269, 104 Atl. 5.

g 1 (1) Prohibiting Transportation of Natural Gas (p. 645)

State regulation of local rates.—The sale and delivery of gas to customers at burner tips by local distributing companies operating under special franchises, and the payment of two-thirds of their receipts to the natural gas company furnishing the gas through interstate pipe lines, do not constitute any part of interstate commerce so as to exclude state regulation of local rates as confiscatory and unduly burdening such commerce. Public Utilities Commission v. Landon, (1919) 249 U. S. 236, 39 S. Ct. 268, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (reversing (D. C. Kan. 1916) 234 Fed. 152 (D. C. Kan. 1917) 242 Fed. 658, (D. C. Kan. 1917) 245 Fed. 950), wherein the court said: "That the transportation of gas through pipe lines from one state to another is interstate commerce may not be doubted. Also, it is clear that as part of such commerce the receivers might sell and deliver gas so transported to local distributing companies free from unreasonable interference by the state. American Express Co. v. Iowa, (1905) 196 U. S. 133, 143, 25 S. Ct. 182; West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co., (1911) 221 U. S. 229 [31 S. Ct. 564, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 716, 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 193]; Haskell v. Kansas Natural Gas Co., (1912) 224 U. S. 217 [32 S. Ct. 442, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 738]. But in no proper sense can it be said, under the facts here disclosed, that sale and delivery of gas to their customers at burner-tips by the local companies operating under special franchises constituted any part of interstate commerce. The companies received supplies which had moved in such commerce and then disposed thereof at retail in due course of their own local business. Payment to the receivers of sums amounting to two-thirds of the product of these sales did not make them integral parts of their interstate business. In fact, they lacked authority to engage by agent or otherwise in the retail transactions carried on by the local companies. Interstate commerce is a practical conception and what falls within it must be determined upon consideration of established facts and known commercial methods. Rearick v. Pennsylvania, (1906) 203 U. S. 507, 512 [27 S. Ct. 159, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 295, 296]; Pipe Line Cases, (1914) 234 U. S. 548, 560 [34 S. Ct. 956, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1459, 1470]. The thing which the receivers actually did was to deliver supplies to local companies. Exercising franchise rights, the latter distributed and sold the commodity so obtained upon their own account and paid the receivers what amounted to two-thirds of their receipts from customers. Interstate movement ended when the gas passed into local mains. The court below erroneously adopted the contrary view and upon it rested the conclusion that the public commissions were interfering with establishment of compensatory rates by the receivers in violation of their rights under the Fourteenth Amendment."

w 1 (1) Right of States to Exclude Foreign Corporations or Impose Conditions (p. 652)

Reasonableness of fee.—The exaction from a foreign manufacturing corporation having a capital stock of $5,000,000 of the $1,000 fee, fixed by Va. Acts 1910, chap. 53, § 38a, as a condition of permitting foreign corporations with a capital stock of more than $1,000,000 and not exceeding $10,000,000, to do local business in the state, does not unlawfully burden interstate commerce, the fees prescribed by the statute not varying in direct proportion to capital stock, and there being a fixed maximum. General Ry. Signal Co. v. Virginia, (1918) 246 U. S. 50, 38 S. Ct. 360, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 854, affirming (1916) 118 Va. 301, 87 S. E. 598.

XI (1 In General (p. 657)

Excise tax on foreign corporation.—The imposition of a state excise tax as a condition of admitting a foreign manufacturing and trading corporation engaged in both local and interstate commerce to do business within the state, based upon the amount of its authorized capital stock, without limitation of the amount of the tax, constitutes an unlawful burden on interstate commerce. International Paper Co. v. Massachusetts, (1918) 246 U. S. 135, 38 S. Ct. 292, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 624, reversing (1917) 228 Mass. 101, 117 N. E. 246; Locomotive Co. v. Massachusetts, (1918) 246 U. S. 146, 38 S. Ct. 298, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 228 Mass. 117, 117 N. E. 5.

The imposition of a state tax as a condition of admitting a foreign corporation engaged in interstate commerce to do business within the state, based upon the amount of its authorized capital stock, and of a franchise tax based upon capital, surplus and undivided profits, constitutes an unlawful burden on interstate commerce. Looney v. Crane, (1917) 245 U. S. 178, 38 S. Ct. 85, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 230, affirming (N. D. Tex. 1914) 218 Fed. 260.

Privilege tax on manufacturing business.—A municipal license tax upon the conduct of a manufacturing business in the city is not an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce merely because the amount of the tax is measured by the amount of sales of goods manufactured in the local factory, whether sold within or without the state, either in domestic or interstate commerce. American Mfg. Co. v. St. Louis, (1919) 250 U. S. 450, 39 S. Ct. 522, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (affirming (Mo. 1917) 198 S. W. 1183) wherein the court said: "There is no doubt of the power of the state, or of the city acting under its authority, to impose a license tax in the nature of an excise upon the conduct of a manufacturing business in the city. Unless some particular interference with federal right be shown, the states are free to lay privilege and occupation taxes. Clark v. Titusville, (1902) 184 U. S. 329; [22 S. Ct. 382, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 569]; St. Louis v. United R. Co., (1908) 210 U. S. 286, 276, [28 S. Ct. 630, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 1054, 1059.] The city might have measured such tax by a percentage upon the value of all goods manufactured, whether they ever should come to be sold or not, and have required payment as soon as, or even before, the goods left the factory. In order to mitigate the burden, and also, perhaps, to bring merchants and manufacturers upon an equal footing in this regard, it has postponed ascertainment and payment of the tax until the manufacturer can bring the goods into market. A somewhat similar method of postponing payment has been pursued for many years by the Federal Government with respect to the internal revenue tax upon distilled spirits."

(3) Separation of Interstate from Intrastate Commerce (p. 657)

Material part of business intrastate.—Where a material part of the business of a foreign corporation conducted in a state is intrastate that state may impose a license tax. On Adding Mach. Co. v. St. Louis, (1918) 246 U. S. 498, 38 S. Ct. 361, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 851, affirming (1916) 118 Va. 563, 88 S. E. 167.

(b) Tax on Instrumentalities of Commerce as Property (p. 667)

Tax on privilege of engaging in interstate commerce.—Consistently with the commerce clause a state cannot tax the privilege or act of engaging in interstate commerce, but may tax the company's property within the state although chiefly employed in such commerce. Wells v. Nevada, (1918) 248 U. S. 165, 39 S. Ct. 62, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1915) 38 Nev. 505, 150 Pac. 836.

bb. Rolling Stock (p. 668)

Double taxation.—The cars of a foreign freight line company are not twice taxed nor excessively valued merely because the state, in addition to imposing a tax upon the company property employed within the state, measured by gross earnings from the property so employed, which are derived largely from interstate commerce, makes the rents of the railroads from shipments in the freight line company's cars, less the rental paid to that company, a factor in valuing for taxation the property on which the railroads are taxed. Cudahy Packing Co. v. Minnesota, (1918) 246 U. S. 450, 38 S. Ct. 373, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 827, affirming (1915) 129 Minn. 30, 151 N. W. 410.

Leased refrigerator cars.—A foreign corporation leasing refrigerator cars to railway companies for freight transportation may be taxed by a state upon the basis of a fixed percentage of its corporate earnings from the operation of its car line within the state, although such earnings are derived largely from interstate commerce, where the tax is locally viewed as imposed in respect of the property employed within the state rather than upon the earnings, is expressly declared to be in lieu of other taxes on such property, is part of a general taxation system which the state applies to railroads, telephones, and the like, and is not in excess of what would be legitimate as an ordinary tax upon the property, viewed with reference to the use in which it is employed. Cudahy Packing Co. v. Minnesota, (1918) 246 U. S. 450, 38 S. Ct. 373, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 827, affirming (1915) 129 Minn. 30, 151 N. W. 410.

dd. According to Unit Rule (p. 677)

Mileage basis.—See infra, p. 870 of this supplement for a consideration of this question.

(ff) Effect of Act of Congress of July 24, 1866 (p. 688)

An annual license tax of $300 for the privilege of doing business within the city limits, excluding interstate and government service, may be imposed by a municipality under state authority upon a telegraph company which has accepted the provisions of the Act of July 24, 1866 (see vol. 9, p. 505), where such tax does not burden or discriminate against interstate business, and where the local business purporting to be taxed is so substantial in amount that it does not clearly appear that the tax is a disguised attempt to tax interstate commerce. Such a tax is not an inspection measure, limited in amount to the cost of issuing a license or supervising the business, but is an exercise of the police power of the state for revenue purposes restricted to internal commerce, and therefore within the taxing power of the state. Postal Tel.-Cable Co. v. Richmond, (1919) 249 U. S. 252, 39 S. Ct. 265, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

An annual fee of $2 for each telegraph pole that a telegraph company which has accepted the Act of July 24, 1866 (see vol. 9, p. 505), and is engaged in interstate commerce, maintains or uses in the streets of the city, will not be deemed to be beyond the power of the city to impose by ordinance,—even if the net returns from the intrastate business are less than the tax thus imposed,—where such tax does not seem excessive, having regard to the necessary burdens which the poles and wires in the streets must impose upon the city. Postal Tel.-Cable Co. v. Richmond, (1919) 249 U. S. 252, 39 S. Ct. 265, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

(27) Taxation of Exports (p. 720)

Tax on business of selling goods in foreign commerce.—A state tax imposed upon the business of selling goods in foreign commerce, the amount of which is measured by the gross receipts, is unconstitutional as a regulation of foreign commerce and also as an impost upon exports, levied without the consent of Congress. Crew Levick Co. v. Pennsylvania, (1917) 245 U. S. 292, 38 S. Ct. 126, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 295, reversing (1917) 256 Pa. St. 508, 100 Atl. 952.

32 (a) Tax on Gross Income (p. 722)

Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. State, (1916) 163 Wis. 484, cited as authority for the original annotation, is affirmed in (1918) 247 U. S. 132.

(39) Tax on Income from Interstate Business (p. 726)

A state, in levying a general income tax on the gains and profits of a domestic corporation, may include in the computation the net income derived from transactions in interstate commerce, without contravening the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, where there is no discrimination against interstate commerce either in the admeasurement of the tax or in the means adopted for enforcing it. United States Glue Co. v. Oak Creek, (1918) 247 U. S. 321, affirming (1915) 161 Wis. 211, which was cited in the original annotation.

Vol. X, p. 743, art. 1, sec. 8.

3. Different Operation in Different States (p. 748)

The Bankruptcy Acts of Congress may recognize the laws of the several states in certain particulars although such recognition may lead to different results in different states. Stellwagen v. Clum, (1918) 245 U. S. 605, 38 S. Ct. 215, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 507, on certificate from Circuit Court of Appeals for Sixth Circuit, case below being reported in (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 730, 134 C. C. A. 408.

d. Non-conflicting Provisions of State Laws (p. 756)

Fraudulent transfers.—The federal bankruptcy laws did not suspend the provisions of Ohio Rev. Stat. §§ 6343, 6344, under which transfers made to an insolvent which are actually or constructively fraudulent may be declared void at the suit of any creditor, in which suit a receiver may be appointed to take charge of all the assets of the debtor, including the property conveyed, and administer the same for the equal benefit of creditors, as in cases of assignments to trustees for the benefit of creditors, there being no attempt by the Ohio statutes to provide for the discharge of the debtor from his existing debts. Stellwagen v. Clum, (1918) 245 U. S. 605, 38 S. Ct. 215, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 507, on certificate from Circuit Court of Appeals for Sixth Circuit, case below being reported in (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 730, 134 C. C. A. 408.

Vol. X, p. 888, art. 1, sec. 9.

XI. Tax on Income from Goods Exported (p. 891)

To same effect as original annotation see Peck v. Lowe, (1918) 247 U. S. 165, 38 S. Ct. 432, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1049, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 125, cited in the original annotation.

Vol. X, p. 944, art. 1, sec. 10.

1. Limitation on the Power of the States (p. 948)

Legislative, not judicial, action is what is forbidden by the prohibition against impairing contract obligations. McCoy v. Union El. R. Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 354, 38 S. Ct. 504, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1156.

1. In General (p. 950)

Care of highway crossings.—Railway companies may be required by the states, in the exercise of the police power, to make streets and highways crossed by the tracks of such companies reasonably safe and convenient for public use, and to do this at their own expense. Great Northern R. Co. v. Minnesota, (1918) 246 U. S. 434, 38 S. Ct. 346, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 817, affirming (1916) 132 Minn. 474, 157 N. W. 1069.

Regulation of railroad rates.—When parties enter into a contract with a public service corporation relating to rates, they are presumed to have done so with the knowledge that the right of the state to exercise this police power in the future is expressly reserved, and that where the common weal and the interests of the public demand that the provisions of the contract thus entered into shall be modified, it can be done without any violation of the provision of the Constitution of the United States with reference to the impairment of the obligation of contracts. Leiper v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1918) 262 Pa. St. 328, 105 Atl. 551.

2. State Cannot Divest Itself of Police Power (p. 956)

Police power as attribute of sovereignty.—“The police power of a state is an attribute of sovereignty, and exists without any reservation in the constitution, being founded on the duty of the state to protect its citizens and provide for the safety and good order of society.” People v. Johnson, (1919) 288 Ill. 442, 123 N. E. 543.

Exempting railroad from taxation.—Where a railroad charter contains tax exemptions such exemptions cannot be revoked by subsequent provisions in the state constitution. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Wright, (1919) 248 U. S. 525, 39 S. Ct. 181, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 146 Ga. 406, 91 S. E. 471.

1. In General (p. 957)

Sale of tax-sale certificates.—Where a state statute is amended so as to permit a county to sell tax-sale certificates at a less sum than the total amount of taxes, interest and costs due, a person purchasing such certificates after the amendment for the total amount due the company must trace his title and rights through it, and there is no impairment of his contract if the county exercises its option to sell certificates at less than the total amount due. Glen Invest. Co. v. Romero, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 236, 165 C. C. A. 527.

IV. Power of Eminent Domain (p. 959)

Contracts of state affecting its governmental authority.—The state cannot, by virtue of the contract clause of the Federal Constitution, divest itself by contract of the right to exert its governmental authority in matters which, from their very nature, so concern that authority that to restrain its exercise by contract would be a renunciation of power to legislate for the preservation of society, or to secure the performance of essential governmental duties. Pennsylvania Hospital v. Philadelphia, (1917) 245 U. S. 20, 38 S. Ct. 35, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 124, affirming (1916) 254 Pa. St. 392, 98 Atl. 1077.

Taking property of hospital.—The state is not prevented by the provisions of the Federal Constitution against impairing the obligation of contracts, from acquiring, under the right of eminent domain, land for the opening of a street through hospital grounds, and also the rights acquired by the hospital under a contract with the state, created by a law forbidding the opening of any street through such grounds without the consent of the hospital authorities, as the power of eminent domain is so inherently governmental and so essential to the public welfare that it cannot be abridged by agreement. Pennsylvania Hospital v. Philadelphia, (1917) 245 U. S. 20, 38 S. Ct. 35, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 124, affirming (1916) 254 Pa. St. 392, 98 Atl. 1077.

11 a. In General (p. 966)

Convict labor contracts.—Regulations providing for the release of convicts from confinement in the prisons, and their employment in the open air outside of the penitentiary, under conditions that enable them to earn for their own benefit something beyond the cost of their maintenance, have a direct relation to the public welfare and public safety, the preservation of their health, and the preservation of public morals. The state cannot, therefore, by contract or otherwise, barter away its duty and right to adopt such measures as it may, from time to time, deem advisable for the promotion of those ends, and if it attempts to do so such attempt is futile. Such a regulation does not for example impair the obligation of a contract hiring out convicts to contractors for profit. Jones Hollow Ware Co. v. Crane, (Md. 1919) 106 Atl. 274, 3 A. L. R. 1658.

12. Contracts of Municipal Corporations (p. 979)

Municipal bonds.—An amendment of a state statute so as to authorize the appointment of special collectors, each charged with the duty of collecting only some designated part of assessed county taxes, instead of requiring the appointment of a sheriff or single collector to collect all money due the state, county or taxing district, as previously required, impairs the obligation of the contract of the holder of a bond issued by a county previous to the amendment, as a collector appointed to collect taxes for the payment of such a bond may fail to qualify as collector, or to discharge the duties of his office. Hendrickson v. Apperson, (1918) 245 U. S. 105, 38 S. Ct. 44, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 178, affirming (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 473, 151 C. C. A. 409.

17 a. Exclusive Privileges (p. 1039)

Interurban electric railway.—The grant by a county board of a right to locate, construct, maintain and operate an interurban electric railway along a state highway, without specifying any limit of time, must be held—unless there are controlling provisions in the state constitution or statutes, or a prior adjudication by its courts to the contrary—to constitute, when accepted, a perpetual franchise, protected by U. S. Const. art. 1, § 10, against revocation by subsequent resolution of such board. Northern Ohio Traction, etc., Co. v. Ohio, (1918) 245 U. S. 574, 38 S. Ct. 196, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 481, L. R. A. 1918E 865, reversing (1915) 93 Ohio St. 466, 114 N. E. 63.

Municipal railway paralleling existing privately owned line.—The establishment of a municipal street railway paralleling an existing privately owned line was not precluded by Cal. Civ. Code, sec. 499, which, as it stood when the private franchise was granted, provided that "two corporations may be permitted to use the same streets, each paying an equal portion for the construction of the track, but in no case must two railroad corporations occupy and use the same street or track for a distance of more than five blocks," or by the provision of the franchise ordinance that the city may grant to one other corporation and no more the right to use either of the streets embraced in such franchise for five blocks and no more, after the forms and conditions specified in such code section, the city having thereafter, by the amendment of April 24, 1911, to such section, and by Cal. Const., art. 11, sec. 19, been given the right to establish and operate transportation service. United Railroads of San Francisco v. San Francisco, (1919) 249 U. S. 517, 39 S. Ct. 361, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (N. D. Cal. 1917) 239 Fed. 987.

The injury to an existing privately owned street railway system from the establishment of a parallel municipal street railway, in so far as such injury is an inevitable consequence of the doing by the city of what the street railway company's franchise did not make unlawful, is not a taking of the company's property that requires resort to eminent domain. United Railroads of San Francisco v. San Francisco, (1919) 249 U. S. 517, 39 S. Ct. 361, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (N. D. Cal. 1917) 239 Fed. 987.

The federal Supreme Court, upon affirming a decree which dismissed the bill in a suit to enjoin the municipal construction of a street railway paralleling and crossing an existing privately owned line, will not direct that the bill be retained for a claim of damages growing out of the construction of the road, but will order that the affirmance be without prejudice to further proceedings to recover any damages to which the street railway company may be entitled. United Railroads of San Francisco v. San Francisco, (1919) 249 U. S. 517, 39 S. Ct. 361, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (N. D. Cal. 1917) 239 Fed. 987.

Protection against municipal competition without compensation is not accorded an existing privately owned street railway system by a provision of the municipal charter requiring the city to consider offers for the sale of existing public utilities before constructing new ones. United Railroad of San Francisco v. San Francisco, (1919) 249 U. S. 517, 39 S. Ct. 361, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (N. D. Cal. 1917) 239 Fed. 987.

c. Municipal Control (p. 1042)

Requiring removal of tracks.—A municipal ordinance directing a railway company to remove its tracks from a busy street intersection does not offend against the contract and due process of law clauses, even though the company may have a vested right to maintain the track there, where the attendant disadvantages and expense are small, there being other accessible and fairly convenient means of getting cars to and from its tracks beyond such crossing. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Denver, (1919) 250 U. S. 241, 39 S. Ct. 450, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

(2) When Subject to Legislative or Municipal Control (p. 1047)

Requiring street railway to give longer ride for same fare.—When a continuous trip begins on a nonfranchise line and is over a franchise line and a nonfranchise line, the former having the right to charge five cents for a trip over it, an ordinance compelling the carrying of passengers over both for five cents impairs the obligation of the franchise contract. Detroit United R. Co. v. Detroit, (1919) 248 U. S. 429, 39 S. Ct. 151, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, following Detroit United R. Co. v. Michigan, (1916) 242 U. S. 238, 37 S. Ct. 87, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 268.

c. Regulation of Lighting Rates (p. 1062)

Changing rate in private contract.—Where a lighting company enters into a contract with a private corporation to supply it with power and light at a certain rate for a definite time, the lighting company may, notwithstanding such contract, increase the rate before its expiration if authorized by an order of a public service commission having power from the legislature to regulate rates. Union Dry Goods Co. v. Georgia Pub. Service Corp., (1919) 248 U. S. 372, 39 S. Ct. 117, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 145 Ga. 658, 89 S. E. 779.

37. Interest (p. 1091)

Interest on judgments.—The application to a subsisting judgment on noninterest-bearing county warrants which awards interest at a definite specified rate of the provisions of an Arkansas statute, subsequently enacted, that "no judgment rendered or to be rendered against any county in the state on county warrants or other evidence of county indebtedness shall bear any interest after the passage of this act," does not violate the contract or due process of law clauses of the Federal Constitution. Missouri, etc., Min. Co. v. Greenwood Dist., (1919) 249 U. S. 170, 39 S. Ct. 202, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "Plaintiff in error maintains that the challenged act conflicts with § 10, Art. I, of the Constitution and also the Fourteenth Amendment forbidding a state from depriving any person of property without due process of law; but we think the contrary is settled by our opinion in Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., (1892) 146 U. S. 162, 168, 171 [13 S. Ct. 54, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 925, 929, 930]. There the judgment directed that interest should accrue from its entry without mentioning any rate, the statutory one then being seven per centum; later another act fixed six per centum for the future and the debtor claimed benefit of it while the creditor maintained that to permit this would violate both the contract clause and Fourteenth Amendment. . . . It is insisted that as the judgment now under consideration specified a definite interest rate while the one in Morley v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., supra, did not, the doctrine there approved is inapplicable. To this we cannot assent; mere recital of a particular rate does not change the nature of the charge as a penalty or liquidated damages. It should be noted that the county warrants, upon which plaintiff in error sued, bore no interest; if the parties had lawfully stipulated therefor, a different question would have been presented."

1. In General (p. 1113)

In order that a state statute may impair the obligation of a contract, the statute must affect the validity, construction, discharge, or enforcement of the contract. Virginia, etc., Coal Co. v. Charles, (W. D. Va. 1917) 251 Fed. 83.

Street railroad franchise.—Increased street railway operating costs and decreased net revenues due to war conditions and to an increased wage scale fixed by the National War Labor Board, though rendering unremunerative the street railway fares fixed by municipal franchise ordinances which, by acceptance, became valid contracts, mutually binding for the twenty-five-year term named therein, do not absolve the street railway company from the obligations of its contract so as to justify it in surrendering its franchises and excuse it from giving service at the rates so fixed—especially where it cannot be said that, taking all the years of the term together, the contract will prove unremunerative. Columbus R., etc., Co. v. Columbus, (1919) 249 U. S. 399, 39 S. Ct. 349, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming (S. D. Ohio 1918) 253 Fed. 499), wherein the court said: "There is no showing that the contracts have become impossible of performance. Nor is there any allegation establishing the fact that taking the whole term together the contracts will be necessarily unprofitable. This case is not like the Denver v. Denver Union Water Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 178, [38 S. Ct. 278, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 649], and the Detroit United R. Co. v. Detroit, (1919) 248 U. S. 429, [39 S. Ct. 151, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —], in both of which the franchise to use the streets of the city had expired by limitation, and it was sought to require continued operation of a waterworks system in the one case and in the other of a street railway system, under rates which would afford no adequate return to the companies. In this case the company seeks the aid of a court of equity to avoid contracts duly made and entered into while the same are yet in force. . . . It is undoubtedly true that the breaking out of the World War was not contemplated, nor was the subsequent action of the War Labor Board within the purview of the parties when the contract was made. That there might be a rise in the cost of labor, and that the contract might at some part of the period covered become unprofitable by reason of strikes or the necessity for higher wages might reasonably have been within their contemplation when the contract was made and provisions made accordingly. There is no showing in the bill that the war or the award of the War Labor Board necessarily prevented the performance of the contract. Indeed, as we have said, there is no showing, as in the nature of things there cannot be, that the performance of the contract, taking all the years of the term together, will prove unremunerative. We are unable to find here the intervention of that superior force which ends the obligation of a valid contract by preventing its performance. It may be, and taking the allegations of the bill to be true, it undoubtedly is, a case of a hard bargain. But equity does not relieve from hard bargains simply because they are such. It may be that the efficiency of the service and fairness in dealing with the company which performs such important and necessary service ought to require an advance in rates; such was the strongly announced opinion of the War Labor Board. But these and kindred considerations address themselves to the duly constituted authorities having the control of the subject-matter." See to the same effect Burr v. Columbus, (1919) 249 U. S. 415, 39 S. Ct. 354, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, decided on authority of the above case.

4. Statutes of Limitations (p. 1116)

Repeal of statute of limitations.—To the same effect as the original annotation see Gilbert v. Selleck, (1919) 93 Conn. 412, 106 Atl. 439, where in the court said: "This remedial legislation is assailed as in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which declares that no state shall 'deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.' The action it seeks to affect is based upon a contract of indemnity to recover for the violation of an implied promise to pay money. 'The statute of limitations does not destroy the debt; it merely takes away the remedy.' After its bar has operated, the debtor may waive it. He may make a new promise to pay, and the existing debt is a sufficient consideration. A vested right in a remedy which the debtor may disregard would be an anomaly. The debt, and hence the obligation to pay, never ceases. Hence it is that the repeal of the statute under which the bar has fallen lifts the bar and permits recovery of the debt theretofore barred. The statute was the creation of the legislative will, and its repeal did not affect the debt; it merely again permitted the enforcement of an existing obligation. The question has been authoritatively settled in Campbell v. Holt, 115 U. S.

620, on page 629, 6 Sup. Ct. 209, on page 214 (29 L. Ed. 483), in which opinion Mr. Justice Miller said: "We are unable to see how a man can be said to have property in the bar of the statute as a defense to his promise to pay. In the most liberal extension of the use of the word "property" to choses in actions, to incorporeal rights, it is new to call the defense of lapse of time to the obligation to pay money property. It is no natural right. It is the creation of conventional law. . . . We can see no right which the promisor has in the law which permits him to plead lapse of time instead of payment, which shall prevent the legislature from repealing that law, because its effect is to make him fulfill his honest obligations."

b. Changing Rules of Evidence (p. 1134)

Presumptions.—"As there is no vested right in rules of evidence, the general principle is that the obligation of a contract is not impaired, nor due process of law nor the equal protection of law denied by a statute making a fact proved presumptive evidence of another. This statement of the rule and its limitation has been adopted by the Supreme Court:

"That a legislative presumption of one fact from evidence of another may not constitute a denial of due process of law or a denial of the equal protection of the law, it is only essential that there shall be some rational connection between the fact proved and the ultimate fact presumed, and that the inference of one fact from proof of another shall not be so unreasonable as to be a purely arbitrary mandate. So, also, it must not, under guise of regulating the presentation of evidence, operate to preclude the party from the right to present his defense to the main fact thus presumed." Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Turnipseed, (1910) 219 U. S. 35, 31 S. Ct. 136, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 78, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 228, Ann. Cas. 1912A 463." Virginia, etc., Coal Co. v. Charles, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 379, 165 C. C. A. 599.

14. Impairment Vel Non in Sundry Instances (p. 1137)

Redemption of lands from foreclosure.—The obligations of the contract of the state of California with a purchaser of public land, which gave to the state the right to foreclose for default in payment of the purchase price, and to the purchaser the privilege of redemption within twenty days from the entry of the foreclosure decree upon payment of the amount due the state and the costs of suit, were not impaired by the enactment of subsequent legislation under which, in case principal and interest were in arrears for five years, and the state had issued to a subsequent purchaser another certificate for the same land, the first purchaser's right to the land and to complete the contract of purchase was cut off unless he should pay all unpaid interest within six months from the passage of the act. Aikins v. Kingsbury, (1918) 247 U. S. 484, 38 S. Ct. 558, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1226, affirming (1915) 170 Cal. 674, 151 Pac. 145.

Vol. X, p. 1146, art. 1, sec. 10.

II. When Goods Lose Character as Imports or Domestic Character (p. 1148)

Original package.—Where cans of milk preparation are shipped from one state to another in fibre cases containing forty-eight one-pound cans the case is the original package and not each individual can. Hebe Co. v. Shaw, (1919) 248 U. S. 297, 39 S. Ct. 125, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Vol. X, p. 1158, art. 1, sec. 10.

1. When Consent to Be Given (p. 1158)

Assistance to federal government in time of war.—States may enact legislation beneficial to the federal government while it is at war with a foreign country, such for example as legislation compelling male residents of a state between eighteen and fifty-five to be employed during the period of the war and six months thereafter. State v. McClure, (Del. 1919) 105 Atl. 712.

Vol. XI, p. 72, art. 3, sec. 1.

c. Validity of State Statutes Under State Constitutions (p. 79)

Interpretation of municipal ordinance.—The federal courts may interpret for themselves a municipal ordinance which is asserted to constitute a contract protected by the contract clause of the Federal Constitution against subsequent impairment. Mitchell v. Dakota Cent. Telephone Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 396, 38 S. Ct. 362, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 793.

5. Interference by Political Department with Judicial Power (p. 81)

Who is sovereign of another country as judicial question.—Who is the sovereign de jure or de facto of a territory is not a judicial question, but is a political one, the determination of which by the legislative and executive departments of any government conclusively binds the judges as well as all other officers, citizens and subjects of that government. Oetjen v. Central Leather Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 297, 38 S. Ct. 309, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 726, affirming (1915) 87 N. J. L. 552, 704, 94 Atl. 789, L. R. A. 1917A 276; Ricaud v. American Metal Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 304, 38 S. Ct. 312, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 733.

Vol. XI, p. 95, art. 3, sec. 2.*5a (1) In General (p. 118)

Contract to serve as master of vessel.—A contract made in California to proceed to Alaska and after arrival there to serve for a year as master of a vessel and perform certain duties in connection therewith for an agreed compensation is not governed by the laws of California, being of a maritime character and therefore governed by the maritime law. Union Fish Co. v. Erickson, (1919) 248 U. S. 308, 39 S. Ct. 112, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 385, 148 C. C. A. 647.

7. Power of State to Legislate over Maritime Law (p. 122)

A state statute as to death by wrongful act confers no jurisdiction on a court of admiralty as to death by collision on the high seas. The Sagamore, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 743, 159 C. C. A. 601.

Vol. XI, p. 153, art. 3, sec. 2.*f (1) Between Two States (p. 156)

Questions of boundary between two states.—The Supreme Court has jurisdiction of questions of boundary between two states. Arkansas v. Tennessee, (1918) 246 U. S. 158, 38 S. Ct. 301, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 638.

h. Settlement of Public Debt as Between Old and New State (p. 157)

To the same effect as the original annotation see Virginia v. West Virginia, (1918) 246 U. S. 565, 38 S. Ct. 400, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 883, which was another phase of the same case as that cited in the original annotation.

Vol. XI, p. 175, art. 3, sec. 3.*4. Words Oral, Written, or Printed (p. 180)

Combination of intent and act.—In addition to obviously necessary elements, treason, as thus defined, embraces the existence both of a state of mind and the commission of overt acts, and prescribes how the latter shall be proven. The latter requirement demands a trial ruling and is not a demurrer question or in any proper sense a question of pleadings. Treason, as we are now concerned with it, assumes, as the proper attitude of all who are subject to this law, that of being well disposed toward the United States and of being its well wisher, and brands as traitor one who adheres to its enemies and who also levies war upon the United States, or who, in adhering to its enemies, gives those enemies aid and comfort. It is conceivable that a defendant may have this condemned attitude of mind or be what is termed 'traitor at heart,' and yet not expose himself to the charge of legal treason because he has committed no traitorous act. It is also conceivable that one under the domination of folly or of factional feeling or directed by a perverted view of what he is doing, or even a wrong-headed conscience, may do what would otherwise be traitorous acts, and yet not expose himself to that charge because the acts, although carrying all the consequences of traitorous acts, were done without traitorous purpose or intent. Such a man plays the part of a traitor, but is not a traitor at heart. U. S. v. Werner, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 247 Fed. 708.

Vol. XI, p. 185, art. 4, sec. 1.*2. Effect of Proceedings of United States Courts (p. 190)

Decree by Circuit Court.—A United States Circuit Court has jurisdiction to issue a decree quieting title to land of the complainant, alleged to be situated in the state where the court sits, and cancelling grants of the land to the defendant by another state, and such decree is entitled to be given full faith and credit by all other United States courts. Ferguson v. Babcock Lumber, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 705, 164 C. C. A. 545.

9. Effect of Foreign Judgment (p. 192)

Presumption as to validity of foreign judgment.—There is a general presumption in favor of the regularity and validity of judgments of the courts of sister states and this presumption is strong enough to warrant the court in inferring that a judgment was rendered upon a count upon which it lawfully could have been entered. Tucker v. Columbian Nat. Life Ins. Co., (Mass. 1919) 122 N. E. 285.

c. Probate of Will (p. 211)

Soundness of mind of legatee.—The refusal of a federal court sitting in Louisiana to require an executor to pay over a share of the decedent's estate to a legatee who had been adjudged incapable of taking care of his person and administering his estate by a judgment of interdiction of the Louisiana courts cannot be said to deny full faith and credit to a decree of a Tennessee court adjudicating such person to be of sound mind and entitled to settlement from all persons having control of any part of his estate, and removing any disability by reason of such interdiction, where, under the Louisiana law, no accounting or settlement may be had until either a curator has been appointed or the interdiction has been removed, since, whatever may be the conclusiveness of the Tennessee decree, it cannot operate upon the interdiction directly, but at most can only furnish ground for a conclusive right to have the interdiction removed. Gasquet v. Fenner, (1918) 247 U. S. 16, 38 S. Ct. 416, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 956, affirming (E. D. La. 1916) 235 Fed. 997.

(4) Decree of Alimony (p. 214)

Divorce with alimony.—The refusal of a state court to treat a decree of a court of another state, granting a divorce with alimony, as a bar to an independent suit by the wife in the former state to recover alimony out of the real property of the husband, situated in that state, denies to such decree the full faith and credit required by the Federal Constitution, where in the divorce proceedings there were charges of cruelty and counter charges, a display of property, prayers for divorce, and a prayer by the wife in her cross bill that the husband be required to restore a sum borrowed from her, "and that the court award her such alimony as the facts and law warrant, and all other proper and necessary relief," and where the decree, responding to the issues thus made and the relief thus prayed, adjudged the husband to be guilty of cruelty, granted the wife a divorce, and awarded her a lump sum "in full of alimony and all other demands set forth in the cross bill," and recited that it was rendered "by the consent" of the husband, on condition that no appeal be taken, and where the evidence in the second suit confirms the face of the decree, and that it was rendered by consent of the parties. Bates v. Bodie, (1918) 245 U. S. 520, 38 S. Ct. 182, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 444, L. R. A. 1918C 355, reversing (1916) 99 Neb. 253, 156 N. W. 8.

j. Stockholders' Liability (p. 216)

Stockholders' liability.—A judgment of a North Dakota court by which the receiver of an insolvent Minnesota corporation was denied the right to enforce against one of its stockholders an order of a Minnesota court levying an assessment on the stockholders generally, made in a sequestration suit brought against the corporation conformably to Minn. Gen. Stat. 1905, secs. 3173, 3184-3187, denies the constitutional full faith and credit due the Minnesota laws and proceedings, although the Minnesota court may have been mistaken in its assumption that the corporation was of the class whose stock is assessable for corporate debts and was not one of the excepted class, where, in Minnesota, such an order is conclusive against all the stockholders, as to all matters relating to the amount, propriety and necessity of the assessment, including the questions of the character and insolvency of the corporation, leaving open the questions whether a particular person is a stockholder or holds the number of shares attributed to him, whether he has discharged his liability, or has a claim which may be set off against the assessment, and whether he has any other defense which is personal to himself. Marin v. Augedahl, (1918) 247 U. S. 142, 38 S. Ct. 452, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1038, reversing (1916) 32 N. D. 536, 156 N. W. 101.

n. Assessment on Members of Mutual Insurance Company (p. 217)

Decree affecting assessment of members of mutual insurance company.—A decree of the home state of a life insurance company issuing benefit certificates on the assessment plan, by which it was adjudged that it was proper and reasonable for the company to hold a fund collected in advance in order to enable it to pay losses promptly, and that any excess in the fund above the average of the four preceding quarterly assessments should be distributed to certificate holders in diminution of assessments by crediting the excess on account of the next succeeding assessment, is denied the full faith and credit to which it is entitled, where the court of another state holds that a benefit certificate issued by such company was not forfeited by nonpayment of an assessment because such assessment, together with the fund on hand, exceeded the quarterly average. Hartford Life Ins. Co. v. Barber, (1917) 245 U. S. 146, 38 S. Ct. 54, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 208, reversing (1916) 269 Mo. 21, 187 S. W. 867.

Vol. XI, p. 220, art. 4, sec. 2.

There is No Doubt of the Power of the State to Prohibit Foreign Insurance Companies, Etc. (p. 229)

Statutory regulations affecting foreign insurance companies.—A Pennsylvania fire insurance company which, in the exercise of its right, under the Pennsylvania laws, to write insurance on property outside the state, issued policies on property in Florida, dealing through local insurance brokers for a series of years, permitting them to receive and receipt for premiums and transfer them to it, and consult with them about the subject-matter and with what companies the risk was divided, and accepting the benefit of their action while receiving premiums and issuing new policies, cannot successfully claim that by construing Fla. Gen. Laws, secs. 2765, 2777, as making such brokers the agents of the insurance company with the right to waive a warranty in the policies as to the existence of concurrent insurance with an approved and designated company doing business in Florida, there was denied full faith and credit to the Pennsylvania laws, or that the privileges and immunities, due process of law, or equal protection of the laws clauses of the Federal Constitution were violated. American F. Ins. Co. v. King Lumber, etc., Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 2, 39 S. Ct. 431, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

2. State Taxation (p. 232)

Regulating railway construction work.—An unconstitutional discrimination in favor of citizens of Tennessee as against those of other states, results from the provision of Tennessee Acts 1909, ch. 479, under which an annual license tax of $100 in each county is imposed upon a person engaged in railway construction work in Tennessee who has his chief office outside the state, while a person engaged in the same business, but having his chief office within the state, pays an annual tax of but $25 in each county. Chaiker v. Birmingham, etc., R. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 522, 39 S. Ct. 366, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

reversing Wright v. Jackson Constr. Co., (1917) 138 Tenn. 145, 196 S. W. 488, wherein the court said: "Replying to the claim that the statute in effect discriminates against citizens of other states, the Supreme Court of Tennessee, 138 Tennessee 145, 152, 153, said: 'The determining feature in the legislation quoted is the having of one's chief office in this state. Any citizen of this state, as well as any citizen of a foreign state, who has his chief office out of the state, must pay the $100 tax; so of any domestic corporation, as well as foreign corporation, having its chief office out of the state. Any foreign corporation or citizen of another state, or firm, as well as domestic corporations, citizens of this state, and firms of this state having its or their chief office in this state, are all alike entitled to carry on a railroad construction business here on the payment of $25. There is no discrimination at all.'

"With this conclusion we are unable to agree. Accepting the construction placed upon it by the Supreme Court, we think the quoted section does discriminate between citizens of Tennessee and those of other states by imposing a higher charge on the latter than it does on the former, contrary to § 2, Art. IV of the Federal Constitution—"The citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states."

"The power of a state to make reasonable and natural classifications for purposes of taxation is clear and not questioned; but neither under form of classification nor otherwise can any state enforce taxing laws which in their practical operation materially abridge or impair the equality of commercial privileges secured by the Federal Constitution to citizens of the several states. . . .

"It is insisted that no tender of any sum for license tax was made in time, and therefore plaintiff in error cannot question the validity of the enactment because of discrimination. But the Supreme Court expressly declared that the statute is liable of Wright at one hundred dollars. A tender of less would have availed nothing and it was therefore unnecessary."

c. Prohibiting Nonresidents Grazing Cattle (p. 242)

Grazing on public lands.—Privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States are not denied by the provisions of Idaho Rev. Codes 1908, § 6872, prohibiting the grazing of sheep on the federal public domain upon a range previously occupied by cattle. Amaechevarria v. Idaho, (1918) 246 U. S. 343, 38 S. Ct. 323, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 763, affirming (1915) 27 Idaho 797, 152 Pac. 280.

II. Statute of Limitations (p. 247)

Prohibiting certain actions except by citizens of state.—A state statute which provides that "when a cause of action has arisen outside of this state, and, by the laws of the place where it arose, an action thereon is there barred by lapse of time, no such action shall be maintained in this state unless plaintiff be a citizen of the state who has owned the cause of action ever since it accrued," is unconstitutional as being violative of this article and section of the Constitution. Eggen v. Canadian Northern R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 255 Fed. 937, 167 C. C. A. 229, wherein it was said: "It has been wisely seen that this provision of the Constitution is of comprehensive scope (Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 418, 430, 20 L. Ed. 449; Conner v. Elliot, 18 How. 591, 593, 15 L. Ed. 497), and of deep influence in molding the Union into a compact nation (Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239, 251, 19 Sup. Ct. 165, 43 L. Ed. 432; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 180, 19 L. Ed. 357; Lemmon v. People, 20 N. Y. 607). Therefore the courts have prudently refrained from attempting any hard and fast definition of its terms (Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 418, 430, 20 L. Ed. 449; Conner v. Elliot, 18 How. 591, 593, 15 L. Ed. 497; McCready v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 391, 395, 24 L. Ed. 248; Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239, 248, 19 Sup. Ct. 165, 43 L. Ed. 432); but there is no divergence of opinion from the view expressed in Cole v. Cunningham, 133 U. S. 107, 113, 10 Sup. Ct. 269, 271, (33 L. Ed. 538) by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, who said: 'The intention of section 2, art. 4, was to confer on the citizens of the several states a general citizenship, and to communicate all the privileges and immunities which the citizens of the same state would be entitled to under the like circumstances; and this includes the right to institute actions.' Which view was emphasized by Mr. Justice Moody in Chambers v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 207 U. S. 142, 148, 149, 28 Sup. Ct. 34, 35 (52 L. Ed. 143) who said: 'The right to sue and defend in the courts is the alternative of force. In an organized society it is the right conservative of all other rights, and lies at the foundation of orderly government. It is one of the highest and most essential privileges of citizenship, and must be allowed by each state to the citizens of all other states to the precise extent that it is allowed to its own citizens. . . Equality of treatment in this respect is not left to depend upon comity between the states, but is granted and protected by the Federal Constitution. . . Any law by which privileges to begin actions in the courts are given to its own citizens and withheld from the citizens of other states is void, because in conflict with the supreme law of the land.' Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 418, 430 (20 L. Ed. 449); McCready v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 391, 395, 24 L. Ed. 248; Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 230, 249, 19 Sup. Ct. 165, 43 L. Ed. 432; Harris v. Balk, 198 U. S. 215, 223, 25 Sup. Ct. 625, 49 L. Ed. 1023, 3 Ann. Cas. 1084; Corfield v. Coryell, 4 Wash. C. C. 371, 380, Fed. Cas. No. 3,230.

We regard section 7709 as opposed to this constitutional requirement, as it has been expounded in the above decisions, and therefore void."

17. Discriminating Against Individuals Transacting Insurance (p. 249)

Discrimination in favor of residents.—A state statute is constitutional under this clause of the Constitution which is entitled "An act to provide for the licensing of insurance brokers," defines in its first section an insurance broker "to be such person as shall be licensed by the insurance commissioner to represent citizens" of the state "for the placing of insurance in insurers" in the "state or in any other state or country," and provides in the second section, among other conditions, that only such persons may be licensed as are residents of the state and have been licensed insurance agents of the state for at least two years. La Tourette v. McMaster, (1919) 248 U. S. 465, 39 S. Ct. 160, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 104 S. C. 501, 89 S. E. 398, set out in the original annotation.

Vol. XI, p. 284, art. 4, sec. 3.

b. Power to Dispose of Public Lands (p. 286)

Exemption from debts of lands conveyed.—R. S. sec. 2296 (see vol. 8, p. 575) provides as follows: "No lands acquired under the provisions of this [homestead] act shall in any event become liable to the satisfaction of any debt or debts contracted prior to the issuing of the patent thereof." This statute has been held to be constitutional as against the contention that Congress had no power to restrict alienation of homestead lands after conveyance by the United States in fee simple. Ruddy v. Rossi, (1918) 248 U. S. 104, 39 S. Ct. 46, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing on other grounds (1916) 28 Idaho 376, 154 Pac. 977.

Vol. XI, p. 345, amend. 1.

Scope of amendment affecting free speech. "The First Amendment while prohibiting legislation against free speech as such cannot have been, and obviously was not, intended to give immunity for every possible use of language." Frohwerk v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 204, 39 S. Ct. 249, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The Espionage Act of June 15, 1917 (see 1919 Supp. p. 118) does not fall within the language of this amendment. Schenck v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 47, 39 S. Ct. 247, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Frohwerk v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 204, 39 S. Ct. 249, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Debs v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 211, 39 S. Ct. 252, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Contempt (p. 346)

Newspaper publications having reference to pending judicial action which tended and were intended to provoke public resistance to an injunction order, should one be made, and amounted to an attempt unduly to influence the judge with reference to his decision in the matter pending before him, were not safeguarded by the constitutional guaranty of the freedom of the press from being made the basis of the summary contempt proceedings which the Judicial Code, § 268, recognizes and sanctions. Toledo Newspaper Co. v. U. S., (1918) 247 U. S. 402, 38 S. Ct. 560, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1186, affirming (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 986, 150 C. C. A. 636.

Vol. XI, p. 351, amend. 4.

II. Affirmation of Common-law Principles (p. 352)

Waiver of objection to search and seizure.—In U. S. v. Gouled, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 242, regarding the waiver of objections to searches and seizures, it was said: "The purpose of the constitutional provision invoked was to protect the citizen against arbitrary and tyrannical power, and not to furnish him a shield with which to shift according to the different aspect in which his case presented itself to his mind as time went on. And so it is recognized clearly that, while the law protects against unlawful seizures and searches, the defendant may waive, if he thinks it to his advantage, or for any reason, the manner and method of the acquisition of his papers, and thereupon the constitutional objection is removed."

III. Applicable to Criminal Cases Only (p. 353)

Persons protected.—This Amendment embraces all persons, even those accused of crime, although its scope is limited by allowing the search of persons accused of crime when legally arrested, etc. In re Tri-State Coal, etc., Co., (W. D. Pa. 1918) 253 Fed. 605.

VI. "Unreasonable Searches and Seizures" (p. 354)

Consent of an agent of persons, whose property has been seized under an illegal search warrant, to the execution of the warrant does not have the effect of depriving the principals of their rights under this amendment. In re Tri-State Coal, etc., Co., (W. D. Pa. 1918) 253 Fed. 605.

5. Compulsory Production of Books and Papers (p. 355)

Impounding of exhibits in possession of court.—Exhibits voluntarily offered in an infringement suit by the plaintiff may be subsequently impounded by the court for use before the grand jury as the basis for an indictment against him. Such action does not constitute an unreasonable seizure and make the plaintiff a compulsory witness against himself. Perlman v. U. S., 247 U. S. 7.

wherein the court said: "Perlman contends that the proposed use by the United States before the grand jury of the exhibits as a basis for an indictment against him constitutes an unreasonable seizure and makes of him a compulsory witness against himself, in violation of the Fourth and Fifth Amendments. In other words, he claims the same sanctuary for the exhibits in the hands of the court as though they were in his hands and had never been published or delivered to the world. For this he invokes certain principles and cases. The principles are well established. They are paraphrases of the Constitution, giving it in cases a more precise specialization. They preclude, of course, compulsion, either upon the individual or, under some circumstances, his property; nor is it a condition or part of compulsion that there be an actual entry upon premises, an actual search and seizure. The principles preclude as well the extortion of testimony or detrimental inferences from silence or refusals to testify. The incidences of the cases in which the principles were declared do not help Perlman. In all of them there was force or threats or trespass upon property, some invasion of privacy or governmental extortion. In Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, there was an order of the court requiring the production of private books, invoices and papers, the alternative of refusal being that their character as asserted by counsel should be taken as confessed. In Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, there was an effort to compel a witness to disclose circumstances which might be evidence against him of the commission of an offense or might connect him with it. Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, is of like illustration. In United States v. Wong Quong Wong, 94 Fed. Rep. 832, private letters were opened. In United States v. Mills, 185 Fed. Rep. 318, there was a general seizure of all of the defendant's business records by the United States marshal when executing a warrant of arrest. In United States v. Abrams, 230 Fed. Rep. 313, business papers were delivered to an officer under threats or promises of benefit. In Weeks v. United States, 232 U. S. 383, there was an invasion of premises without a search warrant and the carrying away of certain letters and envelopes. The latter case is especially relied on by counsel, and it is definite as to principles and as to seizures the Constitution forbids and those it permits. The distinctions are made clear and the discussion leaves nothing to be added of either principles or their illustration. But it is not like the case at bar. In it there was an invasion of the defendant's privacy, a taking from his immediate and personal possession. In the case at bar there was a voluntary exposition of the articles, for use as evidence in the District Court and in the Circuit Court of Appeals (231 Fed. Rep. 453 and 734), that judicial action should be based upon them, action prayed for by him against another. And they served his purpose; they prevailed as proof and secured a judgment for him."

A letter taken from a seaman on his landing by a private detective acting temporarily as a substitute for a custom house guard at the latter's request, is admissible on a trial of the seaman for unlawfully bringing the letter into the United States. U. S. v. Welsh, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 247 Fed. 239, wherein the court said: "His counsel argues that under the cases of Weeks v. United States, 232 U. S. 383, 34 Sup. Ct. 341, 58 L. Ed. 652, L. R. A. 1915B, 834, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 1177, and Flagg v. United States, 233 Fed. 481, 147 C. C. A. 367, the evidence thus procured could not be used against the defendant. I do not think the government can rest upon the proposition that it was not liable for the acts of McGinnis, because he was a private detective. Martin, the custom house guard, appears to have asked him to act for him while he was temporarily absent, and in the search he must be regarded as a government official pro hac vice. But, assuming this to be the fact, the cases quoted do not apply to the present situation. They only go so far as to hold that private books and papers cannot be seized and used as incriminating evidence. The corpus delicti itself has not, I think, been held incapable of detention and production to establish the crime. If the defendant is right, testimony of a witness of a murder, though furnishing the only evidence, would be excluded, and the corpse could not be presented before the coroner's jury, if the witness discovered the murder by rushing into a house without a search warrant, where he heard cries of distress. Here the letter is in no real sense the property of the defendant, but is the very unlawful thing imported contrary to the statute.

"I think the District Attorney is right in urging that any one could arrest the person carrying it, who was thus committing a felony in his presence. To be sure, the man making the arrest did not know that a felony was being committed. He took the risk of civil and perhaps criminal actions for assault and battery if his suspicions turned out to be without foundation; but in this case it appears on the face of the indictment, and from the evidence adduced, that the suspicions were well founded, and the defendant was engaged in the commission of a felony. The constitutional safeguards against self-incrimination do not prevent the arrest of men engaged in the commission of crimes, or the seizure of property whereby the crime is being effected."

A person's home and place of business are not to be invaded forcibly and searched by the curious and suspicious, or even by a disinterested officer of the law, unless he is armed with a search warrant. Veeder v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 414, 164 C. C. A. 338.

6. Compelling an Officer of Corporation to Produce Corporate Books and Papers
(p. 357)

A corporation is not privileged from the production of its books and papers, even though they tend to incriminate an officer thereof. Linn v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 476, 163 C. C. A. 470.

11. Use of Papers or Property Illegally Obtained as Evidence (p. 359)

Where incriminating documents were obtained upon a valid search warrant issuing against socialist headquarters, they were held admissible in evidence in a prosecution of the general secretary who had charge of the headquarters and sent such documents through the mails in violation of the Espionage Act. Schenck v. U. S., (1919) 249 U. S. 47, 39 S. Ct. 247, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The denial of a motion to return a letter addressed to one of the defendants in a criminal prosecution under section 37 of Penal Laws [7 Fed. Stat. Ann. 534], and seized under a search warrant issued on a sufficient affidavit, is proper and not in violation of the defendant's constitutional rights under this amendment, where the letter contains evidence against the writer, who is a co-defendant. U. S. v. Gouled, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 770.

1. Necessity of Showing Probable Cause
(p. 360)

No search warrant should be issued unless the judge has first been furnished with facts under oath which tend to establish probable cause for its issuance. Veeder v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1918) 252 Fed. 414, 164 C. C. A. 338.

Vol. XI, p. 363, amend. 5.

I. Not a Limitation on the States (p. 363)

That this amendment is not a limitation, etc.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Palmer v. Ohio, (1918) 248 U. S. 32, 39 S. Ct. 16, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing writ of error to review (1917) 98 Ohio St. 513, 118 N. E. 102.

What constitutes "indictment." — In Cooper v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 45, 159 C. C. A. 263, the court in passing on an attack in an indictment for want of evidence to warrant the finding thereof said: "The Constitution (Const. Amend. 5) provides that one charged with certain offenses shall not be placed upon trial until the grand jury shall have investigated the subject-matter of the offense alleged in the indictment, and returned a true bill thereon. To this end certain formalities must be complied with in the preparation and presentation of the bill to the grand jury. Technically speaking, such paper cannot be called a bill of indictment until it is found 'a true bill' by a properly constituted grand jury.

An indictment can only be found upon the testimony of a competent and material witness or witnesses, who must be sworn and examined before the grand jury."

Vol. XI, p. 374, amend. 5.

1. Not a Limitation on the States (p. 375)

Amendment as limitation on states.—This amendment was not intended to limit the powers of the state governments in respect to their own people, but merely operates as a restraint upon federal action. State v. Felch, (Vt. 1918) 105 Atl. 23.

Vol. XI, p. 390, amend. 5.

2. Corporations (p. 392)

An officer of a corporation.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Linn v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 476, 163 C. C. A. 470.

VI. "In Any Criminal Case" (p. 393)

In general.—"Long before the separation of the American Colonies from the mother country, compulsion of witnesses to appear and testify had become established in England. By Act of 5 Eliz., c. 9, § 12 (1562), provision was made for the service of process out of any court of record requiring the person served to testify concerning any cause or matter pending in the court, under a penalty of ten pounds besides damages to be recovered by the party aggrieved. See Havithbury v. Harvy, Cro. Eliz. 131; 1 Leon. 122; Goodwin v. West, Cro. Car. 522, 540; March, 18. When it was that grand juries first resorted to compulsory process for witnesses is not clear. But as early as 1612, in the Countess of Shrewsbury's case, Lord Bacon is reported to have declared that 'all subjects, without distinction of degrees, owe to the King tribute and service, not only of their deed and hand, but of their knowledge and discovery.' 2 How. St. Tr. 769, 778. And by Act of 7 & 8 Wm. III, c. 3, § 7 (1695), parties indicted for treason or misprision of treason were given the like process to compel their witnesses to appear as was usually granted to compel witnesses to appear against them; clearly evincing that process for crown witnesses was already in familiar use. At the foundation of our Federal Government the inquisitorial function of the grand jury and the compulsion of witnesses were recognized as incidents of the judicial power of the United States. By the Fifth Amendment a presentment or indictment by grand jury was made essential to hold one to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, and it was declared that no person should be compelled in a criminal case to be a witness against himself; while, by the Sixth Amendment, in all criminal prosecutions the accused was given the right to a speedy and public trial, with compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor. By the first Judiciary Act (September 24, 1789, c. 20, § 30, 1 Stat. 73, 88), the mode of proof by examination of witnesses in the courts of the United States was regulated, and their duty to appear and testify was recognized. These provisions, as modified by subsequent legislation, are found in §§ 861-865, Rev. Stats. By Act of March 2, 1793, c. 22, § 6, 1 Stat. 333, 335, it was enacted that subpoenas for witnesses required to attend a court of the United States in any district might run into any other district, with a proviso limiting the effect of this in civil causes so that witnesses living outside of the district in which the court was held need not attend beyond a limited distance from the place of their residence. See § 876, Rev. Stats. By § 877, originating in Act of February 26, 1853, c. 80, § 3, 10 Stat. 161, 169, witnesses required to attend any term of the district court on the part of the United States may be subpoenaed to attend or testify generally; and under such process they shall appear before the grand or petit jury, or both, as required by the court or the district attorney. By the same Act of 1853 (10 Stat. 167, 168), fees for the attendance and mileage of witnesses were regulated; and it was provided that where the United States was a party the marshal on the order of the court should pay such fees. Rev. Stats., §§ 848, 855. And §§ 879 and 881, Rev. Stats., contain provisions for requiring witnesses in criminal proceedings to give recognizance for their appearance to testify, and for detaining them in prison in default of such recognizance. In all of these provisions, as in the general law upon the subject, it is clearly recognized that the giving of testimony and the attendance upon court or grand jury in order to testify are public duties which every person within the jurisdiction of the Government is bound to perform upon being properly summoned, and for performance of which he is entitled to no further compensation than that which the statutes provide." Blair v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 273, 39 S. Ct. 468, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

VIII. Before Grand Jury (p. 396)

Right of witness to challenge constitutionality of statute.—Witnesses summoned to testify before a federal grand jury are not concerned with the possible invalidity of the statutes under which the grand jury's investigation is conducted, and the consequent want of jurisdiction of court or jury over the subject matter, and they may not urge that objection to justify their contumacy in refusing to testify. Blair v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 273, 39 S. Ct. 468, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 253 Fed. 800.

3. Requiring Production of Private Books and Papers (p. 402)

Papers obtained under search warrant.—Papers obtained by use of a search warrant, if otherwise competent evidence, cannot be excluded as in violation of the defendant's constitutional rights against unlawful search and seizure. Rice v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 251 Fed. 778, 164 C. C. A. 12.

Vol. XI, p. 408, amend. 5.

VIII. Application to Indians (p. 414)

Approval by Secretary of Interior of conveyances of Indians.—A statute requiring approval by the Secretary of the Interior of conveyances made by a tribal Indian is not unconstitutional, even as applied to land upon the conveyance of which no such restriction existed at the time of its enactment, and notwithstanding the admission of its owner to citizenship. Brader v. James, (1918) 246 U. S. 88, 38 S. Ct. 285, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 591, affirming (1916) 49 Okla. 734, 154 Pac. 560.

4 a (1) In General (p. 437)

Substitution of joint rate for through rate.—The substitution of a through route and joint rate for the transportation of logs and lumber to a designated city not higher than the rate to another city, equally distant from the place from which the transportation commences, in place of a through rate made by adding the rate to the second city, which was a rate-breaking point, and the local rate therefrom to the former city, is not a violation of the Fifth Amendment of the Federal Constitution, where the carriers are given the right to elect between establishing a new and shorter route or continuing the existing route, and the joint rate is reasonable, while the old rate is unreasonable. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 245 U. S. 136, 38 S. Ct. 40, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 199, affirming (W. D. Ky. 1916) 234 Fed. 868.

25. Deprivation of Rights under Foreign Contracts (p. 446) [New]

The Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 153, § 4 (9 Fed. Stat. Ann. 158), which authorizes seamen to demand one-half of their earned wages on the arrival of their ships at American ports, is not unconstitutional on the ground that it deprives ship owners of rights under wage contracts made in foreign jurisdiction. The Strathearn, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 631, reversing (N. D. Fla. 1917) 239 Fed. 583, in original annotation.

Vol. XI, p. 447, amend. 5.

1. No Distinction Between Real and Personal Property (p. 451)

Placer mining claim as property.—A placer mining claim which has been perfected in accordance with law is property. When so perfected it has the effect of a grant by the United States of the right of present and exclusive possession, and if taken by the United States just compensation must be made therefor under the Constitution. North American, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 424.

2. Property of a State (p. 451)

Public highway.—While the property rights in a public highway held by a county in Kentucky are an easement held in trust for the benefit of the public, and are within most of the definitions of public and not private property, yet for purposes of compensation, as for a taking under the Constitution, they are to be regarded as private property. Wayne County v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 417.

1. In General (p. 452)

The noise, vibration, or concussion caused by the firing of guns does not constitute a taking of the premises, but is merely a nuisance for which the government is not liable. Portsmouth Harbor Land, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 210.

(3) Intermittent Overflows (p. 456)

Erection of dams.—The erection of certain government dams in aid of navigation in the Monongahela river caused increased and more prolonged flood heights and more frequent overflows than theretofore of certain county roads. It was held, on a review of the authorities, that this is not a taking of private property within the purview of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution, and that to the extent that the roads in question were injured or destroyed the damages were consequential. County Ct. v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 120.

17. Firing Over Island in Naval Target Practice (p. 458)

Firing over land in target practice.—Land cannot be said to have been appropriated by the federal government so as to raise an implied agreement on its part for compensation merely because of some occasional acts of gun fire from an adjacent coast defense battery, and the passing of the projectiles over and across such land. Portsmouth Harbor Land, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 1, 39 S.Ct. 399, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "Recovery was sought in the court below from the United States for property taken by it as the result of the alleged firing of guns in a fortification on the coast of Maine and the passing of the projectiles over and across a portion of the land alleged to have been taken. The court finding that a former case by it decided against the owners and here affirmed (Peabody v. U. S., (1913) 231 U. S. 530 [34 S. Ct. 159, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 351]), for taking of the same land resulting from instances of gun fire resulting from the same fort and guns, was identical with this, except for some occasional subsequent acts of gun fire, held that case to be conclusive of this and rejected the claim on the merits.

"Coming to consider this action of the court in the light of the findings by it made, we are constrained to the conclusion that it was right and that no possible difference exists between this and the Peabody Case."

1. What Constitutes Just Compensation (p. 466)

Consequential damages.—Where the government appropriates a portion of an entire tract of private land for public purposes, it is also liable, in ascertaining the just compensation prescribed by the Fifth Amendment, for the damage to the remainder resulting from such taking, embracing injury due to the use to which the part appropriated is to be devoted. Archer v. U. S., (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 405.

b. Special Benefits to Owner (p. 472)

Benefits resulting to owner of property abutting on elevated railroad.—The equal protection of the laws is not denied the owner of property abutting on a street in which an elevated railroad has been constructed, merely because, in judicially determining the actionable damage to the premises, if any, consequent upon the construction, operation, and maintenance of such railroad, the increase in value of the premises from the resulting increased travel is considered and treated as a deductible special benefit, although enjoyed by other property in the vicinity. McCoy v. Union El. R. Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 354, 38 S. Ct. 504, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1156, affirming (1916) 271 Ill. 490, 111 N. E. 517.

Vol. XI, p. 474, amend. 6.

II. 1. In General (p. 475)

Public trial.—In Davis v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 247 Fed. 394, 159 C. C. A. 448, L. R. A. 1918C 1164, it was held to be error from which prejudice to the accused would be implied, and a violation of the amoc eqi mox epnoxe oq tsempuewy tixis room at one session of a criminal trial all persons except two relatives of the accused, a few newspaper men and about ten members of the bar. The circumstances were stated by the court as follows: "The crime of which defendants were charged had connection with a train robbery, and the trial, which was held at Muskogee, Okl., excited more than ordinary interest. At previous sessions the courtroom was crowded with spectators, so much so that in one instance the court directed the bailiffs to clear the aisles, so that witnesses would not be impeded when called. Considerable ill feeling had developed between the defendants, their relatives and friends, and some of the witnesses for the prosecution, and the court had placed the latter in the custody and care of an officer. Precautions had also been taken that defendants should come unarmed into the courtroom. On the evening of the night session an encounter occurred in a restaurant, in which a relative of one of the defendants hit a witness for the prosecution across the face with a newspaper. This was reported to the court; also that one or more of the witnesses in the courtroom were intoxicated. It does not appear that the courtroom was crowded beyond its seating capacity when the order to clear it was made, or that any person was making a disturbance or threatening to do so, or that there was any well-founded apprehension that a disturbance would occur."

3 a. In General (p. 486)

Failure to negative statutory exception.—The fact that section 8 of the Harrison Narcotic Law (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. 187) provides that it shall be unnecessary for an indictment under that Act to negative the statutory exceptions and exemptions, does not render it unconstitutional as violating this amendment. Fyke v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 225, 165 C. C. A. 513.

Vol. XI, p. 494, amend. 7.

2. Contradistinction to Equity and Admiralty Jurisprudence (p. 498)

Transfer of case to law side of court.—The error of a federal District Court, sitting in New York, in ordering transferred to the equity side of the court that one of two counts in an action at law which claims damages for breach of a contract to bequeath a specified sum, may be corrected by granting mandamus to require the District Court to proceed and to give plaintiff her right to a trial at common law. Ex p. Simons, (1918) 247 U. S. 231, 38 S. Ct. 497, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1094.

Vol. XI, p. 518, amend. 8.

1. When Within the Statute (p. 519)

Fine held not excessive.—A fine of $22,400, being $100 for each failure of a carrier to comply with an order of the State Railroad Commission which, conformably to a statutory mandate, required such carrier to stop two interstate passenger trains, one each way, at a designated county seat, is not excessive, where the local statute provides for a suit to test the validity of the order in a court either of the state or of the United States, and the carrier saw fit to await proceedings against it. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, (1918) 246 U. S. 58, 38 S. Ct. 236, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 574, affirming (Tex. Civ. App. 1914) 169 S. W. 385.

Vol. XI, p. 523, amend. 10.

VI. As to Rights of Property (p. 528)

Transportation of child-made goods in interstate commerce.—Powers over local matters reserved to the states by U. S. Const. 10th Amend., are invaded by the enactment by Congress of the Act of September 1, 1916 (39 Stat. at L. 675, ch. 432, 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 426), which prohibits the transportation in interstate commerce of manufactured goods, the produce of a factory in which, within thirty days prior to the removal of the goods, children under fourteen have been employed, or children between fourteen and sixteen have been employed more than eight hours in a day, or more than six days in a week, or between seven in the evening and six in the morning. Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U. S. 251.

Vol. XI, p. 530, amend. 11.

1. In General (p. 537)

Action against state bank examiner for damages for negligent acts.—The immunity of a state from suit does not extend to an action against the bank commissioner of the state and his surety, brought by a depositor in an insolvent bank to recover the damage he claims to have sustained through the bank commissioner's wilful and negligent disregard of the state laws, whereby the bank's officers were enabled so to conduct its affairs as to bring it to insolvency, making it necessary for him to take possession of it with its assets depleted, and through his conduct after taking possession in subordinating plaintiff's claim to other claims of like character, in violation of the equal protection and due process of law clauses of the Federal Constitution, where the petition, considered as a whole, negatives state action or liability, since the references to the Federal Constitution may well be regarded as emphasizing the bank commissioner's wrongdoing, and not as setting up an independent ground of recovery. Johnson v. Lankford, (1918) 245 U. S. 541, 38 S. Ct. 203, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 460.

A state's immunity from suit is not infringed by an action against the bank commissioner of the state and his surety, brought by a depositor and stockholder in an insolvent bank to recover the damages which he claims to have sustained through the bank commissioner's wilful and negligent disregard of the state laws whereby the bank's officers were enabled so to conduct its affairs as to bring it to insolvency, making it necessary for him to take possession of it with its assets depleted, and through his conduct after taking possession of the bank, whereby plaintiff's claim was subordinated to that of other depositors in the same situation, in violation of the due process and equal protection of the laws clauses of the Federal Constitution, and through the enforcement of the state's lien upon the assets of the bank so as to give other depositors a preference and abridge plaintiff's privileges and immunities, where the petition, considered as a whole, negatives state action or liability, since the references to the Federal Constitution may well be regarded as emphasizing the bank commissioner's wrongdoing, not as setting up an independent ground of recovery. Martin v. Lankford, (1918) 245 U. S. 547, 38 S. Ct. 205, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 464.

10 a. To Restrain Enforcement of Unconstitutional Statute (p. 542)

To same effect as original annotation, see Rockaway Fac. Corp. v. Statesbury, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 255 Fed. 345.

"It is now settled doctrine 'that individuals, who, as officers of the state, are clothed with some duty in regard to the enforcement of the laws of the state, and who threaten and are about to commence proceedings, either of a civil or criminal nature, to enforce against parties affected an unconstitutional act, violating the Federal Constitution, may be enjoined by a federal court of equity from such action.' Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 155, 156; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Andrews, 216 U. S. 165, 166, 167; Home Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Los Angeles, 227 U. S. 278, 293; Truax v. Raich, 239 U. S. 33, 37; Greene v. Louisville & Interurban R. R. Co., 244 U. S. 499, 506. But no such injunction 'ought to be granted unless in a case reasonably free from doubt,' and when necessary to prevent great and irreparable injury. Ex parte Young, supra, 166. The jurisdiction should be exercised only where intervention is essential in order effectually to protect property rights against injuries otherwise irremediable." Cavanaugh v. Looney, (1919) 248 U. S. 453, 39 S. Ct. 142, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Vol. XI, p. 554, amend. 13, sec. 1.

1 a. In General (p. 556)

State statute requiring male residents to work during war.—A state statute requiring male residents of the state between the ages of 18 and 55 to be employed during the period of the world war and six months thereafter did not violate the Federal Constitution. State v. McClure, (Del. 1919) 105 Atl. 712.

Vol. XI, p. 577, amend. 14, sec. 1.

4. Limitations of the First Eight Amendments (p. 588)

Rights specified in first eight amendments as protected by this clause.—"Although it has been vigorously asserted that the rights specified in the first eight amendments are among the privileges and immunities protected by the Fourteenth Amendment, and although this view has been defended by many distinguished jurists, including several justices of the federal Supreme Court, that court holds otherwise and asserts that it is the character of the right claimed, whether specified as above or not, that is controlling. Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 20 Sup. Ct. 448, 494, 44 L. Ed. 597." State v. Felch, (Vt. 1918) 105 Atl. 23.

b. Insurance (p. 604)

Suicide not a defense.—A state statute, restricted in its benefits to citizens of the state, providing that suicide of the insured shall be a defense to liability on a life insurance policy unless suicide was contemplated at the time of the application, does not abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States. Wheeler v. Business Men's Acc. Ass'n, (W. D. Mo. 1918) 247 Fed. 677.

h. License to Deal in Trading Stamps (p. 615)

License to deal in trading stamps.—A state statute requiring dealers in trading stamps to be licensed is constitutional. Sperry, etc., Co. v. State, (Ind. 1919) 122 N. E. 585.

Vol. XI, p. 616, amend. 14, sec. 1.

I. Prohibition on State Action (p. 634)

Form in which legislative power exerted.—The protection of the Federal Constitution applies, whatever the form in which the legislative power of the state is exerted, whether by a Constitution, an act of the legislature, or an act of any subordinate instrumentality of the state exercising delegated legislative authority, like an ordinance of a municipality, or an order of a commission. But a "specification" in a bulletin of "instruction and information to dealers, and weights and measures officials," issued by a state superintendent of weights and measures, which states that "all combination spring and lever computing scales must be equipped with a device which will automatically compensate for changes of temperature at zero balance and throughout the whole range of weight graduations," cannot be said to be a law or regulation, such as comes within the scope of the several provisions of the Federal Constitution designed to secure the rights of citizens as against action by the states that is arbitrary, unreasonable, discriminatory, or that interferes with interstate commerce, where such official is not clothed with power to prescribe rules of action which city and county sealers are forced to follow, or to prohibit the use in the state of scales not sealed in accordance with his regulations, since the function of such specification must be deemed to be educational, and at most advisory. Standard Computing Scale Co. v. Farrell, (1919) 249 U. S. 571, 39 S. Ct. 380, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 242 Fed. 87.

X 1. Exercise of Police Power (p. 647)

Extension of police power over public domain.—The police power of a state extends over the federal public domain, at least where there is no congressional legislation on the subject. Omaechevarria v. Idaho, (1918) 246 U. S. 343, 38 S. Ct. 323, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 763, affirming (1915) 27 Idaho, 797, 152 Pac. 280.

Requiring male residents to work during period of war.—A state statute compelling male residents of the state between the ages of eighteen and fifty-five to be employed during the period of the world war and six months thereafter is within the reasonable exercise of the police power. State v. McClure, (Del. 1919) 105 Atl. 712.

4. State Court Must Have Jurisdiction (p. 652)

Judgment against one not a party or privy.—The opportunity to be heard is an essential requisite of due process of law in judicial proceedings. And as a state may not, consistently with the Fourteenth Amendment, enforce a judgment against a party named in the proceedings without a hearing or an opportunity to be heard, so it cannot, without disregarding the requirement of due process, give a conclusive effect to a prior judgment against one who is neither a party nor in privy with a party therein. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Newport, (1918) 247 U. S. 464, 39 S. Ct. 566, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1215.

7. State Control Over Court Procedure (p. 654)

Rule of evidence.—There is no want of due process of law in the enactment of a reasonable rule of evidence. Virginia, etc., Coal Co. v. Charles, (W. D. Va. 1917) 251 Fed. 83.

t (1) Sufficiency of Indictment (p. 661)

Necessity of prosecuting by indictment or information.—"Due process of law" as that expression is used here does not necessarily require that a state shall prosecute even for felony by presentment or indictment. It is competent for a state legislature to invest municipal and other subordinate courts with jurisdiction to try and punish offenders against the statute. Le Clair v. White, (1918) 117 Me. 335, 104 Atl. 516.

w. Former Jeopardy (p. 667)

Exceptions by state in criminal cases.—A state statute authorizing exceptions by the state in criminal cases does not violate the due process clause. State v. Felch, (Vt. 1918) 105 Atl. 23.

Former jeopardy.—"It is interesting to note in this connection that the question whether double jeopardy amounts to want of due process under the Federal Constitution was suggested and its importance recognized by Mr. Justice Harlan in Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 71, 23 Sup. Ct. 28, 47 L. Ed. 79, but was left undecided. It is also of interest to note that in Ex parte Ulrich (D. C.) 42 Fed. 587, it was held by Judge Philips that, inasmuch as it is a principle of the common law that no one shall be twice placed in jeopardy for the same offense, the trial and commitment of one who has already been partly tried and in legal effect acquitted of the same offense is depriving him of his liberty without due process of law, within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment." State v. Felch, (Vt. 1918) 105 Atl. 23.

(5) Opportunity to Present Evidence (p. 669)

Error in admission of evidence and entering judgment.—Error of a trial judge in admitting evidence or entering judgment after full hearing does not constitute a denial of due process of law. Jones v. Buffalo Creek Coal, etc., Co., (1917) 245 U. S. 328, 38 S. Ct. 121, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 325.

g1. Allowance of Attorney's Fees (p. 679)

Limiting attorney's fees.—Limiting to 20 per cent the payment to be made to an attorney or agent out of the moneys appropriated for the payment of certain claims against the United States, is not a denial of due process of law or of the liberty to contract to an attorney who has rendered professional services in the prosecution of one of such claims under a contract whereby he was to receive a fee equal to 50 per cent of whatever might be awarded or collected. Capital Trust Co. v. Calhoun, (1919) 250 U. S. 208, 39 S. Ct. 486, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 177 Ky. 518, 197 S. W. 944, wherein the court said: "We can only instance some of the points of the argument. The Act of February 26, 1853, c. 80, 10 Stat. 161, now § 823, Rev. Stats., is cited as recognizing the right of attorneys to compensation for their services in claims against the United States, and it is said that contracts for such compensation have been universally sanctioned as legal. And, further, official statements are adduced to the effect that the Court of Claims is so constituted 'that the successful prosecution of a claim' in it 'is something more than a merely perfunctory performance on part of counsel'; it is 'a matter of great business hazard and risk to counsel when done upon purely contingent fees.' And in many cases, it is further urged, no other than contingent fees are possible and to deny them is practically to deny the right to counsel. Mr. Justice Miller is quoted from, in Taylor v. Bemiss, (1884) 110 U. S. 42 [3 S. Ct. 441, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 64], in illustration of such result and its injury. The right to counsel being thus recognized, and recognized antecedently to the contract now involved, it became, counsel contend, a 'pre-existing valid right,' and to take it away is to divest the right—to take it away is to deprive of property of value assured of protection by the Constitution of the United States. To sustain the contentions a number of state cases are cited. Among them is Black v. O'Hara, (1917) 175 Ky. 623, [194 S. W. 811] the case which the Court of Appeals regarded as authority for its ruling in the present case. In a general sense there is force and much appeal in the contentions, but we think they carry us into considerations beyond our cognizance. Liberty in any of its exertions and its protection by the Constitution are of concern. The right to bind by contract and require performance of the contract are examples of that liberty and that protection and they might have resistless force against any interfering or impairing legislation if the contest in the case was simply one between Calhoun and the Arnold estate. But there are other elements to be considered—there is the element of the condition Congress imposed on the subject-matter of the controversy regarded as a condition of its grant. Relief could only be had through legislation. This was petitioned and the Senate of the United States was prompted to refer the claim to the Court of Claims. A defect of remedy remained even after the court had been thus invoked and had reported the amount and facts of the claim. Further legislation was necessary, but it could not have been compelled; it was optional, not compulsory; and it would seem to require no argument to convince that the terms of its enactment must be taken as expressed and the relief it granted accepted with the condition imposed upon it."

b. Reasonable Notice (p. 681)

Parties entitled to notice in eminent domain proceedings.—A state statute which authorizes condemnation by telegraph companies of easements over railroad rights of way, may not be attacked by a railroad company as unconstitutional because it provides that no notice need be given to any mortgagee, for the constitutionality of a statute may not be questioned by one who is not injured by it. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 249 Fed. 385, 161 C. C. A. 359.

f. Before Final Judgment (p. 683)

Taxation.—Valuation of property by a state board of taxation without notice to the owner of the property does not render a tax based upon such valuation invalid where the mode of enforcing the tax under the state law is by a judicial proceeding wherein process issues, an opportunity is afforded for a full hearing and only after there is a judgment sustaining the tax is payment enforced. Wells v. Nevada, (1918) 248 U. S. 165, 39 S. Ct. 62, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1915) 38 Nev. 505, 150 Pac. 836.

h1. Judgment Against Surety (p. 692)

A state statute whereby a judgment against an executor may be enforced by seizure on an execution against him of the property of his sureties denies due process of law. Gillis v. Riggs, (N. D. W. Va. 1918) 248 Fed. 843.

(8) (a) In General (p. 695)

A judgment against a foreign corporation rendered on service of process on a person who is not an agent of the corporation is void as not constituting due process of law. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Weeks, (W. D. Tex. 1918) 248 Fed. 970.

(11) On Nonresident Partner (p. 699)

A nonresident firm doing business in the state at the time a transaction, the subject of the suit, took place is not brought into court by service of process on a person who was local agent at the time of the transaction, but not at the time of the service; and if a state statute authorizes such a service it is unconstitutional. Flexner v. Farson, (1919) 248 U. S. 289, 39 S. Ct. 97, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1915) 268 Ill. 435, 109 N. E. 327, Ann. Cas. 1916D 810.

11 a. Making Intent Unnecessary as an Element of Offense (p. 709)

The possession of a motor vehicle on which the manufacturer's mark has been removed may be made an offense by statute notwithstanding that guilty knowledge or intent is missing. People v. Fernow, (1919) 286 Ill. 627, 122 N. E. 155, wherein the court said: "It is agreed that the section was enacted in the exercise of the police power, which may be exercised in the passage of laws for the protection of the public and the general welfare. The purpose of the act is to prevent the defacing, covering, or destruction of the manufacturer's serial number or distinguishing mark, so as to preserve the identity of motor vehicles and thereby protect the public against violations of law. The motor vehicle has become the most common and efficient agency for the commission of crime and the chief instrumentality employed by criminals to avoid detection and escape punishment, and one of the methods employed is to destroy the evidence of identity. Motor vehicles have also become very frequent subjects of larceny, and the removal or change of the serial number is a convenient method for preventing identification and recovery. One committing a crime, even the most serious, and escaping in an automobile would be more difficult of apprehension if the serial number or identification mark should be removed. The section is a legitimate and proper exercise of the police power. The argument that the section conflicts with the Bill of Rights and the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which prohibit deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, is that the section creates a crime without guilty knowledge or intent, because the manufacturer's serial number or distinguishing mark may have been changed without the knowledge of the person having possession of the motor vehicle, and may have been changed before the law went into effect. At common law a crime consisted of an unlawful act with evil intent, and in crimes created by statute a specific intent may be required so that the intent and act may constitute the crime, and in such cases the intent must be alleged and proved. Where a specific intent is not an element of the crime it is not always necessary that a criminal intent should exist. In the exercise of the police power for the protection of the public the performance of a specific act may constitute the crime regardless of either knowledge or intent, both of which are immaterial on the question of guilt. For the effective protection of the public the burden is placed upon the individual of ascertaining at his peril whether his act is prohibited by criminal statute. The law in that regard has most frequently arisen in police regulations of the liquor traffic, but it has been applied in precisely the same way in other cases coming within the same rule and reason, such as a sale of imitation butter, a sale of milk below a prescribed quality, the obstruction of a public highway by a railroad corporation for longer than a specified time, the admission of a minor to a pool room, driving an unregistered automobile, killing for sale an animal under a designated age, carriage by an express company for transportation beyond the state line of fish or game, and in prosecutions for bribery."

16. Incidental Injury to Property (p. 715)

Pollution of oyster beds by discharge of municipal sewage.—Unless precluded by some right of a neighboring state or by some act of its own or of the United States, a state may authorize a city to discharge its sewage into the sea, so long, at least, as a nuisance is not thereby created that so seriously interferes with private property as to infringe constitutional rights. The mere ownership of a tract of land under water would not be enough to give a right to prevent the pollution of the water by the discharge of municipal sewage into tidal waters, under state authority. Darling v. Newport News, (1919) 249 U. S. 540, 39 S. Ct. 371, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (affirming (1918) 123 Va. 14, 96 S. E. 307), wherein the court said: "The fundamental question as to the rights of holders of land under tide waters does not present the conflict of two vitally important interests that exists with regard to fresh water streams. There the needs of water supply and of drainage compete. Missouri v. Illinois, (1906) 200 U. S. 496, 521, 522, [26 S. Ct. 268, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 572, 579]. The ocean hitherto has been treated as open to the discharge of sewage from the cities upon its shores. Whatever science may accomplish in the future we are not aware that it yet has discovered any generally accepted way of avoiding the practical necessity of so using the great natural purifying basin. Unless precluded by some right of a neighboring state, such as is not in question here, or by some act of its own, or of the United States, clearly a state may authorize a city to empty its drains into the sea. Such at least would be its power unless it should create a nuisance that so seriously interfered with private property as to infringe constitutional rights. And we apprehend that the mere ownership of a tract of land under the salt water would not be enough of itself to give a right to prevent the fouling of the water as supposed. The ownership of such land, as distinguished from the shore, would be subject to the natural uses of the water.

... The constitution of Virginia, like some others, requires compensation for property taken or damaged for public use. Const. 1902, § 58. But this seems to be construed by the dissenting judge as well as by the court below as not including damage like this, which would not have been a wrong even without the act of the legislature. It is a question that has been subject to much debate. See for example, Caledonian R. Co. v. Walker, (1882) 7 App. Cas. (Eng.) 250, 293 et seq.; Taft v. Com., (1893) 158 Mass. 526, 548 [33 N. E. 1046]; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, (1879) 99 U. S. 635, 642 [25 U. S. (L. ed.) 336, 338]. But upon that point we follow the Supreme Court of the state."

17. Summary Destruction of Property

(p. 716)

Requiring burning of refuse on timber lands.—Property is not taken without due process of law by a state statute which provides that any person who owns land or standing timber on land within 400 feet of any watershed held or owned by any city or town for the purpose of furnishing the city or town water supply, upon cutting or removing the timber, or permitting either, within 400 feet of the watershed, shall, within three months after cutting, or earlier upon written notice by the city or town, remove or cause to be burned under proper supervision, all tree tops, boughs, laps and other portions not desired to be taken for commercial or other purposes, within 400 feet of the boundary line of the watershed, so as to leave such space of 400 feet free and clear of the designated parts required to be removed or burned and other inflammable material caused by or left from cutting the standing timber, so as to prevent the spread of fire from such cut-over area and the consequent damage to the watershed. Perley v. North Carolina, (1919) 249 U. S. 510, 39 S. Ct. 357, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 173 N. C. 783, 92 S. E. 504.

23. Railroad Companies (p. 736)*Cost of construction of grade crossing.—

A railway company whose road was constructed at a time when the state law imposed the entire cost of the construction of a crossing of two railways at grade, including installing and maintenance of interlocking devices, upon the junior company, is not deprived of its property without due process of law by construing as applicable to it a subsequent statute under which expense of a grade crossing by a junior company is to be divided equally between the two railway companies. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Puget Sound, etc., R. Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 332, 39 S. Ct. 474, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 94 Wash. 10, 161 Pac. 850, (1917) 97 Wash. 701, 106 Pac. 793.

c (1) In General (p. 737)

Terminal tracks.—Property is not taken without compensation and without due process of law, by requiring that, for rate-making purposes, two railway companies entering a city shall extend to shippers over terminal or spur delivery tracks, the property of another railway company, which, through joint ownership and control by such railway companies, is merely their agency or instrumentality, equality of treatment with that which they give to shippers over their separately owned tracks when similar service is rendered. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Minneapolis, etc., Assoc., 247 U. S. 490, affirming 134 Minn. 169.

(6) (b) Question of Reasonableness Is Judicial (p. 742)

Binding effect of judicial inquiry.—There is nothing to hinder a state from providing that after a judicial inquiry into the validity of an order of a state railroad commission fixing the rate on logs carried within the state it shall be binding upon the parties until changed. Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Fletcher Paper Co., (1918) 248 U. S. 30, 39 S. Ct. 13, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 198 Mich. 469, 164 N. W. 528.

a. Requiring Construction of Side Track or Switch (p. 760)

Expense of building sidetracks.—An order of a state public utilities commission, made after notice and hearing, and upheld by the highest court of the state, requiring a railway company to restore a sidetrack which, before its removal, had served a grain elevator and coal yard, does not deny due process of law, either as taking its property for private use or for public use without compensation, where, under the laws of the state, such a sidetrack was open to use by the public and subject to public control like other parts of the company's road, and the statute under which its restoration was ordered contains express provisions whereby it will retain its public character and be open to use by other shippers as well as by the elevator owner. Lake Erie, etc., R. Co. v. State Public Utilities Commission, (1919) 249 U. S. 422, 39 S. Ct. 345, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 277 Ill. 574, 115 N. E. 519.

Empowering a state commission to apportion between plant owner and railway company the cost of the rearrangement and extension of a sidetrack leading to an adjacent manufacturing plant, made necessary by the growth of such plant and its increased shipments, as is done by Minn. Gen. Stat. 1913, §§ 4231, 4284, does not take private property for private use, where under the local law such a sidetrack is not merely a private siding, but is additional trackage for public use, constituting an integral part of the railway system. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ochs, (1919) 249 U. S. 416, 39 S. Ct. 343, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming (1917) 135 Minn. 323, 160 N. W. 866, Ann. Cas. 1918E 337), wherein the court said: "As a common carrier a railroad company assumes and must discharge the obligations which inhere in the nature of its business. Among these obligations is that of providing reasonably adequate facilities for serving the public. Northern Pacific R. Co. v. North Dakota, (1915) 236 U. S. 585, 595 [35 S. Ct. 429, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 735, 741, Ann. Cas. 1916A 1, L. R. A. 1917F 1148]. To do this requires an expenditure of money, of course, but the expenditure is for property which will belong to the company and will be employed in its business. The money is not taken from the company and given to others, nor is the use of the facilities to be uncompensated. Like other property employed by the company in the transportation of persons or property, the facilities have a real bearing on the rates which it is entitled to charge. Therefore an enforced discharge of the duty to provide such a facility does not amount to a taking of property without compensation merely because it is attended with some expense. . . . Of course, the expense is an important element to be considered in determining whether the requirement is within the bounds of reasonable regulation or is essentially arbitrary, but it is not the only one. The nature and volume of the business to be affected, the revenue to be derived from it, the character of the facility required, the need for it and the advantage to be realized by shippers and the public are also to be considered. Tested by these criteria we think the order in question is not arbitrary, but reasonable.

"The case of Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Nebraska, (1910) 217 U. S. 196, [30 S. Ct. 461, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 727], on which the railroad company relies, is plainly distinguishable. The Nebraska statute there condemned, as applied by the state court, required the company to bear the cost of 'reduplicating already physically adequate accommodations,' on the demand and for the benefit of certain shippers, and this in the absence of exceptional circumstances, if any there could be, making such an extraordinary requirement reasonable. Besides, the statute made no provision for a preliminary hearing before an administrative body and yet subjected the company to the risk of a fine of at least five hundred dollars if it awaited a hearing in court on the reasonableness of the demand."

u. Regulating Crossings (p. 762)

Sidewalk at railroad crossing.—Neither due process of law nor the equal protection of the laws is denied by requiring a railway company to construct at its expense a sidewalk upon its right of way at a highway crossing to connect in either direction the planking extending the full length of the ties and between the tracks for the full width of the street with the sidewalks constructed or installed by the municipality or by the owners of abutting property. Great Northern R. Co. v. Minnesota, (1918) 246 U. S. 434, 38 S. Ct. 346, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 817, affirming (1916) 132 Minn. 474, 157 N. W. 1069.

x1 (1) In General (p. 768)

Relief from performance of franchise.—Where a street railroad under its franchise has agreed to operate its cars for a fixed rate of fare, it will not be relieved from performing its franchise by a court on the ground that, owing to a change in conditions, further operation at the old rate would entail loss to the company and deprive it of its property without due process of law. Columbus R., etc., Co. v. Columbus, (S. D. Ohio 1918) 253 Fed. 499.

(6) Forfeiture of Right to Occupy Streets (p. 770)

The "fair return" to which a public service corporation "is entitled upon the value of its plant is that rate per cent. actually received in the absence of special contract in the community where the service is rendered; . . . and where the corporation performs a service obviously necessary and indispensable to the well-being of the community, the capital of the company upon which the 'fair return' is to be computed should be the fair and reasonable value of the plant of the corporation engaged in such service valued as the equipment of a going concern." Doherty v. Toledo Rys. etc., Co., (N. D. Ohio 1918) 254 Fed. 597.

c. Regulating Rates (p. 774)

Reasonable compensation as dependent on circumstances and locality.—In determining whether the rates permitted to be charged by a public service corporation afford a fair and reasonable compensation, the question what is a fair and reasonable compensation depends greatly upon circumstances and locality. Denver v. Denver Union Water Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 178, 38 S. Ct. 278, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 649.

Method of Estimating Value of Property (p. 775)

Four per cent as reasonable compensation.—An ordinance fixing the rates permitted to be charged by a water company which will operate to reduce its net return to about 428/100 per cent of the value of its plant, in a locality in which the prevailing rate of interest for secured loans is about 6 per cent, amounts to a taking of the property of the company without due process of law. Denver v. Denver Union Water Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 178, 38 S. Ct. 278, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 649.

Value as going concern.—In ascertaining the value of a water system for the purpose of determining whether the rates fixed by a municipal ordinance are inadequate and confiscatory, its value as a going concern is properly included. Denver v. Denver Union Water Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 178, 38 S. Ct. 278, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 649.

Effect of Expiration of Franchise (p. 776)

In determining whether water rates fixed by a municipal ordinance are confiscatory, it is proper, notwithstanding the water company's franchise has expired, to value the plant as capable of use and actually in use in the public service, rather than at what the property would bring for some other use in case the city should build its own plant, where there are no other means of adequately supplying the city, and the construction of a municipal system would take at least five years, and where the ordinance fixing rates, while assuming to treat the water company as a mere tenant by sufferance in the streets, recognizes that its plant must continue to serve the public needs, since such ordinance amounts to the grant of a new franchise of indefinite duration, terminable either by the city or by the company at such time and under such circumstances as may be consistent with the duty that both owe to the inhabitants of the city. Denver v. Denver Union Water Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 178, 38 S. Ct. 278, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 649.

27 a. In General (p. 776)

Extension of gas system.—An order of a state Public Service Commission requiring a gas company to extend its distributing system to a rapidly growing community 1½ miles beyond the then terminus of the company's mains, but within the area in which it alone had franchises, cannot be said to be arbitrary or capricious so as to justify the federal Supreme Court in substituting its judgment for that of the commission as to what was reasonable under the circumstances of the case, there being every prospect that the return upon the investment involved, though low at first, will soon become ample, and there being no claim that the comparatively small initial loss will render the business as a whole unprofitable. New York, etc., Gas Co. v. McCall, (1917) 245 U. S. 345, 38 S. Ct. 122, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 337, affirming (1916) 171 App. Div. 580, 157 N. Y. 707, (1916) 219 N. Y. 84, 681, 113 N. E. 795, 115 N. E. 1048.

b. Regulating Rates (p. 776)

A return of six per centum.—A gas rate fixed by municipal ordinance cannot be said necessarily to be free from the objection that it is confiscatory merely because it yields as much as 6 per cent upon the invested capital, where 8 per cent is the lowest rate sought and generally obtained as a return upon capital invested in banking, merchandising, and other business in the vicinity, 7 per cent being the legal rate of interest in the state. Lincoln Gas, etc., Light Co. v. Lincoln (1919) 250 U. S. 256, 39 S. Ct. 454, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Form of decree dismissing bill to enjoin alleged confiscatory rates.—A decree dismissing the bill in a suit to enjoin as confiscatory the operation of a municipal ordinance reducing gas rates should be without prejudice to a subsequent application to the courts for relief against the operation of such ordinance thereafter if the gas company can show, as the result of a practical test of the reduced rate, or upon evidence respecting values, costs of operation and the current rates of return upon capital as they stand at the time of bringing suit and are likely to continue thereafter, that the rate ordinance is confiscatory in its effect under the new conditions arising principally out of the World War. Lincoln Gas, etc., Light Co. v. Lincoln, (1919) 250 U. S. 256, 39 S. Ct. 454, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Changing rate fixed in private contract.—A lighting and power company may, if authorized by a public service commission having power to fix rates, increase the rate charged a private corporation for light and power under an unexpired contract. Union Dry Goods Co. v. Georgia Public Service Corp., (1919) 248 U. S. 372, 39 S. Ct. 117, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 145 Ga. 658, 89 S. E. 779.

Rates fixed by franchise contract.—Where a rate for furnishing light, fixed by a franchise contract between a utility company and a municipality, is reasonable at the time when it is made, the fact that it thereafter becomes confiscatory owing solely to industrial conditions and without any action by the state, is not a violation of this amendment. Muscatine Lighting Co. v. Muscatine, (S. D. Ia. 1919) 256 Fed. 929.

31. Regulating Business and Rates of Grain Elevators (p. 782)

Weighing.—A state statute is not unconstitutional which prohibits under severe penalties "any person, corporation or association other than a duly authorized and bonded state weigher to issue any weight certificate . . . [for any] grain weighed at any warehouse or elevator in this state where duly appointed and qualified state weighers are stationed . . . or to make any charge for such weighing, . . . or weight certificates . . ." Merchants' Exch. v. Missouri, (1919) 248 U. S. 365, 39 S. Ct. 114, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) affirming (1916) 269 Mo. 346, 190 S. W. 903, Ann. Cas. 1917E 871), wherein the court said: "Section 63 of the act does not violate the Fourteenth Amendment. As the state court has pointed out, the statute does not prohibit owners of grain from weighing it before it is sent to a public warehouse or after it is removed therefrom. But the issue of a private weigher's certificate in addition to the certificate of the public weigher might lead to embarrassment or confusion or prove a means of deception. The regulation of weights and measures with a view to preventing fraud and facilitating commercial transactions is an exercise of the police power. To require that goods received in or discharged from public warehouses shall be weighed by public weighers and that no one else shall issue certificates of or make charges for weighing under those circumstances is not an unreasonable or arbitrary exercise of the discretion vested in the legislature. Compare House v. Mayes, supra; Bradnox v. Missouri, 219 U. S. 285. Nor can we say that to limit the application of the provision to grain and hay is an arbitrary discrimination against dealers in them. The fact that respondent is a corporation does not lessen the scope of the state's police power. We have no occasion to consider whether it is thereby enlarged."

i. Extraterritorial Operation of State Rule as to Validity of Loan Agreement (p. 789)

The right of a citizen of a state to conclude with a foreign life insurance company at its home office a policy loan agreement whereby the policy on his life was pledged as collateral security for a cash loan to become due and payable upon default in payment of premiums, in which case the entire policy reserve might be applied to discharge the indebtedness, is within the protection of the 14th Amendment, guaranteeing freedom of contract, and may not be destroyed by state legislation. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Dodge, (1918) 246 U. S. 357, 38 S. Ct. 337, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 772, Ann. Cas. 1918E 593, reversing (Mo. App. 1916) 189 S. W. 609.

32. Regulating Manufacture and Sale of Goods (p. 796)

Judgment against saloon keeper under civil damage act as lien on liquor premises.—Property is not taken without due process of law, by the provisions of Ill. Rev. Stat. ch. 43, §§ 9 and 10, under which the building or premises used for the sale of intoxicating liquors is made liable for the payment of a judgment recovered by a wife for injury to her means of support, against the tenant who has sold the husband intoxicating liquors upon the premises sought to be charged (provided the owner has rented the same for the purpose of the sale of intoxicating liquors, or has knowingly permitted such sales), and making the judgment against the tenant, in the absence of fraud or collusion, conclusive in an action to subject the building and premises to its payment, except that the owner may controvert the allegations that he had knowingly rented or knowingly permitted his building to be used for such sales, and that a judgment had been recovered against the occupant for damages arising therefrom. Eiger v. Garrity, (1918) 246 U. S. 97, 38 S. Ct. 298, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 596, affirming (1916) 272 Ill. 127, 111 N. E. 735.

Liquors acquired after enactment and before taking effect of state prohibition law.—The prohibitions of a state prohibitory law against the possession of intoxicating liquor may be applied to liquors acquired between the date of the passage of such law and the date when it became effective, without infringing the guaranties of the Fourteenth Amendment. Barbour v. Georgia, (1919) 249 U. S. 454, 39 S. Ct. 316, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (affirming (1917) 146 Ga. 667, 92 S. E. 70, 39 L. R. 1095), wherein the court said: "The Georgia prohibitory liquor law was approved Nov. 18, 1915, but by its terms did not become effective until May 1, 1916. Under it Barbour was convicted for having in his possession on June 10, 1916, more than one gallon of vinous liquor. (Georgia Laws, Extraordinary Session, 1915, Part 1, Title 2, No. 4, §§ 16 & 30, pp. 90, 99, 105.) He asserted that the liquor had been acquired by him before May first; and contended that the statute, if construed to apply to liquor so acquired, was void under the Fourteenth Amendment. The Supreme Court of the state overruled this contention and affirmed the sentence. 146 Ga. 667. The case comes here on writ of error under § 237 of the Judicial Code. That a state which has enacted a prohibitory law may forbid the mere possession of liquor within its borders was decided in Crane v. Campbell, (1917) 245 U. S. 304, [38 S. Ct. 98, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 304], but it did not appear there when the liquor had been acquired. Whether the prohibition of sale may be constitutionally applied to liquor acquired before the enactment of the statute was raised in Bartmeyer v. Iowa, (1873) 18 Wall. 129, [21 U. S. (L. ed.) 929], and Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, (1877) 97 U. S. 25, 32-33, [24 U. S. (L. ed.) 989, 992] but was not decided. The question presented here however is simpler. For the exact date when Barbour acquired the liquor is not shown; and we must assume, as the Supreme Court of Georgia did, that it was acquired during the period of five months and twelve days between the enactment of the law and the date when it became effective. Does the Fourteenth Amendment, by its guaranty to property, prevent a state from protecting its citizens from liquor so acquired? A state having the power to forbid the manufacture, sale, and possession of liquor within its borders may, if it concludes to exercise the power, obviously postpone the date when the prohibition shall become effective, in order that those engaged in the business and others may adjust themselves to the new conditions. Whoever acquires, after the enactment of the statute, property thus declared noxious, takes it with full notice of its infirmity and that after a day certain its possession will, by mere lapse of time, become a crime. It is well settled that the Federal Constitution does not enable one to stay the exercise of a state's police power by entering into a contract under such circumstances. Diamond Glue Co. v. U. S. Glue Co., (1903) 187 U. S. 611, 615, [23 S. Ct. 206, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 328, 332]. Compare Calder v. Michigan (1910) 218 U. S. 501, 599, [31 S. Ct. 122, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1163, 1168]. Nor can he do so by acquiring property."

b. Food Laws Generally (p. 801)

As to labeling and branding.—A regulation of a state board of health, sanctioned by the state Food and Drugs Law, under which the sales of a table syrup are forbidden unless the principal label discloses the ingredients and their proportions, does not amount to a taking of property without due process of law as applied to a proprietary syrup made under a secret formula and sold under its own distinctive name, and containing no deleterious or injurious ingredients. Corn Products Refining Co. v. Eddy, (1919) 249 U. S. 427, 39 S. Ct. 325, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 99 Kan. 63, 163 Pac. 615.

d. Regulating Food Preservatives (p. 802)

The text proposition is supported by Weigle v. Curtice Bros. Co., (1919) 248 U. S. 285, 39 S. Ct. 124, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, fully considered under title FOOD AND DRUGS, ante, p. 520.

f. Of Milk (p. 802)

Condensed milk.—A state statute prohibiting the sale of condensed milk unless made from unadulterated milk from which the cream has not been removed is violated by the sale of a preparation called "Hebe" made from skimmed milk, condensed by evaporation, to which a small percentage of cocoanut oil is added, and such construction does not violate this amendment. Hebe Co. v. Shaw, (1919) 248 U. S. 297, 39 S. Ct. 125, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1. Lobster Law (p. 817)

Licensing lobster vessels.—The imposition by a state of a license fee for smacks or vessels engaged in the lobster fisheries on waters within the jurisdiction of the state is constitutional. State v. Dodge, (1918) 117 Me. 269, 104 Atl. 5.

k. Question of Necessity (p. 822)

No opportunity to be heard as to necessity and extent of taking.—A statute authorizing a municipality to expropriate property for the purpose of a water supply is not void as violating U. S. Const., art 1, sec. 10, or the Fourteenth Amendment, because it affords no opportunity to the owner of the property to be heard as to the necessity and extent of the taking. Sears v. Akron (1918) 243 U. S. 242, 38 S. Ct. 245, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 688.

p. For Telegraph Line Over Railroad Right of Way (p. 824)

Power of states.—Congressional legislation has not deprived the states of power to condemn for the use of a telegraph company a part of the right of way of an interstate road or bridge over navigable waters. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 363, 39 S. Ct. 513, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 827, 147 C. C. A. 152, (1914) 107 Miss. 626, 65 So. 650.

Sufficiency of judgments.—Judgments in eminent domain proceedings giving a telegraph company the right to erect its poles along a railway right of way cannot be deemed to infringe the guaranties of the Fourteenth Amendment on the theory that the telegraph company, in contravention of state law, wanted the right not for a new line, but for the purpose of maintaining an existing line that it had maintained theretofore under a contract with the railway company, now terminated, where the highest state court holds that the judgments being right on their face, if the telegraph company attempts to use them to maintain an existing line instead of a new one, its rights can be determined when the attempt is made. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 363, 39 S. Ct. 513, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 82, 147 C. C. A. 152, (1914) 107 Miss. 626, 65 So. 650.

The failure of judgments in eminent domain giving a telegraph company the right to erect a pole line along a railway right of way to fix the exact location of the telegraph poles within the specified right of way does not invalidate the judgments under the Fourteenth Amendment, where they allow only one line of poles to be set up, and require it to be erected in such manner and at such distance from the railroad track as in no way to interfere with the operation of trains or with any proper and legitimate use thereof, or the use by any telegraph or telephone company now existing thereon, and so as not to be dangerous to persons or property, and subject to all stipulations and agreements contained in the petition, and such petition contains a binding agreement that if it shall become necessary for the railway company to change the location of its tracks, or construct new tracks or sidetracks where the same do not now exist, and for such purpose to use or occupy that portion of the right of way on which petitioner's poles are or may be set, cross arms placed thereon and wires strung, the petitioner will, at its own expense, upon reasonable notice, remove said poles, cross arms, and wires to such other points on the right of way as the railway company shall designate, and where the description has been held to satisfy the requirements of the local law. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 363, 39 S. Ct. 513, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 82, (1914) 107 Miss. 626, 65 So. 650.

q. Providing for Hearing (p. 825)

Hearing provided for by separate suit.—A railway company cannot complain of not having a hearing on the right of a telegraph company to condemn an easement along the railway right of way for a pole line merely because it is referred for that hearing to a separate suit in equity, the eminent domain proceedings being limited in their effect to determining the amount of the damages. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1919) 250 U. S. 363, 39 S. Ct. 513, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 82, 147 C. C. A. 152, (1914) 107 Miss. 626, 65 So. 650.

a. Must Be Provision for Compensation (p. 825)

Provision for compensation.—To same effect as original annotation, see Rockaway Pac. Corp. v. Stotesbury, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 255 Fed. 345.

53. Mechanics' Lien Law (p. 847)

Garage Keepers' Lien Act.—A lien act providing that garage keepers and automobile repairmen shall have a lien on any automobile for which they have furnished certain services or accessories, even after the possession of such automobiles has passed from their hands, does not operate to deprive a person of his property without due process of law. Crucible Steel Co. v. Polack Tyre, etc., Co., (1918) 92 N. J. L. 221, 104 Atl. 324.

58. Compulsory Vaccination (p. 848)

Exclusion of unvaccinated pupils from schools.—Where children are denied admission to school because of their father's refusal to permit them to be vaccinated, and after opportunity to present his defense he is convicted of a violation of a school law requiring parents to send their children to school, proceedings against him for a subsequent violation of the school law may not be enjoined by a federal court on the ground that the decisions of the state courts in the first prosecution were erroneous and denied him due process of law, for this amendment does not protect a citizen against errors of judicial judgment, if he is given an opportunity to present his defense. Gillin v. Board of Public Education, (E. D. Pa. 1918) 250 Fed. 649.

67. Fencing Grazing Lands (p. 850)

Grazing of sheep on public domain.—There is no such indefiniteness in the provisions of Idaho Rev. Codes 1908, sec. 6872, making criminal the grazing of sheep on the federal public domain on ranges previously occupied by cattle, or usually occupied by cattle raisers, as to render such statute repugnant to the constitutional guaranty of due process of law, although it fails to provide for the ascertainment of the boundaries of a range, or for determining what length of time is necessary to constitute a prior occupation a usual one within the meaning of the statute—especially since it is provided by section 6314, that in any crime or public offense there must exist a union or joint operation of act and intent, or criminal negligence. Omaechevarria v. Idaho, (1918) 246 U. S. 343, 38 S. Ct. 323, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 763, affirming (1915) 27 Idaho, 797, 152 Pac. 280.

97. Municipal Wood and Coal Yards (p. 858)

Municipal taxation to raise the money necessary to enable the municipality to establish and maintain a permanent coal and fuel yard for the purpose of selling wood, coal and fuel to its inhabitants without financial profit, conformably to state legislation purporting to be passed in the public interest, and so declared to be by the highest court of the state, cannot be said to deny the taxpayers the protection which the constitutional guaranty of due process of law affords against the taking of their property for uses that are private. Jones v. Portland, (1917) 245 U. S. 217, 38 S. Ct. 112, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 252, Ann. Cas. 1918E 660, L. R. A. 1918C 765, affirming (1915) 113 Me. 123, 93 Atl. 41.

99. Change in Location of Oil Plant (p. 858)

An ordinance prohibiting the storing of petroleum, gasoline, etc., within 300 feet of any dwelling, beyond small quantities specified, is within the police power of a state to authorize, and it is immaterial that a person having a tank within the prohibited area was formerly elsewhere but returned to that location at the request of the municipality. Such request does not import a contract not to legislate if the public welfare should require it and such a contract if made would have no effect. Pierce Oil Corp. v. Hope, (1919) 248 U. S. 498, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 127 Ark. 38, 191 S. W. 405, Ann. Cas. 1918E 143.

p (1) In General (p. 866)

Foreign corporation.—State statutes imposing a tax as a condition of admitting a foreign corporation engaged in interstate commerce to do business within the state, based upon the amount of its authorized capital stock, and a franchise tax based upon capital, surplus and undivided profits, exert the taxing authority of the state over property and rights wholly beyond its confines and not subject to its jurisdiction, and therefore constitute a taking without due process of law. Looney v. Crane Co., (1917) 245 U. S. 178, 38 S. Ct. 85, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 230, affirming (N. D. Tex. 1914) 218 Fed. 260.

A state statute imposing a tax as a condition of admitting a foreign corporation engaged in local and interstate commerce to do business within the state, based upon the amount of its authorized capital stock, without any limitation of the amount of such tax, exerts the taxing authority of the state over property located and used beyond its jurisdiction, and therefore constitutes a taking without due process of law. International Paper Co. v. Massachusetts, (1918) 246 U. S. 135, 38 S. Ct. 292, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 624, reversing (1917) 228 Mass. 101, 117 N. E. 246; Locomobile Co. v. Massachusetts, (1918) 246 U. S. 146, 38 S. Ct. 298, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1917) 228 Mass. 117, 117 N. E. 5.

Bank Deposits.—Deposits in a bank in the city in which the depositor carried on a business from which such deposits are derived, but belonging absolutely to him, and not used in the business, are subject to a tax upon the person against him in the city of his residence, in another state, whether or not they are subject to tax in the state where the business is carried on. Fidelity, etc., Trust Co. v. Louisville, (1917) 245 U. S. 54, 38 S. Ct. 40, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 145, L. R. A. 1918C 124, affirming (1916) 168 Ky. 71, 181 S. W. 1095, (1916) 171 Ky. 509, 188 S. W. 652, (1916) 172 Ky. 451, 189 S. W. 438), wherein the court said: "The present tax is a tax upon the person, as is shown by the form of the suit, and is imposed, it may be presumed, for the general advantages of living within the jurisdiction. These advantages, if the state so chooses, may be measured more or less by reference to the riches of the person taxed. Unless it is declared unlawful by authority, we see nothing to hinder the state from taking a man's credits into account. But so far from being declared unlawful, it has been decided by this court that whether a state shall measure the contribution by the value of such credits and chooses in action, not exempted by superior authority, is the state's affair, not to be interfered with by the United States, and therefore that a state may tax a man for a debt due from a resident of another state. Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558. See also Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 22 L.

ed. 189. It is true that decision in Kirtland v. Hotchkiss concerned Illinois bonds, and that if they were physically present in the taxing state, Connecticut, a special principle might apply, as explained in Wheeler v. Sohmer, 233 U. S. 434, 438, 58 L. ed. 1030, 1036, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 607. See Stamps Comr. v. Hope, [1891] A. C. 476, 484, 60 L. J. F. C. N. S. 44, 65 L. T. N. S. 268; Dacey, Conf. L. 2d ed. 312. But the decision was not made to turn upon such considerations; indeed, its reasoning hardly is reconcilable with them or with anything short of a general rule for all debts. It is argued that in a later case this court has held the power of taxation not to extend to chattels permanently situated outside the jurisdiction although the owner was within it (Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493); and that the power ought equally to be denied as to debts depending for their validity and enforcement upon a jurisdiction other than that levying the tax. But this court has not attempted to press the principle so far, and there is opposed to it the long-established practice of considering the debts due to a man in determining his wealth at his domicile for the purposes of this sort of tax."

Privilege tax on manufacturing business.—

A tax is not imposed upon the property or the business transactions of a foreign corporation outside the state so as to take the property of the corporation without due process of law by a municipal license tax upon the conduct by such corporation of a manufacturing business in the city, measured by the amount of sales of the goods manufactured in the local factory, whether sold within or without the state, either in domestic or interstate commerce. American Mfg. Co. v. St. Louis, (1919) 250 U. S. 459, 39 S. Ct. 522, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (Mo. 1917) 198 S. W. 1183.

q (1) On a Mileage Basis (p. 869)

Mileage basis.—Making the ratio that the miles of railway in the state over which move the oil tank cars of a foreign equipment company (not carrying on business within the state and having no office there) bear to the total mileage so traversed by its cars in all the states the sole basis of an assessment for state taxation of the property of such corporation is a method so arbitrary and produces results so unreasonable that to enforce the tax will take property without due process of law, and unduly burden interstate commerce, where the valuation thus arrived at is nearly $300,000, and the value of the average number of tank cars within the state during the year, the only property that the corporation had in the state, is less than $50,000. Union Tank Line v. Wright, (1919) 249 U. S. 275, 39 S. Ct. 276, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (reversing (1915) 143 Ga. 765, (1917) 146 Ga. 489, 91 S. E. 680), and disapproving obiter dictum in Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, (1891) 141 U. S. 18, 11 S. Ct. 876, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 613, wherein the court said: "A state may not tax property belonging to a foreign corporation which has never come within its borders—to do so under any formula would violate the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. In so far, however, as movables are regularly and habitually used and employed therein, they may be taxed by the state according to their fair value along with other property subject to its jurisdiction, although devoted to interstate commerce. While the valuation must be just it need not be limited to mere worth of the articles considered separately but may include as well 'the intangible value due to what we have called the organic relation of the property in the state to the whole system.' How to appraise them fairly when the tangibles constitute part of a going concern operating in many states often presents grave difficulties; and absolute accuracy is generally impossible. We have accordingly sustained methods of appraisement producing results approximately correct—for example, the mileage basis in case of a telegraph company (Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Massachusetts), [(1888) 125 U. S. 530, 8 S. Ct. 961, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 790], and the average amount of property habitually brought in and carried out by a car company (American Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Hall, [(1899) 174 U. S. 70, 19 S. Ct. 599, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 899]). But if the plan pursued is arbitrary and the consequent valuation grossly excessive it must be condemned because of conflict with the commerce clause or the Fourteenth Amendment or both. . . .

"We think plaintiff in error's property was appraised according to an arbitrary method which produced results wholly unreasonable and that to permit enforcement of the proposed tax would deprive it of property without due process of law and also unduly burden interstate commerce.

"Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, [(1891) 141 U. S. 18, 11 S. Ct. 876, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 613], relied on by defendant in error, contains the following passage which seems to uphold the Georgia rule: 'The mode which the state of Pennsylvania adopted to ascertain the proportion of the company's property upon which it should be taxed in that state was by taking as a basis of assessment such proportion of the capital stock of the company as the number of miles over which it ran cars within the state bore to the whole number of miles, in that and other states, over which its cars were run. This was a just and equitable method of assessment; and if it were adopted by all the states through which these cars ran, the company would be assessed upon the whole value of its capital stock, and no more.' But the point therein spoken of was unnecessary to determination of the cause; and so far as the quoted passage sanctions the specified rule for ascertaining values as generally appropriate, just, unobjectionable and productive of conclusive results, it must be regarded as obiter dictum, and we cannot now approve or follow it."

11 (1) In General (p. 879)

Assessment for highway purposes.—Subjecting railroad property properly to highway taxation is not a denial of due process unless there is such an absence of benefits as to amount to confiscation. Bush v. Branson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 248 Fed. 377, 160 C. C. A. 387.

(2) According to Area (p. 881)

Test of constitutionality of area method.—Whether the area method of assessment is constitutional depends on the results. If it has produced results palpably arbitrary or grossly unequal it is unconstitutional. Gast Realty, etc., Co. v. Schneider Granite Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 55, 36 S. Ct. 254, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 523. But in the absence of such a showing it will be deemed to be constitutional. Withnell v. Ruecking Constr. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 63, 39 S. Ct. 200, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 269 Mo. 546, 191 S. W. 685.

(3) Taxing District in Legislative Discretion (p. 885)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Mt. St. Mary's Cemetery Ass'n v. Mullins, (1919) 248 U. S. 501, 39 S. Ct. 173, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 268 Mo. 691, 187 S. W. 1169.

Whether the entire amount or a part only of the cost of a local improvement shall be imposed as a special tax upon the property benefited, and whether the tax shall be distributed upon a consideration of the particular benefit to particular lots, or apportioned according to their frontage upon the streets, their values, or their area, are matters of legislative discretion, subject, of course, to judicial relief in cases of actual abuse of power or of substantial error in executing it. Hancock v. Muskogee, (1919) 250 U. S. 454, 39 S. Ct. 528, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (Okla. 1917) 168 Pac. 445.

(3) (a) In General (p. 890)

Hearing in advance.—When the assessment is made in accordance with a fixed rule adopted by a legislative act, a property owner is not entitled to be heard in advance on the question of the amount and extent of the assessment and the benefits conferred. Withnell v. Ruecking Constr. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 63, 39 S. Ct. 200, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 269 Mo. 546, 191 S. W. 685.

Creation of taxing district by statute (p. 892)

A municipal ordinance determining that a district sewer shall be constructed, and establishing the boundaries of the district for the purpose of determining what property shall be subjected to the special cost of construction, is not wanting in due process of law merely because there was no previous notice to the property owners nor opportunity to be heard, where full legislative power over the subject-matter has been conferred by the state legislature upon the municipality, since in such case a legislative determination by the local legislative body is of the same effect as though made by the general legislature. Hancock v. Muskogee, (1919) 250 U. S. 454, 39 S. Ct. 528, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (Okla. 1917) 168 Pac. 445.

(3) Judicial Proceeding Not Essential (p. 894)

To same effect as original annotation, see Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Drainage Dist. No. 8, (S. D. Ia. 1917) 253 Fed. 491.

Assessments for local improvements.—The state legislature having prescribed that the entire cost of a district sewer shall be apportioned against the lots in the district in proportion to area, disregarding improvements, and excluding the public highways, there is no occasion for a hearing with respect to the mode in which the assessment shall be apportioned, since this is resolved into a mere mathematical calculation. Hancock v. Muskogee, (1919) 250 U. S. 454, 39 S. Ct. 528, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (Okla. 1917) 168 Pac. 445.

(4) Opportunity to Be Heard at Some Stage of Proceedings (p. 894)

Hearing in enforcement of tax.—Opportunity to be heard in judicial proceedings to enforce the tax constitutes due process of law. Mt. St. Mary's Cemetery Ass'n v. Mullins, (1919) 248 U. S. 501, 39 S. Ct. 173, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 268 Mo. 691, 187 S. W. 1169.

Laws relative to taxation for road purposes are not invalid because no notice is given to property owners before the creation of the taxing district if there is ample notice of every step in the proceedings thereafter and an opportunity is afforded to test the validity of the proceedings in court. Lancaster v. Police Jury, (W. D. La. 1917) 254 Fed. 179.

Vol. XI, p. 904, Amend. 14, sec. 1.

(f) Regulation of Prostitution (p. 930)

Abatement of houses of prostitution.—A state statute providing for the suppression of houses of prostitution as a nuisance, the sale of personal property therein and proceedings against the owner of the premises as well as against the lessees, is constitutional as within the police power of the state. Chase v. Revere House, (Mass. 1919) 122 N. E. 162, wherein the court said: "It may be conceded that neither the real nor personal property enumerated in section 6 comes within the classification of property which is inherently dangerous or offensive to the public health or morality. But the police power includes all necessary measures for the promotion of the good order of the community and the public morals. It embraces the suppression of nuisances whether injurious to the public health like unwholesome trades, slaughterhouses, and rendering establishments, or to the public morals like gambling houses and houses of prostitution and ill fame. . . . The power to prescribe a limitation carries with it the power to discriminate against one citizen in favor of another, and the unlawful use of such property may be enjoined. It is a judicial proceeding against the property which is being devoted to an unlawful use after notice to the parties interested, and the decree may under the statute include a forfeiture of the personal property which the court finds has been used in connection with and for the purpose of maintaining the place unlawfully."

(d) In Action on Mechanic's Lien (p. 943)

In Union Terminal Co. v. Turner Constr. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 247 Fed. 727, 159 C. C. A. 585, the Florida statute allowing costs to the successful plaintiff in a suit to enforce a mechanic's lien, though he does not recover the full amount sued for, was held to deny the equal protection of the laws.

(c) When Authorized to Do Business in the State (p. 970)

A change in a statute imposing an excise tax on foreign corporations doing business within the state, based on the amount of their capital stock, making it more onerous, without any corresponding change being made in the law relating to domestic corporations, does not operate to deny the equal protection of the laws to a foreign corporation which has acquired real estate within the state for the purpose of an automobile service station and garage. Cheney Bros. Co. v. Massachusetts, (1918) 246 U. S. 147, 38 S. Ct. 295, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 632, reversing in part and affirming in part (1914) 218 Mass. 558, 106 N. E. 310.

m (1) (a) Must Admit of Just Compensation (p. 973)

Commutation rates.—Intrastate rates for commutation tickets may be fixed by a state through a duly authorized Public Service Commission at less than the legally established normal one-way single passenger fare without taking the carrier's property in violation of due process of law, or denying to it the equal protection of the laws, where a system of commutation rates has already voluntarily been established by the carrier. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Towers, (1917) 245 U. S. 6, 38 S. Ct. 2, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 117, L. R. A. 1918C 475, affirming (1915) 126 Md. 59, 94 Atl. 330, Ann. Cas. 1917B 1144.

No discrimination shown.—Carriers are not unconstitutionally discriminated against by a freight tariff prescribed by a state commission which gives the benefit of low rough-material rates on lumber only where the shipper transports over the same line that brought in the rough material a certain percentage of the manufactured product. Arkadelphia Milling Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 134, 39 S. Ct. 237, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Railroad injuriously affected by legislation.—Before a railroad company may be heard to strike down state legislation affecting rates upon the ground of its repugnancy to the Federal Constitution he must bring himself within the class affected by the unconstitutional feature. Arkadelphia Milling Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 134, 39 S. Ct. 237, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

(36) Requiring Railroads to Bear Expense of Alterations to Crossings (p. 991)

Sidewalks at railroad crossing.—Neither due process of law nor the equal protection of the laws is denied by requiring a railway company to construct at its expense a sidewalk upon its right of way at a highway crossing to connect in either direction the planking extending the full length of the ties and between the tracks for the full width of the street with the sidewalks constructed or installed by the municipality or by the owners of abutting property. Great Northern R. Co. v. Minnesota, (1918) 246 U. S. 434, 38 S. Ct. 346, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 817, affirming (1916) 132 Minn. 474, 157 N. W. 1069.

(14) Food Laws Generally (p. 1016)

Labeling and branding.—No denial of the equal protection of the laws is involved in the regulation of a state board of health, sanctioned by a state Food and Drugs Law, under which sales of a proprietary table syrup are forbidden unless the principal label discloses the ingredients and their proportions. Corn Products Refining Co. v. Eddy, (1919) 249 U. S. 427, 39 S. Ct. 325, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 99 Kan. 63, 163 Pac. 615.

c1 (1) Rights of Municipal Corporations (p. 1020)

Discriminating between municipal and private owners of timber land.—No unconstitutional discrimination in favor of a municipal owner of timber lands or timber as against individual owners results from a state statute which provides that any person who owns land or standing timber on land within 400 feet of any watershed held or owned by any city or town for the purpose of furnishing the city or town water supply, upon cutting or removing the timber or permitting either, within 400 feet of the watershed, shall, within three months after cutting, or earlier, upon written notice by the city or town, remove or cause to be burned under proper supervision all tree tops, boughs, laps and other portions not desired to be taken for commercial or other purposes, within 400 feet of the boundary line of the watershed, so as to leave such space of 400 feet free and clear of the designated parts required to be removed or burned and other inflammable material caused by or left from cutting the standing timber, so as to prevent the spread of fire from such cut-over area, and the consequent damage to the watershed. Perley v. North Carolina, (1919) 249 U. S. 510, 39 S. Ct. 357, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 173 N. C. 783, 92 S. E. 504, wherein the court said: "Nor do we find illegal discrimination in the statute. The charge is based upon the contention that the statute condemns acts committed by individuals 'when if like and similar acts be done by municipalities there is no violation of the statute.' Counsel again insists too much upon the abstract. We conceded the aphorism upon which counsel relies that 'the equal protection of the laws is a pledge of the protection of equal laws.' We, on March 24th last, by an almost prescience of the contention now based on it, defined its extent and declared that the Fourteenth Amendment, which is the foundation of the aphorism, does not regard the impracticable, and that distinction may be made by legislation between objects or persons, and that the power of the state 'may be determined by degrees of evil or exercised in cases where detriment is specially experienced.' Armour v. North Dakota, (1916) 240 U. S. 510, 517 [36 S. Ct. 440, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 771, 776, Ann. Cas. 1916D 548]. Moreover, we pointed out that 'the deference due to the judgment of the legislature on the matter' had 'been emphasized again and again. Hebe Co. v. Shaw, (1919) 248 U. S. 297, 303, [39 S. Ct. 125, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —]; Dominion Hotel v. Arizona, (1919) 249 U. S. 265, [39 S. Ct. 273, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —.] Necessarily the legislature of the state did not think, and the courts below did not think, that individuals and municipalities stood in the same relation to the evil aimed at or that a public body charged with the care of the interests and welfare of the people would need the same restraint upon its action as an individual, or be induced to detrimental conduct."

(b) For Women (p. 1029)

A statute allowing railroad restaurants and eating houses operated by railroad companies.—The exemption of railway restaurants or eating houses located upon railway rights of way and operated by or under contract with any railway company from the provisions of Arizona Penal Code, par. 717, that the eight hours' daily work permitted to women workers shall be performed within a period of twelve hours, is not such an arbitrary discrimination against hotels and other restaurants or eating houses as to render the statute invalid as denying the equal protection of the laws. Dominion Hotel Co. v. Arizona, (1919) 249 U. S. 265, 39 S. Ct. 273, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 18 Ariz. 345, 161 Pac. 682, wherein the court said: "The Fourteenth Amendment is not a pedagogical requirement of the impracticable. The equal protection of the laws does not mean that all occupations that are called by the same name must be treated in the same way. The power of the state 'may be determined by degrees of evil or exercised in cases where detriment is specially experienced.' Armour v. North Dakota, (1916) 240 U. S. 510, 517 [36 S. Ct. 440, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 771, 776, Ann. Cas. 1916D 548]. It may do what it can to prevent what is deemed an evil and stop short of those cases in which the harm to the few concerned is thought less important than the harm to the public that would ensue if the rule laid down were made mathematically exact. The only question is whether we can say on our judicial knowledge that the legislature of Arizona could not have had any reasonable ground for believing that there were such public considerations for the distinction made by the present law. The deference due to the judgment of the legislature on the matter has been emphasized again and again. Hebe Co. v. Shaw, (1919) 248 U. S. 297, 303 [39 S. Ct. 125, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —]. Of course, this is especially true when local conditions may affect the answer, conditions that the legislature does but that we cannot know. Thomas Cusack Co. v. Chicago, (1917) 242 U. S. 526, 530, 531 [37 S. Ct. 190, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 472, 476]. Presumably, or at least possibly, the main custom of restaurants upon railroad rights of way comes from the passengers upon trains that stop to allow them to eat. The work must be adjusted to the hours of the trains. This fact makes a practical and, it may be, an important distinction between such restaurants and others. If in its theory the distinction is justifiable, as for all that we know it is, the fact that some cases, including the plaintiff's, are very near to the line makes it none the worse. That is the inevitable result of drawing a line where the distinctions are distinctions of degree; and the constant business of the law is to draw such lines. 'Upholding the act as embodying a principle generally fair and doing as nearly equal justice as can be expected seems to import that if a particular case of hardship arises under it in its natural and ordinary application, that hardship must be borne as one of the imperfections of human things.' Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co., (1905) 197 U. S. 430, 434 [25 S. Ct. 466, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 819, 821]. We cannot pronounce the statute void."

(3) Employer's Liability Act (p. 1033)

Constitutionality by whom raised.—Employers in hazardous industries may not raise the question whether a state Employers' Liability Act, confined on its face to certain industries, denominated hazardous, is unconstitutional if it be extended by construction to nonhazardous occupations. Arizona Employers' Liability Cases, (1919) 250 U. S. 400, 39 S. Ct. 553, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 19 Ariz. 151, 182, 166 Pac. 278, 1183, 165 Pac. 1101, 1185.

Liability of employer made independent of fault.—Neither due process of law nor the equal protection of the laws is denied by the Arizona Employers' Liability Act which imposes upon employers in respect of certain specified hazardous employments, without regard to the question of their fault or that of any person for whose conduct they are responsible, a liability in compensatory damages, excluding all such as are speculative or punitive, to be awarded in a judicial proceeding according to the ordinary process of law for accidental personal injury or death of an employee arising out of and in the course of the employment, and due to its inherent conditions in cases where such injury or death shall not have been caused by the employee's own negligence, and declares void all contracts and regulations exempting the employer from such liability. Arizona Employers' Liability Cases, (1919) 250 U. S. 400, 39 S. Ct. 553, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 19 Ariz. 151, 182, 166 Pac. 278, 1183, 165 Pac. 1101, 1185.

Election of remedies allowed employee.—Employers are not deprived of property without due process of law, nor denied the equal protection of the laws merely because, under the laws of the state, an employee injured in the course of his employment has open to him three avenues of redress, any one of which he may pursue according to the facts of the case; viz., (1) the common-law liability relieved of the fellow-servant defense, and in which the defenses of contributory negligence and assumption of risk are questions to be left to the jury; (2) the Employers' Liability Law, which applies to hazardous occupations where the injury or death is not caused by his own negligence; (3) the Compulsory Compensation Law, applicable to especially dangerous occupations, by which he may recover compensation without fault upon the part of the employer. Arizona Employers' Liability Cases, (1919) 250 U. S. 400, 39 S. Ct. 553, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 19 Ariz. 151, 182, 166 Pac. 278, 1183, 165 Pac. 1101, 1185.

Assumption of risk.—The common-law rules governing the assumption, respectively, by employer and employee, of the risk of employment and the consequences to flow therefrom, were not, by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, placed beyond the reach of the state's power to alter them as rules of future conduct and tests of responsibility through legislation designed to promote the general welfare, so long as it does not interfere arbitrarily and unreasonably, and in defiance of natural justice, with the right of employers and employees to agree between themselves respecting the terms and conditions of employment. Arizona Employers' Liability Cases, (1919) 250 U. S. 400, 39 S. Ct. 553, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 19 Ariz. 151, 182, 166 Pac. 278, 1183, 165 Pac. 1101, 1185.

(4) (a) In General (p. 1033)

Exclusion of class.—A workmen's compensation act excluding railroad employees from its provisions is not for that reason unconstitutional. Middleton v. Texas Power, etc., Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 152, affirming (1916) 108 Tex. 96, 185 S. W. 556, wherein the court said: "As to the exclusion of railroad employees, the existence of the Federal Employers' Liability Act of April 22, 1908, c. 149, 35 Stat. 65; c. 143, 36 Stat. 291, applying exclusively as to employees of common carriers by rail injured while employed in interstate commerce, establishing liability for negligence and exempting from liability in the absence of negligence in all cases within its reach . . . and the difficulty that so often arises in determining in particular instances whether the employee was employed in interstate commerce at the time of the injury . . . reasonably may have led the legislature to the view that it would be unwise to attempt to apply the new system to railroad employees, in whatever kind of commerce employed, and that they might better be left to common-law actions with statutory modifications already in force (Vernon's Sayles' Tex. Civ. Stats. 1914, Arts. 6640-6652), and such others as experience might show to be called for."

When elective.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Middleton v. Texas Power, etc., Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 152, 39 S. Ct. 227, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 108 Tex. 96, 185 S. W. 556, wherein the court said: "In recent years many of the states have passed elective workmen's compensation laws not differing essentially from the one here in question, and they have been sustained by well-considered opinions of the state courts of last resort against attacks based upon all kinds of constitutional objections, including alleged denial of the equal protection of the laws; usually, however, from the standpoint of the employer. Sexton v. Newark Dist. Tel. Co., (1913) 84 N. J. L. 85 [86 Atl. 451], (1914) 86 N. J. L. 701 [91 Atl. 1070]; In re Opinion of Justices, (1911) 209 Mass. 607 [96 N. E. 308]; *Young v. The Ohio law was sustained by this court against special attacks in Jeffrey Mfg. Co. v. Blagg, (1915) 235 U. S. 571, 576 [35 S. Ct. 167, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 364, 369], and the Iowa law in Hawkins v. Bleakly, (1917) 243 U. S. 210, 213 [37 S. Ct. 255, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 678, 683, Ann. Cas. 1917D 637] et seq.

"Stress is laid upon the point that the Texas act, while optional to the employer, is compulsory as to the employee of a subscribing employer. Our attention is not called to any express provision prohibiting a voluntary agreement between a subscribing employer and one or more of his employees taking them out of the operation of the act; but probably such an agreement might be held by the courts of the state to be inconsistent with the general policy of the act; the supreme court, in the case before us, did not intimate that such special agreements would be permissible; and hence it is fair to assume that all who remain in the employ of a subscribing employer, with notice that he has provided for payment of compensation by the association or by an authorized insurance company, will be bound by the provisions of the act.

"But a moment's reflection will show the impossibility of giving an option both to the employer and to the employee and enabling them to exercise it in diverse ways. The provisions of the act show that the legislative purpose is that it shall take effect only upon acceptance by both employer and employee. The former accepts by becoming a subscriber; the latter by remaining in the service of the employer after notice of such acceptance. And we see in this no ground for holding that there is a denial of the equal protection of the laws as between employer and employee. They stand in different relations to the common undertaking, and it was permissible to recognize this in determining how they should accept or reject the new system. The employer provides the plant, the organization, the capital, the credit, and necessarily must control and manage the operation. In the nature of things his contribution has less mobility than that of the employee, who may go from place to place seeking satisfactory employment, while the employer's plant and business are comparatively, even if not absolutely, fixed in position. Again, in order that the new scheme of compensation should be a success, the legislature deemed it proper, if not essential, that the payment of compensation to the injured employees or their dependents should be rendered secure, and the losses to individual employers distributed, by a system of compensation insurance, in which it was deemed important that all employees of a given employer should be treated alike. Still further, there are reasons affecting the contentment of the employees and the discipline of the force, rendering it desirable that all serving under a common employer should be subject to a single rule as to compensation in the event of injury or death arising in the course of the employment. These and other considerations that might be suggested fully justified the legislative body of the state in determining that acceptance of the new system should rest upon the initiative of the employer, and that any particular employee who with notice of the employer's acceptance dissented from the resulting arrangement should be required to exercise his option by withdrawing from the employment. The relation of employer and employee being a voluntary relation, it was well within the power of the state to permit employers to accept or reject the new plan of compensation, each for himself, as a part of the terms of employment; and in doing this there was no denial to employees of the equal protection of the laws within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment."

Question of constitutionality by whom raised.—An employee who is a member of a class included within the terms of a Workmen's Compensation Act may attack its constitutionality in an action brought by him in a state court for damages for personal injuries received while employed by the defendant. Middleton v. Texas Power, etc., Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 152, 39 S. Ct. 227, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 108 Tex. 96, 185 S. W. 556.

(b) As Dependent on Number of Employees (p. 1034)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Middleton v. Texas Power, etc., Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 152, 39 S. Ct. 227, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 108 Tex. 96, 185 S. W. 556, wherein the court said: "The exclusion of employees where not more than four or five are under a single employer is common in legislation of this character, and evidently permissible upon the ground that the conditions of the industry are different and the hazards fewer, simpler, and more easily avoided where so few are employed together; the legislature, of course, being the proper judges to determine precisely where the line should be drawn. Classification on this basis was upheld in Jeffrey Mfg. Co. v. Blagg, (1915) 235 U. S. 571, 576–577 [35 S. Ct. 167, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 364, 369], and has been sustained repeatedly by the state courts. State v. Creamer, (1912) 85 Ohio St. 349, 404–405 [97 N. E. 602, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 694]; Borgnis v. Falk Co., (1911)

(c) Exclusion of Farm Laborers and Domestic Servants (p. 1034)

To the same effect as the original annotation, see Middleton v. Texas Power, etc., Co., (1919) 249 U. S. 152, 39 S. Ct. 227, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 108 Tex. 96, 185 S. W. 556.

g2. Billboard Ordinance Valid (p. 1053)

Rights under the Fourteenth Amendment are not unconstitutionally abridged by a municipal ordinance under which no billboard of 25 square feet or more may be erected without a permit (costing $1 for every 5 lineal feet), and no such structure may exceed 400 square feet in area, or extend more than 14 feet above the ground, and under which an open space of 4 feet must be left between the lower edge and the ground, and the billboard must not approach nearer than 6 feet to any building or to the side of the lot, or nearer than 2 feet to any other billboard, or than 15 feet to the street line, and must, with certain qualifications, conform to the building line; nor is it material that the complaining billboard owner has eliminated dangers from fire and wind, or that the restrictions as to size will not permit the display of posters of the standard size, or that such owner has contracts binding it to maintain advertising upon its boards. St. Louis Poster Advertising Co. v. St. Louis, (1919) 249 U. S. 269, 39 S. Ct. 274, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (Mo. 1917) 195 S. W. 717, wherein the court said: "Of course, the several restrictions that have been mentioned are said to be unreasonable and unconstitutional limitations of the liberty of the individual and of rights of property in land. But the argument comes too late. This court has recognized the correctness of the decision in St. Louis Gunning Advertising Co. v. St. Louis, (1911) 235 Mo. 99 [137 S. W. 929], followed in this case, that billboards properly may be put in a class by themselves and prohibited 'in residence districts of a city in the interest of the safety, morality, health and decency of the community.' Thomas Cusack Co. v. Chicago, (1917) 242 U. S. 526, 529, 530 [37 S. Ct. 190, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 472, 474]. It is true that according to the bill the plaintiff has done away with dangers from fire and wind, but apart from the question whether those dangers do not remain sufficient to justify the general rule, they are or may be the least of the objections adverted to in the cases. 235 Mo. 99. Kansas City Gunning Advertising Co. v. Kansas City, (1912) 240 Mo. 659, 671 [144 S. W. 1099]. Possibly one or two details, especially the requirement of conformity to the building line, have æsthetic considerations in view more obviously than anything else. But as the main burdens imposed stand on other ground, we should not be prepared to deny the validity of relatively trifling requirements that did not look solely to the satisfaction of rudimentary wants that alone we generally recognize as necessary. Hubbard v. Taunton, (1886) 140 Mass. 467, 468 [5 N. E. 157].

"If the city desired to discourage billboards by a high tax we know of nothing to hinder, even apart from the right to prohibit them altogether asserted in the Thomas Cusack Co.'s Case. Citizens' Telephone Co. v. Fuller, (1913) 229 U. S. 322, 329 [33 S. Ct. 833, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1206, 1213]. As to the plaintiff's contracts, so far as appears they were made after the ordinance was passed, but if made before it they were subject to legislation not invalid otherwise than for its incidental effect upon them. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Goldsboro, (1914) 232 U. S. 548, 558 [34 S. Ct. 364, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 721]. The same thing may be said, apart from other answers, with regard to the alleged standardizing of the size of posters. In view of our recent decision we think further argument unnecessary to show that the ordinance must be upheld."

12. Regulating Grazing of Sheep on Public Domain (p. 1054)

Cattle owners are not given an arbitrary and unreasonable preference over sheep owners, contrary to the constitutional guaranty of the equal protection of the laws, by the provisions of Idaho Rev. Codes, 1908, § 6872, under which grazing sheep on the federal public domain is forbidden upon ranges previously occupied by cattle, without providing for a like preference to sheep owners in prior occupancy. Amaechevarria v. Idaho, (1918) 246 U. S. 343, 38 S. Ct. 323, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 763, affirming (1915) 27 Idaho 797, 152 Pac. 280.

x2 (1) (a) In General (p. 1057)

Intentional violation of essential principle. — An intentional violation of the essential principle of practical uniformity is necessary to support the claim of a mining corporation that it has been denied the equal protection of the laws by having its property assessed at full value while other taxable property in the same class is greatly undervalued by the taxing officers. Sunday Lake Iron Co. v. Wakefield, (1918) 247 U. S. 350, 38 S. Ct. 495, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1154, affirming (1915) 186 Mich. 626, 153 N. W. 14.

(b) Power of Classification (p. 1058)

Uniformity of taxation in particular class. — A state may classify property within its borders and impose unequal taxation, provided the taxes are uniform on all property in each class, without violating the provisions of this amendment. Union Sulphur Co. v. Reed, (E. D. La. 1918) 249 Fed. 172.

(d) aa. Maximum and Minimum Amount of Sales (p. 1083)

Commission merchants in farm products.—A Kansas statute requiring commission merchants in farm products to pay an annual license was held not to be unconstitutional. Payne v. Kansas, (1918) 248 U. S. 112, 39 S. Ct. 32, 63 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 98 Kan. 465, 158 Pac. 408.

Discrimination in favor of manufacturers who sell.—A statute imposing an annual license fee upon all persons or corporations carrying on a merchandise business in the state, the amount of which is determined by the sum of the merchant's purchases during the year, is not, because of its exclusion of "manufacturers taxed on capital by this state, who offer for sale at the place of manufacture goods, wares, and merchandise manufactured by them," violative of the constitutional protection against the abridgment of privileges or immunities, or the denial of the equal protection of the laws. Armour v. Virginia, (1918) 246 U. S. 1, 38 S. Ct. 267, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 547, affirming (1916) 118 Va. 242, 87 S. E. 610.

Vol. XI, p. 1110, amend. 16.

Purpose of Amendment (p. 1110)

Purpose and scope of amendment.—This amendment merely removes all occasion which otherwise might exist for an apportionment among the states of taxes laid on income, from whatever source derived. The taxing power is not extended to new or excepted subjects. Peck v. Lowe, (1918) 247 U. S. 165, 38 S. Ct. 432, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1049, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 125.

Taxation of dividends.—Congress was at liberty, under this amendment, to tax as income without apportionment everything that became income in the ordinary sense of the word after the adoption of the amendment, including dividends received in the ordinary course by a stockholder from a corporation, even though they were extraordinary in amount and might appear upon analysis to be a mere realization in possession of an inchoate and contingent interest that the stockholder had in a surplus of corporate assets previously existing. Lynch v. Hornby, (1918) 247 U. S. 339, 38 S. Ct. 543, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1149, reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 661, 149 C. C. A. 657.
